It was on September 3 that she and her companion, Mme. Tsilka, medical missionary and wife of an Albanian pastor, were kidnapped when traveling with a company of native missionaries, in the mountains between Turkey and Bulgaria. All of the party were allowed to go free except these ladies. On Sept. 27, letters from Miss Stone reached Consul Dickinson, at Constantinople, and Dr. Peet, the American Board's representative there, stating that she was held for $110,000 ransom, which must be paid by Oct. 8, or her life would be forfeit. Thinking that the payment of this might put a premium on brigandage, and imperil other missionaries, the Board at first declined to consider the proposition; but later, on advice that this was the only way to save her, issued an appeal for the money to the American people. Response was prompt and liberal, but the time was short, and the sum demanded was not in hand by the eighth. The brigands granted an extension of time. Then the United States, the Turkish and Bulgarian Governments tried to secure her liberation, the last two sending large bodies of troops to hunt down the outlaws and rescue the prisoners; but all to no avail. Finally, a sum somewhat less than that agreed on, was paid over in a secret manner, prescribed by themselves, to the brigands on their bare word (with which the authorities had to make themselves content) that she and Mme. Tsilka would be set free at some place remote from the scene of payment. On Feb. 18, a cable from Vienna stated that she had been handed over, safe and sound, to Dragoman Garguilo, of the American legation. This, contradicted at first, was followed in a few days by assurance that she, Mme. Tsilka and Mme. Tsilka's baby, born in captivity, were at Struminitza, and that Dr. House, missionary in charge at Salonica, had gone to meet her. According to some accounts, she was in perfect health; according to others, suffering from the strain of her long imprisonment.

It seems that she, Mme. Tsilka and the baby were first discovered, after their release, by a villager on a mountain in the outskirts of Hadracher, where the brigands had left them. They were covered with shepherds' cloaks. For two weeks they had been traveling through the mountains, hidden in the daytime and hurried forward blindfolded on horseback at night. The brigands, she says, always treated her well. They built a hut for her and Mme. Tsilka and provided horses when traveling. She carried the baby whenever she was allowed to. They never came in contact with troops; but more than once were obliged to halt while the brigands, falsely alarmed, prepared for action. When, in company with Dr. House, the ladies left the native pastor's home at Struminitza, on their journey to Salonica, all the inhabitants of the place turned out to bid them farewell, and the local mission folks accompanied the cavalcade some distance, singing hymns. As the company reached the top of Chipelli Pass, between the town and the railway, Rev. Mr. Tsilka suddenly appeared, and there was a touching reunion between him and the wife from whom he had been so long separated. He took his baby, whom he had never seen before, from the servant who carried it and himself bore it down the mountain. The little one is named Ellen Stone. At Salonica, a great crowd welcomed the missionaries. It is said Miss Stone will resume her mission work there and continue it till summer, when she will come to America to see her mother. According to another report, she will start at once to this country.

Miss Stone is a native of Roxbury, Mass. She was sent by the Woman's Branch of the American Board of Missions to Samakov, in 1878; later, she worked at Philippopolis and Salonica. She trained many Bible-women, and had a large corps of them under her direction. It was the great success of her work that caused her to be a bright and shining mark for the brigands; and her custom of taking evangelical tours through the country made her their easy prey. In her deliverance, the readers of this journal have cause for rejoicing, for they contributed generously to that end.

CALLED HIGHER

"On Saturday morning, Jan. 18, 1902, while preparing to attend a funeral where he was to conduct the services, the message 'Come up higher,' came suddenly to Rev. Wm. A. Miller, and he was not for God took him." He was over eighty, and for more than sixty years had preached the Gospel." So writes Mrs. Elsie Jerauld of Hopbottom, Pa., of this aged saint just gone to his rest. She adds: "He was widely known in Susquehanna and adjoining counties, and was beloved by all who knew him. Especially was he popular with young people."

Nov. 6, 1901, Miss M. D. Wilson of Sussex, N.Y., was called to her home above. Miss H. Wilson writes: "I thank THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in her name for the beautiful Art pictures which came after she was gone. She had taken THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for many years, and renewed for 1902, with the request for the Red Letter Bible and the Art Portfolio, to be 'sent in her sister's name.' They were safely received, and came as beautiful Christmas gifts from one in heaven. A dear little nephew, five years old, loves that Bible very dearly. He is a beautiful child and it is a lovely picture to see him bending over it."

In the death of little Edwin McCombs, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD loses a noble little member from its large family. Mrs. Whitener, Newton, N. C., writes: "During the India Famine, I sent him a mite-box. He said to his mother: 'Mama, I'm not going to beg for this money—I'm going to work for it.' So he began immediately doing errands to earn enough to fill his box. But the little box was only half filled when sickness laid its hand on the child; and God took him out of his pain to heaven. His mother, ill herself, knowing the little fellow's big heart, meant to complete his task. But she went very soon, to be with her boy in the heavenly mansions."

One who discharged faithfully the duties of a minister's wife for twenty years, must surely have a rich reward when called to her home above. Mrs. Martha Dawes Van Arsdale, who recently died at her home near Magee's Corners, New York, left such a record. When only eighteen she became the wife of Rev. Jacob Van Arsdale, a young preacher of the Dutch Reformed Church. She was his faithful helpmeet until his death, many years ago; then she bravely took up life's burden alone, raising her children up in the fear of the Lord, and doing all the good she could to all around her. She was seventy-nine when she died. Her daughter writes: "I have often heard my grandmother speak of when Dr. Talmage lived in her home in New Jersey, teaching the district school there and studying with my grandfather. She has long been an interested reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD."

Of Mrs. Betsey Weed Bush, who recently died in Binghamton, N.Y., her pastor said in his funeral sermon: "She was constantly planning some beneficent work. Whether the object was a missionary family in the West, or a struggling school North or South, or an abode of poverty and sickness in our city, she was always ready to do the work of Christ, in the spirit of Christ. It is wonderful how many boxes of supplies went out to the poor and needy from this house every year. There is lying in this room, at the present moment, a package of New Testaments purchased by her to be given away." She was eighty-eight years old, the widow of Rev. I. W. Bush, for thirteen years Chaplain of Binghamton's Inebriate Asylum. Her daughter writes: "My dear mother was a faithful reader of your paper; and I feel as if it were a personal friend, so much comfort and consolation I have received from it."

"The breed that lays
Is the breed that pays"

Increase Your Income
RAISING
Pure-Bred Poultry.

SINGLE
COMB White Leghorns

lay more eggs and make more money than any other breed. We will start you in the chicken business with a complete pen of pure-bred hens and a fine cockerel. We will teach you how to feed and care for them, furnish you diagrams and specifications for the buildings they need, how to incubate and breed, how to raise the growing chicks, how to get the greatest number of eggs and how to sell your products with the largest profit.

A postal card will bring you full particulars.

The WHITE LEGHORN
POULTRY YARDS,
Box C, Waterville, N.Y.

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels

only $21.95

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish Steel Wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co. Quincy, Ill.

GOOD, HONEST
Buggies

Sixteen years experience in selling standard grades of Vehicles and Harness

Has made our work favorably known for its reliable quality. It is

BUILT FOR SERVICE

Substantial—Honest Material—Best Work.

AND THE PRICE IS ALL RIGHT, TOO.

A shrewd discerning buyer, securing the market for the best values, cannot afford to be without our Catalogue. A postal will bring it FREE. CASH BUYERS' UNION (Inc.), Dept. B-18, Chicago, Ill.

A REMINDER.

Time to buy that carriage or buggy. We make a full line and sell direct on 30 Days' Free Trial.

We save you dealer and jobber profits. Enough said. Write for 22nd annual catalogue. Mailed free.

Kalamazoo Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., Station 3, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Pioneers of the Free Trial Plan.

$26.50 BUYS A BUGGY

(with top $33.50) of very superior QUALITY, STYLE and DURABILITY.

Entire output of two-class motor factories, sold direct to consumer. We manufacture full line Buggies, Carriages, Harness, guarantee all goods, ship on approval.

WE DEFY COMPETITION. SAVE DEALERS' PROFIT

Money back, if not satisfied. Send for CATALOGUE and SPECIAL OFFER.

UNION BUGGY COMPANY, 262 Saginaw Street, Pontiac, Mich.

The Life of the Wheel

depends upon the make of the wheel.

ELECTRIC WHEELS

last almost forever. Fit any wagon, straight or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 136, Quincy, Ill.

POULTRY PAPER, illus'd, 20 pages trial 10 cts. Sample Free. 64-page practical poultry book free to yearly subscribers. Book alone 10 cts. Catalogue of poultry books free. Poultry Advocate, Syracuse, N.Y.

GREIDER'S FINE CATALOGUE

of prize winning poultry for 1902, printed in color. Illustrates and describes 50 Varieties of Poultry; gives reasonable prices of eggs and stock. Many hints to poultry raisers. Send 10c. in silver or stamps for this noted book. B. H. GREIDER, Florin, Pa.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Fruit Book Free. Result of 76 years' experience.

STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N.Y.

$5 INCUBATORS FREE

Self-regulating. Guaranteed for 2 years. Hatches every good egg. Send for catalogue No. 60. Sell six and get one free.

INVINCIBLE HATCHER CO., SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

The Duty of Confessing Christ Before Our Own Heathen, Incumbent on Every Christian...

• Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society for arch 23. Psalm 85: 1-13.

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with $10 and $12 assortments

FREE with an $8 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with an $8 assortment

FREE with a $5 assortment Ladies' size with $10 assortment.

FREE with $10 and $12 assortments

FREE with a $25 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with a $10 assortment

$20⁰⁰ Worth of

CROFTS & REED'S Laundry and Toilet SOAPS or $10 Assortment of Soap, Perfume, Etc., and $10 Premium, as you may select,

For $10⁰⁰

or $10 Assortment Without Premium for $5.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER Make your own selection from list below to equal amount of premium you may wish and we will ship 30 Days' Trial in Your Own Home Soap, etc., and Premium on free of all charges for Soap used, if Soap and Premium are not found as represented and entirely satisfactory.

WE ASK NO MONEY IN ADVANCE

You can remit after 30 days if satisfied. Otherwise notify us goods are subject to our order. We offer you one of the largest and finest assortments of Laundry and Toilet Soaps, Washing Powder, Perfumes, Toilet Preparations and Flavoring Extracts that has ever been produced and you get them direct from the factory at wholesale prices.

Crofts & Reed are the only Manufacturers of Soap in the West selling direct to the consumer. One Profit; Maker to User. Their motto is:
"BEST GOODS AT LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICES."

Here is a $10 Assortment Which You Can Change to Suit Your Wishes if Desired.

| | | | |
|---|--------|---|---------|
| 4 boxes Medicinal Toilet Soap at 25 cents.... | $1.00 | 1 bottle 1/2 oz. Carnation Perfume..... | 25 |
| 3 " Carbolic " at 25 cents.... | .75 | 1 " 1/2 oz. Crabapple "..... | 25 |
| 2 " Wild Rose " at 25 cents.... | .50 | 1 " 1/2 oz. Violet "..... | 25 |
| 4 " Fragrant Bouquet " at 25 cents.... | 1.00 | 1 jar Medicinal Jelly..... | 25 |
| 1 " Queen of Violets "..... | .25 | 1 " Rose Shampoo..... | 25 |
| 1 " Olive Castile "..... | .25 | 1 box Talcum Powder..... | 25 |
| 2 " Pine Tar " at 25 cent.... | .50 | 1 bottle 2 oz. Lemon Extract..... | 20 |
| 1 roll Shaving "..... | .30 | 1 " Standard Vanilla..... | 30 |
| 10 cakes Cotton "..... | .30 | Total..... | $10.00 |
| 38 " C. & R. Laundry " at 5 cents.... | 1.90 | Retail Value of Premium..... | $10.00 |
| 5 pkgs. Pearl Washing Powder at 10 cents.... | .50 | Total Value of Premium and Goods..... | $20.00 |
| 1 bottle 1/2 oz. White Rose Perfume..... | .25 | We give you both for..... | $10.00 |

ALL OF OUR OWN MANUFACTURE AND GUARANTEED STRICTLY PURE.

Used by millions of people and have a world-wide reputation for fine quality. If for any reason you do not care for quite so much soap, we suggest the idea of getting two or three of your neighbors to club in with you for enough to make up the necessary amount and you keep the premium for your trouble. They will gladly do this to help you. We receive a great many orders of this kind.

OUR GOODS AND PREMIUMS ARE THE BEST.

Testimonials from every State in the Union.

If you prefer to send cash with order we will send you as a present 50 cents worth of Soap or Perfume and goods will be shipped without delay. Your money refunded if not found satisfactory. References: First National

ILLUSTRATED CATALOG FREE.

Write for it to-day even if you do not wish to do business with us just now.

Bank, Chicago, any Express Company in Chicago, or anyone we have done business with. Read testimonials in Catalog and write to some of them. WRITE ABOUT OUR CLUB ORDER PLAN.

CROFTS & REED, 819 Austin Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE with $10 assortment

FREE with $8 and $10 assortments

FREE with a $10 assortment

FREE with an $8 assortment Two, 36x72 inches, with a $10 assortment.

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
E. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, MARCH 19, 1902

VOL. 25, NO. 12 PRICE 5 CENTS
Office: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

The Child-Choir's Rehearsal Hour in Broome Street Tabernacle, New York

A Whole Year's Subscription for 10 Cts.

The greatest World's Fair the world has ever seen will be held in St. Louis, Mo., 1903. Over $30,000,000 has been raised for it. EVERY TRIBE AND NATION IN THE WORLD WILL BE THERE. Thousands of men are at work preparing "Forest Park," the most beautiful park in the West, for the Fair. THE WINNER MAGAZINE, the largest and most beautifully illustrated monthly magazine in the West, now having over 800,000 PAID SUBSCRIBERS, is illustrating the building of the Great Fair, from start to finish, by photography, and will contain, in addition to its great stories and special departments, over 150 Full and Double Page Engravings of the Great World's Fair From Start to Finish.

Many of them 12 x 19 inches in size ready to frame, showing the buildings, statuary and wonders and glories of the greatest magic city man has ever built. The twelve months' copies of THE WINNER MAGAZINE will make the most beautiful work of art on the building of the greatest World's Fair the world has ever seen, that money could buy. No other magazine in the world can offer such an inducement.

Flying Machines, Savage Tribes, Wonderful Machinery, Wireless Telegraphs, Submarine Boats, the art and wonders of the world will all be there, and are all being illustrated in The Winner Magazine each issue.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE WINNER MAGAZINE.

THE WINNER MAGAZINE is now taking its readers on an illustrated travel through Strange Lands and Savage Tribes, illustrated by photographs.

Every Number of THE WINNER will be worth a dollar to you with the Beautiful Art Engravings.

This magnificent engraving of the World's Fair, twice the size of this page, is one of the series of 150 engravings now appearing in THE WINNER MAGAZINE.

EVERY TRIBE AND NATION WILL BE THERE.

In the next twelve issues scenes in the native lands of the strange tribes and nations that will visit the fair, will be shown in the pages of THE WINNER MAGAZINE. Nothing like it was ever attempted before.

GREAT STORIES. SPLENDID ILLUSTRATIONS. FASCINATING READING.

Special departments of columns and columns of Fancy Work and Home Decoration, Floriculture, Home Study, World's Events, Rural Free Delivery, Answers to Correspondents, Adventure, Ghost Stories, and Romance, all by the best writers in the world and superbly illustrated, make each number of THE WINNER MAGAZINE the equal of any dollar magazine published.

Do not miss this opportunity to secure this great magazine a whole year for the small sum of 10 cents. No paper like it was ever before offered for less than One Dollar.

Beautifully Printed, Splendidly Illustrated, Clean and Wholesome, the Best Magazine Published.

Thousands of the readers of The Winner earn from $3 to $10 per week. You can do the same by acting as agent in your town for The Winner Magazine.

Although we now have over eight hundred thousand paid subscribers we wish to secure ONE MILLION, so that when the great World's Fair opens THE WINNER MAGAZINE will be the greatest publication the world has ever seen. As a special inducement to new subscribers we will send The Winner Magazine one whole year, including the great World's Fair Illustrations and Art Engravings, to any reader of this paper sending the small sum of 10 cents for a whole year's subscription to

THE WINNER MAGAZINE, 161 WINNER BUILDING, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, MARCH 19, 1902

GIRLIE HOUSE, NEW YORK

J. O. NEWCOMB
Mission Study Class

D. E. DANNENBERG
Christian Mission Study Class

E. F. WAREFIELD, A.M.
Professor of Homiletics

J. H. KELLOGG, D.D.
Professor of History

J. H. KELLOGG, D.D.
Professor of History

J. H. KELLOGG, D.D.
Professor of History

The World's Greatest Mission Study Class

BY REV. G. L. WHARTON, M.A.

THAT busy, earnest, intelligent students, doing full college work, can be thoroughly interested in foreign missions, is one of the proven possibilities of the present times. For this new feature in American college life, we are indebted to the Student Volunteer Movement, which was born in Northfield, Mass., in 1886. The great Evangelist Moody gave it a hearty welcome.

One of the main purposes of this college world-embracing movement, is to provide for the systematic study of missions in colleges and universities. Rev. Harland P. Beach, M.A., with headquarters in New York City, is the Educational Secretary of this department, who outlines courses of study, prepares text-books, and has general oversight of this work.

The class (shown in the photograph) was organized in connection with the movement two years ago, under the auspices of the College Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Hiram College is one of the most prosperous and prominent institutions of higher learning belonging to the Disciples of Christ. It is thirty-five miles from Cleveland, O., and the scholarly Ely Vaughan Zollars, A.M., LL.D., has been the honored president for the last thirteen years, a position once held by the distinguished and lamented President Jas. A. Garfield. Here hundreds of young men and women annually gather from all parts of the world. In recent years, this college has sent out seventeen of its students and alumni as missionaries to the foreign field. Others are now under appointment and preparing to go.

Mission study classes are usually small in numbers. Without any sensational methods, the mission study class at Hiram has been large from the beginning, under the inspiring leadership of C. T. Paul, Professor of the Department of Modern Languages. Professor Paul is from Toronto University, Canada. Like the Apostle Paul, the God of Missions has taken him up and possesses him. He has reduced the study of missions to a science. In the most unassuming, modest, quiet, but scholarly way, Professor Paul marvelously inspires the class with the desire to know Christ, and how to make him known to all the races of the earth. The missionary study class is entirely voluntary, no credits being allowed in the college for this work.

portable work. The Religion of the World in the Present Generation and Comparative Religions, by the late Dr. S. H. Kellogg, of India. Second year, Introduction to Study of Foreign Missions, by C. T. Paul, and Geography and Atlas of Foreign Missions, two volumes, by H. P. Beach. Professor Paul has prepared a valuable volume of Videos, making out the names of the classes in the mission.

The class meets weekly, when Professor Paul supplements and illuminates the text-books with his lectures and questions. Every meeting is devotional, instructive and inspiring. Every minute is full of expectation, and the leader knows right well how to turn to good account every Christian's curios, lectures, and papers from returned missionaries, professors and students. Mr. D. E. Dannenberg and Mr. J. O. Newcomb are active assistants in arranging all the details and business of the class.

A missionary museum has been started, to which the foreign missionaries from Hiram have made valuable contributions. The class is helping to support one of its number, who is a missionary in India. Mr. Beach, the Educational Secretary, writes to Professor Paul in January, 1902:

"I despair of any institution ever having so large an enrollment as you reached last term, unless, indeed, it be your own. It may be some satisfaction to you to know, that although we have over 500 institutions of higher learning, and though the United States Union have classes in almost every one of these institutions, no other class has ever reached the numbers of your own. You thus stand first in the student world in this respect, for which, let me congratulate you."

From the members of the class, and others, the following have been received: "It is a great pleasure to hear that the class at Hiram has reached the numbers of your own. You thus stand first in the student world in this respect, for which, let me congratulate you."

The following are among the names of those who have been received: "It is a great pleasure to hear that the class at Hiram has reached the numbers of your own. You thus stand first in the student world in this respect, for which, let me congratulate you."

THE PRESENT MISSION STUDY CLASS OF HIRAM COLLEGE

The first year saw 100 in the class, while the second year saw a material increase to 175. The text-books used are as follows: First year, John K. Mott's incom-

PROFESSOR C. T. PAUL
Leader of the Class

MAIN BUILDING, HIRAM COLLEGE

J. H. KELLOGG, D.D.
Professor of History

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

... SERMON BY ...

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.

An Ante-Mortem Religion

TEXT—I. Timothy 4: 8:

Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come

THERE is a gloomy and passive way of waiting for events to come upon us, and there is a heroic way of going out to meet them, strong in God, and fearing nothing. When the body of Catiline was found on the battle-field it was found far in advance of all his troops, and among the enemy; and the best way is not for us to lie down and let the events of life trample over us, but to go forth in a Christian spirit determined to conquer. You are expecting prosperity, and I am determined, so far as I have anything to do with it, that you shall not be disappointed, and, therefore, I propose, as God may help me, to project upon your attention a new element of success. You have in the business firm, frugality, patience, industry, perseverance, economy—a very strong business firm, but there needs to be one member added, mightier than them all, and not a silent partner either—the one introduced by my text: “Godliness, which is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come.”

I suppose you are all willing to admit that Godliness is important in its eternal relations; but perhaps some of you say: “All I want is an opportunity to say a prayer before I die, and all will be well.” There are a great many people who suppose that if they can finally get safely out of this world into a better world, they will have exhausted the entire advantage of our holy religion. They talk as though religion were a mere nod of recognition which we are to give to the Lord Jesus on our way up to a heavenly mansion; as though it were an admission ticket, of no use except to give in at the door of heaven. And there are thousands of people who have great admiration for a religion of the shroud, and a religion of the cemetery, who have no appreciation of a religion for the bank, for the farm, for the factory, for the warehouse, for the jeweler's shop, for the office. Now, while I would not throw any slur on a post-mortem religion, I want to-day to eulogize an ante-mortem religion. A religion that is of no use to you while you live, will be of no use to you when you die. “Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come.” And I have always noticed that when grace is very low in a man's heart he talks a great deal in prayer-meetings about deaths, and about coffins, and about graves, and about churchyards. I have noticed that the healthy Christian, the man who is living near to God, and is on the straight road to heaven, is full of jubilant satisfaction, and talks about the duties of this life, understanding well that if God helps him to live right, he will help him to die right.

Good for Physical Health

Now, in the first place, I remark that godliness is good for a man's physical health. I do not mean to say that it will restore a broken-down constitution, or drive rheumatism from the limbs, or neuralgia from the temples, or pleurisy from the side; but I do mean to say that it gives one such habits and puts one in such condition as is most favorable for physical health. That I believe, and that I avow. Everybody knows that buoyancy of spirit is good physical advantage. Gloom, unrest, dejection are at war with every pulsation of the heart, and with every respiration of the lungs. They lower the vitality, and slacken the circulation, while exhilaration of spirit pours the very balm of heaven through all the currents of life. The sense of insecurity which sometimes hovers over an unregenerate man, or pounces upon him with the blast of ten thousand trumpets of terror, is most depleting and most exhausting, while the feeling that all things are working together for our good now, and for our everlasting welfare, is conducive to physical health.

You will observe that godliness induces industry, which is the foundation of good health. There is no law of hygiene that will keep a lazy man well. Pleurisy will stab him, erysipelas will burn him, jaundice will discolor him, gout will cripple him, and the intelligent physician will not prescribe antiseptic, or febrifuge, or anodyne, but saws and hammers and yardsticks and crowbars and pickaxes. There is no such thing as good physical condition without positive work of some kind, although you should sleep on down of swan, or ride in carriage of softest upholstery, or have on your table all the luxuries that were poured from the wine-vats of Ispahan and Shiraz. Our religion says: “Away to the bank! away to the field! away to the shop! away to the factory! do something that will enlist all the energies of your body, mind, and soul.” “Diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord”; while upon the bare back of the idler and the drone comes down the sharp lash of the apostle as he says: “If any man will not work, neither shall he eat.”

Oh, how important in this day, when so much is said about anatomy and physiology and therapeutics, and some new style of medicine is ever and anon springing upon the world, that you should understand that the highest school of medicine is the school of Christ, which declares that “Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is as well as of that which is to come.” So if you start out two men in the world with equal physical health, and then one of them shall get the religion of Christ in his heart, and the other shall not get it, the one who becomes a son of the Lord Almighty will live the longer. “With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation.”

A Mental Tonic

Again I remark, that godliness is good for the intellect. I know some have supposed that just as soon as a man enters into the Christian life, his intellect goes into a bedwaring process. So far from that, religion will give new brilliancy to the intellect, new strength to the imagination, new force to the will, and wider swing to all the intellectual faculties. Christianity is the great central fire at which philosophy has lighted its brightest torch. The religion of Christ is the fountain out of which learning has dipped its clearest draught. The Helicon poured forth no such inspiring waters as those which flow from under the throne of God clear as crystal. Religion has given new energy to poesy, weeping in Dr. Young's Night Thoughts, teaching in Cowper's Task, flaming in Charles Wesley's hymns, and rushing with archangelic splendor through Milton's Paradise Lost. The religion of Christ has hung in studio, and in gallery of art, and in Vatican the best pictures—Titian's “Assumption,” Raphael's “Transfiguration,” Rubens' “Descent from the Cross,” Claude's “Burning Bush,” and Angelo's “Last Judgment.” Religion has made the best music of the world—Haydn's Creation, Handel's Messiah, Mozart's Requiem. Is it possible that a religion which builds such indestructible monuments, and which lifts its ensign on the highest promontories of worldly power, can have any effect upon a man's intellect but elevation?

Now, I commend godliness as the best mental discipline—better than belles-lettres to purify the taste; better than mathematics to harness the mind to all intricacy and elaboration; better than logic to marshal the intellectual forces for onset and victory. It will go with Hugh Miller, and show him the footprints of the Creator in the red sandstone. It will go with the botanist, and show him celestial glories encamped under the curtain of a water-lily. It will go with the astronomer on the great heights where God shepherds the great flock of worlds that wander on the hills of heaven, answering his voice as he calls them all by their names.

Again I remark, that godliness is profitable for one's disposition. Lord Ashley, before he went into a great battle, was heard to offer this prayer: “O Lord, I shall be very busy to-day; if I forget thee, forget me not.” With such a Christian disposition as that, a man is independent of all circumstances. Our piety will have a tinge of our natural temperament. If a man be cross and sour and fretful naturally, after he becomes a Christian he will always have to be armed against the rebellion of those evil inclinations; but religion has tamed the wildest natures; it has turned fretfulness into gratitude, despondency into good cheer, and those who were hard and ungovernable and uncompromising, have been made pliable and conciliatory. Good resolution, reformatory effort, will not effect the change. It takes a mightier arm and a mightier hand to bend evil habits, than the hand that bent the bow of Ulysses, and it takes a stronger lasso than ever held the buffalo on the prairie.

Rivals Become Friends

A man cannot go forth with any human weapons, and contend successfully against these Titans, armed with upturn mountains. But you have known men into whose spirit the influence of the Gospel of Christ came, until their disposition was entirely changed. So it was with two merchants in New York. They were very antagonistic. They had done all they could to injure each other. They were in the same line of business. One of the merchants was converted to God. Having been converted, he asked the Lord to teach him how to bear himself toward that business antagonist, and he was impressed with the fact that it was his duty, when a customer asked for certain kinds of goods which he had not, but which he knew his opponent had, to recommend him to go to that store. I suppose that is about the hardest thing a man could do; but being thoroughly converted to God, he resolved to do that very thing; and being asked for a certain kind of goods which he had not, he said: “You go to such and such a store and you will get it.” After a while, merchant number two found these customers coming, so sent, and he found, also, that merchant number one had been brought to God, and he sought the same religion. Now they are good friends and good neighbors—the grace of God entirely changing their dispositions.

“Oh,” says some one, “I have a rough, jagged, impetuous nature, and religion can't do anything for me.” Do you know that Martin Luther and Robert Newton and Richard Baxter had impetuous and all-consuming natures, yet the grace of God turned them into the mightiest usefulness? A manufacturer cares but very little for a stream that slowly runs through the meadow, but values a torrent that leaps from rock to rock, and rushes with mad energy through the valley, and out toward the sea. Along that river you will find fluttering shuttles and grinding mill and flashing waterwheel. And a nature the swiftest, the most rugged, and the most tremendous, that is into greatest usefulness. Oh, how many that have been pugnacious, and hard to please, and irascible, and more bothered about the mote in their neighbor's eye than about the beam like ship-timber in their own eye, who have been entirely changed by the grace of God, and have found out that “Godliness is profitable for the life that now is as well as for the life to come.”

The Nature God Turns

Again I remark, that religion is good for worldly business. I know the general theory is, the more business the less religion; the more religion the less business. Not so thought Dr. Hans, in his Biography of a Christian Merchant, when he says: “He grew in grace the last six years of his life more than at any time in his life; during those six years he had more business crowding him than at any other time.” In other words, the more worldly business a man has, the more opportunity to serve God. Does religion exhilarate or retard worldly business? Is the practical question for you to discuss. Does it hang like a mortgage over the farm? Is it a bad debt on the ledger? Is it a lien against the estate? Does it crowd the door through which customers come for broadcloths and silks?

Now, religion will hinder your business if it be a bad business, or if it be a good business wrongly conducted. If you tell lies behind the counter, if you use false weights and measures, if you put sand in sugar, and beet-juice in vinegar, and lard in butter, and sell for one thing that which is another thing, then religion will interfere with that business; but a lawful business, lawfully conducted, will find the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ its mightiest auxiliary.

Religion will give an equipoise of spirit. It will keep you from ebullitions of temper—and you know a great many fine businesses have been blown to atoms by bad temper; it will keep you from worriment about frequent loss, it will keep you industrious and prompt, it will keep you back from squandering and from dissipation, it will give you a which will be easily distinguished from that mere store courtesy which shakes hands, asking about the health of your family, when there is no anxiety to know whether your child is well or sick! but the anxiety is to know how many dozen cambric pocket-handkerchiefs you will take, and pay cash down. It will prepare you for the practical duties of every-day life. I do not mean to say that religion will make us financially rich, but I do say that it will give us, it will assure us of, a comfortable sustenance at the start, a comfortable subsistence all the way through, and it will help us to direct the bank, to manage the traffic, to conduct all our business matters, and to make the most insignificant affair of our life a matter of vast importance, glorified by Christian principle.

Kindness of Spirit

In New York City there was a merchant, hard in his dealings with his fellows, who had written over his banking house, or his counting-house room, “No compromise.” Then when some merchant got in a crisis and went down—no fault of his, but a conjunction of evil circumstances, and all the other merchants were willing to compromise; they would take seventy-five cents on the dollar, or fifty cents, or twenty cents—coming to this man last of all, he said: “No compromise; I'll take one hundred cents on the dollar, and I can afford to wait.” Well, the wheel turned, and after awhile that man was in a crisis of business, and he sent out his agent to compromise, and the agent said to the merchants: “Will you take fifty cents on the dollar?” “No.” “Will you take anything?” “We'll take one hundred cents on the dollar. No compromise.” And

NEGRO FARMERS GATHER at TUSKEGEE

A MARKED feature of the annual Tuskegee Negro Conference this year was the very large number of college presidents in attendance. Among the distinguished educators was Rev. Dr. King, of the Union University, Richmond, Va., who was Booker T. Washington's teacher at Wayland Seminary, Washington, D. C., the year he left Hampton. An unusual number of graduates were present. Some, who have been visiting the Conference for a number of years, brought up large delegations of their friends. Many teachers and other workers brought numbers of young people, especially young men, to get the inspiration of the Conference.

The barbecue dinner was again a special feature. Long tables were spread near the chapel and one thousand pounds of beef and even hundred pounds of pork, with bread and coffee, were served. This was in addition to the vast number who ate in the various dining-rooms and in private families. The industrial work of the school was in full operation till 10 A.M., and the visitors were conducted by guides through the shops, the dairy, and over the gardens and farm. Teachers, farmers and all were greatly impressed. Prof. J. N. Calloway came from a sixteen-months' experience in Africa, where he went with three Tuskegee graduates to introduce cotton-raising in a German colony, on the west coast of Africa, under the auspices of the German government. The three young men are still there, carrying on the experiment which, so far, promises success. Mr. Calloway said he did not want the colored people to go to Africa as emigrants, but as teachers in school and on a farm, in the shop and in business.

Rev. D. Clay Lilly, secretary of colored evangelization, of the Southern Presbyterian Church, presented to Mr. Washington a battle-axe, brought by a returned missionary from the Congo, Africa. He wished it turned into an emblem of peace and civilization.

In opening the Conference, Mr. Washington said: "I want you first of all to feel a hearty welcome to our institution, but to your institution, for it belongs to you. As an indication of the progress the race is making in some of the more essential things in life, it is interesting to note that this, the eleventh annual session of the Tuskegee Negro Conference, we will be able to give the dinner almost wholly on the part of those who have actually brought it and sold for their homes, and have no mortgage on any real estate resting upon them. Ten years ago this would have been an impossible thing. We are going to have those who have paid for their homes, tell, in a simple, straightforward manner, the struggle they have gone through in securing these homes, in order that the lessons may serve to encourage those who are yet without property of their own.

It is with a race as with an individual; the place to begin to make improvement is right where it is. Too many of us expect to buy homes, to cease mortgaging crops, to build school-houses and prolong the school term, and have a better moral and religious atmosphere in our communities, next year or at some future time. We want to begin to do these things right now. Or do we expect to wait until we move into some other State, or perhaps go North, or go to Africa? But I have noted that the man who cannot buy a home, and save money, and educate his children in the South, seldom does it anywhere. If we cannot improve our condition here, I do not believe that there are many spots on earth where we can do so. There is an opportunity open in exigencies of political office for his future. The most lasting and potent protection that the negro can have, in any part of the country, is to make himself the most useful man in his community.

Those of you who have read the papers within the last few months, know that a movement is gradually maturing, under the leadership of the Southern Educational Society, which has in mind the broadening, deepening, and extension of education to all classes of people throughout the South, in a way that has never been tried before. It is most encouraging to note that the time has come when Northern people and Southern people can co-operate in the uplifting of all classes who need assistance. Co-operation between the North and South, friendly discussion, mutual forbearance, and correct understanding of the problems have been the great needs during the last thirty-five years. The time is past when any good result can be brought to bear by the mere condemnation of one race by the other.

Many interesting statements were made, showing some of the struggles made by the farmers in securing lands. Some of them ate dry bread and water, to save the money for the farm. One, who started with nothing, hired out for two years, saved a little money and bought a piece of land, has 250 acres, besides town property, all paid for, with twenty-five horses and mules. Another, who was a slave, used to dig wells and split rails till he got some money saved. In four years he has paid for 390 acres of land. Still another told how he and his wife, by economy and hard work, had gained a good farm. He brought samples of his products, turnips, peas, syrup, wheat, corn, beans and oats. One of the most marked effects of the Conference has been its stimulus to the purchase of land. Ten years ago, few negroes owned any land. Now the farmers of Macon County, the county in which Tuskegee is located, are very largely buying the land on which they have been accustomed to live for years as renters. Within five miles of Tuskegee, $3,000 in cash have recently been paid by colored men for land. Four thousand acres of land have recently been bought by a company, to sell in small farms to colored people. Already, forty houses have been built and forty-five families located upon it. A saw mill, planing mill and blacksmith shop have been built on the tract, and it is likely the whole of it will very soon be sold.

Representatives from twenty-three States and the District of Columbia were present at the Conference. Altogether, more than 200 farmers attended.

Tuskegee, Ala.

R. C. BEDFORD.

A TUSKEGEE COTTAGE

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

A COSY NEGRO DWELLING

the South for every black man to purchase a farm, and to make an independent living. Agriculture will give the race the foundation upon which to build and prepare itself for more important things. Throughout the South, the youth of our race should be constantly reminded that we have the occupations that relate to agriculture, mechanics, and all domestic employments, practically in our hands. We will hold on to these occupations, just in proportion as we, as a race, learn to put brains, skill and dignity into them. The minute we fail to keep pace with the progress of the world in regard to these occupations, that minute we will begin to lose our hold upon these employments, and others, from a distance, will come in and take our places. There is nothing in politics or any other avenue of life that can begin to compare in importance, just now, to the negro's securing a home and becoming a tax-payer, and educating his children in the important occupations that are about his door. I would ten times over rather see a colored young man graduate from college and go out and start a dairy farm and truck-garden or a poultry-yard, and thereby grow independent and wealthy, than to see him start out, depending upon the

AN ANTE-MORTEM RELIGION Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D. Continued

A man who wrote that inscription over his counting-house door died in destitution. Oh, we want more of the kindness of the Gospel and the spirit of love in our business enterprises! How many young men have found in the religion of Jesus Christ a practical help? How many there are to-day who could testify out of their own experience, that godliness is profitable for the life that now is!

In a bank not far from New York—a village bank—an officer could not balance his accounts. He had worked at them day after day, night after night, and he was sick nigh unto death as a result. He knew he had taken one farthing from that bank, but somehow, for some reason, inscrutable then, the accounts would not balance. The time rolled on, and the morning of the day when the books should pass under the inspection of the other officers arrived, and he felt himself in a peril, conscious of his own integrity, but unable to prove that integrity. That morning he went to the bank early, and he knelt down before God and told the whole story of mental anguish, and he said: "O Lord, have done right. Lord, deliver me." And for one hour he continued the prayer before God, and then he arose and went to an old blotter that he had forgotten all about. He opened it, and there lay a sheet of figures which he only needed to add to another line of figures—some line of figures he had forgotten, and knew not where he had laid them—and the accounts were balanced, and the Lord delivered him.

Now, if this be so, then I am persuaded, as you are, of the fact that the vast majority of Christians do not fully test the value of their religion. They are like a farmer in California, with fifteen thousand acres of good wheat land, and culturing only a quarter of an acre. Why do you not go forth and make the religion of Jesus Christ a practical affair every day of your business life, and all this year, beginning now; and to-morrow morning putting into practical effect this holy religion, and demonstrating that godliness is profitable here as well as hereafter?

How can you get along without this religion? Is your physical health so good you do not want this divine tonic? Is your mind so clear, so vast, so comprehensive, that you do not want this divine inspiration? Is your worldly business so thoroughly established that you have no use for that religion which has been the help and deliverance of tens of thousands of men in crises of worldly trouble? And if what I have said is true, then you see what a fatal blunder it is when a man adjourns to life's expiration the uses of religion. A man who postpones religion to sixty years of age gets religion fifty years too late. He may get into the kingdom of God by final repentance, but what can compensate him for a whole lifetime unrelieved and uncomfirmed? You want religion to-day in the training of that child. You will want religion to-morrow in dealing with that customer. You wanted religion yesterday to curb your temper. Is your arm strong enough to beat your way through the floods? Oh, how many there have been who, postponing the religion of Jesus Christ, have plunged into mistakes they never could correct, although they lived sixty years; these men have fallen under the wheel of awful calamity, while a vast multitude of others have taken the religion of Jesus Christ into every-day life, and first, in practical business affairs, and secondly, on the throne of heavenly triumph, have illustrated the glorious truth that "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life which now is as well as of that which is to come."

ANSWERED PRAYERS

J. L. P., Creston, Ia., writes:

I prayed God to let me know where my brother was. My brother has written me, and I believe God answered him to do so.

Mother, Anderson, Ind., writes:

The dear Lord has graciously answered many of my prayers, but I want to speak especially of one who has been praying for years for a dear son, that he might be able to overcome the habit of strong drink. There came a time that I became so distressed and heart-broken on account of him that I knelt in prayer I had no words, didn't know how to pray, nor what to pray for, so simply and it all at the feet of Jesus. The next morning my son came in a beautiful condition, but would not do what I desired him to do. Now he is looking well, and in a good position, and says he will never touch liquor again.

M. L. G., Lorena, Tex., writes:

My son, my only support, was near unto death. I took it to the Lord in prayer. He blessed the request, and answered my prayer, and spared my son.

Mrs. J. L., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

I want to add my testimony to that of others as to the power of earnest prayer. A great trouble hung over my husband for years. We were very despondent; it seemed our prayers and labors were of no avail; but reading your "Answered Prayer" column encouraged me to pray more earnestly. And now, after several months, the cloud is lifting.

M. E. Bailey, Gainesville, Fla., writes:

I asked for light on a serious problem, about which I was in darkness, and received it.

M. J. M., Chicago, Ill., writes:

Every week for over fifteen years, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has come to our door; and when you begin to publish "Answered Prayers," I was doubly interested in the paper. I have been living a long time and for a long time have been having my prayers answered. I have asked the Lord's help continually, and he has helped me and is helping me all the time. I want it to be known in your paper, that reaches so many, what the Lord has done for me.

A Sunday School Teacher, Wichita County, Tex., writes:

I have been in great trouble, my burden seemed more than I could bear. I asked God to remove this burden. I now rejoice to proclaim God does hear and answer prayers, and to add this one more proof of divine love to your "Answered Prayer" column.

A KINDERGARTEN SONG-BIRD

THE CHANTRY CHILDREN OF GRACE CHURCH

LOUIS, ITALIAN CHORISTER

THE CHILD CHOIRS OF NEW YORK CITY

AS Easter draws near, there is much activity among the youthful singers in New York City, and the pretty thought is suggested that the children are making ready to burst forth into song as the flowers into blossom, to herald the anniversary of the blessed morn when Jesus rose from the dead. Fitting, indeed, it seems that those of whom the Master said: "Suffer the children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," should sing praises to him now, as in those times, when the chief priests and scribes heard the children singing in the Temple, "Hosanna to the Son of David!"

Child voices are employed to-day in the worship of the Lord to an extent probably never known before. Boy choristers, it is true, have for centuries formed a feature of religious service in Christian countries, but the present movement includes little girls. In fact, choir-masters are everywhere becoming exceedingly partial to girl-choristers. The little maids are more devotional, it is said, than boys; more regular in attendance on rehearsals, and more faithful in practice.

The ideal choir of the present seems, however, to be the mixed choir, wherein the voices of adults and children of both sexes blend in harmonious unison, or make devout responses, each answering to each in parts adapted respectively to the young and the adult throat. The tendency of these large, mixed choirs is, in a certain sense, in the direction of congregational singing. For the training and practice to extend until all the people unite in harmonious praises, the women in the congregation following the female leaders, the men the male, the children the children, is an end to be desired; and this seems not an improbable promise of the future for, to some extent, the thing is being done now, as any one may observe for themselves by attending a Sabbath or week-night service at the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh avenue and Fourteenth street, or the Broome street Tabernacle, or a number of other places of worship which could be named.

The Metropolitan Temple is a pioneer in child-choir work in the M. E. Church. The first choir of little girls and the first vested choir of that denomination in gard to the use of vestments, he says: "It does away with class distinction. The millionaire's daughter and the child of the tenements appear just alike. We find too, that the employment of a garb which sets them aside for religious service imparts a sense of responsibility to the singers." Like reasons have prompted number of other churches of different denominations to provide some simple uniform for their musicians.

The Broome street Tabernacle Choir is one of the most notable in the country. Dr. H. E. W. Palmer, the well-known composer, and for fourteen years the Director of music at Chautauqua, is Master and has under his care about fifty children, comprising some of the sweetest voices in the city. Such a mixture of nationalities are found here! the velvet-throated Italian predominating. The singing of this choir is infinitely sweet—it is like the music of soft silver bells—perfectly distinct, easily heard above the church, yet never loud. Dr. Palmer says: "I have taught them that a loud voice is a bad voice. I never say to them, 'Sing up! sing loud!' Effort to do this hurts the child-throat, and presently cracks the voice. I would be glad if THE CHRISTIAN HERALD would emphasize this, as it reaches a great many people who would appreciate the suggestion. These children sing head-tones altogether, and their voices continue to grow stronger and sweeter. I never permit them to take chest-tones. This should be done only by the adult, and, under a master." The I

A SECTION OF THE METROPOLITAN TEMPLE CHOIR

America, probably, came into existence here. The band of singers now leading in worship at the Temple, numbers 115 members—men, women and children—who are capable of rendering very fine choral services.

Choir-master Evans receives letters from Methodist churches all over the country, asking advice about the formation of mixed choirs, and he has been instrumental in introducing them into a number. In re-

Witt Memorial, Rivington street, which, like the Tabernacle, is undenominational, and a station of the New York City Mission, has a fine child-choir. So has God's Providence Mission, Broome street. The child choir of Second avenue Baptist Church, which is the special care of the Pastor's assistant, Rev. Charles Keevil, numbers forty children, who not only take part in regular services, but lead worship in the Children

GIRLS' CHOIR, SECOND AVE. BAPTIST CHURCH

SWEET-VOICED WORSHIPERS OF ST. MARK'S

BOYS' CHOIR, SECOND AVE. BAPTIST CHURCH

SALVATION ARMY BRASS BAND

A MUSICAL TRIO

SOLDIERS WHO MAKE MELODY

Church, which is a feature of work in this sanctuary. At St. Mark's on Eighth street (historically known as 'Old St. Mark's on the Bouwerie'), fifty little maids, representing the church and mission choirs thrown together, participate in Easter Chorals. Christ Presbyterian Church has a choir of about thirty-five young singers, who render excellently an extensive repertoire of beautiful music, the "Hallelujah Chorus" and "Lead, Kindly Light," being favorite numbers. There is not a more interesting choir in New York than the Chantry children, Grace P. E. Church. The sweet-voiced Deaconess explained to the writer: "These are children who have been brought up in our kindergarten—little girls who have been here from babyhood. 'The oldest choir and the youngest children in town,' somebody said of this choir. Our children have sung in Chantry (chapel) ever since it opened. To sing in Chantry, is a reward allowed to children for being good. I find children very fond of going to church—I do not know anything a child likes so well as going to church." A number of children who sing in East-side choirs have been guests at Mont-Lawn. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, on the Hudson, and acquired there a liking for church and Sunday School. Louis, whose portrait is given, and whose voice has often been heard in Mont-Lawn Chapel, is a chorister at San Salvador, a little Protestant mission in the poor Italian quarter. The Salvation Army has many a corps of little soldiers who make music as they march. Major John D. Galley, is very proud of the accomplishments of his juvenile brass band and tambourine girls, who, with their instruments and voices have contributed to Easter music here as elsewhere. The bands pictured here, have made melody from San Francisco to New York. Dr. Palmer and other choir-masters in down-town missions say: "The child-choir is a feeder for the church. Children—especially the foreigners, whom we can often reach no other way—love to sing. With music we draw them into the sanctuary—and then we keep them here." It is pleasant to see little ones trained through song to "worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." MYRTA LOCKETT AVARY.

Consul General
Goodnow's Appeal

Relief Work in the Yangtse Valley

Miss Mitchell's
Soup-Kitchen
at Wuhu

CHRISTENDOM'S great heart has been deeply touched by the woes of China. First came the devastating war, then the famine, sweeping off its millions of victims, and as a culmination of the catalogue of affliction, the floods along the Yangtse Valley, ruining the crops over a vast area, and drowning thousands of the rice-growing peasantry. After ruining the great dykes, leveling orchards, and sweeping thousands of little homesteads bare, the waters receded, leaving such a scene of misery and helplessness as it is seldom the fate of any people to experience. Such is the condition of things along the Yangtse Valley to-day, where the destitute and homeless and the orphans are huddled together in helpless hordes in the towns and villages, wholly dependent on charity. The merchants and business men of Shanghai, Hankow, and Wuhu have responded generously to the call for aid, but the need, as a whole, is beyond their ability to supply.

U. S. Consul-General Goodnow, at Shanghai, has sent a letter to the proprietor of this journal on the subject of the Yangtse sufferers, in which he says:

"I appeal to you now for the people of the Yangtse Valley. The need is great. During the summer of 1901, there were great floods along the middle course of the Yangtse River, destroying the crops in a large part of the provinces of Kiang-su, Kiangsi, Nganhwei, Hupeh, and Hunan. At least 1,100,000 people of these provinces must be fed until the next crop, or they must starve. The foreign Committee have gotten the figures of the extent of the destitution from the Chinese authorities, and have checked them carefully by the estimates of the missionaries who know that region.

The work of relief has been already systematized and is under foreign supervision. There was at first in Shanghai a Chinese Committee, collecting funds from Chinese and foreigners, and distributing them through Chinese officials and committees in the distressed regions. Missionaries, both as individuals and in committees, were doing their utmost to relieve the distress in their localities. Their work cannot be too highly commended. The work, however, was too great for these agencies. That we might have organized work, covering the whole district, a committee of foreign officials and merchants was formed, with which the Chinese committee has since united. We at once sought the co-operation of the Viceroy and Governors of the distressed provinces, which was gladly given; and our work has had their cordial assistance. We have appointed committees of foreigners (consuls, merchants and missionaries), and Chinese at the centres of destitution.

The people are destitute. The great rice-growing regions about Wuhu were flooded and the crop of 1901 was destroyed. Aid is given on the basis that one Mexican dollar (44.9 cents gold) will maintain one person one hundred days. Money is given as charity only to the young, old and feeble. All the able-bodied are required to labor on works of public utility for their daily wage. We give less than a half cent per day to each person. Your money will not be scattered recklessly.

As a matter of humanity, we should aid from our abundance and prosperity these millions

CONTINUED
ON PAGE 245

MISS MITCHELL AND HER HELPER FEEDING HOMELESS CHILDREN AT WUHU

A VIEW OF THE SOUP KITCHEN

HUNGRY FLOOD BABIES

A GOSPEL TALK TO THE SEWING CLASS

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Editor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year. Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires. Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

An Anti-Biblical Reformer

DO our public schools conform to the true spirit of American liberty? The general impression is that they do, and that it is in a large measure due to the education given there, that our liberties have been preserved and maintained. A citizen of New Haven, Conn., however, entertains the opposite opinion, and has petitioned the Board of Education in that city to make a change in the system in vogue, in order to bring the schools into such conformity.

The nature of the change he proposes is original and peculiar. He demands that the Bible be eliminated from the curriculum, and gives a variety of reasons for dropping the Book from the place it now holds. One of these is that the Bible "imperils liberty." That is certainly a remarkable discovery. If it is true, one wonders that it was not discovered before. The children of America for many generations have been familiar with the Bible and have been subjected to this peril, yet the peril has not materialized and we still enjoy our liberties. It looks as if the poison, if it exists, has been very slow in its operation, otherwise some sign of the evil would have been detected before the New Haven prophet arose to warn us of it. Another charge is that the Bible upholds monarchy, polygamy, slavery, and the subjection of women. These would be serious charges if they were true. It would, indeed, be a dark day for our beloved land, if, through the teaching of the Bible, or any other teaching, so awful a tide of evils should sweep over society. As a matter of fact, however, the testimony of history and existing conditions is to the contrary. Monarchy does exist in Bible-reading countries, but there its prerogatives have been so shorn that it no longer dares to oppose the will of the people. Polygamy, slavery and the subjection of women are not evils that flourish in Bible-reading countries, but in non-Christian countries, and they invariably disappear before the advance of Christianity. If the Bible upheld them, we should inevitably find some land in which the Bible being read and obeyed, the people set themselves to inaugurate these institutions. Again, we learn from our reformer, that the Bible's teachings contradict the demonstrated facts of science. This charge is not so important as the others, because the Bible's direct mission is not to teach science, and it is not used in our schools as a manual on that subject. In its own special field of religion, however, it is assailed by this new opponent. "It attributes to God," he says, "conduct unworthy a Supreme Being and furnishes a pretext for man's wrong doing." It would be interesting to learn in what way the Bible does this, because it is a matter of common experience that none love and reverence God as do the readers of the Bible, and none of them avail themselves of these pretexts for wrong doing, but when they unhappily do commit sin, confess that they have failed to obey the Biblical injunctions. Finally, it is charged that "the Bible leads men to believe that sins may be forgiven." True, O asperser, blessedly and sublimely true! To a world burdened with sin, conscious of its shortcomings, no teaching could be so welcome. As the loving parent forgives his erring child, so the magnanimity of God which the Bible teaches, keeps men from despair and encourages them to lead holy lives. By all means let our boys and girls learn this inspiring, consoling truth. They may need it above all others.

Our twentieth century reformer should read the Bible. He has apparently gained his knowledge of it from hostile critics. There is a suspicious similarity in his indictment to certain diatribes uttered many years ago, with greater force and pungency, by lips now silent in death. But that is not a fair way of judging of a book and its influence. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has recently published records of people who have read the Bible through from sixty to a hundred times. Their uniform testimony is that it has not only given them comfort in sorrow, peace in trouble, and hope in death, but it has inspired them to resist temptation, and to aspire after that holiness without which no man can see the Lord. It is not from the ranks of the Bible readers that seditious leaders arise, nor the men come who fill our jails and penitentiaries, as we might expect would be the case if the charges of our New Haven friend were true. They come from the class which is ignorant of its teaching, or ignores its warnings. The men who know the Book best, who have modelled their lives upon it, and have adhered most closely to its teaching are our best citizens, philanthropists, and social benefactors. We earnestly advise our new reformer to read it, and he will find that it is the very best Book for the training of youth, and the safest guide they can have in the dangers of life. To himself, too, it may render a useful service, in the fulfilment of the promise given to the man who studies it, that it shall "deliver him from the way of evil, from the man who speaketh perverse things."

The Power of Influence

INFLUENCE may be likened to a chain, which, the first link being soundly forged, goes on multiplying itself and adding link after link, almost indefinitely. The influence of personal character, for good or evil, is so wide and far-reaching as to seem practically boundless. A pebble thrown into the placid lake, throws off ring after ring, until the ripple becomes visible almost as far as the eye can reach. The influence of a good man or woman in a community is felt on every side, and exercises a power which can hardly be overestimated.

There has probably never been a better illustration of the "endless chain" of personal Christian influence than that which is afforded in the following, which is absolutely true:

A woman dropped a tract in the way of a wicked man named Richard Baxter. He picked it up, read it, and it was the means of his conversion. In after days, he wrote a book called The Call to the Unconverted, which was the means of bringing a great multitude to Christ, among others, Philip Doddridge. Philip Doddridge wrote a book called The Rise and Progress of Religion, which brought thousands and tens of thousands into the Kingdom, and among them the great Wilberforce. Wilberforce wrote a book called A Practical View of Christianity, which was the means of bringing a still further multitude to the Cross, among them Legh Richmond. Legh Richmond wrote a tract called The Dairyman's Daughter, which was blessed to the salvation of a great number of souls. And this vast tide of influence started from the fact that one good woman dropped a Christian tract in the way of Richard Baxter—the tide of influence rolling on through Richard Baxter, through Philip Doddridge, through the great Wilberforce, through Legh Richmond, and it is still rolling on and will continue to roll on forever.

Use your influence for Christ. Use it wherever and whenever you can, and do not despise the "small things" you may find ready to your hand. If the Christian woman in our illustration had not dropped the tract, deeming it too insignificant an act to do, the glorious results that sprang from that simple act could never have been recorded. A word, a look, a touch, a cup of water, a simple kindness, may become momentous in its ultimate results. And remember that God abundantly blesses and multiplies whatever is done for him heartily, unselfishly, and with a single eye to his glory and for the souls of men.

The World's Peace

AN echo of the International Peace Conference of 1899 has reached these shores. Baron D'Estournelles, a distinguished member of the French Chamber of Deputies, recently delivered an address at Columbia University. The theme was the peace of the world. He deprecated the public impression that the Hague Conference was a failure, having been immediately followed by wars in China and the Transvaal. The first of these wars had long been impending and was inevitable; besides, there was no responsible government with which to negotiate. In the case of the Transvaal, the war was conducted on territory under British sovereignty, and was not open to the influence of intervention. Reduced to its simplest terms, the Peace Conference was an effort to forestall or prevent war; but the Baron believed there was no possibility of the reduction of standing armies and navies, until all the leading nations of the world adopted the policy of universal peace.

There is something singularly illogical in this declaration, by one who professes himself an advocate of world-wide peace, that in order to secure peace, the whole world must arm to the teeth. This is scarcely the view to be accepted by humanitarians and philanthropists, yet Baron d'Estournelles is not alone in his opinion. In all the leading nations of the world to-day, there is tremendous military and naval activity—France feverishly hurrying the building of a gigantic navy, with submarine destroyers; England keeping the forges blazing, and the great hammers going in her arsenals night and day, to keep ahead of her rivals; Russia, Japan and little Italy urging the building of huge fleets of battleships and cruisers. It is said to be the dream of our royal guest, Prince Henry, to make Germany a great naval world-power, an ambition which is fully shared by Emperor William himself. Our own navy has already doubled the numbers and strength it had before the Spanish-American war. This universally pervasive warlike spirit is no less manifest in the strengthening of land forces. At the beginning of the present year the great armies of the world on a war footing were as follows: Russia 5,198,026, Germany 5,516,082, France 5,133,786, Italy 1,885,412, Austria 1,997,866, Great Britain 691,639—nearly 20,000,000 men, exclusive of commissioned officers, trained by these six civilized nations to the scientific slaughter and destruction of fellow-beings. In the British Parliament, the Secretary of War intimated that the Government contemplated the creation of a military force to represent the whole British Empire. This plan would give to England an army available for instant service of 600,000 men, drawn from all parts of the empire, including colonies and dependencies, while an equal number would be available for home defense, the total force aggregating 1,200,000 men.

Those who have the peace of the world at heart cannot regard these ominous signs with complacency. Vastly augmented armies and navies mean onerous taxation, and measureless burdens for industrial and mercantile communities everywhere. When militarism seizes a nation in its grasp, as it has already seized some European governments, depression and discontent follow like swift shadows in its wake. Such bitter rivalry for power and widespread lust for territorial conquest, all indicate a condition of human affairs which might well make the Peace Angel hide her head under her wing, as she turns away from the world in sorrow at the folly and wickedness of its inhabitants.

Among the Workers

—MRS. DAVIS has lately conducted a series of revival services in the First M. E. Church at Rome, N. Y., with very gratifying results. Large audiences attended the meetings.

—EVANGELIST ROBERT L. LAYFIELD and wife, of Kansas City, lately closed a successful union meeting at Gardiner, Kan. They are now engaged in conducting union services at Linwood, Kan.

—REV. E. P. HAMMOND is holding meetings at Inwood Long Island. Nearly two hundred professed faith in Christ. A majority are children, but a goodly number of youths and adults are also included.

—M. S., apropos of an article on "Sermon Reading and Church Going," in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, relates this incident:

A clergyman one Sabbath morning felt in his pockets. "Brethren and sisters," he said to his audience, "I have left my manuscript at home, I shall have to depend on the Lord this morning. This afternoon I will try to do better." His morning discourse was an eloquent surprise to his hearers.

—J. B. HITCHCOCK, Vinita, Ind. Ter., writes: "I want to call attention of benevolent Christian people everywhere to the pitiable, suffering condition of our full-blooded Cherokees. They are actually starving. Their little crops were all cut off by last summer's great heat and drought. They are no begging help from anyone, but struggle on in grim, heroic silence. I am son of one of the first missionaries to the western Cherokees. For more than fifty years I have labored for the best good of the Cherokee people."

—HERE is an agreeable suggestion from the Orient, which must interest every woman who reads this paper:

I have read with interest the articles on "What Women Should Wear in Church," and as I truly believe it is a shame for a woman to appear in public with uncovered head, I venture to suggest that the lace fichu so much worn here by Christian women and girl would be a most suitable and becoming substitute for the hats and bonnets now in vogue. In Palestine and Syria you never see woman in public with uncovered head, neither among Christian Jews nor Moslems. We, of the West, might copy them in the simplicity. One lady of my acquaintance in Syria, for many years a missionary, had adopted the fichu and wears it to church. I have not yet been brave enough to do so, but hope to be in the near future.

The writer is Miss Lucie E. Dunn, missionary in Jerusalem.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Prince Henry's Visit

HEARTY and cordial was the welcome extended to the brother of Kaiser William by the people of the South and West. On March 2, after visiting the battlefield of Lookout Mountain, he crossed Tennessee, making a brief stay at Nashville. Thence through Kentucky, halting at Louisville and Bowling Green. Indianapolis was the next city on his route, whence he proceeded to St. Louis. He remained there only four hours which, however, were crowded by ovations and enthusiastic welcomes. Thence he continued his journey to Chicago, where the most elaborate preparations had been made for his reception. Flags and electric-light devices covered the chief buildings, and long lines of German Americans, bearing torches, filled the streets. There was a banquet prepared for him, and afterwards a grand musical celebration in the Armory of the First Infantry, and still later a state ball. On the following day Prince Henry traveled to Milwaukee, Wis., where another great ovation awaited him. Thence he turned his face eastward, and reached Niagara Falls on March 4. He passed over to the Canadian side, and received official welcome from the Dominion authorities. Continuing his journey, he reached Boston on March 6, where he was welcomed by the city and received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Harvard University. Thence he traveled to Albany, N.Y., where he visited the State Capitol and the City Hall. On his way to New York he halted at West Point, and was much interested by the relics exhibited there. At six o'clock, March 7, he entered New York again, having during his nine days' trip passed through thirteen States and covered a distance of 4,133 miles. A member of his suite said that although he Prince was fatigued, he had thoroughly enjoyed the journey, and had been much gratified by the hospitality and good feeling everywhere displayed. The American people, while abating not a jot their love of a Republic, have treated the scion of the royal house with courtesy and respect, obeying the apostolic injunction:

Render therefore to all their dues, tribute to whom tribute is due, respect to whom respect is due, honor to whom honor is due (Rom. 13: 7).

The Rights of a Corpse

A curious dispute has been submitted to the Traffic Managers' Association, which represents all the important lines of railroad in the country. It arose on a question of excess of baggage belonging to a funeral party. The total weight of their six large trunks was over eight hundred pounds. The party consisted of five persons, who were going from Binghamton, N. Y., to a Western town. They were taking the body of a dead friend there for interment, and had paid for the transportation of the corpse. The baggage-master informed them that they would have to pay excess charges on seventy pounds, as only 50 pounds was allowed to each passenger. The party contended that the dead man, whose fare they had paid, was entitled to have a share of the baggage, and, as a matter of fact, it all belonged to him. The baggage-master, however, insisted on his view of the case, and he excess charges were paid under protest. The Traffic Managers' Association was appealed to, and it has affirmed the contention of the passengers, and has ordered that whenever a corpse is carried by rail, the usual quantity of baggage carried free by a living passenger shall be allowed to the dead. The decision is just, and it will save many a bereaved family money that is often at such times sorely needed. The dead, of course, are indifferent to this, as to all other questions of property. The railroads cannot help them with the spiritual baggage that they take with them to the eternal world, which means so much to them for good or evil:

Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some they follow after. Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid (1 Timothy 5: 22, 23).

Wireless Messages Unheard

The arrival of the Cunard steamer Umbria last week in New York, has furnished a new proof of the success of the Marconi system of telegraphing. The Umbria carried a perfect Marconi apparatus, and on its way over was in communication not only with the English shore for two days after sailing, but later during the voyage with the sister ships of the same line, the Etruria and the Campania, which it passed on the way. The messages were very clear, and were easily read. One of them, addressed to a passenger on the Umbria, was so surprising that it could not have been prearranged. But the extraordinary fact was that Mr. Marconi was at the same time sailing on the Philadelphia, and was receiving messages from the English shore all the way until he was two thousand miles from land. None of these reached the Umbria, though that vessel was nearer and than the Phila- was, however, sentenced to a long term in prison and served it out, although he was innocent. When he was released, he found that the prison brand upon him prevented his obtaining honest employment. To avoid starvation he turned to burglary, and became an expert safe-breaker. But at last he was caught and sentenced. He promises never to relapse into crime again, and as an evidence of his sincerity has sent to the police his complete set of burglar's tools, which the police say are the most complete and effective they have ever seen. He acted wisely in surrendering such tools, as their possession might, in some crisis, have tempted him to use them again. The safest course for the man who desires to turn away from evil is to, once and for all, separate from all associations that remind him of it.

If iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy tent (Job 11: 14).

A Sane Person in the Asylum

The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court has just decided a question of sanity on the application of a suitor who claimed damages for being wrongfully committed to the State Asylum for the Insane. The persons responsible for his incarceration showed in their defence that the suitor had done many foolish things in disposing of his property, had made baseless charges against members of his family and had made threats against them of physical violence and suits at law. To protect themselves and to prevent the property from being wasted, they had procured his imprisonment in the asylum. Reviewing the evidence submitted to the lower court, the Appellate Division finds that the man was wrongfully committed. His peculiarities, the Court says, were the result of malignity, not of insanity. How far one under the influence of hatred and malignity may be considered sane is doubtful, but it appears he is not so much demented as to justify his being committed to an asylum. Such a man has, however, need to pray to Him who, in his earthly life, exorcised demons, that this fiend may be cast out of his heart, otherwise, he will fall into evil.

He that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not where he goeth (1 John 2: 11).

BRIEF NOTES

Rev. F. B. Meyer is holding evangelistic meetings in the Russian capital. The meetings are held in drawing-rooms and chapels. It is expected that Harvard University will shortly send an expedition to make extensive exploration in Egypt and Assyria.

Dr. F. E. Clark, President of the C. E. Society, is going to England to attend the great national convention at Manchester.

A recent census return shows that the English language is now habitually used by one hundred and twenty million persons.

An important secession from the Salvation Army is La Mareschale, Gen. Booth's eldest daughter, who, with her husband, Mr. Booth Clibborn, has tendered her resignation. M. Cossandey, a Frenchman, has been appointed to the post thus vacated.

The services conducted by Dr. L. W. Munhall, at Augusta Ga., have been the scene of wonderful conversions. Two hundred and fifty-seven persons in a gathering of young people in St. John's Church rose to pledge themselves in Christ's strength to a new life. The Augusta Chronicle says that such a movement has not been witnessed in the city in ten years.

Dr. Albert T. Clay, curator of the Babylonian Department of the University of Pennsylvania, has recently deciphered the literal accuracy of Bible history, and show that certain events which are recorded in the Bible and have been made a ground of attack, are distinctly corroborated by the most ancient tablets.

The town of Montclair, N. J., recently gave a farewell celebration to Rev. Howard S. Bliss, who is going to Beyrouth, Syria, to become President of the American College there. Mr. Bliss, during his residence in Montclair, has taken his full share of citizens' duties and has distinguished himself among other ways as a Volunteer Fireman. The Fire Brigade in that town has another clerical member in Rev. C. W. Gulick, pastor of the Heights Church.

delphia. The reason assigned is that the wireless messages are "keyed." That is, that by arrangement between the sender and receiver, a certain tone is fixed, so that if the vessel has not its instruments adjusted to the tone of the shore operator's instrument it cannot receive the message he sends. The same conditions prevail in spiritual communications. When a man's heart is attuned to the divine nature, then, and only then, does he receive direction from God, and enjoy the fulfilment of the promise:

Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left (Isa. 30: 21).

Breaking with His Past

The chief of police of Omaha, Neb., has received a remarkable letter from a convict who has just completed a sentence in the penitentiary for breaking open a safe. He writes that he has been converted during his term, and has resolved to lead an honest life in future. He declares that the first crime charged against him, of which he was convicted, he did not commit. He

OUR NEW MISSIONARIES ARRIVE

The Gospel in Old Tangier

A LAND OF CRUELTY AND SUPERSTITION

THE BLIND BEGGAR AT THE CITY GATE

A CARAVAN FROM FEZ RESTING ON THE MARCH

A MOROCCAN WATER-CARRIER

WE have reached Tangier safely, all well and happy in our new field of labor. We are fast getting acquainted with the people and their customs. We are located half a mile out of Tangier, as no one has attempted to live a very long distance from the cities. The government will not allow it, as there is danger along the roads, and missionaries generally have a watchman to stop with them during the night when camping out. We live on the road leading from Tangier to Fez. There are many robbers here. A German banker was killed just outside of Tangier some time ago.

From a village quite near to this city, some people from one of the tribes took away two Spanish children. The Sultan's soldiers have gone to that tribe to search for and punish the offenders, who, if caught, will have their heads cut off and placed on poles outside of the city gate. One of the missionaries told us that at one time he saw fifty heads outside of the city gate.

There are many blind beggars in and around Tangier. One meets them constantly, and they plead so pitifully for help. One reason why there are so many blind is that if a person is caught stealing the authorities burn his eyes out with a red-hot iron. It makes one shudder to even think of this. They are afraid to practice this punishment right in the city of Tangier.

The water carriers of Tangier walk through the streets ringing bells. They have skins filled with water fastened on their backs, and they sell the water to the thirsty. Where the people have no cisterns, the carrier delivers water for their use and is paid in return.

Camel caravans from Fez are daily arriving at the market-place of Tangier. We have no railroads. One does not see wagons and carriages in this country, for there are no roads upon which you could travel with them. Everything is carried on camel-back or on donkeys, and is a thousand years behind the times; but all the Europeans here and all the missionaries, too, are hopeful that a change is coming. At present, no one is allowed to preach Christ on a public highway, nor is he allowed to hold Gospel services; so the missionaries work from hand to hand, visiting and talking with the people in the market and at their homes.

We expect to begin at once with the study of the language. We are trusting God for all things, and hope he will give us a teacher to help us. We ask you all to pray for us, that our faith may not waver, but that we may all be strengthened for this work, that lies nearest to our hearts. We are confident that as we labor and do His will, He will also provide for all our wants.

Tangier, Morocco.

FRED WEISS.

OUR COMPLETE COURSE IN SHORTHAND

ISAAC PITMAN'S 20th CENTURY REVISION
By Special Arrangement with Isaac
Pitman & Sons, 33 Union Square, N. Y.

LESSON VI.

Exercise 10

can (i), have, how I, or eye (i),

our or hour (i), was, why (i) you.

Exercise 11

1. Guy, rye, vie, guile, mighty; row (n.), thou, loud, cowry.
2. Alloy, Hoy, envoy; Kew, Hew, feud; wider, wifely, fewer.
3. Though the dike may be a mile away at the mouth of the valley, we can move it by dynamite.
4. Why have you allowed the enemy to take a refuge so valued?
5. We can manage to annoy and terrify the foe ere I go to China.
6. We can argue how we may occupy the tower.
7. He was loyal, we knew, so we may enjoy the aid we value to renew the attack and assail the huge foe.
8. We hope we may lure our enemy to downfall.

REVIEW

1. How many diphthongs are there?
2. Give words in which the diphthongs and triphthong are used.
3. How may i, ow, and wi be written as to place?
4. State the positions for oi and u.
5. What signs may be joined initially to consonants?
6. What diphthongs may be joined finally to consonants?

7. Give examples of (a) joined initial and final diphthongs and triphthong; (b) show how the diphthongs u and i are written to the consonant n.

Circle S and Z

58. S (together with its heavy sound z, for which s is generally written) is one of the most frequently occurring consonants in the English language. The consonant s is represented not only by the stroke s, but also by a small circle [o], which forms an easy means of joining one consonant to another.

59. When the circle stands alone, or is joined to straight consonants not forming an angle, it is written with the backward or LEFT motion, thus sp, st, s ch, sk, sr, sks;

ps, ts, ch s, ks, rs, tst.

60. Between two straight lines forming an angle, the circle s is written on the OUTSIDE of the angle; thus, kst, tsk, pst, ch sp, rsp, rsk.

61. When the circle s is joined to curves, it is written inside the curve, and when it occurs between two curves, it is usually written inside the first; as, sf, fs, ss, ms, ns, sl, ls, s sh, sh s, sms, msm, lsl, msv, fsl,

msn, nsm, fsk, tsu, lsm,
msls, usng, ssts, slsts, lsr.

62. The circle s is always read first at the beginning of a word, and last at the end, the vowel or vowels being read according to their positions with regard to the stroke consonant, and not with reference to the circle, as,

up, ought, age, oak, aim, pay, may, ray, day, fay;
sup, sought, sage, soak, same, pace, mace, race, days, face,

Exercise 12

any, or in (i), as, has (i), is, his, give, or given, him, or may, me, or my (i), on (i).

Exercise 13

1. Soup, snow, ears, keys, psalm, seed, bees, alms, thaws.
2. Upset, musk, deceit, opossum, tears, beseech, oxide.
3. Sam is full of dismay in passing the Bay of Biscay.
4. But my Scotch gillie shows he has no fears, and m. Sepoy has no scare as to his safety.
5. Can you say how I may pacify Sam on this score?
6. Why you may assure him he has no cause to give way, any alarms, or speak to him in such ways as seem likely to allay his sorrows.
7. But he is worse if he feels the ship rise on the sea.
8. The reason is the gusty airs now rising, but we have no heavy gales.

Loops ST and STR

63. The frequently occurring combination st at the beginning of a word, as stem, and st at the end of a word, as in mist, mused, are represented by a loop made half the length of the stroke to which it is attached. This st (stee) loop follows the same rule as the circle s, that is, it is always read first at the beginning of a word, and last at the end; like the circle s it is written backward to straight letters and inside curves; thus ache, sake, stake; Ka case, cased; mew, muse, muse; ale, sale, stale.

The student is recommended to purchase the Key to the Shorthand Instructor, which forms a Key to all the Exercises appearing in these lessons, as well as to all the Review Questions. It is an indispensable companion for all students mastering the art without teacher. The price of the Key is 50c., and all orders should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office. Lesson No. VII. will appear in the issue of April 2.

A Talk with Friends

ON the day that I write a wild northwester is beating down, cold and sharp, and the snow is swirling before the blast in fierce gusts. When you read, the first hints of spring will be in the air, the trees will be thinking of their leaves, feeling the stir of the sap; up in the sugar country, people will be saying that before long the sugar-making time will come, and the sun will try to cheat us into the belief that there never was a cold day in the world.

What a joy it is, that however dark the cloud, and chill the wind, and furious the gale, there is always blue sky above the storm and peace at the blessed heart of things. What gladness that though the birds go South in the autumn, they fly North again in the spring. What bliss to remember that all our partings mean reunion by-and-by, that when we leave the wayside inns of earth, we shall go to the mansions of heaven.

I have been wishing more than ever lately that all whom I love, among whom I count a good many whom I have never yet seen face to face, may enjoy some special benediction this very spring from the gracious hand of God. Are you making all you ought of this Lenten season, when there should be often and earnestly prayers sent up from each home, for the presence there of the Holy Spirit? Our Easter will be here before many more days. Shall it mean the rising of the day-star in our hearts? Shall we get a new view of our risen Lord? Shall we be more than ever consecrated and set apart to the Master's use? Dear friends, God will do his part. Let us do ours. Let us overcome with his help the sin of unbelief, conquer our inertia and strive against our apathy. There are riches past the soul's reckoning for all who live and serve God. Lo! the winter is past! The flowers appear on the earth! The time of the singing of birds has come!

Fresh Paper and Paint

A very old and shabby house may be made as attractive as the newest edifice, by the judicious use of paper and paint. Beautiful papers for the wall come at low prices, and if one be too poor to afford a paper-hanger, one may put the paper on herself. I know a half-dozen women who can paper walls very nicely, the only difficulty they find insurmountable, being how to cover the ceiling—an undertaking very hard indeed for an amateur. White-wash covers a multitude of sins, and gives an air of wholesome purity to a neglected room. Painting, if you have somebody to mix your colors aright, is only fun. Last spring, a young woman who was unable to refurnish her chamber, procured a paint-pot and the loan of a brush, scraped and sand-papered her old bureau, bedstead and chairs, gave them three coats of shining white paint, and laid down a new, cheap matting on her floor. Her room has been the admiration of her friends ever since.

Something New From Chicago

The big city by the great lake is nothing if not progressive. Recently the pastor of the First Congregational Church, Rev. W. B. Chamberlain, discovered that many young women could not attend evening meetings in the tent of the Y. P. S. C. E. for lack of suitable escorts. He immediately called for volunteers, and organized an escort corps from young men, who were proud to accompany the girls and see them safely to and from their homes. Where girls and men were acquainted, they were naturally paired together; but a committee of wise persons saw to it that no young man was allowed to form one of the guard of honor, unless his Christian character was above reproach. Therefore some pleasant acquaintances will probably be made in this way. With certain modifications, this plan might be used to swell the dwindling second service in many of our churches.

To Nervous Folk

Don't shield yourself behind a screen of nerves when you are cross and irritable and utterly unreasonable. Try to be gentle in speech and controlled in voice, even if you are bubbling over with vexation underneath.

... THE FISHERMAN'S FAMILY ...

WITH the breath of the sea tinging the brown cheeks of the children, with the wistfulness in their eyes of those who are used to hoping, fearing, and praying when the storms are up, and the dear one out on the waves, the wife and little ones of the fisherman make a pretty picture. He is a hardy fellow, this Jean of Brittany, and he toils sturdily enough for the family, bringing their bread for them from the deep sea.

Half the nervous women, and men too, are simply very selfish, and are thinking more of their own way than of other people's pleasure.

COMING

Coming back the bluebirds,
Coming back the spring,
Glancing showers and fragrant flowers,
Song and bloom and wing.

Sabbath-Breaking in Society

AMATEUR theatricals in Washington for a not unworthy object, but women well known socially, the wives, daughters and sisters of prominent men, deliberately broke the Sabbath in preparing for them, working hard at a rehearsal and otherwise devoting the sacred hours to purposes of their own pleasure. When women, many of them brought up in Christian homes, thus trample on God's day, it is a pitiful sign of moral decadence, which bodes no good to the nation. Our capital city is growing more lax than formerly in this regard, and persons who should be exemplary, show themselves breakers of God's law. A day of retribution will not tarry. The desecration of the Sabbath means lowered standards, and the breakdown of morality in other fields than this. One commandment cannot more than another be broken with impunity.

AFTER THE SONG

WHEN the song's gone out of your life,
That you thought would last to the end—
That first sweet song of the heart,
That no after days can lend—
The song of the birds to the trees,
The song of the wind to the flowers,
The song that the heart sings to itself
When it wakes in life's morning hours—

You can start no other song;
Not even a tremulous note
Will falter forth on the empty air,
It dies in your aching throat.
It is all in vain that you try,
For the spirit of song has fled—
The nightingale sings no more to the rose
When the beautiful flower is dead.

So let silence softly fall
On the bruised heart's quivering strings,
Perhaps from the loss of all you may learn
The song that the seraph sings:
A grand and glorious psalm
That will tremble and rise and thrill,
And fill your breast with its grateful rest,
And its lonely yearnings still.

—SELECTED.

Decision of Character

Where shall we draw the line between firmness and obstinacy? A balky horse or a mule with forefeet planted in the road, refusing to stir, is a good illustration of the latter. The former is found in the calm attitude of the mother or teacher, who gently and without passion insists on childish obedience, and restrains herself from vehemence and anger. An obstinate temper is as truly a sign of weakness as of strength. No one need plume himself on having a strong will, if he is merely self-assertive, narrow and prejudiced. To be like the stubborn mule is anything but desirable.

About Letters

A correspondent inquires whether she is doing right or wrong in opening, for the latter's good, the letters of her middle-aged daughter, and, at her own discretion, in destroying the same. She is doing wrong. Legally, she is committing an offence for which she could be tried and punished. The law takes no notice of private and personal reasons for such infringement of another's rights, and this mother is decidedly a trespasser, and should reform and cease her interference with her daughter's mail. If she has been keeping back letters which her daughter has looked for, and which may determine her conduct, she should take her courage in both hands, eat her humble pie, and explain. I hope the daughter will forgive her.

Every person has the privilege of opening personal correspondence as an individual. Husbands and wives, parents and children, should respect each other's rights in this important particular.

A BUSY WORKER.

Coffee Touches up Different Spots.

Frequently coffee sets up rheumatism when it is not busy with some other part of the body. A St. Joe, Mo. man, P. V. Wise, says: "About two years ago my knees began to stiffen and my feet and legs swell, so that I was scarcely able to walk, and then only with the greatest difficulty, for I was in constant pain."

I consulted Dr. Barnes, one of the most prominent physicians here, and he diagnosed the case and inquired, "Do you drink coffee?" "Yes," "You must quit using it at once," he replied. I did so and commenced drinking Postum in its place.

The swelling in my feet and ankles and the rheumatic pains subsided quickly, and during the past 18 months I have enjoyed most excellent health, and, although I have passed the 68th mile post I have never enjoyed life better.

Good health brings heaven to us here. I know of many cases where wonderful cures of stomach and heart trouble have been made by simply throwing away coffee and using Postum."

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

THE ELECTROMOTIC Teething Necklace

Brings rest and relief to both mother and child. Calms the nerves, and is as effective as it is harmless.

We all know that the magnet has a power of attraction at once simple and mysterious.

The principle of the Electromotic Teething Necklace is as mysterious as that of the magnet; although it will not affect an adult, it does act immediately upon the sensitive organism of an infant—instantly calming the nerves and inducing a healthful and refreshing sleep. This is known and vouched for by thousands of mothers who use it.

Price, by mail, 50 cents.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL. Send your name and address with 50 cents, and you will receive the Electromotic Teething Necklace at once. If dissatisfied at the end of 30 days, return the Necklace and your money will be refunded without question.

HENRY C. BLAIR, 800 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LET US SEND Our LEADER BICYCLE

High Grade, 1902 model, for your examination. It is the wonder value of the new year, the perfection point in bicycle construction. Up-to-date in design, size and trimmings. Weighs twenty-two pounds, and guaranteed to carry A Rider Weighing 600 Pounds.

Send for this wheel, examine it critically; costs you nothing to examine it. If you like it, pay Express Agent $9.95 and expressage. If you don't like it, return it. Write to-day for 1902, large free Catalogue of BICYCLES and SUNDRIES.

Sutcliffe & Co., Louisville, Ky.

A Train That Took Its Own Photograph.

A large, handsome engraving, 18x28 inches, has been made of "The Burlington's Number One" while going at 60 miles an hour between Chicago and Denver. It is the best picture of a train in motion ever taken, and "the train took the picture itself." This is explained in a folder which will be sent free on application. Price of large engraving 20 cents. Postage stamps will do. Address P. S. Eustis, General Passenger Agent, C. B. & Q. Railway, 209 Adams Street, Chicago.

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars. Dept. E. KARL GERSNER, 83-4th Avenue, New York.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

Chapter XIX—Continued

WAS it time now for the old man to take his nephew into his confidence? Immanuel must certainly be told soon how large a fortune he would have at his disposal.

Moses Armitage looked at the young man with honest pride and joy shining in his blue eyes. Here was one who had never done anything to hurt either his soul or his body, he thought, as his glance wandered happily over the dark handsome head, the well-knit athletic figure, the clean-cut noble features. "Immanuel," he said, "Immanuel." Something unusual in his tone and look brought the young man to his side, an anxious question in his eyes.

"Immanuel," repeated Moses Armitage almost in a whisper; then he added, "God with us—yes, that is what it means, and that is what I want you to be to the world

"my hands tell the story without words. I am an old, old man, my child; my days on earth are almost told. No—do not look at me like that; you will not be left desolate. You know by this time as well as I can tell you, that your Friend and Guide is always with you. Then, too, there are possibilities—" The old man's head had sunken upon his breast; his eyes were fixed dreamily upon the wide prospect of the sunlit valley, flecked with drifting cloud shadows. "I have come to see," he continued in a low voice, "that the veil is very thin—nay, there is no veil; we are spirit—living the spirit life now as truly as we ever shall, and they are spirits—sent forth to minister. As we reach up through the silence we touch them in the thought world—at times, as we grow old, we almost think that we can hear their voices."

He stopped short and recalled himself to the present with a visible effort. "But it

"MOSES ARMITAGE KISSED AND BLESSED HIS ADOPTED SON"

—a saviour after the pattern of the Man Jesus, who gave himself and all his powers to the redemption of the lost."

"Yes, uncle," said the young man simply, "I shall always try to do that; but ought I not to have a profession—a business; one must be a producer of some sort." He stopped short and hesitated, then added with a half-embarrassed laugh, "Si Collins stopped me as I was coming up to the house. 'See yere, young man,' he drawled, 'ain't yer a-goin' to git down to work purty soon; thar ain't anythin' yere to keep a feller like you a-goin' as you'd ought to. You'd better come an' cut hay for me next week; I'll give yer a dollar an' a half a day an' yer board.'"

Moses Armitage laughed: "Collins has a sapient eye for brawn and muscle, lad," he said, laying his hand fondly on the muscular brown one that lay on the other's knee.

Young Rossi dropped his eyes to this caressing hand, then started and raised his eyes questioningly to his guardian's face. "Yes," said Moses Armitage, quietly, was not of this that I wished to speak. The time is come when you must choose your course; but I have no fears for you; the Pilot has been long at the helm."

Then he told him all. The talk between them lasted far into the night, and when it was ended Moses Armitage kissed and blessed his adopted son, kissed and blessed him after the manner of the patriarchs of old. And, when all was said, he laid him down in his bed, the young man assisting him tenderly. "I am tired," he said, and slept almost on the instant like a little child.

In the morning, Immanuel, coming quietly into his room in the rosy dawn, found him still asleep, a smile of unspeakable content on his features. As he bent over him, he perceived that there was indeed no veil between the longed-for dead and that loving spirit. Moses Armitage had entered in to the rest that remaineth.

The young man met his sorrow alone in the little house, as Moses Armitage had met his. But solitude and tender

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Send Only 25c. A $5.00 Tucked All Silk Chiffon Pattern Hat $1.95

Send 25c and we will ship you, express paid, this elegant tucked all silk Chiffon Hat, just like above cut. Beautifully made of fine imported materials by the best milliners money can hire. This rich hat is made by hand of all silk tucked chiffon over a silk wire frame. Trimmed with a large pure silk taffeta chou and six pure silk and velvet roses, an elegant cut let or steel buckle to the front completes this masterpiece of the milliner's art. Comes in Black, White, Navy, Red, Brown, Tan, Gray, Violet and Straw color.

If you find the hat equal to or better than you can buy of your home milliner at from $5.00 to $6.00 pay the express agent $1.95 and wear the very latest thing in correct millinery. In ordering state whether you want black or what color you desire. Send 5c in stamps for the finest millinery art catalogue ever issued.

We want an agent in every town. Milliners write for our wholesale catalogue.

TODD-SMITH & CO., 31 to 35 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Cod Liver Oil is a food and the greatest care should be exercised in its selection.

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

is the best oil that over fifty years of continued scientific research has produced. By the process employed the oil is kept from contact with the atmosphere from the beginning of the process of manufacture until it is safely corked up in bottles, thus preventing contamination of any kind and excluding all impurities.

Ask for Peter Moller's Oil, and see that the bottle—a flat, oval one—bears our name as agents. Notice the date in perforated letters at bottom of the label.

Schieffelin & Co., New York

CRACKS IN FLOORS

are unsightly, unclean and unsanitary. Grippin's Wood, Crack and Crevice Filler is the only perfect and permanent remedy, and is conceded to fill a universal want. A clean paste, easily and quickly applied. Adapted to all kinds and conditions of wood. Average cost about $1.00 per room of 200 sq. ft. Write to-day for our booklet and testimonials. Enclose stamp.

GRIPPIN MFG. CO.,
Dept. B,
Newark, New York.

$1.50--REDUCED PRICES

To introduce for cash where I have no agent

| | | |
|----------------|------------|--------|
| $5.00 Square | Taka | $3.25 |
| Double | Wall Taka | 5.75 |
| $12.50 Double | Wall Ideal | 8.00 |

IRWIN'S BATH CABINETS
Best and most convenient. Enjoy Turkish Baths in your own home for 2c. No medicine or method known eradicates disease so quickly and effectively. Fine Cabinet on payment of $1.50. Agents Wanted. One sold 1,000 in four months.

R. M. S. IRWIN, 111 Chambers St., New York.

$2 Fine Bath Cabinet $2

Placed in Your Home for Write-to-day for our special 10-day offer. Robinson's Baths guaranteed to relieve rheumatism, la grippe, colds, kidney trouble, catarrh. Agents wanted. No commission and salary. Send for new book free.

Robinson's Thermal Bath Co., 901-917 Jefferson St., Toledo, O.

BATH CABINETS
We make 8 styles of cabinets under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinet made. More of the best families use the Racine than all other together. Write for catalogue. RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box 3, Racine, Wisconsin

About half the lamp chimneys in use have my name on them.

All the trouble comes of the other half.
MACBETH.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.
MACBETH, Pittsburgh

"Standard of Highest Merit"

FISCHER PIANOS.

THE NEW SCALE Fischer yields a wonderfully pure quality of tone, combined with great power and durability; it stamps the Fischer Piano with an individuality that no other Piano possesses.

| | |
|----------------------|-------------------|
| 61 Years Established | Over 110,000 Sold |
|----------------------|-------------------|

BY OUR NEW METHOD of Easy Payments, every home is at once supplied with a piano and a high-class piano. Payment is made in all parts of the United States. Write for catalogue, terms and all particulars.

J. & C. FISCHER
33 Union Square—West, New York, N. Y.

One Year's Music Free

We will ship a Cornish Piano or a Cornish Organ anywhere upon the distinct understanding that if it is not entirely as represented after twelve months' use, we will take it back and pay carriage both ways.

This is the CORNISH PLAN
Our large souvenir catalogue explains our unique method fully—it will be sent free to anybody upon request. With this catalogue we present four engravings of pianos—the most costly advertisement ever offered to the public. Write today.

CORNISH CO., Washington, N. J.

The FAMOUS ST. LAWRENCE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

are strictly high grade, guaranteed instruments, and are designed for the best results.

MANDOLIN—Solid rosewood, neatly inlaid around edge and sound hole, ornamental bound edges, inlaid frets, pearl position dots. An instrument noted for its tone and splendid appearance. Ready for $9.00. Our price, $4.00.

GUITAR—Standard size, beautifully inlaid around sound hole, top edge and down back; edge bound with celluloid, finger board is fretted absolutely correct, pearl position dots, best American patent heads, inlaid metal tail piece. Regular $10.00. Our price, $4.20.

VIOLIN—Standard size, beautifully inlaid around edge and sound hole, ornamental bound edges, inlaid frets, pearl position dots. An instrument noted for its tone and splendid appearance. Ready for $9.00. Our price, $4.00.

SEND NO MONEY—We ship C. O. D. subject to examination at express office, the money to be paid to the express agent when the instrument is found entirely satisfactory. Write for Free Catalogue of Musical Instruments and Samples of all kinds. SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

3 1/2-LB. CATALOGUE OF EVERYTHING TO EAT, WEAR AND USE. Send for free. Deduct these five from first order of $1. 10 per cent. saved. Julius Hind & Son, Baltimore, Md., Dept. 218

SHORTHAND. Students of the Christian Herald. Learn shorthand at home. 25¢ per copy. ISAAC PETER & SONS, 33 Union Sq., New York.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 246

thoughts of the past could not hold him long; he must stoop his young shoulders to the huge burden of wealth which awaited them. Messrs. Trent & Smalley found little to criticize in the conduct of the heir to the Armitage millions during the long wearisome days when the necessary steps were being taken to establish him in his possessions. His questions were few and to the point; his comments brief.

At the conclusion of this period, Mr. Smalley took it upon himself to administer some paternal advice on the management of affairs. "You understand, of course, my dear Mr. Rossi, that we are always at your service in every possible way. We have facilities, which may possibly be of use to you for the securing of a proper establishment. You will, we trust, wish to mingle with your equals in a manner—ah—as you have not been able to do heretofore, with a view—er—well, to put it briefly—you will, of course, wish to marry in due time. And—I hope you will pardon an old man for speaking quite plainly and bluntly; your late guardian was a man of peculiar views—very peculiar; but his opinions are not necessarily binding upon you. For example, these eccentric ideas of his about the tenement properties—very singular—very singular, indeed. Both Mr. Trent and myself have regretted that you have been compelled to forego so many of the proper pleasures of youth on account of all this—well, I may say, this strait-laced and—"

"You will pardon me, Mr. Smalley," said Immanuel, coldly, "if I decline to discuss my uncle's character with you."

"Oh, ah—pardon me; of course—perfectly proper in view of recent bereavement, I'm sure," began the lawyer, fustily. "But am I to understand that you have become so imbued with your—ah—estimable guardian's views that you?"—Mr. Smalley paused to cough interrogatively; but as his client preserved a frigid silence, he went on: "that—er—well, to be brief, may I ask what are your views regarding the—tenements—say?"

"I shall tear them down at once," said young Rossi, briefly.

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Smalley. "But, yes, yes, you may be right! The frontage in some cases has become valuable for business purposes. You will put up office buildings in their places—eh?"

"I shall build decent houses for the poor, in the room of every one of the indecent rookeries that stand as my property," said the young man, conclusively.

"But, my dear sir, I beg you to consider, just briefly, before you take this—ah—very disastrous step. You are probably not aware of the facts in the case; but I can make it clear to you in just one minute."

Mr. Smalley's pencil was exceedingly busy for several minutes; he then submitted to his client's attention a number of groups of neat figures. "Now this will just serve to give you a little insight into the matter of tenement investments," he said, earnestly. "The income from only one block of these houses, as they stand, in spite of the depletion caused by late repairs and improvements, is twenty-two per cent. on the original investment; twenty-two per cent.—do you quite understand me? you will readily see that no class of investments compares with it; it is a veritable gold mine! But to tear them down! Only consider the poor friendless families you would render homeless; where can they go?"

Immanuel Rossi smiled. "And then, too," continued Mr. Smalley, rapidly, "I can prove to you in ten minutes that the interest on the re-investment, which you propose, would be but five per cent., possibly not over four, if you insist upon this very—yes, I will say it—this very foolish and ill-advised step!"

"Government bonds yield but three and a-half," observed the young man, rising. "We will talk this over some other time, if you like, Mr. Smalley," he added, kindly, as he noted the trembling of the old lawyer's fingers. "I shall do nothing unbusinesslike, you may depend upon it."

And with this scant comfort, his legal adviser was forced to be content.

Busy months followed this conversation, in the course of which the heir to the Armitage millions discovered that the path of the rich man does not lie in green pastures, nor by the side of still waters. He carried his point, however, in spite of the skilful opposition of his lawyers.

Before the first year had passed, Mr. Smalley informed his partner that he would now wash his hands of the whole business. This was, of course, a mere figure of speech, as he manifested no intention of relinquishing his very lucrative post as legal adviser to the estate. "Old man Armitage wasn't a circumstance to this obstinate boy," said Mr. Smalley, plaintively. "When I remember how I advised the grandfather of this misguided young man with regard to tenement investments, and how eagerly he received my suggestions—why, it was I who purchased those valuable blocks in Boston, acting as my esteemed client's agent. It was I who secured options on all the north and east side properties in this city, which have since proved such a mine of wealth. And now—"

Mr. Smalley's narrow lids reddened; he seemed actually on the verge of tears. It was Mr. Trent who suggested optimistically that it would take a long time to make an appreciable hole in such a huge property, and that after all it was only a matter of reinvestment at a lower rate per cent.

"But he might become one of the richest men in America—and that means the richest in the world," cried Mr. Smalley passionately. "Why, I spoke to him yesterday about a proposed combine which would inevitably double the property within five years; and what do you suppose he said?"

Mr. Trent shrugged his shoulders and smiled.

"If I didn't know better, I should say that the fellow must be lacking in an ordinary amount of intellect," pursued Mr. Smalley, gloomily. "He actually said, 'I don't wish to be richer; I intend to be poorer—much poorer in five years.' Now what do you think of that?"

Mr. Trent shrugged and smiled again. "Not perhaps very surprising in so young a person," he said guardedly. "He has not—we must remember—seen much of the world as yet. I believe the two of them lived once for a month or so in the Vanderworter house on Fifth avenue. But they didn't exactly see society at that time. It has occurred to me that as our esteemed client is a very personable young man, possibly—"

"Ah, I see what you mean," interrupted Mr. Smalley excitedly. "Yes—yes, that's the idea. But I don't know how to bring it about; these cliff-dwellers guard their approaches pretty carefully." Mr. Smalley rubbed his hands and smiled complacently at his witty allusion to the impregnable heights of society. "I'm getting pretty well up myself," he continued, "but we're outclassed when it comes to young Rossi. Now what I would like and what would be advantageous to a certain law firm I have in mind, would be to see our client marry into one of these way-up families. With such a wife as Miss Livingstone, for example, he wouldn't care about being 'much poorer' in five years—eh?"

"Much richer would be about the way of it, I imagine," observed Mr. Trent with a sagacious smile. Then he pursed up his lips. "I think we could get hold of young Livingstone by helping him carry some of his present holdings," he said in a lowered tone. "He's likely to get a pretty hard squeeze unless somebody gives him a lift."

Mr. Smalley nodded his gray head vigorously. "We'll do it," he said briefly.

TO BE CONTINUED

Helping the Destitute

Mrs. Ballington Booth, founder of the Volunteer Prisoners' League, in acknowledging receipt of $10 from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD (the gift of an anonymous reader of this journal), writes: "I can assure you it will be very helpful to us. We are constantly meeting with cases of destitution and suffering among the most worthy, and the saddest part of our work is where we cannot help for the lack of funds."

GIVEN AWAY!

With every tenth cash order received, mentioning the Christian Herald, we will present one FREE copy.

BEAUTIFUL ISLE SOMEWHERE

Music by J. S. FEARIS
Words by JESSIE POUNDS
Price 50¢

A SOPRANO SOLO
A QUARTETTE FOR MEN'S VOICES
A QUARTETTE FOR WOMEN'S VOICES
ALL THREE ARRANGEMENTS IN ONE COPY

Sung at the McKinley Funeral, Canton, Ohio, Sept. 19, 1901.
"Four young ladies rose and joined their voices to the beautiful melody of the song, 'Beautiful Isle of Somewhere' It was like an answer to complaining hearts as it ran—"
"Somewhere the sun is shining,
Somewhere the song birds dwell,
Hush, then, thy sad repining,
God lives and all is well."
—Chicago Record-Herald, Sept. 20, 1901.

Regular Price, Sheet Music Size, 50c
Cash Price for 30 Days:
1 Copy... 25 Cents 4 Copies... 60 Cents
2 Copies... 45 Cents 5 Copies... 75 Cents

E. O. EXCELL,
Publisher of Church and Sunday School Music,
216 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

You Can Play It Without Learning

ZOBO Solid Brass, 5 in. long. Price 25c post-paid

The Musical Wonder
ENTERTAINS EVERYBODY EVERYWHERE
For Church, Sunday School or Home Societies. Free Illustrated Catalogue sent on application.
Strauss Mfg. Co., 142 W. 14th St., Dept. 19, New York.

CHURCH HYMNS AND GOSPEL SONGS,

by Sankey, McGranahan and Stebbins

is THE LEADER

OVER 340,000 ALREADY SOLD
$25.00 per 100. Sample, postage free, 20 cents
THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

EASTER CARDS, BOOKLETS and BOOKMARKS.

Beautiful and exquisite productions of high-class lithography

Easter Offering Envelopes
Easter Egg Collection Envelopes
Easter Offering Gleaners

FREE: our 50-page catalogue giving illustrations, full descriptions and prices of all the above besides our numerous Sunday School Supplies.

MacCALLA & CO. (Inc.), 255 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA

A GOOD SALARY

is in reach of every one who will undertake to be trained for it BY MAIL by the I. C. S. METHOD. Circular free. Mention position for which you wish to qualify.

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
Box 861, SCRANTON, PA.

Learn Book-keeping BY MAIL—AT YOUR OWN HOME.

This is the chance of a lifetime for young men and women and you should not miss it. New method, any one can learn it within 6 to 8 weeks and places you in position to earn good salary at once. Thoroughly practical and remarkably inexpensive; we find positions, too, free of charge. Write today for full particulars. Mechanic Business Institute, 62 Institute Building, Kalamazoo, Mich.

CONSECRATED HYMNS

For Devotional Meetings and Young People's Societies

Edited by Anna C. Benson, B. F. Benson, and H. C. Benson, assisted by 200 contributors. Christian Workers. Special price, 20 cents. 100 copies for $15.00 (postage paid).
GEORGE L. LEIDY, 1022 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

LYMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Our Mail-Bag

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper. Correspondents answering more than one question should append their name and address to each answer.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions which they believe would be suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates, so that our correspondents may have abundance of time to prepare their answers.

To be Answered in the Issue of March 26

What ten American scenes and places should Prince Henry have seen or visited here, in order to receive the most accurate impression of the nation's spirit and character and of our republican institutions?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 9

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 16

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 23

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a life in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Question of the Week

Delayed answers to Question No. 4 on the list of February 19 last, are given below:

4. Does conversion obliterate the injuries to the soul which sin has caused? That is, can the sinner be as good a Christian as he would have been if he had not sinned?

Conversion as Christ used it (Matt. 18: 3) and as Bible writers generally use it, we regard as synonymous with regeneration, is nothing less than a new creation. (II. Cor. 5: 17) "Old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new." The work of the Atonement comprehends the healing of sin-diseased souls, else many passages in the Bible are without meaning. (Psalm 41: 4) "Heal my soul for I have sinned against thee." (Jer. 3: 22) "I will heal your backsliding." (Luke 4: 18) "He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted." We believe the divine balm known as salvation obliterates the injuries the soul received in sin. After a severe illness, one's health is often better than ever before. This is because the diseased parts have been healed. The same is also true in regard to the soul. Paul of Tarsus, who had gone to excesses in his life (I. Tim. 1: 12, 13), became a better Christian after his conversion. Simply because his soul was healed and he possessed the experiences of a surrendered life. Other examples might be mentioned, such as John Bunyan, Jerry McAuley, John Vassar. They all show that where sin abounded in their lives, grace superabounded to make them better men.

J. J. MUNRO.

Sin often leaves scars on the soul, and on the body, too, which conversion does not erase. A father, in order to teach his son this lesson, caused him to drive a nail into a favorite tree. Then he told him to draw out the nail. This was done with difficulty, but the mark of the nail remained. The late John B. Gough said he would willingly lose his right hand, if thereby he might lose the memory of sinful scenes through which he had passed. The spirit of the Apostle Paul seems tinged with a degree of sorrow because of the wickedness of his early years. Yes, sin does leave its marks, though the sin may be long ago forgiven. On the other hand, sin may become a factor in the development of character. This is not because there is any good thing in sin, but because divine power and grace can overrule sin for good. In the case of Paul, for instance, we can see how his former sinful life kept him humble, who was naturally inclined to be proud; and kept him under an intense sense of obligation, that he might repair something of the evil he had wrought. Thus sin itself can be turned to account in developing a higher type of character.

JOSEPH HAMILTON.

The Scriptures do not teach, and it is contrary to reason to believe that, if I do wrong to-day, the time can ever come when it will be exactly the same with me as if I had done right. God promises to forgive if I repent. Christ will save me, if I let him, from the guilt and power of sin. God promises to forget my sin, but he does not promise that I shall ever forget it. My sin has seared, shriveled, dwarfed my soul, and through all eternity I shall, I must, by so much, fail to be the man I should have been had I, on this occasion, said "yes" to God. Conversion will heal the sores, but not the scars. Mr. Moody is credited with saying that in heaven every man's cup of happiness will be full, but some of the cups will be very small. Sin makes the cup small.

E. W. BUTLER.

The effects of sin cannot be obliterated. Sins may be forgiven, "remembered no more against us," "cast into the depths of the sea," "blotted out," but the marks they have made are indelible. "The nails are gone, but the nail holes are still there." A man has by sin,—as, for example, intemperance, lust, covetousness, slothfulness—dwarfed some part of his nature, or prevented the proper development of some power or faculty. He may repent and be forgiven; but he will eternally bear the limitations he has imposed upon himself by sinning. He may be as good a Christian as he could have been had he not been handicapped by sin. More: the very necessity of strenuously resisting the sins in which he has indulged, is an important means in the developing of a strong, Christian character. But he cannot be so great a Christian as he might have been without such handicap. Sin has limited him. It has cut off hand or foot, and he has entered into and continues in life, maimed. This is not insufficiency of grace; it is simply the permanence of law.

J. K. W.

Although the heart of the penitent sinner is washed and made whiter than snow by the precious blood of Jesus, yet the sins committed can never be recalled, and have left injuries upon his own soul and body, as well as upon those around him. Especially is this true of one who has been a drunkard. I once knew a minister, a very earnest Christian, who told me that he knew he could never do the work for God which he might have done had he never drunk. He said he could not

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

SPRAYING FRUIT TREES

The question of spraying fruit trees to prevent the depredation of insect pests and fungus diseases is no longer an experiment but a necessity.

The readers will do well to write Wm. Stahl Quincy, Ill., and get his catalogue describing twenty-one styles of Spraying Outfits and full treatise on spraying the different fruit and vegetable crops, which contain much valuable information, and may be had for the asking.

The Counter

—sign

Kennedy's Oysterettes

Good with soup, too. Sold only in In-er-seal packages. Price 5c.

The Oyster Cracker with a Taste to it

No. 342. This is not a puzzle. Placed in line these figures read 342. That is just the number of first premiums taken by the

Prairie State Incubator

—more than all other makes of incubators combined have taken. That is fairly indicative of its superiority. That is why it issued exclusively by the U. S. Government. In order that you may better understand it we have gotten up the most comprehensive and artistic catalogue of incubators ever published. Hundreds and hundreds of original photographs, colored plates, tinted pages, etc. We want you to have a copy. Send your name and ask for Catalogue No. 46.

Prairie State Incubator Co.,
Homer City, Pa.

$38.20 FOR BUGGY NO. 4607, $53.35 FOR BUGGY NO. 553,
WITH STEEL TIRES, WITH BEST RUBBER TIRES

GUARANTEED. DESCRIPTION. Wheels and gear woods all second growth hickory; all clips and forgings Norway iron. Long distance axles with mud and dust proof Bell-collar. Runs a 1000 miles without retooling. Choice of Bailey body loops, Columbia steel spring bar or wood bar. Quick shift shaft couplers, spring cushion and back. Top made of best material, either 3 or 4 bows. Trimming all wool broadcloth or whipcord (leather cushion and back, extra, $1.25.) Nickel dash rail, seat handles and prop nuts. Full length carpet, kick pads, storm apron and boot, hickory shafts (pole extra). Piano body 18 to 24 in. wide, 56 in. long (or Corning body).

THEY ARE great bargains. No. 420 retails for $20.00 more than our price. No. 425, $25.00 more. This is a big saving and if we can convince you that we will save you this amount we believe you will place your order with us. It is plain, simple and correct. OUR PLAN and save for you. YOU as to whether you are getting all you pay for. We know that you want all your money will buy and you want it to buy the best you can get for the amount you have to invest. Is this not a fact? To do this you must buy direct, not of agents.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS but sell direct to you. That's why we save you money. We sell to you as cheap as any dealer can buy in car load lots. WE WILL prove to you that what we have said we can and will do without cost to you. THE WAY we will prove it, is by shipping you either of above buggies or any buggy in our catalog without your sending any money with order. When it arrives, look it over and if you find it all we claim for it and satisfactory to you in every way, and by far a better buggy than you could buy any other place at anywhere near our price, send us the money. If you have any reason to be dissatisfied, we will have the buggy returned at our expense. Is this not conclusive evidence that we can do all we claim?

SEND FOR OUR FREE VEHICLE CATALOG. It shows over 50 styles of buggies, also Road Wagons, Surreys, Phaetons, Spring Wagons and Vehicles of all kinds. All the latest styles for 1902; also harness. Write for the catalog now.

MARVIN SMITH CO., 66 N. JEFFERSON ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

THE SAVING ON A BUGGY

The illustration in this advertisement is a sample of the saving you can make in buying a buggy direct from our factory. You can buy surreys, phaetons and other high grade vehicles at equally low prices. We save you two profits—charging net factory cost with a moderate profit added. We also sell harness, etc., at factory prices. With each purchase we give a broad guarantee. If the purchase is not satisfactory in every particular, you can return it to us and we will pay freight charges both ways. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

The Columbus Carriage & Harness Co.
St. Louis, Mo. Write to Columbus, O.
P. O. Box 54. nearest office P. O. Box 172.

No. 3080. Buggy
Price, $48.00. Shipment from Columbus

No. 960 Carriage. Price, $120.00. As fine as sells for $50.00 more.

29 YEARS SELLING DIRECT.

We are the largest manufacturers of vehicles and harness in the world selling to consumers, and we have been doing business in this way for 29 years.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS but ship anywhere for examination guaranteeing safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied. We make 195 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness. Our prices represent the cost of material and making, plus one profit. Our large free catalogue shows complete line. Send for it.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Manufacturing Co., Elkhart, Ind.

RUBIFOAM

The Delicious Dentifrice is the children's favorite. Keeps teeth and mouth in a healthy condition.

Price, 25 Cents at Druggists

California

morning and evening trains

For busy people who want to make the journey quickly with the conveniences of luxurious travel.

Leave Chicago { 10 a. m.
8:00 p. m.
11:30 p. m.

VIA

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN UNION PACIFIC AND SOUTHERN PACIFIC R'YS

The best of Everything.

ALL AGENTS SELL TICKETS BY THIS ROUTE

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

25 designs, all steel. Handsome, durable. Cheaper than a wood fence. Special inducements to church and cemetery. Catalogue free.

KOKOMO FENCE MACHINE CO.
445 North St., Kokomo, Indiana.

YOU CERTAINLY WILL

If you order fence from us once you are certain to do it again.

THE ADVANCE FENCE
sold direct from the factory to the farmer at wholesale price. You get the best price. Entirely interwoven. No loose ends. Many heights. Write for free circular and special prices.

ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 N. St., Peoria, Ill.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE.

Strongest, Cheapest, Lightest. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Price. Fully Warranted. Catalogue Free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47, Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

Cash Buyers for Farms

or other real estate may be found through me, no matter where located. I will describe and price and learn my successful method for finding buyers. W. M. OSTRANDER, 17th American Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

"HAPPYFOOT" Hair Insole

keeps feet warm and dry. Makes walking a pleasure. Relieves rheumatism, callous, tender and perspiring feet. Does not crowd the shoe. At all stores or 10c. a pair, 3 pair 25c., postage paid. Send size of shoe.

W. M. H. WILEY & SON CO., Box 11, Hartford, Conn.

YOU WANT TO EARN MONEY

in women, or youth (either sex) write for plan of active employment. Mention this paper.

OVAL CEYLON COFFEE CO., Alexandria, Va.

Our Mail-Bag

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 248

study and think as he could before he became a drinking man. "The bird with a broken pinion never soared so high again," and the life that sin has stricken never soars so high again.

I. SHARP.

Answers have also been received from Lavinia Perrine, Wm. W. Case, W. W. Hubbard, Mrs. Mary C. Lee, H. B. Wallace, W. G. Dixon, Mrs. May Y. Gise, B. F. McH. Wagner, J. McAdee, Miss Jennie A. Rowe, A. M. Knickerbocker, D. W. Hicks, Mrs. B. J. Staples, Mrs. J. G. Davis, E. McFarland, A. A. Knight, A. D. Mears, Philip Bauer, Flora J. Miller, G. Northway, A. McDaniel, Mrs. James F. Adams, Rev. Wm. H. Day, Mrs. S. T. Griggs, J. Nelson Brown, F. J. Strayer, C. P. Atkinson, Howard J. Force, Alvia James Hunter, F. A. Mosebach, Mrs. Jas. L. Hale, E. B. Collins, Mrs. R. J. McCausland, C. Adella Paine, Edw. M. Scheirer, Mrs. E. L. Parker, G. H. Rogers, L. T. Rightsell, Cora H. MacQueen, Chas. F. Hooper, Miss C. E. Gray, J. G. Osborne.

Miscellaneous Questions

R. G. M. Mayview, Ill. 1. From what do we get our word Lent, for the season of fasting and penitence now observed in Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches? 2. When did such a season begin to obtain?

1. The word Lent comes from an old Anglo-Saxon term, lengtintide for spring, as meaning the lengthening of the days. 2. A fast before Easter was customary in the Greek and Latin churches certainly prior to the fourth century. The number of days seems formerly to have been variable. An ancient writer mentions that it was the custom in Rome to fast for three weeks prior to Easter, and for six weeks in Alexandria and Illyria. Some time before the eighth century, however, the period of forty days seems to have been generally observed in the Roman Church. The Greek fast is for forty-eight days. All kinds of meat, and even fish, used to be forbidden. At the present day, while the Roman Church prescribes a special diet for lent, this matter is left in the Episcopal to individual conscience, self-denial for charity's sake only being urged.

Ira S. Y. Cross, Mo. Does God approve of the marriage of an unbeliever to a believer? It could do, is it not the only act in the unbeliever's life he does approve of, because "without faith it is impossible to please God." If God does not approve, are they not living in open sin?

The whole question at issue is fully and fearlessly discussed in II. Cor. 6: 14-18. This is Paul's interpretation, and it stands good to-day as a general rule of Christian conduct. Nevertheless, we are not to judge those who may ignore the injunction, for in I. Cor. 7: 14, the apostle shows how such a union may after all accomplish beneficent results.

Box 424, Plant City, Fla. What is the true meaning of this passage: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison." Matt. 5: 25.

It is advice to people to make up their quarrels, even at the last moment when they are "in the way"—that is, going to court. Such an agreement, even with concessions, is to be preferred to litigation, which results in prolonging the quarrel and engendering mutual bitterness of spirit. Besides, law is uncertain, and it by no means follows that the righteous cause will prevail. Christ doubtless intended the illustration as a general warning to his followers to adjust all their differences amicably.

American, Springfield, L. I. 1. What does the "freedom of the city," as conferred upon Prince Henry, imply? 2. Is he the only foreigner who has been so honored? 3. Have Americans received it?

1. The custom of granting the "city's freedom" is an ancient one. Of old, when municipalities were walled in with fortifications, approached by drawbridges, and otherwise guarded against intruders who might come to do mischief, the conferring of its freedom upon a visitor—especially one of an alien race or country—was certainly a great mark of confidence. In ancient times, too, members of a municipality were often vested with peculiar rights, liberties and privileges which the urban citizen did not possess. Though, because of the progress of Christianity and civilization, the custom has lost significance in one sense, since we no longer fear every guest as a possible enemy, it preserves grace and charm in another. In conferring the freedom of New York City upon Prince Henry, Mayor Low said: "If it be now but a form of words, it is a form that signifies high regard and genuine friendship for him upon whom it is bestowed." 2. No. Marquis de Lafayette, Baron Steuben, Major l'Enfant, and others. 3. Quite a number—General Washington, John Jay, Alexander Hamilton, Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat, and Admiral Farragut, among others.

H. M., Waco, Tex. Thirty-three years is reckoned as an average generation.

A. C., Prospect, Pa. 1. No. 2. No. 3. The passage means that he was a person of humble or very common descent, that his parents were practically unknown and his early career undistinguished. Such is the view of leading commentators.

J. F., Farnam, Neb. 1. A man who deliberately absconds, leaving his creditors in the lurch, may be a Christian, but he is a very poor specimen. Such people bring discredit upon religious work. 2. It is impossible to estimate the proportion of conversions during a generation, there being no sufficient data at hand. 3. The Christian's duty is to bear the burden and not to desert his post. No victory was ever gained by running away.

Many old, middle-aged and young men, in dire poverty, through lack of employment, and who have been helped in various ways by the Bowery Mission, are in sad need of clothing. Especially is the need urgent during the present cold weather. Readers who have cast-off but still wearable garments, for which they have no use, can put them to good purpose by sending them, express prepaid, to the Superintendent, Bowery Mission, 55 Bowery, New York, who will attend to their distribution among the most needy.

TOOK THE HINT.

Friend Told Him to Change His Food

Once in a while one can serve a friend and win a life-long obligation by a little food advice. This is worth while. "Very thankful I was to a friend for his advice when he told me about Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food at the time I was suffering. My stomach trouble originally came from neglect of colds which caused catarrh of the stomach, then followed misery from dyspepsia, headache, loss of vitality and flesh."

Last August a friend in discussing my health said if I would change my food and take Grape-Nuts instead of any other food or medicine for one week he would guarantee that I would be greatly improved and feel like a new man.

He was so positive that I concluded to try it, and, as I said, I am exceedingly thankful to him. In a week's time I lost the heavy, dead feeling in my head, nausea had ceased and the action of my general system had greatly improved.

I have stuck fast to Grape-Nuts. Now I weigh nine pounds more and am steadily improving. Grape-Nuts has a most exhilarating effect on the system and makes one feel bright and alive, as though they were well nourished as a healthy man should be.

The price of Grape-Nuts is within reach of all, but I consider it worth its weight in gold." John Haywood, 3931 Aspen St., Philadelphia, Pa.

30 Days Time.

We manufacture all of our fine line of carriages and buggies in our own factory, and make them so good that we are willing to ship any one of them any where on

30 Days' Free Trial

The decision is left with you. If you keep it, it will cost you about 40% less than your dealers' price. If you return it, the trial will not cost you one cent. Yes, we mean every word of it. 22nd annual catalogue now ready—free. Send for it at once.

KALAMAZOO CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. COMPANY,
(Pioneers of the Free Trial Plan.)
Sta'n S Kalamazoo, Mich.

RUNS ITSELF!

As simple in operation as a gentle summer shower. You strike a light and the Petalum Incubator does the rest. No worry. No loss. Hatching every fertile egg. 4 sizes. Catalog free.

PETALUM INCUBATOR CO.,
Box 64, Petalum, Cal. or Box 64, Indianapolis, Ind.

THE BEAUTIFUL LAWNS

AT THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION

AND THE HOME GROUNDS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WERE SOWN WITH THE "HENDERSON" LAWN GRASS SEED

THE FINEST LAWNS IN AMERICA ARE MADE WITH IT.

It forms an enduring turf of velvet green in six weeks' time, and is equally valuable for renewing worn-out lawns and bad spots. We supply the seed in quantities, suitable for extensive areas or door-yard plots.

SEND FOR OUR CATALOGUE, "EVERYTHING FOR THE LAWN." (Mail free to those mentioning this paper.)

It tells how to make, renovate and maintain lawns luxuriantly green all summer long.

PETER HENDERSON & Co.,
35 & 37 GORTLANDT ST. NEW YORK.

DO YOU WANT PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT AT GOOD PAY

WANTED—Reliable men or women to sell our goods to the consumer in communities from 1,000 to 10,000 population; permanent employment at good pay. Address THE GREAT EASTERN COFFEE AND TEA CO., 301 South Tenth Street, St. Louis, Mo.

1877 FOR 25 YEARS 1902

We Have Successfully Treated Cancers

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM

has no rivals. Describe your case, and we will send prepaid the most complete treatise on the subject of Cancer and Tumors ever published, and will refer you to persons whom we have successfully treated that were similarly afflicted.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, No. Adams, Mass.

MISS LIPPINCOTT'S LOWER SEEDS

Nasturtiums, 20 Varieties
Royal Show Pansy, 100 Colors
Sweet Peas, 40 Varieties
Asters, Mixed, all kinds

These Four Packets $5c value for 8c and names of 2 flower loving friends.

My 10th annual catalogue FREE

MISS C. H. LIPPINCOTT,
330 6th St., Minneapolis, Minn.

CORNS PERMANENTLY RELIEVED FREE

ALLEN'S ANTISEPTIC CORN PLASTER relieves corns permanently. To prove it I will mail free plaster to any one. Send name and address—no money.

GEORGE M. DORRANCE, 221 Fulton St., Dept. G, New York

CLASS PINS

this style, with any 4 letters or figures and one or two colors of enamel, sterling silver, 25c. each; $2.50 a doz. Silver plated, 10c. each; $1.00 a doz.

Special designs in pins or badges made for any class or society at reasonable prices; send design for estimates. Catalogue free. Bastian Bros., Rochester, N.Y.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Fruit Bred Free. Result of 70 years' experience.

STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N.Y.

Trade Old Buggy Wheels

For a Set of New Ones With Rubber Tires.

SOUNDS ODD, DOESN'T IT?

The New and the Old

with you no matter how badly damaged your wheels are.

Enjoy the pleasures of riding by having rubber tires on your buggy. Makes the buggy last longer, pulls easier and is easier riding. Rubber tires are superior to steel on all kinds of roads.

We are the largest vehicle wheel manufacturers in the world. We are making this offer that every vehicle owner may know the quality of our wheels. These wheels would cost you $25 to $40 if you bought them of anyone else. Send us your old wheels by freight. We pay charges. No such opportunity ever offered to secure new wheels and rubber tires. Write to-day and learn how we do it. The Indiana Wheel Co., 301 Boyce Avenue, Muncie, Ind.

"The breed that lays
Is the breed that pays"

Increase Your Income
RAISING
Pure-Bred Poultry.

SINGLE
COMB

White Leghorns

Lay more eggs and make more money than any other breed. We will start you in the chicken business with a complete pen of pure-bred hens and a fine cockerel. We will teach you how to feed and care for them, furnish you diagrams and specifications for the buildings they need, how to incubate and breed, how to raise the growing chicks, how to get the greatest number of eggs and how to sell your products with the largest profit.

A postal card will bring you full particulars.

The WHITE LEGHORN
POULTRY YARDS,
Box C, Waterville, N. Y.

Farmers' Handy Wagon
With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels
only

$21.95

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish Steel Wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co. Quincy, Ill.

SALESMEN AND AGENTS WANTED
BIG WAGES—Our famous Puritan Water Still, a complete incinerator and a filter, 22,000 already sold. Demand enormous. Everybody buys. Over the kit, then, it is a business plant of distilled, aerated drinking water, pure, delicious and safe. Only method. Distilled Water relieves Dyspepsia, Stomachic, Bowel, Kidney, Bladder and Heart troubles; prevents fevers and sickness. Write for Booklet, New Plan, Terms, etc. FREE! HARRISON MFG. CO., 143 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

THE RISEN LIFE*

How the Power by which Christ Rose from the Dead Transforms Human Life and Character

WHY was it that the apostles in their preaching kept so prominent the resurrection of Christ? They dwelt upon it, insisted upon it and continually reminded their hearers of it. Paul, also, though he does not appear to have ever seen Christ, until he saw him by revelation at his conversion, makes the resurrection the central fact of his preaching and his epistles. He seems to have regarded it as the foundation stone, for he says: "If Christ be not risen your faith is vain." Why was it that he regarded the resurrection as so essential a doctrine? Doubtless in part because he looked upon it as evidence of Christ's divinity. Also because he drew from it the inference of immortality for all believers. But even these two deductions, important as they are, did not exhaust the uses to which he put the doctrine. There was another and more vital application that he made of it. He conceived of the believer as one who had died to the world in Christ. One so completely and vitally identified with his Lord that the crucifixion of Christ meant for him a death to the world.

The identification was carried further. Paul would identify him also with Christ in resurrection life. He would have the believer live more intensely than before, with new principles and motives. Some idea of his meaning may be gained from an experience that has come to some Christians in actual life. A man, we will say, is a member of a church, but is leading a somewhat worldly life. Religion has small influence on his conduct though he is familiar with its doctrines. But a severe illness comes upon him. He goes down to the very gates of death. As he lies there, not knowing from hour to hour whether he will die or recover, religion becomes the one paramount subject for him. His eternal future turns on his standing in God's sight. If he is about to appear before God, what will be his fate? He hears, without interest or concern, news from the business world that would a few weeks before have excited him intensely. He is dead to it now. The only matters that touch him are those of the world that he may be about to enter. The man recovers, and the impression he had in his illness abides with him. He has a different perspective from that he had before his illness. He has learned a lesson in relative values. He goes about his work as formerly, but it is no longer the chief concern of his life. It is subordinated to spiritual things. They are now his main subject of interest. How best to please God, how to grow in grace, how to bring other men to Christ, these are the matters on which his thoughts dwell. This is resurrection life, the life of one who has died to the world, but is alive to God.

The change is not necessarily effected by an illness. It may come from the loss of property, or from other circumstances. The cause by which the greatest number of transformations of heart and character are worked, is that which the Apostle Paul describes. The reason is that in that cause there is not only an appeal to the higher nature, but the power to effect the transformation. That is the ground of hope, the source of strength to every fallen man. The power by which Christ rose from the dead, the power of the resurrection, is his to impart to those who need it. He is able to keep those who trust in him from falling back into their old ways, and to perfect them in the spiritual life that is implanted in their souls. There is no greater miracle than this. With all our discoveries in the realm of nature, with all our inventions that put power at our disposal, we have never found a power that could change our own dispositions. That power Christ gives to every seeking soul. Thus, the fallen, the depraved, the despairing, may have their own Easter, rising out of the corruption of the dead into the new life that Christ offers them—Resurrection life which is life eternal.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for March 30. Luke 24: 1-12; Col. 3: 1-10.

Consider What the Future of your family would be without the income you now provide. Life insurance is the one means by which you can make certain their future support, and you should provide them with its protection.

The Prudential

Insurance Company of America

JOHN F. DRYDEN,
PRESIDENT.

HOME OFFICE,
NEWARK, N. J.

Fill out this slip and send to us.

Without committing myself to any action, I shall be glad to receive, free, particulars and rates of Policies.

For $..... Age.....

Name.....

Address.....

Occupation.....

DEPT. 70

PAY ONE PROFIT—SAVE TWO.

By our Manufacturer's One Profit selling system you can buy Vehicle and Harness direct of us and save the Jobbers' and Retailers' profits. Freight? Yes, you pay the freight, but so does the dealer. If he pays it he charges you a profit on freight also. Do you see?

$45.90 FULL LEATHER TOP BUGGY
LEATHER BOOT and BACK CURTAIN, LON

Distance Axles, Spring Cushions, End or Side Bar Springs, Hickory Gear Woods, Full Bolted "B" Grade Wheels.

CANOPY TOP SURREY, $59.65

Full Fenders, Oil Burning Lamps, Spring Cushions, Full Bolted Wheels, 1 1/2 Steel Axles, End or Brewster Springs, Fine Finish. Every Vehicle Guaranteed Two Years. Our Complete FREE Vehicle and Harness Catalogue gives full descriptions of these and many other styles. Write for it NOW.

SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

BURPEE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST THAT CAN BE GROWN

If you want the choicest vegetables or most beautiful flower you should read BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1902,—so well known as the "Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is mailed FREE to all. Better send your address TO-DAY. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

ROSES FREE

Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this Summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the catalogue and roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting.

THE GEO. H. MELLE CO.
Linnfall Greenhouses. Established 1877. Box J,
Springfield, Ohio.

Every reader of this paper should have one of our Handsome New Illustrated 80 page Catalogues for 1902. It tells of the best Roses and hundreds of other Plants, Bulbs, Seeds and Fruits, offering them to you at most attractive prices. Liberal Club Rates given. Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this Summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the catalogue and roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting.

In Olden Days

men were broken on the wheel, now they buy Electric Steel Wheels, and save money. They fit any wagon. Made with either staggered or straight spokes. Let us tell you how to make a low down wagon with any size wheel, any width tire. Catalogue tells. It's free. Electric Wheel Co., Box 136, Quincy, Ill.

30 Days' Free Trial

on this complete little 60 egg incubator. Three walls, safety lamp, a perfect regulating HAWKEYE JR. INCUBATOR. Price $7.50. Our new catalogue (oil painting cover) is now ready. Send for booklet and a year's subscription to leading poultry journal, 10 cents. THE GEO. H. MELLE CO., Dept. Z, Newton, Ia.

INCUBATORS AND BROODERS

BEST HOT WATER PIPE SYSTEM. Simple, durable, economical and safe. Hatcheries stronger and more chickens from 100 eggs than any other. Prices reasonable. 66-page illustrated catalog of Incubators, Brooders, fancy poultry and poultry supplies free. C. C. SHOEMAKER, Box 411, Freeport, Ill.

DON'T SET HENS

the same old way when our new plan beats it 10 times. 100 Egg Hatcher Costs Only $2. Over 94,000 in use 100 days past. 5000 agents wanted for 1902, either sec. Pleasant work. Big profits. Catalog and the Egg Formula FREE if you write today. Natural Hen Incubator Co., B 84, Columbus, Neb.

FOR THE WIFE AND CHILDREN.

Get an incubator that they can start and last for years. The Hatch is made of California wood, with 12oz. cold rolled copper Hydro-Safety Lamp, Climax Safety boiler Corrugated Water regulator. Send for our free catalog. It gives actual photographs of birds who are making money with the Sure Hatch Incubator. Common Sense Brooder is the best. Send now. Sure Hatch Incubator Co., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, Mo.

"ALL RIGHT"

Incubators and Brooder On 40 Days Trial. These machines are the best or a market. We know this, or we would not dare send them on trial. (Western orders shipped from Des Moines, Ia.) Catalogue free. Clay Phelps Incubator Co. Station 54, Cincinnati, O.

CYPHERS INCUBATOR

World's Standard Hatcher Used on 26 Gov. Experiment Stations in Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Medal at Pan-American, Oct. 1901. 16-page free Complete catalogue, 180 p. $1.00 for 10c. Ask nearest office for book No. CYPHERS INCUBATOR CO. Buffalo, N. Y., Chicago, Ill., Boston, Mass., New York, N. Y.

50 EGG SIZE. 100 EGG SIZE. 200 EGG SIZE. Self-regulating. 30 DAYS TRIAL. Satisfaction guaranteed or no sale. BUCKEYE INCUB. CO. SPRINGFIELD, O.

"Thoughtless folks have the hardest work, but quick witted people use

SAPOLIO

MARY AT THE SEPULCHRE

A Revelation and a Commission to the Faithful Soul

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

OUR Lord was the first man who rose from the dead by his own inherent life power, the first who rose never to die again. He was the Man whose death destroyed the sting of death for them that believe, "who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel" (11. Tim. 1: 10). Therefore is he the First-fruits of them that slept, the Pentecost of God's harvest, the sample, the best and ripest, God's foretaste of what his bride shall be when she is gathered out from the nations and presented to his Father without "spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing," God's firstfruits of man more perfect by far than Adam when God saw him that he was "very good." Death, till now, had spoken only God's curse upon sin. Now "precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Ps. 116: 15). Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

When our beloved Lord had given up the host, the same Jews who had feared to enter the judgment hall lest they should be defiled, required that the body of Jesus, as well as those of the thieves, should not remain on the cross on the Sabbath day. Strange that sinners should fear defilement from him who alone cleanse from sin! Perverted human nature calls "evil good, and good evil" (Isa. 5: 20). Pilate gave orders that their legs should be broken, to hasten the lingering death of crucifixion. But it had been foretold of Jesus, "A bone of him shall not be broken," or Jesus was dead already, and "they brake not his legs." They pierced his side, for yet another Scripture had to be fulfilled, "They shall look on him whom they pierced."

But that body of Jesus, which was so despised and loathed by the Jews, was dear, infinitely dear, to his disciples. No sooner had he breathed his last breath than a reaction took place among these timid and faithless ones. One who had been up to this time only a secret disciple, Joseph of Arimathea, the only member of the council who had not consented to Jesus' death (Luke 23: 51), hesitated no longer to declare himself, and went boldly to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Pilate would have saved Jesus if he had not feared for his own interests, and was nothing loth to favor his disciples now. Nicodemus, too, who had once spoken for Jesus (John 7: 50, 51), now brought a costly and wish compound of myrrh and aloes to prevent the decomposition of that sacred body. But God was beforehand with him. Of Jesus was written, "In him was life." He could not see corruption. Egyptian mummies have been preserved over three thousand years, the features as perfect as the day when they were embalmed, but when they are exposed to the air, the dust returns to earth as it was, and they unable into a shapeless mass. But Jesus is the "Life" of men. He is "that Eternal Life which was with the Father and was manifested unto us" (1. John 1: 2). He needed no spices to conserve his body from corruption, for there was life power in Jesus toicken the dead.

They laid him in a new tomb, with the spices, the chief priests only interfering to seal the stone and set a watch. Strange that his enemies, who did not believe in him, took measures to prevent his resurrection, while his disciples, to whom he declared repeatedly that he should rise again, prepared his body for a long sleep in the grave! The chief priests and Pharisees were they who noted his words, "After three days I will rise again."

Mary Magdalene and the other Mary, sat about the sepulchre until the Sabbath, when they rested according to the commandment (Luke 23: 56). But one of them could not rest apart from Jesus. Mary Magdalene was the first to discover that the stone was rolled away, that the precaution of the chief priests had been in vain. The "watch" of Roman soldiers was on guard no longer, something, she knew not what, had happened. When he led leads on his believing children to know something of the power of Christ's resurrection, they find themselves out in all their expectations and in all their expectations. It is glorious, indeed, to know Jesus as a Saviour who did not die for us in the past, and who reveals us the forgiving love of our heavenly Father, and who opens to us the door into everlasting blessedness. But to know the power of his resurrection is to know him in his almighty power over sin, death, circumstances, the present, everything, to know him as now sovereign "principalities and powers, and every name that is named," and to know that he has made us to sit with him in heavenly places, not in a dreamy kind of vision, but in actual, present, glorious experience, by which, without effort on our part, he makes us see things in his light, and to discern God everything around us. Jesus risen, Jesus conqueror, changes all things. Circumstances, the stone upon his grave, are changed on God's side—men, like the keepers of the pulchre, are made to tremble and to flee when our faith claims Jesus as above them.

REDUCED TO $3.50 FOR 60 DAYS.

Remarkable Invention of an Ohioan that Insures Health, Strength and Beauty to Every User, and Relieves Without Drugs the Most Obstinate Diseases, by Nature's Method of Steaming the Poisons Out of the System.

Men and Women are Getting Rich Selling Them. Read Special Offer Below. Write at Once

It has remained for a prominent business man of Cincinnati to discover that in the application of Hot Air to the skin and its resultant perspiration lies the secret of good health, vigor, freedom from disease and beauty. He proved beyond the question of a doubt that the Romans and Greeks had but Hot Air and Vapor Baths, and that they owed their splendid health, fine physique, strength and beauty to vaporized air or "sweat baths," and so he set to work to invent a method by which the American people could secure all the marvelous benefits of these baths without expensive apparatus, bath rooms, and at smallest expense.

No Physicians for 500 Years

The now famous Quaker Bath Cabinet was the result of his efforts.

An Enormous Business.

Invented and patented six years ago, the demand has been so great that over 100,000 Cabinets were sold during the past year, and hundreds of men and women are growing rich selling them, as the makers offer splendid inducements to hucksters.

It is an upright, handsome, a rubber-walled room in which one comfortably rests on a chair, and with only the head outside, covers at home, for 3 cents each, all the marvelous, cleansing, restorative and invigorating effects of the Famous Turkish, Russian, Hot Air, Hot Vapor Baths, medicated or perfumed if desired, with no possibility of taking cold afterwards, or in any way weakening the system.

Clouds of Hot Air or Vapor surround the entire body, opening the millions of sweat-pores, causing profuse perspiration, drawing out of the blood and system all impure acids, salts and effete matter which if retained, cause sickness, debility and affliction.

Astonishing is the Immediate improvement in your health, feelings and complexion. There is not a single person living who should not possess one of these Cabinets.

Famous Physicians believe in it.

Hundreds of well-known physicians have given up their practice to sell these Cabinets, and today over 27,000 physicians use and recommend them, and every well equipped hospital and sanitarium in the World use these Cabinets with the most wonderful and beneficial effects—relieving even the worst chronic cases. It beats a trip to Hot Springs.

Thousands of remarkable letters have been written the makers from users, some referring to Rheumatism, La Grippe and Kidney Troubles which will be interesting to those who suffer from these dread maladies. W. L. Brown, Oxford, O., writes: "My father was down in bed for months with rheumatism; this Cabinet did him more good than 250 worth of drugs. It cost me only 10 cents."

sleeplessness, of which he had long suffered, and his wife of lagrippe in one night." G. M. Lafferty, Covington, Ky., writes: "Was compelled to quit business a year ago, being prostrated with rheumatism and kidney troubles, when your Cabinet came. Two weeks use relieved me; have never had a twinge since." Rev. Geo. H. Hudson, of Mich., says: "I gave up my pastorate on account of nervous prostration and lung troubles; my editor so highly recommended your Cabinet, I tried it; I commenced growing better at once; am now well; nervousness gone; lungs strong; am a new man." Mr. Simon Tompkins, a retired capitalist of Columbus, O., says: "I am satisfied it saved my life. Was taken down with a hard cold which developed into a dangerous case of pneumonia. The first Bath relieved me, and I quickly recovered. It is far superior to drugs for relieving lagrippe, colds, inflammation and rheumatism." Hon. A. B. Strickland, of Bloomington, writes: that the Cabinet did him more good than two years' doctoring, relieved him of catarrh, gravel, kidney trouble and dropsy, with which he had long suffered.

Hundreds of Ministers

write, praising this Cabinet. Rev. Baker Smith, D.D., Fairmount, N. J., says: "Your Cabinet rids the body of aches and pains, and as 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness' it merits high recommendation." Rev. J. C. Richardson, Roxbury, Mass., was greatly benefited by its use, and recommends it highly, as does also Hon. V. C. Hay, who writes: "Physicians gave me up to die, was persuaded by friends to try this Cabinet, and it relieved me. Cannot praise it enough." U. S. Senator, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, Congressman John J. Lentz, John T. Brown, Editor "Christian Guide," Rev. C. M. Keith, Editor "Holiness Advocate," as well as hundreds of clergymen, bankers, governors, physicians and influential people recommend it highly.

Physicians are unanimous in claiming that colds, lagrippe, fevers, kidney troubles, Bright's disease, cancer; in fact, such has this Cabinet that no disease can gain a foothold in your body if you take these hot Thermal Baths weekly. Scientific reasons are brought out in a very instructive little book issued by the makers.

Marvelous Eliminative Power

To Relieve Blood and Skin Diseases this Cabinet has marvelous power. Dr. Shepard, of Brooklyn, states that he has never failed to draw out the deadly poison of snake bites, hydrophobia, blood poison, etc., by this Vapor Bath, proving that it is the most wonderful blood purifier known. If people, instead of filling their system with more poisons by taking drugs and nostrums, would get into a Vapor Bath Cabinet and steam out these poisons, and assist Nature to act, they would have pure blood, and a skin as clear and smooth as the most fastidious could desire.

Another Important Feature is the astonishing benefit in diseases of women and children. It removes the inflammation and congestion which causes much of the pain to which women are slaves. Heat is the greatest known relief for these ailments, if rightfully applied. Dr. Williams, one of New York's most celebrated physicians says: "The best remedy is Hot Air Baths. Your Cabinet is truly a God-send to women." Thousands of children's lives have been saved, as it is invaluable for breaking up colds, fevers, croup, congestions, etc.

With the Cabinet if desired, is a

Head and Complexion Steamer,

in which the face, head and neck are given the same vapor treatment as the body, producing a bright, pure, brilliant complexion, removing pimples, blackheads, skin eruptions; relieves catarrh, asthma and bronchitis.

O. C. Smith, Mt. Healthy, Ohio, says: "Since using this Cabinet my catarrh, asthma and hay fever, with which I have been afflicted since childhood, has not returned. Worth $1,000 to me. Have sold hundreds of these Cabinets. Everyone was delighted. My wife finds it excellent for her ill and our children."

Whatever Will Hasten Profuse Perspiration

everyone knows is beneficial, but other methods of resorting to stimulants and poisonous drugs are dangerous to health. Nature's own method is provided by the convenient, safe and marvelous power of this Quaker Cabinet.

We find it to be a genuine Cabinet, with a real door, opening wide. When closed it is airtight; handsomely made of best durable goods, rubber lined. A heavy steel frame supports it, making it a strong and substantial bath-room within itself. Has the latest improvements.

A splendid stove for heating is furnished with each Cabinet, also medicine and vaporizing pan, valuable recipes and formulas for medicated baths and ailments, plain directions and a 100-page "Guide Book to Health and Beauty." Cabinet folds flat in 1 in. space when not in use. Easily carried. Weighs 10 lbs.

After investigation, we can say this Quaker Cabinet, made by the Cincinnati firm, is the only practical article of its kind. Will last for years. Seems to satisfy and delight every user, and the Makers Guarantee Results.

They assert positively, and their statements are backed by thousands of letters from persons of influence, that this Cabinet will relieve nervous troubles, debility, purify the blood, beautify the skin, and relieve rheumatism—(they offer $50.00 reward for a case not relieved.) Relieves lagrippe, sleeplessness, neuralgia, malaria, headaches, gout, sciatica, eczema, scrofula, dropsy, blood and skin diseases, liver and kidney troubles.

It Will Relieve a Hard Cold with one bath, and for breaking up symptoms of lagrippe, fevers, pneumonia, congestion, etc., it is invaluable—really a household necessity. Gives the most

Cleansing and Refreshing Bath Known and even those enjoying the best of health should use it at least once or twice a week, for its great value lies in its marvelous power to draw out of the system impurities that cause disease, and it is truly proving a God-send to humanity.

How to Get One.

All the readers who want to enjoy perfect health, prevent disease or are afflicted, should have one of these remarkable Cabinets. Space prevents a detailed description, but it will bear out the most exacting demand for durability.

Write the makers, The World Mfg. Co., 518 World Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, and ask them to send you their valuable illustrated booklet, describing this invention and these remarkable baths. The price of these Cabinets has always been $5.00, but the makers offer to the readers for 60 days this Cabinet for $3.50 complete, or their $10.00 finest and best double-walled Cabinet for $6.10. Face and Head Steaming Attach, if desired, 65 cents extra, and it is indeed difficult to imagine where that amount of money could be invested in anything else that would bring so much good health, strength and vigor.

Don't Fail to Write To-day for full information; or, better still, order a Cabinet; you won't be disappointed, as the makers guarantee every Cabinet, and agree to refund your money after thirty days' use if not just as represented.

The Cabinet is just as represented, and will be promptly shipped upon receipt of Money Order, Bank Draft, Certified Check or Registered Letter.

Don't fail to write at once for booklet, whether you intend to buy or not, for you will receive great benefit by doing so.

$150.00 a Month and Expenses.

This Cabinet is proving a wonderful seller. Over 20,000 were sold last month by agents, and the firm offers special inducements to both men and women upon request, and many are making from $100 to $150. per month and expenses. Don't fail to write them.

SIX CENTS

This is a Gold-Plated Slide Locket

It has places for two photographs. The design is the very latest floral French art effect. It is now all the rage, worn round the neck, with chain or ribbon. It is worth fifty cents, but we send it postpaid to your address for SIX CENTS in postage stamps. We need catalogue of Jewels. Address LYNN & CO., 48 Bond Street, New York.

DENT'S Toothache GUM

A SWELL AFFAIR

Should be carried in the pocket. Stops the pain of an aching tooth instantly. Known and praised everywhere. Avoid useless imitations; get Dent's, the original and only effective. All druggists or by mail, 15c.

C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

PETS LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY OF ALL KINDS

ABSOLUTELY STOCK PEDIGREED AND REGISTERED. POULTRY SCORED

FREE

Epitomist Experiment Station

all bred and raised at the

where the Agricultural Epitomist is published and printed amid the activities of real farm life, in which result of experiments made at this Station are given from month to month together with other information of inestimable value to every farmer, garden and household generally, with any size farm down to the smallest garden plot. We breed nothing but the best and purest strains of all kinds of Stock and Poultry including Ancon Goats, Scotch Collie Dogs, Belgian Hares, Etc., and all the best strains of Poultry. It is our aim to send every one whose stock and poultry is not absolutely pure to start in right. A postal card with your name and address and calling attention to this advertisement, will get you full particulars together with descriptions and illustrations of our Pets, Stock and Poultry which we give absolutely free. Address

EPITOMIST EXPERIMENT STATION, Spencer, Ind.

CHECKERBOARD PACKAGES

GET A WAGON
FREE,

—FOR YOUR CHILDREN

Ralston

PURINA CEREALS

WE WANT ONE BOY OR GIRL IN EVERY FAMILY TO HAVE A WAGON

We want every home to test the delicious flavor and health-giving qualities of Ralston-Purina Cereals. To do this we have packed an assortment of Ralston-Purina Cereals in a wagon; the cereals alone costing Two Dollars. We will ship one wagon Absolutely Free (only one to a family) and the wagon filled with Ralston-Purina Foods for Two Dollars and your grocer's name. FREIGHT PAID everywhere East of the Rockies. Our object in sending the wagon Free, is to give every family an opportunity to discover for themselves, that Ralston-Purina Health Foods cost no more than others and taste the best of all. The wagon is strongly built, size 24 inches long by 14 inches wide, with iron axles. The complete assortment consists of

5—2lb. pkgs. Ralston Breakfast Food
1—2lb. pkg. Ralston Barley Food

1—2lb. pkg. Ralston Health Oats
1—2lb. pkg. Ralston Hominy Grits

1—2lb. pkg. Purina Pankake Flour
2—12lb. sks. Purina Health Flour

874 Gratiot St.,

PURINA MILLS

"Where Purity is Paramount"

St. Louis, Mo.

N.B.—You may not have children, but if you like good foods your neighbor's children can use the wagon.

PURINA MILLS PRESS

VOL. 25 = NO. 13

THIRTY- TWO PAGES

PRICE FIVE CENTS

CHRISTIAN HERALD

EASTER 1902

COPYRIGHT, 1902, BY LEWIS ALOPSON
"Hallelujah! Hallelujah! Christ the Lord is Risen To-Day!"

HOW SHE LOOKS - WHAT SHE WEIGHS

ESKAY'S FOOD

WHETHER your baby is ill, poorly nourished or perfectly well, use the food which specialists in infant diseases recommend because of its wonderful nourishing qualities. Let us send you to-day a generous sample of ESKAY'S FOOD for trial, free. We know, as you will, that it will make your baby strong and well.

SMITH, KLINE & FRENCH CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

IT NOURISHES FROM INFANCY TO OLD AGE

ALWAYS ASK FOR WALTER BAKER'S COCOA AND CHOCOLATE • LOOK AT THE LABELS •

PURE-DELICIOUS-NUTRITIOUS
ESTABLISHED 1780

WALTER BAKER & CO. Limited.

DORCHESTER, MASS.

THREE GOLD MEDALS PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION

Fabrics - Colors Women.

The more dainty & delicate they are the greater the need of Pearline
for the Washing.

Ginghams
Dimities
Piqués
Organdies
Madras
Swiss
Laces
Lawns
Linens

Use Pearline without soap without rubbing

Danger

The false theory advanced by those seeking to popularize medicinal and patent process foods is based upon the unnatural and unscientific statement that the less you give the digestive organs to do the better they will do it.

Such an absurd theory is as false as would be that of a teacher claiming to develop the mind by the use of a sleeping powder, or of a physical trainer who sought to develop an athlete by keeping him continually in bed. The muscles must be exercised or they become soft and weak; the mind, or it will grow feeble; the digestive organs, or they will become weak, useless and diseased. Avoid medicinal and patent process cereals which claim to be pre-digested and ready-to-eat.

Pettijohn's Breakfast Food

is an unmutated wheat food, containing all the superior nutritive qualities of perfect wheat. It is easily digested and is unequalled for building up and keeping up the entire system. Sold by all Grocers.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, MARCH 26, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

AN AVENUE OF LORDLY CEDARS

THE HOUSE ONCE OCCUPIED BY MOORE, THE POET

CORAL ROCKS IN BERMUDA

SPRINGTIME IN LILY-LAND

FROM the snow of the North to the sunshine of the "Land of the Lily and the Rose," a trip of seven hundred miles by water, in forty-eight hours, is a delightful and unique experience. By hundreds and thousands our Easter lilies are brought from the Bermudas. There the great gardens perfume the air for miles with lush sweetness, and the lily culture occupies many men for weeks before the lilies, carefully packed, are sent North to aid our Easter celebrations. The excellent accommodations afforded by the steamer Trinidad, the bright sky and the calm sea, and the pleasant passengers aboard, all contributed to a trip that was unbroken in its charms from the lifting of the anchor at New York to the dropping of the anchor in the harbor of Hamilton. It is impossible to forget the first impressions of the Bermudas on a cloudless day. In the distance a purple haze hovers over St. George's, the first land seen after leaving New York; the gray of the ocean melts into a sea that is now of an emerald and now of a turquoise blue; the flapping sails of the fishing boats flash in the sunlight; island after island appears on the horizon; and we pass Bailey's Bay, Shelly Bay, Prospect Point, and Spanish Point, and enter the narrow channel leading up to Hamilton, scores of imposing buildings and hundreds of snow-white residences, nestling in the green groves, present a picture that cannot be caught by the painter's brush.

It is needless for a geologist to inform us that all of these islands are of coral formation, for this is apparent everywhere. The largest of the group is the Bermuda island, which, at its greatest width, is only three miles, and at its highest point is not more than two hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea. The total area of land, according to a statement made under the direction of the English Government, is 12,400 acres, equivalent to about nineteen and one-fourth square miles. It may be interesting to recall the fact that in the year 1812 these beautiful islands missed, only by seemingly a slight occurrence, becoming American possessions. In James' Naval History, we are told that an American fleet lay in the New York harbor ready for action; and two propositions were submitted to the American Council, whereby to strike a blow at the British: one was to seize the homeward-bound West Indian fleet, and the other was to capture the Bermudas. Only by a casting vote was the first proposition adopted. During the American Revolution the Bermudians were our warm friends, and expressed their sympathy in effective ways, but no one can doubt that now they are loyal subjects of the English Crown.

A census of the islands has not been taken for ten years. At that time the population was 15,013, of which 5,690 were whites, and 9,323 were colored, the latter varying from the black African type to the light mulatto. Sixty-seven years ago the bill for the abolition of slavery passed the English Parliament; and, immediately, the Bermuda Legislature met, and not only abolished slavery, but decided to dispense with the six years' apprenticeship allowed by the imperial statute. The visitor is most agreeably impressed by the politeness, the intelligence, the neatness and the cheerful disposition of the colored population. They speak the English language with remarkable accuracy; they are energetic and thrifty; they seem to have a high idea of dren being the Berkeley Institute in Hamilton, named for Bishop Berkeley, who, in 1728, decided to "Christianize American savages by establishing a college at Bermuda, as a convenient radiating centre." The nine parishes of the island are Hamilton, St. George's, Smith's, Devonshire, Pembroke, Paget, Warwick, Southampton and Sandys, to each of which, as in the old country, belongs a parish church, one of which is the proud possessor of a communion plate of silver, which was the gift of William and Mary, king and queen of England in the year 1684. Similar to English colonial possessions elsewhere, the government is here vested in a Governor, an Executive Council, Legislative Council and a House of Assembly, the latter composed of thirty-six members, four from each parish, who are elected for a term of seven years.

There are only two places on the islands that can be dignified by the name of "town," namely, St. George's, at one time the capital, and Hamilton, which is now the seat of government and the port of entry and departure for the steamers which connect these islands with the outside world. The north and south shores are two lines of travel that must be kept clearly in mind by the pleasure-seeker in Bermuda. Along the former you pass what is known as the Ducking Stool, where, in the early days of the Colony, refractory women were punished for suspected witchcraft; the Causeway, consisting of a succession of substantial wooden bridges, which is nearly two miles in length, and many fantastic caverns, which are honey-combed by the flow of the sea; along the latter you soon reach the historic Spanish rock, on which are cut the initials of Ferdinand de Camelo, and the date 1543; Castle Harbor, where are found the remains of the earliest building for defensive purposes: Walsingham House, in which Moore the Irish poet resided in 1804, while he was an official of the English Government; Gibbs' Hill, where a great lighthouse stands upon the highest point on the islands; and Somerset, with its quaint houses, overlooking a sea as blue as the waters of Capri.

Great Britain has made Bermuda the central point of rendezvous for her cruising North Atlantic squadron, as well as a coaling station. On and around Ireland Island are concentrated arsenals, warships, torpedo and gunboats; and moats, drawbridges and lines of fortifications honor and morality; and their white, well-kept houses, surrounded by pretty gardens, impress one favorably. The parishes are well supplied with both public and private schools; the most prominent for colored chil-

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

ACRE UPON ACRE OF ROYAL EASTER LILIES

Atlantic squadron, as well as a coaling station. On and around Ireland Island are concentrated arsenals, warships, torpedo and gunboats; and moats, drawbridges and lines of fortifications

A SERMON THAT WON SOULS

FROM a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD in Montana, comes a letter, enclosing a faded, yellow slip of printed paper—an extract from an old sermon by the late Pastor Spurgeon of London. The letter says: "I was converted fifteen years ago, while reading one of C. H. Spurgeon's sermons, published in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. One of my neighbors gave me one of your papers to read. New light and life came into my soul. I had wandered away from God and was groveling in the dark; but I praise God that he brought me back through that sermon. I enclose you the part I was reading when light came into my soul."

The extract from the sermon is given below:

The Wideness of God's Mercy

There is a glorious width about the promise, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." What "him" is that? It is "him that cometh," any "him that cometh" in all the world; if he cometh to Christ, he shall not be lost. Any white man, or black man, or brown man, or yellow man, or copper-colored man—if he comes to Christ, He will in no wise cast him out. Every soul that comes to Christ shall be received by him.

Notice the unmistakableness of this promise. "In no wise," that is, for no reason, under no circumstances, at no time, under no conditions whatever. If you, my dear hearer, were to come to Christ to-night, how could he cast you out; Imagine my Lord Jesus saying it, and printing it, and giving it to us as inspired Scripture. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out," and yet casting out somebody who came to him. Why, it would be a lie, an acted lie. I pray you, blaspheme not my Lord by supposing that he could be guilty of that. Christ is a truthful Christ. He must receive every soul that comes to him.

But let me ask you, suppose you come to him and he casts you out; with what hands would he cast you out? With his own hands? What! Christ casting you out with his own hands, a sinner that has come to him? I say again, can he do it? With those hands, pierced, bearing the marks of the nails, crucified—rejecting a sinner? Oh, no! He has no hands with which to do it; he has given both his hands to be nailed to the tree for guilty men. What profit would it be to him if he did cast you away? If his wounded hands were to cast you away, what glory would it bring to him? You in hell! What happiness would that be to him? It can not be. Why, imagine for a moment that he had cast you away. If it were ascertained that one soul came to Christ and he cast him out, why, there are thousands of us that would never preach again. For one, I have done with it. If my Lord can cast a sinner away, myself with a clear conscience could not go and preach from "him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." He could not be trusted by his people any more and his very Church would lose the faith that is its life.

Ah me! they would hear of it in heaven—one soul that came to Christ was cast out! It would stop the harpings of heaven, dim its lustre, take away its joy. What it would be whispered among them, "He broke his promise; he cast away a praying soul; he may drive us out of heaven." How could they sing, "Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins," but he did not wash others that came to him, though he promised he would? They would hear of it in hell, and they would tell it to one another, and an awful glee would take possession of the fiendish heart of the devil. But it can never be! Beloved, this is as certain as God's being—he that comes to Christ shall in no wise be cast out.

SPRINGTIME IN LILY-LAND

Continued

are seen on every hand. Here is found the largest floating dock in the world; and when it was towed across the Atlantic in 1869, it required a passage of thirty days from the Downs via the Madeira Islands, before reaching this port. It is sufficiently large to lift a vessel with a displacement of 10,000 tons.

One would naturally expect to find in this delightful climate an abundance of such tropical fruit as figs, lemons, oranges and pomegranates; but in this he would be somewhat disappointed. It is supposed that parasitic and other diseases have been, in some way, introduced into the country; and consequently, for years, there has been a scarcity of these fruits. Vegetables are grown in abundance; large onion and potato farms are seen on all the islands; and acres are covered by lilies, the bulbs and buds of which are shipped North, especially as Easter approaches. As may be imagined, the flora of the Bermudas is varied and abundant. The wistaria, geranium, heliotrope, verbenas, passion-flower, violet, rose and narcissus are, in season, remarkable for their luxuriance. The morning-glory adorns the public highways through all the months of the year; and the large fleshy leaves and delicate pendulous flowers of the life-plant attract your attention in the meadow, along the roadside, and in the cultivated gardens.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE BERMUDA GROUP OF ISLANDS

Springtime in Bermuda is made brilliant and fragrant by many flowering shrubs; but these are not indigenous; and as they grow everywhere, it is with some difficulty that you decide whether they are wild or cultivated. "Belmont," where these lines are written, is approached by a long avenue of oleander plants that, meeting at the top, form an arch of white, pink and red during the early spring; and when the shrubs are dropping their bright flowers, your walk is canopied and carpeted by a profusion of beautiful blossoms. The cedar is the most common of all the trees; fine specimens of the rubber-tree are found on several of the islands; the mahogany, banyan, calabash, tulip-tree, and the pride-of-India are not uncommon; and one of the attractions of Hamilton is the row of cabbage palms at Pembroke Hall, which reach a height of sixty feet and are capped by feathery plumes.

Amidst the brightness and beauties of these fairy islands one can appreciate the words of Mark Twain: "When its scores of good points are considered, it is a wonder that all the coughing, sneezing, epizootic population of the States have not found out Bermuda and come over to enjoy it." The window at which I write opens upon a picturesque panorama. A grove of waving cedar slope to the sea; the waters, kissed by the playing lights and shadows, change into blue, purple and green, as they roll toward the wide ocean; scores of dark foliaged islands sleep upon their colored beds; the full-winged sail-boat, bending to the breeze, glides into the harbor; and, skirting the beach beyond, are the snow-white houses of the Capital of the Bermudas. As I looked upon a scene like this, from a neighboring grove, the muse inspired Tom Moore to sing:

Could you but view the scenery fair,
That now beneath my window lies,
You'd think that Nature lavished there,
Her purest wave, her softest skies.

H. ALLEN TUPPER, JR.
"Belmont," Warwick, Bermuda.

MR. I. A. NAILLE

foundation for the broadest mission work among the Chinese that has yet been established in the "Monumental City." One of the old landmarks at Saratoga and Pine streets, a building erected about seventy years ago, containing eleven rooms and a hall, was secured for the work. The hall has a seating capacity of about one hundred, and for some years past has been used as a political headquarters and club-house.

June 23, 1901, was made the initial day of the new work, which includes a Chinese mission-school, where, under competent management, the English language is taught and assistance rendered to pupils in developing whatever natural talents they seem to possess. The work also includes a Christian home for Chinamen, where, both by precept and example, they will receive a knowledge of Christianity, and where they will be aided when in distress and cared for in sickness.

The projector of this work began life as a teacher in the public schools of Maryland, and

BALTIMORE'S CHINESE MISSION

SEVERAL of the Christian churches of Baltimore, Md. for some years past have afforded the Chinese an opportunity to familiarize themselves with our language, and at the same time have endeavored to instill into the minds of these people a knowledge of the Christian religion. It remained however for a little band of godly people, styling themselves "The Chinese Christian Association of Baltimore," and without the financial support of any church or society, to lay the for many years was engaged in Sunday School work, having been several times Superintendent. He felt called to mission work, however, and his success in the new field showed that the call was a genuine one. He has the assistance of a staff of faithful teachers, some of whom have had years of experience in Chinese work.

THE CHINESE MISSION CLASS AND THEIR AMERICAN TEACHERS

The Maryland Sunday School Union through its State Superintendent, has expressed cordial approval of the effort among the Baltimore Chinese as "a practical method of doing foreign missionary work at home."

Personal efforts together with some contributions from friends, have supplied the means so far with which to support the work. It is proposed to establish a permanent Christian Home for Chinese boys, for their intellectual and spiritual improvement. No salaries are paid to any one employed in the work of the Chinese Christian Association. It is altogether a labor undertaken in the name of the Saviour of men and for the love of souls.

The headquarters of the Association are at No. 663 West Saratoga Street, Baltimore, Md.

COTTONWOOD TREE

Cuba as the Land of Promise

By CHARLES M. PEPPER

A DAY LABORER IN CUBA

WHEN Dr. Klopsch told me he wanted THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers to know something more about Cuba, he spoke of it as the "Land of Promise." So it is. When Christopher Columbus, sailing along the eastern shore, saw the mountain tops through the blue haze, the great navigator exclaimed: "It is the most beautiful land on which the eyes of man ever have rested." Truly Cuba is both the land of promise and the land of beauty. It is an emerald gem set in a sapphire sea.

When we speak of it as the "Land of Promise" we mean that it is the island of opportunity. It has vast undeveloped resources of mines, forests and soil. There are thirteen million acres which may yet be brought under cultivation. These make it the island of opportunity. The present population is about 1,700,000. Statisticians estimate that it can sustain ten million inhabitants. Probably the child is now born who will live to see the population of Cuba reach five million inhabitants.

Four hundred years have not greatly changed the appearance of the surface of the island, so that Columbus' exclamation may be repeated. The skies are as blue now as they were then, and it is these clear, blue skies that make the landscape so attractive. There is the ever present prospect of royal palms, cocoa palms, banana groves, orange trees, caibas or cottonwoods, mangoes, laurels, numerous variety of the locust trees and others unknown to northern climates. In the North we think of the tropics as a jungle of tangled greenness; sometimes, too, we have the idea of waving palm trees.

The landscape of Cuba is a blending of all these impressions. Mountains and forests constitute scenery, not landscape. The majority of the inhabitants of Cuba dwell neither in the mountains nor in the forests. Their surroundings are more varied. The surface of the country is rolling, even hilly, except for the swamps along the coasts. The keys or coral reefs which form a chain outside the island, are not barren surfaces; they are covered with a stunted growth, known as mangrove bushes or trees, which have their roots in the salt water, and which are not unlike the weeping-willows of the North.

While the palm dominates the landscape of the island, in these days these are other prospects to please the eye. These are of waving cane fields, of stretches of land green with the tobacco plant, of the coffee bushes on the mountain slopes, of great fields of pineapples looking like immense cactus beds.

In my view the road to success in Cuba lies through the farm. The farm may be a sugar estate, a tobacco field, a coffee plantation, a fruit orchard, a stock ranch, a truck garden, or a hay field. These are all agricultural occupations, and they show that the most promising opening will be such as come from the cultivation of the soil. As in any country which has no winter snows, or freezes, or blizzards, living is simple, and it is also cheap, because comfortable dwellings can be built cheaply. The majority of the country people in Cuba live in what is known as bohios or palm-thatched huts. The better class of small farmers have larger buildings, sometimes known as ranchos, which also are palm-thatched. The American will want even a better house than this, and he will build it with plenty of space and large, airy rooms. It need not be more than a single story in height, because in the tropics the practice is to spread over a good deal of ground rather than build up into the air. In this way the dwellings are made comfortable. Since no shelter is required for the animals, the out-buildings are not many. Often there is a corral for the horses and a kind of a pen for other animals, over which is stretched a palm roof supported by poles. It is not necessary to board up the sides.

The oxen are the chief farm animals and the most useful ones. They are used for plowing, hauling, and for almost every other purpose. Sometimes, also, they are used for beef. On the larger plantations mules are used, and an American gets much more service from them than a Cuban. The Cuban horse does not do much teaming. He is in reality a pony, and is very sturdy. Four or five are hitched tandem for hauling, but as a rule the great ox-carts are used. The pony bears his master everywhere and, too, he is loaded down with the merchandise of the farm, such as hay, fruits and vegetables.

Every Cuban farm has some hogs of the species known in the Southern States as "razor-backs." They live off the nuts of the royal palms and other products of the soil, which they find for themselves. They do not become fat, but the meat is quite sweet and the in-hundred mark. The hot season lasts longer than in the North, but the extremes of heat are not so great. Ninety degrees in Havana and eighty-five degrees out in the country usually is the limit. In winter, the lowest I ever have seen the thermometer go was to fifty-seven degrees. There may be a few days which are cold and raw to the native, but which are welcome and invigorating to the people from the North.

It is the rainy season rather than the heat which is a drawback to the summer in Cuba, but one easily accustoms himself to these rains because they come with such regularity. The rainy season commonly begins late in May, and lasts till October. During that time two and three heavy downpours daily, lasting from half an hour to an hour, are not unusual; yet, sometimes a week, or even a fortnight, will pass with only light showers.

One thing about which every American wants to know is the yellow fever. If I were going to settle in the country—and that is the only place in which to settle—I should not bother about this, because the yellow fever rarely is heard of outside of Havana, Santiago and the other seaports. But there is reason to believe that one result of the American control of the island has been to lessen the danger of this dread disease—that is, dreaded by strangers. It is a rare tale of the heroism of science in battling with the disease. Dr. C. E. Finlay, an English physician living in Havana, had a theory that the fever was transmitted by mosquitoes. He had studied and experimented till he felt sure. He satisfied some of the American military and medical officers that his theory was correct. They established an isolation hospital at Camp Columbia for experiment. Several of the physicians, with the bravery of their profession, already had shut themselves up with yellow fever patients to study the disease. Volunteer patients were found who slept in the beds of yellow fever patients, while others allowed themselves to be bitten by mosquitoes which had bitten yellow fever patients. Only those bitten by mosquitoes took the disease. Dr. Lazear, a Cuban physician, watched a mosquito which had been inoculated with the fever as it sucked the blood from his hand. "It may be my life-blood that is drawn," he said, "but my associates will know." He was right, for within a short time the heroic physician was dead from the fever, a martyr to his devotion to science.

Others who were inoculated took the disease and recovered. General Wood, himself a skilful doctor and a student, was impressed that the mosquito theory was correct. Stringent sanitary measures therefore were taken to protect the soldiers from the mosquitoes, and also to destroy these pests by means of petroleum spread everywhere on the stagnant pools in which they breed. During the last summer there were further experiments and, too, there were further martyrs to science; yet it was the first summer in a period extending over many years in which there was nothing like an epidemic of yellow fever in Havana.

While it may be that the mosquito is not the only means of transmitting yellow fever, it seems to have been pretty thoroughly established that it is the chief means. It gives hope for what medical science may yet be able to do, if not in banishing yellow fever from the tropics, at least in making it rare.

FISHERMAN'S HUT

WORKERS IN THE FIELDS

NEGRO FARM LABORER

habitants are very fond of their native pork. I have never visited a Cuban farm that did not have at least half-a-dozen goats domesticated. They are family pets, but also are kept for their milk. Not many sheep are raised in Cuba. They are very useful on a farm, but the heat causes them to lose their wool and the mutton is not very good.

Poultry is found nearly everywhere, and includes guinea hens. Eggs are a favorite dish with all Spanish-speaking people, and they also like the chickens. Chicken with rice, that is, cooked with the rice, so that it flavors the whole dish, is something of which they are very fond, and with reason. I have never eaten anything quite so good as chicken with rice, prepared by the Cuban housewife.

I have often written about the climate of Cuba, yet every summer in the dog-days, when we are baking and roasting under a sun which sends the thermometer above a hundred degrees, I am asked how it compares with Cuba. Through an experience of several summers, I have never known the thermometer to reach the one-

A TYPICAL NATIVE OX-CART

A CUBAN FARM-WAGON

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

... SERMON BY ...
Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.

THRESHED OUT

TEXT—Isaiah 28: 27, 28:

"FOR THE FITCHES ARE NOT THRESHED WITH A THRESHING INSTRUMENT, NEITHER IS A CART WHEEL TURNED ABOUT UPON THE CUMMIN; BUT THE FITCHES ARE BEATEN OUT WITH A STAFF, AND THE CUMMIN WITH A ROD. BREAD CORN IS BRUISED, BECAUSE HE WILL NOT EVER BE THRESHING IT."

MISFORTUNES of various kinds come upon various people; and in all times the great need of ninety-nine people out of a hundred is solace. Look, then, to this neglected allegory of my text. There are three kinds of seed mentioned, fitches, cummin and corn.

Of the last we all know. But it may be well to tate that the fitches and the cummin were small seeds, like the caraway or the chick-pea. When these grains or herbs were to be threshed they were thrown on the floor, and the workmen would come around with staff or rod or flail and beat them until the seed would be separated; but when the corn was to be threshed that was thrown on the floor, and the men would fasten horses or oxen to a cart with iron-dented wheels; that cart would be drawn around the threshing-floor, and so the work would be accomplished. Different kinds of threshing for different products. "The fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod. Bread corn is bruised, because he will not ever be threshing it."

Threshing for Every One

The great thought that the text presses upon our souls is that we all go through some kind of threshing process. The fact that you may be devoting your life to honorable and noble purposes will not win you any escape. Wilberforce, the Christian emancipator, was in his day derisively called "Doctor Cantwell." Thomas Babington Macaulay, the advocate of all that was good, long before he became the most conspicuous historian of his day, was caricatured in one of the quarterly reviews as "Babbletongue Macaulay." Norman McLeod, the great friend of the Scotch poor, was industriously maligned in all quarters, although on the day when he was carried out to his burial a workman stood and looked at the funeral procession, and said: "If he had done nothing for anybody more than he has done for me, he would shine as the stars forever and ever." All the small wits of London had their fling at John Wesley, the father of Methodism. If such men could not escape the maligning of the world, neither can you expect to get rid of the sharp, keen stroke of the tribulum. All who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. Besides that, there are the sicknesses and the bankruptcies and the irritations and the disappointments which are ever putting a cup of aloes to your lip. Those wrinkles on your face are hieroglyphics, which, if deciphered, would make out a thrilling story of trouble. The footstep of the rabbit is seen the next morning on the snow, and on the white hairs of the aged are the footprints showing where swift trouble alighted.

Even amid the joys and hilarities of life, trouble will sometimes break in. As when the people were assembled in the Charlestown theatre, during the Revolutionary war, and while they were witnessing a farce, and the audience was in great gratulation, the guns of an advancing army were heard, and the audience broke up in wild panic and ran for their lives, so oftentimes while you are seated amid the joys and festivities of this world, you hear the cannonade of some great disaster. All the fitches and the cummin and the corn must come down on the threshing-floor and be pounded.

My subject, in the first place, teaches us that it is no compliment to us if we escape great trial. The fitches and the cummin on one threshing-floor might look over to the corn on another threshing-floor and say: "Look at that poor, miserable, bruised corn. We have only been a little pounded, but that has been almost destroyed." Well, the corn, if it had lips, would answer and say: "Do you know the reason you have not been as much pounded as I have? It is because you are not of so much worth as I am; if you were you would be as severely run over." Yet there are men who suppose they are the Lord's favorites simply because their barns are full, and their bank account is flush, and there are no funerals in the house. It may be because they are fitches and cummin; while down at the end of the lane the poor widow may be the Lord's corn. You are but little pounded because you are but little worth, and she bruised and ground because she is the best part of the harvest. The heft of the threshing-machine is according to the value of the grain. If you have not been much threshed in life, perhaps there is not much to thresh! If you have not been much shaken of trouble, perhaps it is because there is going to be a very small yield. When there are plenty of blackberries the gatherers go out with large baskets; but when the drought has almost consumed the fruit, then a quart-measure will do as well. It took the venomous snake on Paul's hand, and the pounding of him with stones until he was taken up for dead, and the jamming against him of prison gates, and the Ephesian vociferation, and the ankles skinned by the painful stocks, and the foundering of the Alexandrian corn-ship, and the beheading stroke of the Roman sheriff to bring Paul to his proper development. It was not because Robert Moffat and Lady Rachel Russell and Frederick Oberlin were worse than other people that they had to suffer; it was because they were better, and God wanted to make them best. By the carefulness of the threshing you may always conclude the value of the grain.

Merciful in Discipline

Next, my text teaches us that God proportions our trials to what we can bear. The staff for the fitches. The rod for the cummin. The iron wheel for the corn. Sometimes people in great trouble say: "Oh, I can't bear it!" But you did bear it. God would not have sent it upon you if he had not known that you could bear it. You trembled and you swooned; but you got through. God will not take from your eyes one tear too many, nor from your lungs one sigh too deep, nor from your temples one throb too sharp. The perplexities of your earthly business have not in them one tangle too intricate. You sometimes feel as if our world were full of bludgeons flying haphazard. Oh, no; they are threshing instruments that God just suits to your case. There is not a dollar of bad debts on your ledger, or a disappointment about goods that you expected to go up but that have gone down, or a swindle of your business partner, or a trick on the part of those who are in the same kind of merchandise that you are, but God intended to overrule for your immortal help. "Oh," you say, "there is no need talking that way to me—I don't like to be cheated and outraged." Neither does the corn like the corn-thresher; but after it has been threshed and winnowed it has a great deal better opinion of winnowing-mills and corn-threshers.

"Well," you say, "if I could choose my troubles, I would be willing to be troubled." Ah, my brother, then it would not be trouble. You would choose something that would not hurt, and unless it hurt, it does not get sanctified. Your trial, perhaps, may be childlessness. You are fond of children. You say: "Why does God send children to that other household, where they are unwelcome, and are beaten, and banged about, when I would have taken them in the arms of my affection?" You say: "Any other trial but this." Your trial, perhaps, may be a disfigured countenance, or a face that is easily caricatured, and you say: "I could endure anything if only I was good-looking." And your trial, perhaps, is a violent temper, and you have to drive it like six unbroken horses amid the gunpowder explosions of a great holiday, and ever and anon it runs away with you. Your trial is the asthma. You say: "If it were rheumatism, or neuralgia, or erysipelas, but it is this asthma, and it is such to breathe." Your trouble is a husband, sharp, snappy and cross about the house, and raising a small riot because a button is off! How could you know the button is off? Your trial is a wife ever in contest with the servants, and she is a sloven. Though she was very careful about her appearance in your presence once, now she is careless; because, she says, her fortune is made! Your trial is a hard school-lesson you cannot learn, and you have bitten your finger-nails until they are a sight to behold.

An Exhausting Thing

Everybody has some vexation, or annoyance, or trial, and he or she thinks it is the one least adapted. "Anything but this," all say; "anything but this." My hearer, are you not ashamed to be complaining all this time against God? Who manages the affairs of this world, anyhow? Is it an infinite Modoc? or a Sitting Bull savage! or an omnipotent Nana Sahib? No; it is the most merciful, and glorious, and wise Being in all the universe. You cannot teach Omnipotence anything. You have fretted and worried almost enough. Do you not think so? Some of you are making yourselves ridiculous in the sight of the angels. Here is a naval architect, and he draws out the plan of a ship of many thousand tons. Many workmen are engaged on it for a long while. The ship is done; and some day, with the flags up and the air gorgeous with bunting, that vessel is launched for Southampton. At that time, a lad six years of age comes running down the dock with a toy boat which he has made with his own jack-knife, and he says: "Here, my boat is better than yours. Just look at this jib-boom and these weather cross-jack braces;" and he drops his little boat beside the great ship, and there is a roar of laughter on the decks! Ah! my friends, that great ship is your life as God planned it—vast, million-tonned, ocean-destined, eternity-bound. That little boat is your life as you were trying to hew it out, and fashion it, and launch it. Do not try to be a rival of the great Jehovah. God is always right, and in nine cases out of ten you are wrong. He sends just the hardships, just the bankruptcies, just the cross that it is best for you to have. He knows what kind of grain you are, and he sends the right kind of threshing-machine. It will be rod, or staff, or iron wheel, just according as you are fitches, or cummin, or corn.

The Purpose of Trial

Again, my subject teaches that God keeps trial on us until we let go. The farmer shouts "Whoa!" to his horses as soon as the grain is dropped from the stalk. The farmer comes with his fork and tosses up the straw, and he sees that the straw has let go the grain, and the grain is thoroughly threshed. So God. Smiting-rod and turning-wheel both cease as soon as we let go. We hold on to this world with its pleasures, and riches, and emoluments, and our knuckles are so firmly set that it seems as if we could hold on forever. God comes along with some threshing trouble and beats us loose. We started under the delusion that this was a great world. We learned out of our geography that it was so many thousand miles in diameter, and so many miles in circumference, and we said: "Oh, my, what a world!" Trouble came in after life, and this trouble sliced off one part of the world, and it has got to be a smaller world, and in some estimations, a very insignificant world; and it is depreciating all the time as a spiritual property. Ten per cent. off, fifty per cent. off, and there are those who would not give ten cents for this world—the entire world—as a soul possession.

We thought that friendship was a grand thing. In school we used to write compositions about friendship; and perhaps we made our graduating speech on commencement day on friendship. Oh! it was a charming thing; but does it mean as much to you as it used to? You have gone on in life, and one friend has betrayed you, and another friend has misinterpreted you, and another friend has neglected you, and friendship comes now sometimes to mean to you merely another ax to grind! So with money. We thought if a man had a competency he was safe for all the future; but we have learned that a mortgage may be defeated by an unknown previous incumbrance; that signing your name on the back of a note may be your business death-warrant; that a new tariff may change the current of trade; that a man may be rich to-day and poor to-morrow. And God, by all these misfortunes, is on the things of this world; but we still hold on. God smites with a staff; but we hold on. And he strikes us with a rod; but we hold on. And he sends over us the iron wheel of misfortune; but we hold on. There are men who keep their grip on this world until the last moment, who suggest to me the condition and conduct of the poor Indian in the boat in the Niagara rapids, coming on toward the fall. Seeing that he could not escape, a moment or two before he got to the verge of the plunge, he lifted a wine-bottle and drank it off, and then tossed the bottle into the air. So there are men who clutch the world, and they go down through the rapids of temptation and sin, and they hold on to the very last moment to life, drinking to their eternal doom as they go over and go down. Oh, let go! Let go! The best fortunes are in heaven. There are no absconding cashiers from that bank, no failing in promises to pay. Set your affections on things above, not on

Trying to Loosen Our Grip

A MESSAGE FOR EASTER MORN

By JOHN WILLIS BAER

THE Lord is risen! The Lord is risen! That glorious truth is ever uppermost in our hearts and minds these Easter days. Let us make it a glad, happy day. Yes, a happy day! Why not? The Lord is risen! The Lord is risen! and others have risen too—your loved ones and mine. They are having a part in the heavenly chorus, and singing their praises in the very presence of the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Ours is indeed a wide fellowship; it belts the world, it extends into heaven. Ours is a united family in heaven and on earth.

These Easter days, as they come and go, are days of real happiness and joy. The experiences that come with them, and the thoughts and remembrances stirred by them, send me with singing lips and grateful heart to the foot of the cross. I thank God for the thousands and thousands of young people marching under the banner of a heavenly King, singing with sunshine in their souls, and testifying to the sweet peace—the gift of God's love. Come, Endeavorers, Christian Endeavorers all! Let us raise a glad and grateful shout of praise that shall reach the very heavens, where it will be taken up by a ransomed host that will send it echoing through eternity.

Each year thousands more of young people are joining the Easter chorus here upon earth; and each year, too, thousands are being "promoted" to the life beyond, so that each Easter an increasing number celebrate the victory over the grave. O glorious victory!

It was just at this time six years ago that God lifted a little son of mine out of my home, and gave him a place in the city the streets of which are filled with boys and girls. From the moment that little fellow ceased to breathe here, and commenced his beautiful life in the home

THE LEGEND OF THE PITCHER OF TEARS

Many days a stricken mother,
To her loss in sorrow hid,
Wept hot, bitter tears, complaining,
"Cruel death has stolen my child."

But one night, as she was sleeping,
To her soul there came a vision,
And she saw her little daughter
In the blessed fields Elysian.

All alone the child was standing,
And a heavy pitcher holding,
Swift the mother hastened to her,
Close around her arms infolding.

"Why so sad and lonely, darling?"
Asked she, stroking soft her hair.
See the many merry children
Playing in the garden fair.

"Look, they're beckoning and calling;
Go and help them pluck the flowers.

Put us in the heavy pitcher,
Dance away the sunny hours."

From the tender lips a quiver
Fell the answer on her ears:
"On the earth my mother's weeping,
And this pitcher holds her tears."

"Tears that touch the heavenly blossoms,
Spoil the flowers where'er they fall;
So as long as she is weeping
I must stand and catch them all."

"Wait no longer," cried the dreamer;
"Run and play, sweet child of mine;
Never more shall tears of sorrow
Spoil your happiness divine."

Like a bird released from bondage
Sped the happy maid away,
And the mother, with her courage Strengthened for each lonely day.

above, God has blessed me in the fact that I am sure that

Heaven is nearer
And Christ is dearer!

and, while we miss him about the home—and we do miss him, oh, so much!—yet we sing from our very hearts the old song:—

Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast.

Sing it, fathers! Sing it, mothers! Sing it! Dry your eyes and look up into the face of a loving Father, who has honored you by taking your loved one to his side.
This is Eastertide! Christ is risen! There is another life, and we shall meet our loved again, to be separated nevermore. O how I wish I could say the word that would help you to praise God, even though your eyes are blinded with tears!

Notwithstanding it is years since the Father "lifted him over and up," and notwithstanding the sting of separation is not less, there have been such blessed and rich experiences, proving, as nothing else could, God's goodness and mercy, that I bid you cease to mourn, and raise your hearts in glad praise to the King of kings, and Lord of lords. Open your Bibles and turn with me to the First Epistle of John, first chapter; verses five, six,

and seven, and read my testimony; and it is my Easter greeting, if you will accept it.

Take a glance at the picture of Paul
Thumann's, which is reproduced here.
Then read the lines on this page by Mary Amsden Burroughs.

I commend the story to you, mother or father with the aching heart. Dry your eyes. This is Eastertide. The Lord is risen! The Lord is risen! There is another life, and we shall see our loved ones again. Praise the Lord!

JOHN WILLIS BAER

THRESHED OUT

Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Continued

things on the earth. Let go! Depend upon it that God will keep upon you the staff or the rod or the iron wheel until you do let go.

Another thing my text teaches us is, that Christian sorrow is going to have a sure terminus. My text says: "Bread corn is bruised, because he will not be ever threshing it." Blessed be God for that! Pound away, oh, flail! Turn on, oh, wheel! Your work will soon be done. "He will not be ever threshing it!" Now the Christian has almost as much use in the organ for the stop tremulant as he has for the trumpet. But after awhile he will put the last dirge into the portfolio forever. So much of us as is wheat will be separated from so much as is chaff, and there will be no more need of pounding. They never cry in heaven, because they have nothing to cry about. There are no tears of bereavement, for you shall have your friends all round about you. There are no tears of poverty, because each one sits at the King's table, and has his own chariot of salvation, and free access to the wardrobe where princes get their array. No tears of sickness, for there are no pneumonias in the air and no malarial exhalations from the rolling river of life and no crutch for the lame limb and no splint for the broken arm; but the pulses throbbing with the health of the eternal God, in a climate like our June before the blossoms fall, or our gorgeous October before the leaves scatter.

A Backward View of Threshing

In that land the souls will talk over the different modes of threshing. Oh! the story of the staff that struck the fitches and the rod that beat the cummin and the iron wheel that went over the corn. Daniel will describe the lions, and Jonah leviathan, and Paul the elm-wood whips with which he was scourged, and Eve will tell how aromatic Eden was the day she left it, and John Rogers will tell of the smart of the flame, and Elijah of the fiery team that wheeled him up the sky-steeps, and Christ of the numbness and the paroxysms and hemorrhages of the awful crucifixion. There they are before the throne of God. On one elevation all those who were struck of the staff. On a higher elevation all those who were struck of the rod. On the highest elevation, and amidst the highest altitudes of heaven, all those who were under the wheel. He will not ever be threshing it.

Is there not enough salve in this text to make a plaster large enough to heal all your wounds? When a child is hurt, the mother is very apt to say to it: "Now, it will soon feel better." And that is what God says when he embosoms all our trouble in the hush of this great promise: "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." You may leave your pocket-handkerchief sopping wet with tears on your death-pillow, but you will go up absolutely sorrowless. They will wear black, you will wear white. Cypress for them; palms for you. You will say: "Is it possible that I am here? Is this heaven? Am I so pure now I will never do anything wrong? Am I so well that I will never again be sick? Are these companionships so firm that they will never again be broken? Is that Mary? Is that John? Is that my loved one I put away into darkness? Can it be that these are the faces of those who lay so wan and emaciated in the back room that awful night dying?"

Oh, How Radiant They Are

Look at them! How radiant they are! Why, how unlike this place is from what I thought when I left the world below. Ministers drew pictures of this land, but how tame compared with the reality! They told me on earth that death was sunset. No, no! It is sunrise! Glorious sunrise! I see the light now purpling the hills, and the clouds flame with the coming day.

Then the gates of heaven will be opened, and the entranced soul, with the acuteness and power of the celestial vision, will look thousands of miles down upon the bannered procession—a river of shimmering splendor—and will cry out: "Who are they?" And the angel of God, standing close by, will say: "Do you not know who they are?" "No," says the entranced soul, "I cannot guess who they are." The angel will say: "I will tell you, then, who they are. These are they who came out of great tribulation, or threshing, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

Would that I could administer some of these drops of celestial anodyne to these nervous and excited souls. If you would take enough of it, it would cure all your pangs. The thought that you are going to get through with this after a while, all this sorrow and all this trouble. We shall have a great many grand days in heaven, but I will tell you which will be the grandest day of all the million ages of heaven. You say: "Are you sure you can tell me?" Yes, I can. It will be the day we get there. Some say heaven is growing more glorious. I suppose it is; but I do not care much about that. Heaven now is good enough for me.

History has no more gratulatory scene than the breaking in of the English army upon Lucknow, India. A few weeks before a massacre had occurred at Cawnpore, and two hundred and sixty women and children had been put in a room. Then five professional butchers went in and slew them. Then the bodies of the slain were taken out and thrown into a well. As the English army came into Cawnpore they went into the room, and oh, what a horrid scene! Sword-strokes on the wall near the floor, showing that the poor things had crouched when they died; and they saw also that the floor was ankle-deep in blood. The soldiers walked on their heels across it, lest their shoes be submerged of the carnage. And on that floor of blood there were flowing locks of hair and fragments of dresses. Out in Lucknow they had heard of the massacre, and the women were waiting for the same awful death; waiting amid anguish untold; waiting in pain and starvation, but waiting heroically; when, one day, Havelock and Outram, and Norman, and Sir David Baird, and Peel, the heroes of the English army—huzza for them!—broke in on that horrid scene, and while yet the guns were sounding, and while cheers were issuing from the starving, dying people on the one side, and from the travel-worn and powder-blackened soldiers on the other; right there, in front of the king's palace, there was such a scene of

Handshaking, and Embracing and joy as would utterly confound the pen of the poet and the pencil of the painter. And no wonder, when these emaciated women, who had suffered so heroically for Christ's sake, marched out from their incarceration, one wounded English soldier got up in his fatigue and wounds, and leaned against the wall, and threw his cap up and shouted, "Three cheers, my boys, for the brave women!" Yes! that was an exciting scene. But a gladder and more triumphant scene will it be when you come up into heaven from the conflicts and incarceration of this world, streaming with the wounds of battle, and wan with hunger; and while the hosts of God are cheering their great hosanna, you will strike hands of congratulation and eternal deliverance in the presence of the throne. On that night there will be bonfires on every hill of heaven, and there will be illumination in every palace, and there will be a candle in every window—ah, no; I forget, I forget; they will have no need of the candle or of sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever. Hail! hail! sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty!

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Editor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly.
Subscription price $1.50 a year in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S. add 10 cents. For Mexico and one dollar a year.
Change of Date.—If taken at least two weeks to change the date, enter your change on the renewal card.

Expiration of Subscriptions.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.
Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

Easter

THE season at which we celebrate our Lord's resurrection from the grave comes at an appropriate period of the year, in these Northern latitudes. All nature is putting forth new life after its long winter sleep. As we look around on tree and field, and hearken to the carol of the birds, we realize what the phrase, "life after death" imports. It is as if God were speaking in signs to the bereaved and to all who are conscious of approaching the grave, bidding them fear not. They who have passed away, who amid the tears and sighs of friends left behind, have been laid in the earth, are in the hands of Him who brings life and beauty into his world that was only lately wrapped in frost and snow. We, too, must experience the winter, the decrease of physical warmth and energy; they that look out of the windows will be darkened and desire will fail; but we, too, may rest in confidence that in that far beyond, of which we know so little, we shall find God's power reigning supreme, and in its beneficent activity we shall find safety.

May we not also find in nature the hint of a larger life? The seed cast into the ground comes to fuller life through its death, and so may that condition from which we shrink, be of that kind of which Christ spoke when he had passed into it: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore." The encouraging "Fear not" of his message finds its echo all through nature. The gardens and the woods cry out to us, death is not eternal, after death comes life, through Him who declared, "I am the resurrection and the life." It is God's way with nature to bring life out of death, and surely the principle will not be suspended with those who have loved and served him here. The promise is sure; but our timid souls contemplating the new experience shiver on the brink of the unknown, and to encourage us, God gives us every year in the world around us an object lesson, associated with that most blessed of all events, the resurrection of our Lord.

International Friendships

IN many respects, the experience of a nation is like that of an individual. In the days of prosperity, and when "all goes on swimmingly," friends abound, and the fortunate man is the centre of interest and influence. He is treated everywhere with distinguished consideration; his society is eagerly sought after, and men bow in humble deference to his slightest opinion. Around his board are assembled the wit and wisdom of society, and the leaders in all things that go to make the best of a cultured civilization. But let trouble come—as it will come, at times, to all—and the test of real friendship begins. Almost with the first breath of misfortune, many of the once ardent friendships are dissipated, and continued adversity sweeps them away as surely as the wintry gale brushes the leaves off the frosty tree-branches. Those who remain are friends worth keeping and well worth cherishing. One of the severest maledictions the ancients hurled at an enemy was to express the wish: "May he survive his friends!" Happy the man whose friends cling to him through evil report and good report, through prosperity and disaster. By such a test, better than in any other way, does he prove the genuineness of their friendship.

Just now, our country is in the full enjoyment of international felicitations. Never have we been so well thought of by the nations of the globe as now. It is a spectacle that would have made the stern old founders of the Republic relax into smiles, could they have seen the feverish caste with which "the Powers" have been throwing bouquets at Uncle Sam lately, and heard the effusive compliments paid to Columbia. Guns boom and foreign colors dip in salute to the starry flag, and our prestige everywhere has risen to a height that fairly eclipses the record. Our wishes, in a diplomatic sense, are scrupulously respected, and our counsel is sought in matters that formerly were never brought to our attention at all. The invisible cordon of our national influence, only a short time ago quite circumscribed, now belts the globe. Since that "brush" with Spain, when Uncle Sam's navy opened their eyes to our amiable national qualities, our friends have multiplied amazingly. Russia, England, France, Japan, even the old Dowager-

Empress of China, have all fallen decorously into line among our warm admirers. And the Kaiser himself has paid us the special compliment of sending his illustrious brother, to convey the assurances of the hearty friendship of Germany and the ruler of the German people.

Of the sincerity of these friendly manifestations—not one, but all of them—we can have no reasonable doubt. The world's extended hand of friendship we can grasp with cordial salutation, knowing that sincere hearts beat behind it. In other lands they are only now beginning to understand us; till now we have been something of an enigma. They find us a vast and growing nation, limitless in our resources, tireless in our energies, but on the whole, a lover of fair-play all around, true to a pledge, staunch to a friend, generous to a foe.

"Let us be friends"—it is an excellent motto for the American people. On such a basis we can do better service to civilization and humanity. Without undue entanglement, we can yet cultivate the good will of the whole world, the amity of every land. There are those who are ever prone to suspect underlying motives of a selfish or designing nature in every profession of friendship from others; but this is a poor philosophy. The wiser way is to seize the golden opportunity to impress upon our varied and distinguished friends abroad, the sterling quality of our own friendship, and by convincing them, through all the channels afforded by diplomacy and otherwise, that the sentiment of international good will is to be valued, not merely as it pleases the self-respect of individuals or communities, but as it tends to enhance the happiness of nations and to secure the peace of the world.

A Warning Cry

THE timely warning given recently by Dr. George C. Lorimer in his sermon on "The Religious Crisis in America," deserves the serious attention of Christian people of all denominations. None of them would willingly incur the reproach of Christ that he does not observe "the signs of the times." The sign Dr. Lorimer pointed out is ominous, and the prediction he based upon it is full of menace to us as a nation. The sign was the meagre attendance on divine worship, and the prediction was that, at the rate we are now moving, there would in fifty years be no American Sabbath. The congregations in the churches, Dr. Lorimer says, are "shamefully small." So far as the larger cities are concerned, the fact must be admitted. A very small part of the population is habitually found within God's house on the Lord's Day. How are we to explain the fact? Must we assume that the interest of the people in religion is declining? If so, there must be some radical defect either in the churches or the ministry, or in both. The eternal verities of the faith are as important as ever, and the need of men of the influence they exert is as urgent as in past times. The safety and the purity of individual and social life cannot be maintained without the support of vital godliness. Every one who tries to live above the sordid materialism of ordinary business life, knows that he must have the help that the churches are designed to render. If the churches are neglected, it must be either because men have found that they do not give such help, or because they have decided to dispense with it. In either case, the inference is very ominous, and calls for the most earnest consideration. Is it possible that the members of the churches show so little of the effect of religion on their own lives that outsiders are unable to perceive the benefits religion confers? Or is it that the ministers do not realize what it is that men need to ennoble and enrich their lives, and fail to supply that need?

Dr. Lorimer suggests that the explanation of the small attendance at the churches may be due to the fact that the population is now largely composed of foreign elements, which have no sympathy with evangelical religion. This may be a contributing cause, but it implies a duty which should quicken the energies of the church. If these immigrants are practically heathen, we have a missionary field at our own doors, which ought to be at once occupied. It cannot be that the Christian community will permit the leaven of heathenism to permeate it, when its direct and imperative duty is to Christianize those with whom it comes in contact.

One thing is clear. The facts are a clarion call to duty. Any laxity there may be in the observance of the Lord's Day among Christian people should immediately be reformed. An example, at least, should be set of church attendance and Sabbath observance, which will surely have its effect on the community, and there should come from every pulpit a clear and powerful proclamation of the Gospel, which is still, as it ever has been, the power of God unto salvation.

About Easter Gifts

THE desire to make our friends happy by bestowing upon them some beautiful gift is a very natural one. Looking back over the past, we find gifts playing a large part in the home life of all lands and in the comity of nations. Even now, when a Prince crosses the wide Atlantic and is entertained on our shores, he brings with him splendid and lavish gifts, and presents them as souvenirs of his visit and tokens of his sovereign's good will. We, in this age and country, lose no opportunity of tangibly showing our friends that we care for them. Every birthday gives us a pleasant chance to make somebody the happier that he or she was born, and we keep wedding anniversaries and special days of home delight, with the interchange of gifts. Easter now disputes with Christmas the number and sumptuous character of the gifts which pass from hand to hand.

Flowers are specially suitable for gifts at this festival. Azaleas, hyacinths, lilies, roses, have been nursed and watched and coaxed into radiance of bloom for our churches, and for the cemeteries where our dear ones who have left us, lie so quietly under the snow, or the daisies. But flowers are as befitting the intercourse of home and of friends, as they are charming when massed on the pulpit, or in the chancel. Send a box of fragrant violets to the young girl you love. Bring home to the tired mother a cluster of lilies of the valley, their waxen bells singing a silent song, that interprets itself to the inner ear, in finest melody. Adorn the table with a vase of Roman hyacinths, the husband's Easter gift to his loved and devoted wife. Flowers are always welcome, whether cut from the plants, or sent as they grow. A living, growing plant gives rare pleasure and satisfaction for weeks after it reaches one's hand.

Books, photographs, etchings, pretty articles for the dressing table, or for personal use, and also, pieces of china, delicate linen for the table, whatever can be useful or decorative, may be included in the Easter catalogue of gifts. Only, do not spend more than you can afford, or think that you must make a return in kind.

Notes from the Field

—EVANGELIST M. E. REES and wife have been holding revival services in Iliou, New York, for the last three weeks with exceedingly gratifying results.

—REV. RALPH GILLANS, of Boston, has just completed a series of meetings with the Tabernacle Baptist Church of Brooklyn (Erwin Dennett, pastor). Many have accepted Christ.

—REV. DR. TALMAGE, while in the City of Mexico lately, was prostrated by a severe attack of influenza. Later accounts, however, were more favorable and indicated that he would soon be able to resume his preaching tour.

—REV. J. F. O'HARE and Rev. W. A. Swift, of Gosport, Ind., have just closed a union meeting of the M. E. and M. E. Church, South, in which seventy-five were added to the membership of the two churches and several to other churches.

—THE WESLEY EVANGELISTS have just closed a three weeks' revival service in the Beekman Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, Manhattan. The membership of the church was greatly quickened. On Sunday, March 2d, seventy-one persons united with the church, as the result of the meetings.

—FOR THE COMING SUMMER at Mount Hermon, Northfield, the teachers will include the Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, Rev. F. B. Meyer, Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D., Prof. E. I. Bosworth, of Oberlin, Prof. Elmore Harris of the Toronto Training School, David McConaughy, late National Secretary Y.M.C.A., India, and Paul D. Moody, Mr. Moody's son.

—REV. SAMUEL DUNHAM, for twenty-nine years pastor of the West Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, N. Y.,—the longest pastorate of any Protestant preacher in that city—has resigned. During his incumbency the church has been a thoroughly live spiritual organization, showing every year a gain in membership, and increased activities in all its branches.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Farewell to the Prince

AFTER a visit that must have been full of wonder and of almost exhausting entertainment, Prince Henry of Germany bade goodbye to his American hosts on March 11 and sailed for home. Amid the booming of cannon and the cheers of thousands of voices, the huge Deutschland bore him down the bay and out to the ocean. To the last the Prince showed the utmost cordiality and appreciation of the hearty welcome he received. At the last repast on board ship, before the final separation, Rear-Admiral Evans, who had been in constant attendance on the distinguished visitor, rose and addressed him in bluff sailor fashion. He said: "I have only this to say to Prince Henry and my brothers of the German navy—We are glad you came, we are sorry you are going, and we hope you will come again." Then, extending his hand across the flower-decked table, he added with fervor, "It gives me great pleasure, as the representative of the American navy, to seize the hand of friendship which you have so kindly extended across the Atlantic."

In an instant Prince Henry was on his feet to grasp the proffered hand of his friend, and there was a pretty little tableau of hands across the sea enacted in the persons of Germany's Imperial Admiral and America's bluff Rear Admiral.

Two scenes during the Prince's visit, it appears, made a deep impression on him, of which he spoke to his friends. One was his visit to the Lincoln Park during his stay in Chicago, where he planted a tree at the foot of the statue of the martyr President; and the other his visit to Harvard. It was an unprecedented honor that the old University rendered in holding a special academic session to confer upon him an honorary degree and the Prince fully appreciated it. In simple, frank words President Eliot explained the circumstances, and amid the huzzas of the students said: "Now, therefore, in exercise of authority given me by the President and Fellows of the Board of Overseers, and in the favoring presence of the friends here assembled, I create honorary Doctor of Laws, Albert William Henry, Prince of Prussia, and Vice Admiral, and in the name of this society of scholars, I declare that he is entitled to the rights and privileges pertaining to this degree, and that his name is to be forever borne on its roll of honorary members." It may be hoped that this and the other tokens of friendship exchanged during the Prince's visit, will serve to draw into still closer bonds of amity the two nations concerned, and so one step may be taken in the direction of that international peace and good will that shall one day embrace the whole world, as the Hebrew prophet foresaw.

The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim (Isa. 11: 13).

Lovers Bound by Contract

A Justice in New Jersey was called upon recently to witness two remarkable documents. They were brought to him by a young man and a young woman and were signed in his presence and duly attested. It appears that the young people are engaged to be married, but as the young man is a soldier and is going to the Philippines, he was anxious to secure the fidelity of the girl during his absence. She too may have been uneasy about his constancy, and finally they agreed to have contracts drawn up binding both for a period of three and a half years. They were almost identical, but that signed by the girl contained provisions which did not apply to her lover and were therefore omitted from his declaration. The girl vowed to remain "unmarried and unengaged, to receive no marked attention from any unmarried man or widower during the said period of three years and six months, not to be escorted to or from, or to be present at any church service, church sociable, entertainment, concert, musicale, picnic, excursion, outing, theatre, baseball game or any other place of public amusement or recreation with any unmarried man or widower, or any other than members of her own immediate family; and further sacredly promised not to carry on any communication or correspondence by mail or telephone with any unmarried man or widower, or encourage, promote or foster any courtship whatsoever during the period." The terms of contract indicate some acquaintance with social life, and though there are some flaws in it, which might be turned to account, its purport is obvious. It would be well if those who have pledged themselves to a Christian life similarly decided to break so completely with the questionsides this are assigned as prolific sources of crime. First in order, and most potent in the writer's opinion, is intemperance; second, association, and third, laziness. Contributory causes are poverty and the anarchistic teaching which produces discontent. In placing special emphasis on intemperance, the writer points out that it is not only a cause of crime in itself, but originates and strengthens the other causes, and so saps the will power, that the criminal who desires to reform is unable to do so. In discussing the cure for crime, the writer, while giving credit to the improved methods of treating the criminal in prison, emphatically declares that the only successful way is religious teaching. He says that when the criminal hears that God loves him and Christ died for him, he takes heart, and is encouraged to try to reform. No brutal punishment subdues him with so much certainty as this gospel of love. This is important testimony from one who is, unhappily, an expert, and it is corroborated by the experience of all who have worked in the rescue of criminals. It should give new zeal and energy to all who carry the Gospel into the haunts of crime.

I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth (Rom. 1: 16).

The New Secretary

The change in the President's Cabinet, announced last week, has been widely discussed. It was known some time ago that Mr. Long was anxious to retire from many very warm friends among the leading men in public life, particularly the members of the Massachusetts delegation, and is very highly regarded by President Roosevelt." The country will wish the new Secretary all success in his new duties, and all the more if, as would appear from this sketch of him, he is the kind of man that the ancient lawgiver sought for service in his administration:

HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY

Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes and I will make them rulers over you (Deut. 1: 13).

BRIEF NOTES

Japan has made an important innovation by establishing a university at Koshikawa for the higher education of women. It provides accommodation for six hundred students.

By the recent death at his home in Brattleboro, Vt., of Gen. J. J. Estey, of organ-building fame, the Baptist denomination loses one of its strongest and most consecrated laymen.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has received an order for a magnificently bound copy of the Bible, to be used in administering the oath to the King at the approaching coronation.

Dr. and Mrs. Rudisill have received an enthusiastic welcome on their return to Madras, India. They were tendered a special reception by the employees of the Methodist Publishing House of that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth Clibbon, who have left the Salvation Army, are not coming to Chicago, as was announced, but are organizing an independent mission work in Europe, principally in France, Belgium and Switzerland.

Rev. Thomas Harrison has had a wonderful time of blessing at Quincy, Ill. The services continued four weeks, and during that period 340 persons were at the altar. Among the converts were sixty college students. Mr. Harrison is now conducting revival services in Denver, Colo., at the Trinity M. E. Church, of which Rev. F. Craft is pastor.

Considerable friction has arisen between the French authorities at Tien Tsin, in China, and the American missionary societies. The French began cutting roads through the mission compounds, regardless of the hospitals, schools and other buildings there, in spite of the fact that the Americans have been in possession of the land for forty years. The French Consular arbitrarily ordered the work to proceed, but the American Consul ran up the Stars and Stripes and dared him to molest the missionaries. The two Consuls have now appealed to their respective governments.

PRINCE HENRY PLANTING A TREE AT LINCOLN PARK

ARRIVAL AT HARVARD

able conduct which so often leads to their vows being broken.

No man that warrmeth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier (II. Tim. 2: 4).

A Criminal on Crime

A remarkable manuscript was placed, a few days ago, in the hands of the sheriff at Kokomo, Ind., by a man who has been sentenced to a term in the penitentiary for stealing. It contains a frank and exhaustive examination of the causes which lead to crime, and the best method of reforming the criminal. The writer puts aside, almost contemptuously, the theory of criminal propensities being hereditary, though he does believe that negligence on the part of parents in the training of their children is one important cause of the success of temptation. Three causes be-the Navy Department, but would do nothing to embarrass the President or cause inconvenience in the service. The new Secretary is the Hon. William Henry Moody, of Haverhill, Mass. A prominent journal says of the appointment: "The selection of Mr. Moody meets with universal approval, as he seems to be possessed of the very qualifications needed in a man at the head of the Navy Department. He is under fifty years of age, physically strong and alert, and is a man of brains, and a good lawyer. He graduated from Harvard in 1876, was District Attorney for the Eastern District of Massachusetts from 1890 to 1895, and is a man of the very highest character, a hard worker and especially strong in will power. Mr. Moody is a bachelor, and has never been prominent in the so-called official society of Washington. He is, however, popular with his acquaintances, and has

DEATH OF SAUL AND BIRTH OF PAUL

Saul of Tarsus Converted

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 6
ACTS 9: 1-12

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "REPENT YE THEREFORE, AND BE CONVERTED, THAT YOUR SINS MAY BE BLOTTED OUT." ACTS 3: 19

DAMASCUS should be approached by only one way, and that is from the northwest," says Dean Stanley. He describes that way as leading along the course of a little stream, the Barada, with its fresh green banks, while absolutely bare mountains, no less sterile than Mt. Sinai, rise on either side. He says: "At last a cleft opens in the rocky hills between two precipitous cliffs; up the side of one of these cliffs the road winds; on the summit of the cliff there stands a ruined chapel. Through the arches of that chapel, from the very edge of the mountain range, the traveler looks down on the plain of Damascus. It is here seen in its widest and fullest perfection, with the visible explanation of the whole secret of its great and enduring charm. The river, with its green banks, is seen at the bottom, rushing through the cleft. It bursts forth, and, as if in a moment, scatters over the plain, through a circle of thirty miles, the same verdure which had hitherto been confined to its single channel. It is like the bursting of a shell, the eruption of a volcano, an eruption not of death but of life."

So as we look through the windows of church history, we see in the conversion of Saul a sudden outburst of life. Up to this point the life of Saul had been like a stream in a dark valley, carrying death and destruction along its path. Then, suddenly, in that year 37 A.D., the life of Saul burst upon the world with a richness of blessing which has never ceased flowing, nor will cease throughout eternity. Damascus was called "The Eye of the East," also, the "Pearl of the Desert." We can have no hesitancy in calling Paul the chief apostle when we consider his several missionary journeys to distant parts of the world, and when we count what a large share of the New Testament was written by him—fourteen books in all.

But how did it all come about? How was his course changed from death to life in its influence? It was as sudden as the bursting forth of that river at Damascus. Through the arches of heaven Jesus looked down upon Saul, as he was approaching Damascus. He had taken a journey of nearly forty miles from Jerusalem. In his scrip he carried a letter of authority from the Sanhedrin, commissioning him to make it as hard as possible for the Christians. Did Saul feel that he was on a righteous errand? He did; for long after he said, "I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." Saul was a conscientious Jew, and thought it his duty to check the influence of Jesus, whom he did not believe to be the Son of God. But it did not take long to convince Saul of his mistake, for no sooner did he see the great light which shone down upon him from the opened heavens, and hear the voice of God calling him by name, and saying: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" than he replied, "Who art thou, Lord?" And when the answer came: "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest," he was more than willing to go at the bidding of Jesus into the city, even though he had to be led as a blind man. He went on, only knowing that it should be told him what he should do there, for henceforward he was to serve the Master whom he had been denying, yea, defying. Could there be a greater contrast than between Saul thus led, and Saul as he had expected to enter Damascus.

We are told to whose house he was taken; that of a man named Judas, who lived in Straight street. And that very street is to be seen to-day. This Judas was one of the Christians Saul had expected to throw into prison. Perhaps Judas did not at first recognize who was to be his guest. When he did learn that it was Saul, the persecutor, he might have had a moment of fear, but soon his feelings must have been of wonder and surprise. No doubt Jesus sweetly reassured him. But surely Saul could not have seemed like a dangerous man, for as a guest in the home of Judas, he could neither see, nor eat, nor talk, so great was his sorrow for persecuting Jesus. But he could pray in his heart, and pray he did for help. And Jesus heard his prayer, and sent a good Christian to him by the name of Ananias, one very different from the Ananias about whom we studied a short time ago. It would seem that Ananias must first have been afraid to go, for he asked Jesus: "Is not this the man who has been doing so much to trouble the Christians?" "Yes," Jesus answered, "it is he, but go your way, for he is to be one of my apostles, and he will yet suffer many things for my sake." And Ananias went, and he put his hands on Saul's head and lovingly called him "Brother Saul." Then Saul's blindness passed away, and he was able also to talk and to eat. He was in Damascus several days afterward, and made friends with the Christians, and preached about Jesus in the synagogues and from home to home.

Illustration and Application

Let us view the scene of our story "before the battle," from three points of view. The feeble Christian church at Damascus seemed like a helpless flock of kids on which a pack of wolves was rushing. To Saul of Tarsus, also, galloping toward the "little flock" at the head of his armed troop of persecutors, the church seemed helpless and wickedly deluded. How different the scene looked from the God's eye view! Between the faithful little church and its approaching foe stood an invisible and invincible Guard, the risen Christ, who would not only protect his church, but convert his foe. Let us pause to note that it is this invisible

One who always makes the saying true that "right is might," and that other saying, also, that "nothing is really settled until it is settled right." On Saul's side were the "heaviest battalions." He had been carrying everything before him, "hauling men and women to prison." But there was at hand for him a victorious defeat. Paul tells us later of this period that, though learned and sincere, he was on the wrong side (Acts 22 and 26). Gladstone says the educated classes are often on the wrong side in moral conflicts. But right wins, even though learning and other forms of human might are against it.

However the battle is ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With fluttering flags and prancing nags
And echoing roll of drums.
Still truth proclaims this motto
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

And as he journeyed he came near Damascus, and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven. Even Christians sometimes deny that there can be "sudden conversions." President G. Stanley Hall recently said to missionary workers: "You can't make a low-down savage over into a good Christian in a day, nor in a single generation." We admit that conversion is in all ages oftenest gradual. To the other apostles conversion came as the dawning light, but to Saul it could come only as the lightning stroke of Christ's sword of flame. And Christian history repeats the sudden conver-

Chiefs of Sinners Saved

From an old Dutch painting

"THERE SHINED ROUND ABOUT A LIGHT FROM HEAVEN, AND HE FELL TO THE EARTH"

sion of Saul over and over in chiefs of sinners saved in every nation. A childlike savage is more easily converted than the proud unbeliever, of whom Saul of Tarsus is the type. And a white debauchee is harder to save than any other savage. Jerry McAulay is not the only instance of a man famous for vice and crime becoming famous for virtue and active Christianity. A conversion almost as wonderful is narrated of a western miner, whose hands were stained with blood and in whose life almost every crime had found a place. He was dying in his little adobe cabin of one room, his face horrible with the record of past sins and present hatred of all mankind. A Christian woman entered to comfort him, addressing him as "friend." He replied with an oath, "I ain't your friend; I ain't got any friends." She spoke of Christ dying for others, to which he replied with more oaths, "That's all a lie." The Christian worker went away discouraged, but came back again and again for a fortnight, all without any apparent success. Then she said, "I am not going any more." Her little boy noticed that evening that she did not pray for the miner as usual, and he questioned, "Have you given him up, mamma?" "Yes, I guess so." "Has God given him up, mamma? Ought you to give him up till God does?" And so a little child led her back to her duty. At last the key to the man's heart was found. A child named Mamie was brought in with flowers. "I had a girl once named Mamie," said the miner, softening, "and she died. She cared for me. Nobody else did. Guess I'd been different if she had lived. I have hated everybody since she died." His heart having been opened with that memory of his child, he heard the story of Christ dying for us all, and then he wanted the other rough miners brought into his room to hear it. "Boys," he said, "you know how the water runs down the sluice boxes. It carries off all the dirt and leaves the gold behind. Well, the blood of that man she tells about went right over me like that, and carried off 'bout everything, but it left enough for me to see Mamie and to see the man that died for me. Oh, boys, can't you love him?" Some days after, he died, leaving this word for the woman who had ministered to him, "Tell her I am going to see Mamie and the man that died for me." To this chief of sinners saved we may add another, representative of the very class to which Saul belonged. A learned, famous lawyer, who was not only sceptical but bitterly hostile to religion, came one day to the church of which Dr. J. L. Withrow was the pastor, but listened with a manifest sneer in his face. The minister, however, was moved to concentrate his whole thought upon saving this man. With a soul filled with desire for his conversion, he thought of him and prayed for him night and day, and dreamed of saving him in his very sleep. At length he began to correspond, tactfully and carefully; and after a time assured him, "You will now and hereafter be the subject of my earnest prayer at a specified hour of each day, until you repent or perish or until I pass away." After a few weeks the opposer surrendered, and with a Saul's humility confessed his previous sins and his mad opposition to the truth. He had been friend, fellow and correspondent of eminent infidels in two hemispheres. He had cast away the entire Christian system. He had believed church people to be arrant hypocrites. All this he retracted, saying humbly, "Only let me sit down on the sill of the church door. It is all I deserve." Such was the man whose conversion we study to-day, suddenly transformed from a proud persecutor to the humble apostle, willing to endure persecutions for the faith he once fought.

At midday, a light above the brightness of the sun. This was the divine glory of Christ, whom Saul had thought an impostor. "Who art thou?" exclaimed Paul, and the Glorious One answered, "I am Jesus of Nazareth" (see Acts 22 and 26). Nineteen centuries have intensified the glory of Him who in this noon-day of wisdom and might is still, in the words of Richter, "the purest among the mighty, and the mightiest among the pure." With keener surprise he says now to everyone who in the clearer light of our day is "disobedient to the heavenly vision," "Why persecutest thou me?" Every one who rejects, persecutes.

What sad significance there is in the statement that those who stood by did not see Christ nor understand the words! They only saw a light and heard a voice. Are any of us failing, through dullness of soul, to hear and see the Christ who reveals himself to hearts prepared?

Why-thou-me? What-thou-me? Ours is indeed a "pronoun religion." In conversion it is the divine "thou" and the human "me," that meet face to face. It is not the "masses" that are saved, but the "me," one soul at a time. What a surprise it was to Saul, who thought he was doing God's will in persecuting Christians, to hear a voice from heaven which declared he was persecuting God! We may well linger here to moderate our severe judgments of others, lest we be found to be fighting against God.

When Luther stood before the Diet of Worms, the many books he had written were piled on the table before him, and he was asked whether they were his, and whether he would retract what he had written. He asked a day for consideration, in order that he might not seem to act without due thought, and his request was granted. The next day he spent in prayer, and then, fully convinced that like John Huss he was to seal his confession with his blood, went before the Diet, and refused to retract any of his writings, "except those in which he had attacked private individuals."

A somewhat amusing instance of misjudging others is told on herself by Baroness Burdett-Coutts, the great philanthropist. She was one day shopping in Paris, in a great department store, and noted that when she was transferred from one salesman to another the cabalistic words, "Two-ten" were spoken. She asked the floor-walker, on leaving the store, what they meant. He replied, "O, it's nothing." The Baroness, however, was not so easily satisfied, and asked the boy who brought home the parcels in the evening. He replied, "Why, don't you know, ma'am? It means keep your two eyes on her ten fingers." The richest and most generous woman in England had been mistaken for a shoplifter.

O God! that men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly when they cannot see.

Ananias, arise and go and inquire for Saul of Tarsus, for behold he prayeth. He who had been educated at the feet of Gamaliel, the greatest of Jewish teachers, was now to learn higher wisdom from Ananias, a lowly disciple who had been in the school of Christ.

Saul, who had misjudged Christians, was now himself to be misjudged. When God bade Ananias go and call upon Saul of Tarsus, the former exclaimed: "I have heard from many of this man, how much he has done to thy saints at Jerusalem." "I have heard!" what a deal of trouble those words have caused in the world! You "have heard" what "evil" someone has "done" in the past, but you have not heard of the repentance. The persecutor may have become a "brother."

PROPHECIES OF THE RESURRECTION

DIMLY the hope of resurrection and of immortality rose in the spiritual heavens like a star. Its light was very faint. Men called it a daring hope. Some scoffed and asked incredulously, "If a man die shall he live again?" Standing by the remains of some loved one whose face had been used to kindle with light, and seeing it in death utterly impassive, to take the hand that used to close with warm clasp on that of a friend, and finding it cold and unresponsive, there is no wonder that men doubted. It seemed so hopeless, did that changed form passing swiftly into corruption. It was so palpably a mockery of love, that men were glad to bury their dead out of their sight.

The Egyptians had a faint glimmering of the truth, but it only led them so far as to preserve the body by embalment. Even to the earlier Jewish prophets, the hope seems to have been by no means clear. David, it is true, said that he should go to his dead son, but whether he hoped for conscious reunion or only unconscious companionship in the grave, he did not say. But humanity had need of the hope of renewed life, and it welcomed and clung to the faint promise.

The Dawning

In the festival of Eostra, the goddess of the spring, the old Teutons celebrated the resurrection of nature from the frosty death of winter, and in the reawakening faintly read a promise of a human revival. Socrates certainly looked forward to a new life, but it was not till Jesus came, that life and immortality were really brought to light. There was no argument, no speculation based on analogy in his words. We hear the clear note of revelation in his words, "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." And near the close of his ministry, as if he could not bear to leave the world in doubt on this one subject on which it craved authoritative utterance, he worked the sublime miracle of the resurrection of Lazarus. Martha had learned already so much that she could say positively, "I know that he will rise again at the last day;" but she had yet to learn the whole truth which Jesus embodied in the words that have come ringing through the centuries: "I am the resurrection and the life."

The Doubting Disciples

Even after this, men were slow to learn, and failed to understand him when he spoke of his own resurrection. Not one of them was prepared for it in spite of his promises. They went to the grave to minister to the dead, carrying the herbs to wrap around the corpse. The empty tomb was a distressing mystery to them, filling them with sorrow and consternation. It took them completely by surprise, and it is their wonder and slowness to believe that is our comfort to-day. The evidence that could satisfy men so incredulous must have been incontrovertible. Last of all, we have to be thankful that Thomas maintained his obstinate unbelief to the point of tangible demonstration. No one who accepts the Bible as the Word of God can doubt, after reading the account of that condescending submission to the test Thomas demanded that it was the very body of Christ which rose from the dead.

Joyful Belief

There was the tomb empty, and before them the body marked by the very wounds which had disfigured it when they laid it away. No wonder that Thomas, convinced at last, exclaimed, "My Lord and my God." We are thankful for the strong attestation, for the doubt and suspicion that made the proof so indubitable, and upon us comes the blessing that Christ uttered as he reproved his disciple, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

How much does this sublime truth imply to the world of living men on their way to the grave! It proclaims that burial is not the end. Who that has stood by the open grave and heard the dull thud of the clods on the coffin that contains a form dearly loved, does not appreciate the value of the promise that Christ's resurrection affords! It is no longer "a thing incredible with us that God should raise the dead." Christ was raised, and the life which could not be holden of the grave is the life that he imparts to his people. He that could say, I am living and was dead, could add also that he had the keys of death. No wonder that this truth became the keystone of the Apostolic preaching of Christianity and Easter the Queen of Festivals.

The Spiritual Body

True, the mystery is not wholly cleared away. Science speaks so positively of the utter dispersion of the particles of the body, that men still ask, as they did in Paul's time, "How are the dead raised up and with what body do they come?" We know not. But this we do know, that as the fruit is related to the seed, so the resurrection shall restore something closely akin to the buried body. We know, too, that we shall be provided with a spiritual body well adapted to the spiritual state. As Christ's resurrection body was so far changed that it appeared and vanished at will, that it entered the room, "the doors being shut," and that at last it ascended into heaven, so we may imagine that the spiritual body which Paul describes, may be endowed with far greater powers than that we now have and be freed from the limitations which now affect us. For the full comprehension of the mystery we must wait. But with the main fact revealed, we can wait in full confidence, assured that when the house of this tabernacle is dissolved, we shall have a new one built of God eternal in the heavens.

The Soul's Easter

Easter has other lessons, too, besides that of the resurrection from physical death. There is a death of the soul that occurs in living men. As truly as a corpse is insensible to the words and touch of the mourners gathered around it, and to events which but a few hours before would have thrilled the being with ecstatic emotion, the dead soul is insensible to great truths and earnest appeals which ought to awaken a response. It is weary, disappointing work to plead with some men on spiritual lines. But a change comes. The Holy Spirit moves in the soul as once it moved on the face of inanimate nature. Then the spiritual forces are quickened, and there is spiritual life where once there was spiritual death. That is a resurrection that means endless life. The new life imparted to him is the life that will continue through the ages.

As we talk to a child and try to arouse his ambition by telling him what his future career may be, if he will give his mind to study instead of allowing it to be absorbed by his childish toys and pursuits, so the prospect of eternal life already begun in the soul of a man may wean him from the world's ambitions. This is to know the power of the resurrection, a potent force that, once realized, energizes and purifies the life. Easter to that soul not only speaks in promises, but of a present possession.

A Hymn for Easter Day

Soft the Bells are Ringing

ELIZA W. STEPHENS

GEO. C. STEPHENS

2. Sweeter far than earthly music,
Since the Christmas melody,
Is this song of Easter glory,
This glad psalm of victory.—REFRAIN.

3. Love's redeeming work is finished,
Fought the fight, the victory won;
Glory, glory, in the highest,
To the Father and the Son.—REFRAIN.

International. Copyright, 1901, by The Biglow & Main Co. From "GEMS OF SONG," by permission.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

To be Answered in the Issue of April 9

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are adverse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 16

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 23

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a line in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

It, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Question of the Week

What ten American scenes and places should Prince Henry have seen or visited here, in order to receive the most accurate impression of the nation's spirit and character and of our republican institutions?

The ten places or scenes which Prince Henry should have visited should be places that represent as many sides of American life as possible. I believe they should have been the following: New York, for its magnificent buildings, immensity of population, manufacturing and commercial greatness; Boston, the fountain of American patriotism; Cambridge, for its educational side of American life; Niagara, for its wonderful scenic display; West Point, for the military America; Annapolis, for the naval; Washington, for the political; a trip to a Pennsylvania coal mine, as witness to our natural resources; Tuskegee Institute, illustrating as it does the progress of the negro and American spirit for reform; and San Francisco, for a glimpse of western life. In that trip westward, our agricultural greatness would appear.

LESLIE KIRK RICHARDSON.

In order to any correct understanding, he should have seen what would reveal our manners, our commercial life, our official methods and personages, our public institutions, our races and their relations, our social usages, and the vastness and extent of our territory. The best ten places to reveal these things, as an object lesson for him to take home and digest, would have been New York, Washington, Chicago, New Orleans, Birmingham, Tuskegee, Niagara, Northfield, Leland Stanford University, and Pittsburg. This range of places presents every phase of that manifold life, which, as a whole, is animated by that indefinable something which one comes to realize and know as the American spirit. C. P. ATKINSON.

If Prince Henry wished to form "accurate impressions of our nation's spirit and character, and of our republican institutions," he should have studied the people at close range, in their homes and at their daily tasks. Here, rather than in the centres of wealth and enterprise, are the secret springs of our nation's life. He should have visited (1) the churches where the common people worship, the Moody Church in Chicago, for instance, or some in smaller towns, or even among the farming people, if he would come into close contact with the nation's religious life. (2) A Sunday School like John Wanamaker's Bethany, in Philadelphia, would have revealed to him our ideals of religious training for our children. (3) Educationally, he should have visited, not the overgrown university, but the typical American college, like Hamilton, at Clinton, N. Y., or others of that grade, as a specimen of our intellectual development. (4) Nor must we forget the public school, one of the most potent factors in the formation of our nation's character. (5) Acquainted himself with the best types of American journalism, the daily paper, the magazine, the religious journal (like THE CHRISTIAN HERALD), those that get close to the people, and have a large share in the evolution of public sentiment. (6) Visited the shops and factories where American wares are produced for the world's markets. (7) Looked deeper, and he would be able to form an estimate of the national commerce and social intercourse with other nations. 9. A State institution for unfortunate. This would show him how the United States cares for those to whom nature has not been generous. 10. The Executive Department at Washington. By investigating the plan of government, and the character of the chief offices of the nation, the republican nature of the American government would be evident. PEARL W. CARLISLE.

(1) New York; to learn that with all our immense area, we are not satisfied with the national surface, but find it necessary to burrow underground for additional space. (2) Washington; to learn how we revere Presidents, and how free-and-easy our Senators become in expressing their views. (3) Pittsburg; to learn how our country brings coal, iron and capital in such juxtaposition as to supply the world with steel products. (4) Chicago; to learn the energy of our people, and our ability to supply foreign nations with provisions. (5) Wisconsin; to discover how large a proportion of his own nation have become American citizens. (6) Minnesota; to discover that we possess the wheat fields of the world. (7) Colorado; to find no end to our mines and mineral products of every description. (8) Yosemite Valley; to find that this is no new country, as he beheld the trees of a thousand years' growth. (9) California; to find that the "Garden of Eden" still exists and is located in the United States.

renewal of relations. Let the unbeliever go. There was no compulsion in cases requiring the believer and the unbeliever to live together.

E. M. T., Williamsburg, Md. What is the relative worth of a "righteous man," and a "good man," as mentioned in Romans 5:7?

The passage seems to make the distinction thus: For a righteous man—one of blameless character—one would scarcely die; but for a good man—one who is not only blameless, but kind, generous-hearted, a public benefactor, and who delights in doing good at all times—"some would even dare to die," etc.

Rev. Enoch Baker, of Toronto, writes:

In your issue of February 26, you state that the Rev. Joseph P. Graff, of Philadelphia, claims the authorship of the beautiful poem, "The End of the Way" (which was published in part in your columns a few weeks before), for "a most estimable young lady" of his church. I was in the habit of visiting the real author, about once a week, during the years 1877-78, who had been a "shut-in" invalid then for about eighteen years, I remember aright, and who died not long afterward—Miss Harriet Cole, of Milton, Queen's county, Nova Scotia. The poem was published, if I mistake not, previous to that, in the Halifax Christian Messenger, and shortly after in a volume of Miss Cole's poetry, a copy of which is now in my possession. The poem had a wide circulation among the "Shut-In" Society twenty-five years ago; and it has often been published, and even set to music anonymously since then, though Miss Marshall is only the second one that I have met with as claiming the authorship, besides the real author.

Old Subscriber, Springfield, O. Is memory immortal? Shall we remember the scenes and circumstances of this state of existence in the future life?

Although it may be said in a general sense, that any answer to the foregoing question will be purely conjectural, yet we are warranted in claiming Scriptural authority for the belief that memory will outlive the grave. See Luke 16: 23, 28, where it is clearly implied that the rich man remembered the condition of his brethren, even after he had left the world. Other instances, conveying the same idea, might be indicated.

A. H., Bedford, N. Y. 1. Is it, or not, inexcusable in a minister to have less knowledge of the Bible than that possessed by some among his congregation?

It is quite conceivable that some aged Christian member of a congregation may know more of the Word than the pastor. For a lifetime he may have been feeding upon it daily, and have learned to love it and to drink deeply at its rich fountain. We have known aged saints, who never preached a sermon, yet whose lives were one continuous object-lesson of active Christianity, and who had "searched the Scriptures" so thoroughly that they were familiar with every promise, every prophecy, every word of comfort and consolation, of prayer and praise, every rule for this life and every revelation of the life to come. No other narrative was to them so familiar in every detail as the story of Christ and his work. After their own manner, though knowing nothing of theological courses, they certainly were better acquainted with the Book than many who preach from it.

L. M. Y., Cambridge, O. Is there any ground for the belief that persons are punished in this life for their sins?

It might be difficult to prove that there is direct punishment, but experience proves that the results of sin are often very bitter and painful. Sometimes they are felt in the body, when the sins of youth bring on disease which lasts all through life. They are often seen in the cases of Christians who set a bad example before their conversion, and they grieve when they see young people, whom they led into evil, grow worse and worse. The results of the sin of neglecting the training of children, are frequently very sorrowful. The child grows up and falls into sin, and then the parent suffers remorse, as he feels that if he had only done his duty before it was too late, the child might have been saved. In many other ways, by natural law, sin works its own punishment.

Ina M. K., Ely, Oreg. Will you please tell me where to find in the Bible, the account of Satan's rebellion, and ejection from heaven, as described in Milton's Paradise Lost?

See Luke 10: 18; II. Peter 2: 4; Jude 6.

A poor Christian church in Iowa, which is supported wholly by voluntary offerings, is greatly in need of a Communion service. If any well-to-do church, or church society, or individual would donate a plain service for the church in question, it would be a generous act. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will supply information to any one who may write us on the subject.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA

A Painting by Leffer

AN active demand has suddenly sprung up for the above beautiful picture, recently published in our columns. For the accommodation of our subscribers exclusively, we have arranged for its enlargement and reproduction, on superior art paper, with delightful color effects, and will send it, securely packed, postage prepaid, to any address on receipt of only Ten Cents. The size is 15x7 inches, without margin, which in square inches, about equals the size of one of our Art Portfolio pictures. We guarantee undamaged delivery. For two copies sent in the same tube, send 15 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEP'T., Bible House, New York City

become familiar with the home life and personal character and social conditions of the "men behind the machine." (8) He should have visited the halls of our trades unions, and studied the labor movement and its influence on our civilization. (9) He should have studied American life as it is on the farm. Besides standing with uncovered head at the tomb of Washington and the monument of Lincoln, he should have placed a laurel on the grave of some soldier boy who died all unknown that the American republic might live. J. G. OSBORNE.

1. A University; to see the methods pursued in the education of those who will be the men and women of the next age. 2. A National Bank; to show the advantages of our banking system. 3. A Public Library would indicate the character of the literature in circulation among the people. 4. New York Police Headquarters gives an example of the manner in which law and order are preserved in the large cities, and our system of detecting criminals. 5. A Protestant city church. By considering its many branches, the foreign and home missions, the slum rescue work, and its anxiety for the education of all classes, he would have been impressed with the prevailing Christian spirit. 6. A large manufacturing plant. By learning the liberal wages and kind treatment which the workmen receive, he would see what a position of self-respect every American laborer may hold. 7. The Brooklyn Navy Yard. By seeing the ships in construction he could have formed an opinion of the nation's strength and independence. 8. New York Harbor. By seeing the shipping here

(10) Returning by way of Texas, he would have found that a single one of our States was larger than all of Germany.

E. J. BROCKETT.

Answers have also been received from Mrs. James A. Gale, C. H. Caldwell, H. F. Brockett, Isaac Pennington, Fannie M. Garrison, C. P. Atkinson, Mrs. Wm. Sherey, Wm. W. Case, J. J. Munro, J. G. Engelson, Kirk W. Wheeler, Lizzie C. Willett, Joseph Hamilton, J. Flomerfelt, J. F. Henderson, A. D. Meares, Helen E. Malone, D. E. Murray, J. G. Davis, Mrs. W. N. Eason, C. B. Stanley, Chas. F. Cooper.

Miscellaneous

Ira B., Minnie, Ore. 1. Was Martin Luther ever a Catholic priest? 2. If so, how old was he when he left that faith?

After leaving the University of Erfurt, he vowed to St. Ann that he would become a monk, and on July 17, 1505, he entered the Augustinian Convent. He took vows May 2, 1507, and was consecrated a priest. 2. The breach with Rome began as early as 1518, but it was not until 1524 that Luther dropped the monastic dress. He was then 41 years old.

Inquirer, Allentown, Pa. What is the bondage referred to in I. Cor. 7: 15, from which the brother or sister is relieved?

The bondage of uncongenial association. In Corinth, unbelievers were of a particularly vicious type. The newly-converted Christian would be pained day by day by the conduct of an unbelieving husband or wife. The members of the church inquired of Paul whether it was their duty to separate in such cases. He advised their remaining together, and for the believer to try to lead the unbeliever to Christ. But if the unbeliever went away, the believer was not bound to seek a

GARRETT P. SERVISS

The Starry Heavens at Easter

HOW TO KNOW THE STARS AND CONSTELLATIONS

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE circular chart shows the position of the constellations on Easter night at ten o'clock. No planets are seen, because, with the exception of Neptune, which is only visible with telescopes, they are all in the morning sky. The chart is so drawn that the centre of the circle represents the zenith. Around the edge the four principal points of the compass are indicated, and in consulting the chart the observer should hold it in such a position that "south" is at the bottom when he faces south; "north" is at the bottom when he faces north, and similarly with "east" and "west."

By observing this precaution, and remembering that the centre of the chart is overhead while the edge represents the complete circle of the horizon, it will be easy to recognize the various constellations and the brightest stars that bear individual names. Through the centre of the chart from north to south runs the meridian. When a star is on the meridian it is exactly over a north and a south line, drawn through the place which the observer occupies on the earth. Since the stars, like the sun, appear to revolve with the heavens from east to west once every twenty-four hours, in consequence of the actual rotation of the earth on its axis from west to east, it follows that all the stars must in turn cross the meridian, half of them at night and the other half in the daytime. We cannot see the stars in that half of the heavens wherein the sun chances to be between sunrise and sunset, but as soon as the sun has gone down, the opaque body of the earth acts like a screen, shutting out his light, and then the stars in the celestial hemisphere opposite to that where the sun is, become visible, and we see them arrayed in brilliant constellations, marching from east to west, and pouring, in sparkling hosts, across the meridian until the approach of daylight again shuts them out.

If the earth simply rotated on its axis once a day, without revolving around the sun once a year, then the sun would appear to stand forever fixed in one hemisphere of the heavens, and only the stars in the opposite hemisphere would be visible to us. But, owing to the earth's yearly motion around the sun from west to east, the sun seems to us to move slowly among the stars from east to west, completing the entire circuit of the heavens in twelve months. In consequence, the starry half of the sky visible at night continually shifts westward, fresh stars and constellations gradually appearing in the east, while others disappear in the west, thus the endless panorama of the constellations is once every year majestically drawn across the night sky like a moveable canvas stretched, as upon rollers, between the eastern and western horizons. From month to month, and from season to season, the aspect of the heavens slowly changes, until, when a complete revolution has been performed, we begin to recognize the same constellations re-appearing in their old, familiar places.

But this change is so gradual that it does not greatly affect the position of the stars from night to night, so that the chart which shows their places on Easter night serves a similar purpose for several weeks before and after Easter, particularly if the hour of observation is also slightly shifted. Thus a single chart shows the starry heavens at midnight on March 1, at 10 o'clock P. M. on April 1, and at 8 o'clock P. M. on May 1, while it is easy to so adjust the hour of observation on intervening dates that the constellation shall continue to be in the same relative places that they occupy on the chart.

When once the observer has learned to recognize the constellations by their most significant star and the imaginary figures that they mark out, he will be no longer troubled by their slow change of place.

The curve on the chart marked "Equator" represents the equator of the heavens which lies directly over the earth's equator. The "Ecliptic" shows the annual path of the sun in his apparent revolution through the heavens, described above. It is a great circle inclined about 23½ degrees to the plane of the equator. It crosses the equator at two opposite points, called equinoctial points, because when the sun reaches them day and night are of equal length all over the earth. The crossing point on the chart, in the constellation Virgo, is the autumnal equinox, at which the sun arrives about the 21st of September. The paths of the planets and the moon all lie near the Ecliptic, within a few degrees on one side or the other. In future charts, when those parts of the day in which some of the principal planets happen to be, are represented, I shall indicate the planets' places among the stars.

Turning now to the constellations visible at the present season we see that Ursa Major, the Greater Bear, is almost overhead in the north, the familiar figure of the Dipper, by which the constellation is usually recognized, being just east of the meridian. The two stars on the outer side of the bowl of the Dipper are called the Pointers, because an imaginary line drawn through them nearly hits the North Pole Star, or Polaris. But the constellation Ursa Major is much larger than the Dipper. The triangle of small stars west of the Dipper marks the head of the celestial bear, while the three not inconspicuous pairs of stars overhead, toward the south in the direction of Leo, show the position of his feet. The handle of the Dipper serves him for a tail, and at this season, as we look at him with our faces to the north, he appears to be walking on the ceiling.

Looking next at the Pole Star, Polaris, it will be noticed that a row of rather faint stars ending in a group of four, one of which is about as bright as Polaris, forms the figure of a smaller dipper, with its handle bent the wrong way. This constitutes the better part of the constellation Ursa Minor, the Lesser Bear.

Following the trend of the handle of the Great Dipper toward the southeast, the eye is led to the very bright star Arcturus, sung by the poet who wrote the Book of Job. In certain states of the atmosphere this great star has a flaming color that makes it a startling object. We have evidence that it is a sun at least a thousand times as bright as our sun. It is the chief star of the constellation Boötes, the Bear Driver.

West of Arcturus glimmers the silvery little constellation Coma Berenices, fabled to be the transfigured locks of Queen Berenice of Egypt. Eastward from Arcturus shines the beautiful circlet of Corona Borealis, the Northern Crown.

Between Ursa Major and Ursa Minor winds the great dragon Draco, whose head is indicated by a conspicuous diamond-shaped figure near the northeastern horizon. Over on the northwestern side of the meridian, under Polaris is Cassiopeia, a beautiful constellation easily recognized by the irregular "W"-shaped figure marked out by its five principal stars. To the right of Cassiopeia, directly in the north, is Cepheus, not a very bright constellation, but worth noticing because it forms one of the so-called "Royal" group, including Cassiopeia, Perseus and Andromeda, the traditional history of which will be recounted in a later article, when they occupy a more prominent position in the sky. Through Cassiopeia runs the stream of the Milky Way, and, following its course, the eye catches at one point the confused glitter of a mass of minute stars called the Sword Hand of Perseus. Perseus himself appears a little farther on, immersed in the Milky Way, with his brightest star flanked by a row of smaller ones on either side, making a well-marked bow-shaped figure. Not far off, downward toward the horizon, is the wonderful "demon" or "winking" star Algol, which, it has recently been demonstrated, possesses a close, invisible companion, of huge size which, at regular intervals, partially eclipses the light of the bright star—a frightful combination, since both Algol and its mysterious comrade exceed our sun in size.

To the left of Algol scintillate the Pleiades, the famous Seven Stars, one of which, before the invention of the telescope, was fabled to have been lost. These are in the constellation Taurus, and the V-shaped figure to their left, called the Hyades, also belongs to Taurus. The bright reddish star in the Hyades is Aldebaran. Half-way up from Aldebaran to the Great Dipper appears the brilliant Capella, a pure white star, the chief gem of the constellation Auriga. South of Auriga, and fast nearing the horizon, is the mighty hunter Orion, with Betelgeuse flaming on his shoulder and Rigel on his foot, while the three matched stars of his belt gleam like a decoration. Following out the line of the belt toward the southeast the eye comes to the prince of stars Sirius, in the constellation Canis Major. No star in all the heavens equals Sirius in brightness.

Above Sirius, toward the left, is the bright star Procyon in Canis Minor, and above that again are the twin stars of Gemini, Castor and Pollux. Next east of Gemini appears the little constellation Cancer, with a faintly glimmering cluster called the Manger. Then further eastward, in mid-heaven, is Leo, easily recognized by the figure of a sickle standing upright on its handle, with Regulus at the bottom. Denebola off toward the east also belongs to Leo.

South of Leo is the long winding constellation of Hydra, the longest in the sky, the star Alphard marking its heart, and a little group to the west of Leo, and below Cancer, its head. Standing on the coils of Hydra are Crater and Corvus, and east of Corvus sparkles the beautiful white star Spica in the constellation Virgo.

THE LICK TELESCOPE

CHART OF THE HEAVENS IN MARCH, 1902

SPECIALLY PREPARED FOR THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

MR. NATHANIEL S. BOUTON

SUPERINTENDENT SCOTT AND HIS CORPS OF BIBLE WORKERS

REV. J. A. MACK

A Great Bible Work in Chicago

By....
REV. R. D. SCOTT

THE modern city is the modern problem. As the city becomes more and more a congested "nerve centre," it becomes, in the same ratio, a threatening "danger centre." The conditions prevailing in all large cities fully warrant the fear that unless the Christian Church arouses herself to greater effort at evangelization, the progress of the coming kingdom will be slow.

Chicago is probably not worse nor better than other cities of its size; it presents, however, some problems of Christian evangelization not often met with, even in great cities. No city in the world is quite like it in some respects. The present population is over two millions. The city covers 196 1-2 square miles. About ninety per cent. of the people are foreign by birth or parentage. Every continent, and some of the islands of the earth, are represented. Sixty languages are spoken. Different nationalities colonize in different parts of the city, until one can visit Bohemia, Poland, Italy, and other lands without leaving the city limits. In round numbers, the different nationalities may be enumerated as follows: Americans 500,000, Germans 500,000, Irish 250,000, Bohemians 90,000, Poles 100,000, Swedes 112,000, Norwegians 50,000, English 45,000, French 20,000, Scotch 22,000, Welsh, 4,000, Russians 40,000, Danes 20,000, Italians 25,000, Hollanders 20,000, Hungarians 5,000, Swiss 5,000, Canadians 35,000, Belgians 2,000, Greeks 1,500, Spanish 600, Mexicans 200. To these must be added Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese, South Americans and others.

There are more Germans than in any city in Germany except Berlin, and more Poles than in any city in Poland. One city missionary visiting from house to house during the afternoon of a single week, offered the Gospel to fifteen nationalities. In one section, not two miles square, eighteen languages are spoken. Many of these people do not understand English; most of them are nominally Romanists; and these things greatly increase the difficulty of reaching them with the Gospel. But a glance at the city shows how greatly the Gospel is needed. About 6,000 saloons are now doing business. These employ 31,600 persons, and have a daily income of $316,000. In a single saloon on a certain ordinary Sabbath evening at seven o'clock there were counted 524 men. Within the next two hours, 480 more entered, until men were standing six deep around the gambling tables. There are 3,000 billiard and pool rooms. Houses of impurity abound. In one ward were counted 312, in which were found 1,708 inmates. A thousand men are engaged in alluring men into these dens.

The religious and moral destitution of the masses is startling. Some years ago a section was canvassed, and it was found that of 1,280 families visited, 1,220 did not possess God's Word, neither were they willing to receive it. The canvass of another section revealed 1,140 families with no Bible, with 1,823 families neglecting public worship, and nearly 2,000 children in no Sunday School. It is not uncommon to find people who never saw a Bible and do not know it when shown to them. One woman produced, on invitation, what she thought was her Bible; when failing, on request, to find the Gospel of John, the visitor came to her assistance it was to discover that she had Webster's Dictionary in her hand. "Well," said she, "if that is not a Bible, then we do not have one." There are said to be twelve atheistic Sunday Schools in operation here, the members of which are indoctrinated by means of a catechism (a copy of which I have) whose summary states that there is no God, no Christ, no Holy Ghost, no heaven, no hell, no virtue in Christianity and no integrity in its ministers.

The only cure for the evils of this city, or any other, is found in the Gospel. And hence the need of our time and the duty of the Church is apparent, namely, to give the Gospel to every creature. The Church has gathered a splendid army in the city of Chicago. There are 626 Protestant churches, including missions. In these are 151,516 members. In the Sunday Schools are 181,390 members. This gives us about 350,000 persons enrolled on the Lord's side. The Romanists claim to have 118 churches, with 650,000 adherents. There are many good agencies at work, such as the Tract Society, the Salvation and Volunteer Armies, the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. and others. Besides these, Chicago has another agency, entirely undenominational, evangelical and missionary in character, and the common servant of all, in its Bible Society, now sixty-two years old. The first President was Mr. N. S. Bouton. Mr. Charles H. Muliken now holds the office. In its business department, it does the work usually done by active Bible Societies, but in its Bible Work Department, it does a work not often attempted. The city is divided into districts. A missionary is put into each district, to remain there permanently, her business being to visit from house to house, carrying the Bible, to read, talk, pray with the people, and persuade them to identify themselves with some church. They also make a record of the name, address, nationality, church preferred, and other information which may be of use to pastors. The families are not influenced by the missionaries in favor of any particular church or denomination.

Experience shows that only a portion of any community can be persuaded to come out to meetings of any kind. Plant a church in a densely populated section of the city, and one thousand out of ten thousand will be counted a large attendance. But the nine thousand who stay away are the most needy, and if they are to have the Gospel preached to them it must be given them in their homes, which is exactly the purpose of the Bible work. The missionaries also carry and distribute tracts and other good literature; they help in Sunday School missions; hold mothers' meetings; carry cases of need to proper sources of relief; visit prisons, hospitals and other institutions; conduct street meetings, and in every way endeavor to find opportunity to give the Gospel to "every creature." The Society is now greatly enlarging this work, and hopes to continue its expansion until the city is adequately cared for. Churches of the various denominations are joining cordially in this movement. The plan is to have each pay in enough to support a missionary. If the church is not able financially to do that, two or more join together to do so. The Sunday Schools, Young People's Societies, Women's Societies, are also forming clubs for the support of missionaries. The missionaries are carefully chosen; they must be possessed of fair education and good health. They live in the Home with the Superintendent and his wife, and devote all their time to the work. Regular studies and recitations are carried on. Young women, who answer these requirements and who desire to enter active Christian work, are invited to correspond with the Superintendent. Inquiries from others interested will be answered.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE CHICAGO BIBLE SOCIETY

CHICAGO BIBLE HOUSE AND WORKERS' HOME

HARLAN P. BEACH

MR. S. EARL TAYLOR

CHAIRMAN JOHN R. MOTT

SECRETARY L. P. TURNER

LUTHER D. WISHARD

OFFICERS OF THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT

Missionaries · and · Students · in · Conference

LARGE and enthusiastic were the meetings of the Convention, a forecast of which appeared in this journal on February 12. From all parts of the United States and Canada and from foreign lands delegates poured into Toronto to join in the consultations of the Student Volunteer Movement. The number in attendance was far in excess of that of the three previous Conventions of the Movement. On this page we give portraits of five of the officers and of representative speakers, with a picture of Massey Music Hall, in which the chief meetings were held.

Three sessions were held on each of the five days that the Convention lasted, and it became necessary as the enthusiasm grew, not only to hold overflow meetings, but to divide the business of the Convention so that different subjects might be considered simultaneously by different sections. Bishop Sweatman of Toronto, Dr. Potts, the Educational Secretary of the Methodist Church of Canada, and Dr. Cavan, Principal of Knox Presbyterian College of Toronto, and other eminent Canadian ministers gave the Convention a hearty welcome to the Dominion. Mr. John R. Mott, chairman of the Convention, responded, and inspiring addresses were delivered by Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, Pastor-elect of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, Mr. Robert E. Spear of the Presbyterian Missionary Society, and Mrs. Howard A. Taylor of the China Inland Mission.

It is four years since the last Convention of the Movement was held, so that there was deep interest in the report of the Executive Committee, which was presented by Mr. John R. Mott, covering the work of the Movement since 1898. He said that there were now fully one thousand institutions of learning, with an aggregate of more than 200,000 students, associated with the Movement. There are now 4,797 students regularly enrolled in the classes organized for missionary training, and there have already gone out to the foreign field 1,952 students under enlistment by the Movement. Nor have the universities and colleges limited their contributions for the work to men and women. They have given liberally to the funds. During the past year alone, forty thousand dollars came from that source. In some cases the institution supports wholly or in part the student whom it sent out as a missionary. The secretaries, of whom there are eight, have come into touch with 798 institutions, and have begun the organization of auxiliaries in every Protestant country.

Since the beginning of the Movement sixteen years ago, four generations of students have been reached, and each generation has shown increased readiness to respond to the call for volunteers. The prospects were never so hopeful as now, and not only in the direct result of enlistment, but in the development of spiritual life of the colleges, which has been indirectly stimulated by the missionary spirit. The watchword of the movement, "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation," grows every year nearer heathen lands. Sound health, learning, mental force were all needed, but the one indispensable qualification for the missionary life was spirituality.

At one of the evening meetings Dr. J. W. Willard, of Baltimore, Md., called attention to the fact that a church's interest in the work of Foreign Missions was a gauge of its own prosperity and efficiency. He had seen the report of a church not in his own State which had been the same in its record from year to year for a long period: "Amount raised for Foreign Missions, none; amount raised for City Missions, none." He was not surprised when he learned that in the other columns of the report were these entries: "Number admitted to the church by confession, none; number lost by death, three."

Bishop Thoburn gave wise counsel to the young volunteers, the result of long experience in the mission field. He urged them never to preach against idolatry, and especially never to ridicule idolatry. The idolater was prejudiced at the outset by such attacks on the system he venerated. The missionary, the Bishop said, should preach the Gospel of Christ, and the idolater would not be slow to realize its superiority. There was always the possibility under the other system, of breaking down the idolater's spiritual belief and leaving him an infidel opposed to religion in any form.

Hon. S. B. Capen, of the American Board, and L. D. Wishard, of the Young Men's Christian Association, gave glowing reports of the work of the Student Volunteer Movement as they had witnessed it in their own organizations. It was reaching the men best equipped for missionary work. Dr. Capen called attention to the duty devolving on the United States, in view of the exalted position it had come to occupy among the nations of the earth.

A practical outcome of the Convention was the appointment of a committee of five leaders, to confer with the Missionary Boards of the various denominations on the best method of co-operation between them and the Movement. At the concluding meeting of the Convention, 125 young men who are going out as missionaries announced the names of the lands to which they are going and stated the reasons which had guided them in their choice. A simultaneous collection of pledges of support was taken up in the chief meeting at Massey Music Hall and at the overflow meeting at Metropolitan Church, which resulted in more than sixty thousand dollars being pledged for the use of the Movement during the ensuing four years.

MASSEY MUSIC HALL, TORONTO

to realization. Such rapid growth, combined with the quality of the volunteers enlisted, justifies the hope expressed by Mr. Mott, that we are on the verge of such a development of missionary enterprise as the world has never yet witnessed.

Bishop Thoburn, of India, whose address followed the reading of the report, gave the keynote to the Convention, by insisting on the fact which his own long experience with workers in his field had invariably proved that only spiritual men could be used successfully in leading men to Christ and building up the church in

REV. JOHN POTTS, D.D.

PRINCIPAL CAVAN

REV. J. ROSS STEVENSON, D.D.

DR. S. B. CAPEN

DR. L. L. CHIVERS

PROMINENT SPEAKERS AT THE RECENT CONVENTION OF THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT

This is the way I wait for my papa

I'm acting like a lady, but I'm tired; lonesome, too

I'd like my Cousin Sue to come and see me

Miss Ada, Mamma's

Easter Day

AMONG the fete days of the Christian year, Easter holds the highest place. Just as at Christmas-tide, the world rejoices at our Saviour's birth, so at Easter it is glad in the triumph of his resurrection. Good Friday commemorates the darkness of the crucifixion, the consummation of our Lord's sacrifice for sinful man. On Easter morning the dawn breaks with the joyous assurance that he is risen, that death itself lies prone and conquered before the victorious Prince of Life. Because he has broken the bonds of death, none of his people need fear it. Though we sleep, we shall awaken. From the grave we shall step into heaven. Our beloved ones shall be restored to us. The Lord's resurrection is the pledge of ours. Easter brings us our greatest comfort for every mortal ill.

Few households in this world of partings have never mourned beside a vacant chair. Death takes away the aged in the fullness of their years, and the young in their prime; it snatches the infant from the cradle, and arrests the child in his play. If death ends all, then life is not worth having. A few more pangs, a few more battles, a few more sorrows, and then, annihilation. What woful desolation in this thought. But thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift. Christ came not only to save us, but to crown us with the blessed certainty of immortality. Once we have felt the freezing kiss of death, we shall be emancipated forever from its toils, and set free from its prison, and the breath of Eden shall blow across our faces, the touch of the angel of life shall give us new vision, we shall taste those leaves that grow for the healing of the nations. Well may we lift our glad songs at Eastertide, joining here below and there above with a vast multitude whom no man can number. From everlasting to everlasting, let praise be ascribed to Him who died and rose again, and who has the keys of death and of Hades.

Easter Bonnets

Apart from its sacred significance, Easter has an interest for women in the changing from winter fashions to those of spring. All through January and February, on the most fiercely inclement days of the season, New York shop windows have been gay with summer goods. Sheer lawns, crisp cambrics, fresh calicos, dainty gingham, and the like, have succeeded and supplanted the richer and more elegant materials which compose the winter wardrobes of women who have only to choose and to buy their clothes, and who begin, during the leisure of Lent, to make up the garments they will wear in warm weather. When, as is the case this year, Easter Sunday comes early, sensible women do not lay off their heavy wraps, nor put on spring bonnets, unless the weather prove exceptionally mild and inviting. I have known foolish girls to forego the delight and inspiration of Easter services, for the silly reason that they had nothing new to wear, but the number of such simpletons is annually decreasing. Most women are learning that church dress, to be in good taste, should be inconspicuous, plain rather than showy, and not expensive.

There does arrive a day, and it is marching on speedily, Easter being its forerunner, when the furs and wools will be laid away in camphor, the heavy attire will be out of season, and the light take its place, when the old bonnet may be folded away, and the pretty new one may be donned.

Easter Eggs

THE egg is a symbol of life. It is the home of sleeping life. During days or weeks or months, as it may be, according to the organism, the new life that is to be, is held safely in the envelope of the circling egg, till there is reached the period of perfect development, when the new scorns the old, and bursts its bonds, and comes forth into light and into separate existence and its own career.

An Easter egg party is a very fascinating feature of the week following Easter Sunday. Have a great many eggs, and dye them in different colors, blue, green, red, orange, purple, straw color, pink, violet, lilac, any hue you may choose. Hide them all over the house, and let the young people have a frolic in searching for them. For dessert at an Easter party, have ice cream in oval shapes, served on a nest of spun sugar, or bon-bons of egg-shapes, filled with confectionery and fruits.

Our Lady Alice

There is one little girl, just over the mystical threshold where womanhood and childhood meet, whose name is spoken affectionately at many breakfast-tables, and whom we all claim as partly our own. We are feeling for Alice Roosevelt the same regard we had for Nellie Grant in the long ago, and for Mrs. Cleveland later. When she christened the Meteor, we were gratified that she did it so gracefully. "Here, mamma, take my muff!" she said, just as our own girl would have done, and as she broke the bottle and severed the cord we were just as proud as if we had been there. God bless the President's daughter! She belongs to the Nation somehow, and in our hearts we register our desires for her long life and prosperity—our untitled American little lady Alice.

Brides of Easter

Brides of Easter week may have the benefit of the flowers which have been raised for Easter day. An Easter wedding in church is always brilliant. A space reserved in front of the chancel should be divided by white ribbons, fastening sprays of lilies at either side, from the rest of the church. Here the ushers will seat guests, the friends of the bride on one side, of the groom on the other. The mother of the bride, and the mother of the groom are persons peculiarly interesting to every thoughtful participant in the wedding festivity, for each in her degree is giving up as well as receiving something very precious, while the brief ceremony goes on which unites two hearts for all the future. April, June and October are pre-eminently bridal months, but the Easter bride makes choice of the holiest time for her sacred day.

GOOD FRIDAY

ON Good Friday fell a shower,
Wintry snow on vernal plain;
Nature, doubtless, mourned the hour
Of the Highest's mortal pain.

But, at Easter, lo! the sun rose,
Brighter after all the gloom;
So, in heaven, shall our earth-woes,
Rise transfigured from the tomb.

—From the German of Ruckert.

EASTER SUNDAY MORNING

WHAT a tender home sweetness fills this picture of a mother and her little ones, on Easter Sunday morning. The merry games of the week are laid aside, and the children listen while the mother reads to them about the angels, who said of Jesus, "He is not here! He is risen!" The scene is one of placid contentment, only witnessed in Christian homes, of which there are more and more around the globe.

HOUSEHOLD PET

A Familiar Home Sketch

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

On Papa's dearest pride

If Sue can't come, I'm just as glad

I believe I hear Susie coming upstairs

Hurrah! I'm playin' horse! Sue'll see me!

The Return of the Birds

NOT yet may we look for the whole merry tribe: but away down South, the birds have found out that spring is coming, and before many weeks they will be back once more, making the world glad. Can we not take time this season to make more of a study of birds and their ways than we ever did before? They are fascinating to the eyes that have patience to watch them. Birds have wonderful individuality. During the period of the courting, and the nest-building, and the brooding over the eggs, they are very similar, in a dozen ways, to bipeds that are a great many times their sizes, and that do not wear feathers.

The nature books should be very attractive just now. Read them aloud to the children, and teach them to love the beautiful works of God. Are they not to be sought out by those who have pleasure therein?

The Duty of Courage

We think of courage as an inborn quality. But the greatest coward among us may cultivate courage. I know a woman, naturally shrinking and timid, accustomed to the most constant and chivalrous care, and never used to taking the initiative anywhere. Her husband and she were alone on a ranch; it happened that he was taken ill, became worse, was threatened with death, unless help could be brought. The wife saddled her pony, rode ten miles through the wilderness of prairie for a doctor, and entirely forgot peril in her anxiety to do her errand. But physical courage is, on the whole, of easier attainment than moral bravery, and he or she who is a moral coward should daily pray to God for courage to surmount that defect. It requires courage to look and speak cheerfully when one is depressed; it takes real indomitable pluck to hide one's melancholy words, but it is a duty, and, if done, there is never missed the reward of God's approval.

THE EASTER LILIES*

SWEET lilies of Easter,
Shedding your beautiful light,
All around in gladness into the lonely night.
Filling old hearts with gladness,
Filling young hearts with joy,
Telling of an old manger and a wonderful boy,
Born to be a Saviour to this world of sin,
Sweet lilies of Easter, shedding joy within.

Sweet lilies of Easter,
Telling a story dear,
Flinging your fragrance far abroad,
Telling sad hearts to hear,
Of the Christ so good and great,
Who for our sins was slain,
Who rose from his death on the Sabbath day,
From the grave where he had lain.

—BY ADDIE E. SMITH, aged eleven.

Gabbling Prayers

The heedless way in which some little folk gabble their prayers, saying just in parrot fashion, "God bless papa God bless mamma God bless Aunt Lucy," and so on, without a break or a pause, is very irreverent, and shows that the children have not been taught what prayer is. An approach to the throne of God should not be heedlessly made.

*The sweet little poem which tells about the lilies, is from the clever pen of one of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's dear child readers.

Obedience as a Safeguard

In cases of dangerous illness, or sudden peril, obedience as a habit, is a great safeguard to little children. The child who swallows a remedy, however nauseous, because he has been trained to obey at once, has a fairer show for recovery than the other who fights and struggles and must be overcome by force. The little one who comes when called, may be saved from accident by mere automatic obedience. Elizabeth had stepped out on the roof. She was two years old. She was nearing the edge. A fall to the pavement below would mean maiming or death. "Elizabeth," said the mother, in her ordinary tones, "come here, dear, to mamma, in the window." The child came, and was clasped in her mother's arms. The incident carries its own lessons.

An Easter Song

SING a song of Easter,
A song of happy hours,
Of dashing spray, and shadow play,
And lovely springing flowers;
Of birds come home again to build
Beside the cottage eaves,
Of waking buds, and rushing floods,
And dance of rustling leaves.

Sing a song of Easter,
A song that means a prayer,
Of want and love to One above,
Who keeps his world in care.
A song for all on this green earth,
For dear ones passed away,
Sing clear and strong the joyful song,
The song of Easter Day.

Sing a song of Easter,
A song of pure delight;
A song that starts in merry hearts,
And swells from morn till night.
An Easter song that children lift
Without a jarring chord,
That thrills afar, from star to star,
To praise the children's Lord.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S CORNER

—GRACE. In sending manuscript to a publisher, write on one side of the paper only.

—LUCY. Except electricity, I know of nothing which permanently removes superfluous hair.

—MATTIE. One does not need fine clothes for church. The plainest are in the best taste if neat and whole.

—REUBEN D. Conversion means turning. A man who repents of sin and believes in Christ, is converted and begins a new life.

—MY LADY JANE. Always offer your hand in your own house. Elsewhere, when presented to a stranger, you may bow if you choose.

—EXTRAVAGANT. No, my friend. You are very frugal and self-denying. But if you should incur debt you would be extravagant.

—JEANIE. Your handwriting indicates firmness, but I am not an expert. All I care for in penmanship is neatness and legibility.

—JANE. After the lapse of four years, you cannot write to a man you discarded and tell him you have changed your mind. He may be married by this time.

—ELLEN. Before the children, never question their father's authority. If you and your husband differ, talk the matter over quietly when you are alone together.

—LILIA. A lady leaves two of her husband's visiting cards and one of her own when making a formal call on a married friend. On a spinster, she leaves one of her own and one of her husband's cards.

—DEE. Your sister may find employment with a hairdresser, or set up a business of her own. If a good operator she will not lack clients, as women hate superfluous hair, and are willing to undergo the pain of the electric needle to have it removed.

—TROUBLED WIFE. I fancy your husband is intemperate. On no other ground can his strange and cruel conduct be accounted for, and this does not excuse him. Continue to pray for him, but do not be too meek. The way to peace sometimes lies through war.

AN EASTER CAROL

SWEETER than the note of bird,
Sweeter than the rippling wave,
Sweetest music ever heard,
Tells of Him who came to save.

He who died, and rose again,
Broke the bars of death's dark prison;
Sound it far, o'er mount and plain,
Alleluia, Christ is risen!

Children's fingers sweep the chords,
Children's voices lift the hymn;
Glory, honor is our Lord's,
Send it to earth's utmost rim.

Alleluia, far and wide,
Swell the chorus, sound the praise;
Christ, for sinners crucified,
Lives and reigns through endless days!

"That Settles It"

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

RECENTLY ENLARGED

By the addition of 25,000 New Words

Edited by W. T. HARRIS, Ph.D., LL.D., U. S. Commissioner of Education.

Will readily settle questions about words, men, places, scientific subjects, etc. It has 2364 quarto pages with 5000 illustrations.

LET US SEND YOU FREE

our Chart of English Sounds for home study with the children, also "A Test in Pronunciation" which affords a pleasant and instructive evening's entertainment.

Illustrated pamphlet also free.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., Publishers,
29 Main St., Springfield, Mass.

REMINGTON TYPEWRITERS

work with the highest speed and have the endurance to keep it up

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT
Remington Typewriter Company
327 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

5% PER ANNUM

On Sums of $50 Upward

Interest from Day of Deposit to Day of Withdrawal. Interest Paid Quarterly by Check.

WE have nothing to interest speculative investors, but we earn 5 per cent. for conservative depositors, and furnish every safeguard known. Our investments are in gilt-edged real estate securities. Capital paid in, $1,000,000; Assets, $1,500,000; Surplus, $175,000. Regularly inspected by and under absolute supervision of the State Banking Dept. Endorsed and recommended by many prominent clergymen, professional and business men.

Write for detailed information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

Exalted Praise

WORD EDITION now published. This will enable many more to enjoy the beautiful hymns published in our latest book, EXALTED PRAISE.

Music Edition 30c. by mail, $25 per 100 not prepaid.

Word Edition 10c. each by mail, $1 per Dozen; $7.50 per 100 not prepaid.

Sample copies of both for 30c.

MacCALLA & CO. (Inc.), 255 Dock Street, PHILADELPHIA

(Twice a month my advertisement will appear here.)

ANNUITANCE

I am offering a limited amount of first class LIFE ANNUITIES on exceptionally favorable terms. Annuities is the reverse of insurance. Life insurance is the paying of small sums while you live to get back a large sum by dying. Life annuities is the immediate payment of a large sum to get back smaller sums so long as you live, and it is the only safe way of getting a high rate of interest. For particulars send sex, age, and address to

Edward F. Sweet, 66 W. Broadway, New York

LEARN PROOFREADING.

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and unswerving profession paying $12 to $15 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail.

HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

The Needle's Eye

BY FLORENCE M. KINGSLEY FOR THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

A NEW SERIAL STORY WRITTEN EXPRESSLY

Chapter XX.

The Kingdoms of the World

IMMANUEL ROSSI certainly could not have told how it came about; but in the course of a month he found himself in a new world, a world of luxurious houses, of brilliant assemblies, of clever men, of brilliant women. This singular young man could have counted upon the fingers of one hand the women whom he had known in the course of his life, beginning with the dimly-remembered features of Elizabeth Winch.

The new order of things had commenced with what seemed a casual introduction, in the office of Trent & Smalley, to a certain agreeable young man named Livingstone, who at once claimed Rossi as an old acquaintance.

"It was at Cambridge, don't you know?" said this young gentleman by way of explanation; and he recalled a half-forgotten class reception at which young Rossi had figured modestly. "But of course I didn't know then," was his somewhat infelicitous addendum.

"Know what?" asked Immanuel Rossi with simplicity.

"Why—er, that you were one of us—a New Yorker, I mean," said the other, with caution inspired by a warning twitch of Mr. Smalley's grizzled eyebrows.

"I am not a New Yorker," said young Rossi, smiling pleasantly; "but I'm glad to meet you." He made some inquiries concerning one of his college professors, which led quite naturally to an invitation on the part of the other to lunch at the club.

An invitation to dine at home with his quondam college acquaintance followed in the course of a few days, and a month after that young Rossi's modest mantel-piece held as many billets of invitation as that of any reigning belle. He was "in society," and the marvel of it all was that he didn't know it. The opening of that ponderous door had been so noiseless that this favored neophyte was actually unaware that it had opened—or, indeed, that it existed at all.

He thought Livingstone, his new acquaintance, was uncommonly kind, and that Livingstone's friends were uncommonly kind also. They were. This simple-minded young person was quite right in his opinion on this point.

That he was already a marriageable parti of rare eligibility, looked fondly and hopefully upon by the mothers of the charmingly pretty and clever young women he was constantly meeting, he did not know. Of the fact that his millions were tentatively invested in a house in Newport, in a Fifth avenue palace and in jewels, horses and carriages galore he was also unaware. An army of workmen were by this time engaged in building a huge fireproof tenement block on a New York street, planned on the latest lines of philanthropic research, and including every possible attraction to impetuous tenants of every nationality.

It came about quite naturally in the course of time that while his mornings were given to the hopeful study of new plans, or to the private secretary whom he had been forced to call to his assistance in the disposal of the thousand and one claims of the world at large which poured in upon him by every mail, his afternoons and evenings were passed with his new friends. Messrs. Trent & Smalley beamed with quiet satisfaction in these days. Young Rossi was at a loss to understand the sudden change in their demeanor. He concluded in his innocence that these worthy Christian gentlemen had been converted to his views by the tangible success of his new ventures.

"It is quite certain that the rentals will return fully six per cent. on the investments," he said hopefully to his legal advisers. "I have made up my mind to invest not only the bulk of my money but all net profits in buying up and rebuilding bad tenement properties." He further confided to Mr. Smalley his grand ambition, which embraced the actual doing away with the slums in other great cities. "Of course," he added modestly. "I cannot hope to accomplish this great task by myself; but of late I have thought—I believe that I can interest other capitalists in the work."

Mr. Smalley smiled and adjusted his finger-tips after his old judicial fashion. "You will, I do not doubt, succeed in interesting large amounts of capital in your projects," he said enigmatically. He did not see fit to inform his client that plans were already on foot to run up a row of "skin" tenements, brave with brown stone trimmings and glittering brass-work, just across the street from the Armitage building. "Let him try his experiment," quoth the sapient Mr. Smalley, in the privacy of his sanctum. "Our philanthropic young friend will find that the laboring classes prefer the old style of living, and his big 'model tenement' will soon be a laughing stock for the city. It may be money well spent in the end."

Miss Margaret Livingstone was very much interested in Immanuel Rossi's plans to ameliorate the condition of the toiling millions. She assured him of this on more than one occasion. Miss Livingstone was a flawless product of American civilization. She was handsome, with that clear-cut, finished type of beauty which associates itself particularly with faultless tailor-made gowns, and equally faultless manners. It was impossible to imagine Margaret Livingstone's brilliant eyes as filled with tears; it seemed equally impossible that emotion of any sort could unbecomingly ruffle the perfect poise of her personality.

"I have just finished reading the clearest, most dreadful story of life in the London slums," said the young woman, this when Immanuel Rossi was taking her out to dinner one night. "The book is named, very smartly, after that old English ballad, 'Sally in our Alley.' I quite had the shivers after reading it. Have you seen it?"

Mr. Rossi said that he had not. He added that he had himself seen enough of life in the slums to give him perpetual shivers if nothing could be done to help.

Margaret Livingstone lifted her clear, gray eyes to the handsome dark face upon which rested a transient cloud, the result of his own words. "You think all this is wrong," she said, with a wave of her graceful hand toward the softly-lighted, flower-decked table they were approaching. "Yes, I know you do; I have heard of your devotion to the wretchedly poor; Mr. Trent knows papa very well indeed." Miss Livingstone paused while the two seated themselves at table.

"I wonder if you have thought," she went on, laying her white fingers on the knot of violets which nestled in her corsage, "what the result would be if we who can afford these so-called luxuries—flowers, costly gowns, laces, jewels, and all the thousand and one extravagances, if you will, that go to make life beautiful and harmonious—if we should give it all up; would there not be a wail of distress from the vast army of florists, merchants, jewelers, and the vaster multitude which stands back of them with pick, shovel and machinery?"

Immanuel Rossi gazed in silence at the beautiful face of the speaker; he was thinking that she was very clever to have hit squarely upon the question which had been vexing him that very day.

Miss Livingstone flushed prettily under the prolonged scrutiny of the brown eyes. "I suppose we are all selfish good-for-nothings," she murmured; "but do not look at me so severely, please!" She dropped her own eyes till the long, curling lashes rested upon the soft oval of her cheek. "I don't mind telling you, Mr. Rossi," she went on in a low voice, "that I am awfully unhappy thinking about it all sometimes. Yesterday I saw a wretched, white-faced woman carrying a huge bundle; she was waiting at the crossing where Winters had pulled up almost at the curb to avoid a tangle

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

TWO MARVELOUS IMPROVEMENTS make the EDISON PHONOGRAPH Perfect.

The New Moulded Record "Hard Wax," and the New Reproducers

duplicate the human voice in volume and clearness. Absolutely free from scratching—perfectly smooth and natural. A new result from your old phonograph.

New Reproducers on all new phonographs. Nine styles from $10.00 to $100.00. The new Records, 50 cts., $5 per dozen. Full particulars at all dealers.

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH CO.
New York Office, 135 Fifth Avenue
Chicago Office, 144 Wabash Avenue
Foreign Dept., 15 Cedar Street, New York

YOU CAN PLAY THEM WITHOUT LEARNING

CHURCH BAND OF PATERSON, N. J.

The Wonderful Zobo

For Entertainments and Parties

The most extraordinary musical instrument ever produced; so constructed that the human voice comes out so wonderfully as to make it melodious beyond all comprehension. It seems impossible for it to accomplish so much. It gives you the vocal power of pianos, yet its music may be softened to the cooing of a dove or the thrilling song of the nightingale. Money and music making feature for church choirs and other concerts. You can organize a brass band for public appearance with 30 minutes' practice.

Sing into mouthpiece—Zobo does the rest.

25c. Special Offer.—To introduce the wonderful ZOBO we will send one carefully packed, together with our handsomely illustrated catalogue, prepaid, for 25c. Warranted just as represented or money cheerfully refunded. Agents Wanted.

STRAUSS MFG. CO.
142-146 W. 14th Street, Department 19, NEW YORK

Music Learning at Home

SPECIAL OFFER We want some one in your locality to know about our school: as pupils make our best advertisements we want at least one in every locality. We know that if you are satisfied, our efforts will not have been in vain. As a special inducement, for $1.00, (your only expense) which will not cover cost of material, wrapping and postage, we will give a 10 weeks' course (any grade), for Piano, Organ, Banjo, Guitar, Violin or Mandolin. As this offer is solely for advertising purposes, the instruction will be special and our best efforts will be given. All we will expect of you after taking the Course is to tell your friends exactly what you think. Our fifth year of greatest success. In accepting this offer, state whether a beginner or advanced pupil. You need know anything about music to enroll and we will teach you to play any of these instruments. Address:

U. S. CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC
Dept. 9 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

Gems of Song

for the Sunday School.

288 Pages, Full Bound in Cloth.

Over 200 Popular Hymn and Tune Writers Represented.

$25.00 per 100. Sample Copy, post free, 20 cents.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

FREE MUSIC DICTIONARY

Fortunes have been made from a single song. We positively teach you by correspondence to compose and play all kinds of music. Our method never excelled in beauty, simplicity and ease of mastery. School endorsed equally by professional and amateur musicians. Send names of three friends interested in music and receive free a Dictionary of Musical Terms, and particulars. AGENTS WANTED.

Chicago Correspondence School of Music
102 La Salle Street, Chicago

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 270

of cars and trucks. I could have touched the poor creature with my hand as I sat here. I'll tell you what I did, though I know it was very foolish, but I just couldn't help it; I took off my violets and gave them to her. I suppose a five-dollar bill would have been more to the purpose, but I think I couldn't have offered her money."

The young man's sensitive face flushed. "I think it was a beautiful thing to do," he said, bending toward her. "It is love that they want—love and sympathy. If you—" He stopped short, becoming suddenly conscious of the interested eyes of Miss Livingstone's mother, who sat opposite. Just what those watchful eyes conveyed in the lightning flash of a guarded glance he could not have told, but it sufficed to check the impulsive words that lingered on his lips.

Margaret Livingstone both saw and understood. She shrugged her white shoulders with a little thrill of displeasure. "I saw the outside of one of your wonderful new tenements yesterday," she said, after a pause. "I am going to ask you to take me over the place some day. I am something of an architect myself, you know."

"No I did not know; tell me about it." "All the girls in our particular coterie selected a profession one day last winter—we don't mean to be frivolous. Maude Ascott is a lace-maker, she has learned to do exquisite work; Sadie Merrill, over here, is at the head of our sewing guild; he knows how to cut and fit aprons and kirts as well as a seamstress. I hate to sew and that, so—don't laugh, please; papa and Robert aren't done making sport of me yet—I said I would be an architect. I have found it perfectly fascinating. I am going to build a cottage at Long Point this summer. Of course, I don't expect that any one will ever trust me with anything important; but I can play at being useful."

The shade of sadness in the exquisitely modulated tones of the speaker was not lost on the impressionable young man at her side. "I want you to see my tenements," he said eagerly; "you will perhaps be able to suggest something that hasn't been thought of for the comfort of the women and children."

"But this—this building of yours—is nearly finished, is it not?" asked Miss Livingstone nonchalantly. "That is the way with you men, you pretend to ask our advice, then for such excellent reasons you are unable to follow it."

"But I am going to build others," he said quickly; "this is only the beginning of my work. I assure you that any good suggestions will be eagerly accepted."

An inscrutable expression, half satisfaction, half vexation, dawned in the listener's gray eyes. "Thank you," she said simply.

She was wondering if she really wished to attempt the management of this very singular young man. He was undeniably handsome, of a courtly manner, and enormously rich. Yes, there could be no possible doubt on that most important point. But—

Immanuel misunderstanding her silence made haste to add, "If you will tell me what day you would like to see the building, I will arrange the matter to suit you."

"Thank you very much," said Miss Livingstone sweetly. "I shall be sure to remind you of your promise."

When the first warm days of early summer brought about the accustomed exodus of fashionable society from the city, young Rossi found himself thinking one day with singular intensity of the empty house in the back hill-road. As he stared absently out of the window at the sombre front of the brownstone dwelling opposite, his inner vision opened to the prospect of the wide blue valley, of the still purity of the lonely pine woods, of the lush and sparkle of the untiring spring by the old red barn. Bird voices—the far earning cry of the meadow-lark, the delicious gurgle of the blue-bird, the ecstatic song of fitting bobolinks sounded in his dreaming ears.

"The wild roses will just be coming into bloom," he told himself; "and the bees will need somebody to hive the new swarms." A homesick longing for a sight of the kind wise face of his guardian, framed in its picturesque tangle of hair and beard, came strongly upon him. With the longing blended a sudden doubt of his present course. He remembered with shame that of late he had failed to keep the old-time tryst with his invisible Master. He had often slept late after an evening with his new-found friends; there was need of haste in these shortened mornings. So many letters, so many men, with "important business" written all over their unsmiling faces, awaited him. How could one find a "silent hour" in the midst of unending tumult? he asked himself with an impatient shake of his broad shoulders. "I will get away from it all," he decided; "and see if I can get my bearings a little more clearly. Bronson can look after things in town for a time." He arose with a sigh of relief and was on the point of announcing his intention to his secretary, who was busy in an adjoining room, when Mr. Robert Livingstone was announced.

"A beastly warm, muggy morning," drawled that young gentleman, wiping his heated brow. "This heat and humidity combine is something insupportable, isn't it? I say, you aren't looking very fit, my dear young friend, and that leads me quite naturally, as old Simpkins would put it, to the second point in my discourse. Sis and the mater have departed for Newport this morning, and your humble servant sets sail on the Gull at tide-water this afternoon. You are going with me. Not a word to the contrary, if you please. Your beloved tenants must be pretty well settled by this time, after all the concessions you've made, and I perceive that your philanthropic nag needs a cool stable and a rest, if you don't want him to drop in his tracks before he has crossed the line. Come, it's too hot for eloquence; you'll have to turn the hose on me if I get much more fervid in my hospitality!"

"I am going up to the country for a while," said young Rossi, with unsmiling gravity.

"What country?" "Up north," replied the other evasively, as he studied the toe of his boot. "I have a little place up there; a farm, I thought—"

"Good gracious! man, don't tell me that you're going into fancy farming on top of all the rest!" groaned Livingstone, comic despair pictured on his round, good-natured face; "we'll have you in the poorhouse yet, see if we don't. By the way, sis entrusted me with a communication for your hand; I had nearly forgotten it, just as she predicted."

Immanuel's face flushed eagerly as he opened the envelope with a muttered apology, whereat his observant visitor hid a smile in the depths of his pocket-handkerchief.

The words of the communication were brief but cogent. "Dear Mr. Rossi (he read), I have just heard of the most wonderful idea for a tenement block. You have doubtless heard of Sir Joseph Barron, the distinguished architect who planned the famous Victoria Square in Liverpool. He is stopping at a neighbor's for a few days. I hope you will let Robert persuade you to join him this afternoon, that you may have an opportunity of meeting Sir Joseph, and listening to his most interesting plans, which I unfortunately am too stupid to fully appreciate. Mother joins with me in the hope that you will come. Sincerely, Margaret Livingstone."

"Well," said Robert Livingstone, lazily; "did the enclosed contain a clincher?"

"I will go with you," cried young Rossi, with an enthusiasm which caused the other to wonder at his simplicity.

TO BE CONTINUED

Read the New Testament 24 Times
My husband has read through the New Testament twenty-four times. The Bible is his daily companion.
Mrs. H. S. Cox,
Gibson, N. C.

BURPEE'S SEEDS

NEVER BEFORE have we introduced such SUPERB NOVELTIES of unusual merit. Six choicest Vegetables and five finest Flowers are shown painted from nature, others illustrated from photographs and all honestly described in BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1902. This "leading American Seed Catalogue" is mailed FREE to all who intend to buy. Write to-day, a postal card will do.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Seed Growers, PHILADELPHIA.

BOYS Names Wanted

THE STAR MONTHLY wants names and addresses of bright boys between 12 and 20 years of age. We want to get them interested in our 12 page illustrated magazine of boys stories, which has a circulation of 100,000 copies monthly, although only eight years old. It contains fine stories and handsome illustrations as well as contests for the Amateur Photographer, the Collector of Stamps, Coins and Curies, a Puzzle Department, an Educational Contest, and each month awards a number of valuable prizes to subscribers. The subscription price is fifty cents, but if you will send us five boys' names and addresses plainly written and FIVE 2 cent stamps, or 10 CENTS in silver, we will enter you as a subscriber fully paid for six months in advance. Address.

The STAR MONTHLY.
Oak Park, Illinois.

27 Slightly Damaged Sets to be sold at less than cost

A few weeks ago we announced to CHRISTIAN HERALD readers a sale of slightly damaged sets of the "World's Best Music," which were left in stock after our heavy holiday trade. We reserved 74 of these sets for readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Forty-seven of the reserved sets have been sold, and we still have on hand 27 sets which will be offered—as long as they last—at less than cost prices, in order to close them out. For all practical purposes these sets are as good as new. Here and there a leaf is slightly soiled or a binding a little rubbed, but there are no torn pages. The coupon printed below will bring you a set for examination. You do not buy until you see the books. Every lover of music will appreciate this opportunity of obtaining the world's greatest collection of music at less than cost.

Size of Volumes, 9 x 12 Inches

Library of the World's Best Music

New Enlarged Edition of 8 Volumes: 4 Vocal, 4 Instrumental

The work contains 300 instrumental selections by the greatest composers; melodious, not too difficult, including popular and operatic melodies, dances, funeral marches, and classic and romantic piano music. There are 350 best old and new songs, duets, trios, and quartets. The volumes are richly illustrated with 400 portraits, many of them being handsome chromatic art plates printed in many colors. The work contains 500 biographies of musicians, and more than 100 new and copyrighted selections by American composers. It is the most complete collection of music in existence.

2,200 Pages of Sheet Music

The volumes are crowded with the best selections for every occasion. There are 2,200 pages of sheet music, which would cost, if purchased one piece at a time, more than $200.00. The volumes are nearly sheet music size, and are specially bound so as to open flat at the piano and remain open. In number of pages of sheet music size, number of biographies, and in number of illustrations, this Musical Library leads all others. In the preparation of the work 20 editors and special contributors have assisted. It has been endorsed by music-loving people in every English-speaking country. 400 composers are represented, including such world-famous names as Paderewski, Balfe, Liszt, Wagner, Mozart, Gounod, Beethoven, De Koven, Strauss, Sullivan, and Handel. There are eight volumes in the set, handsomely bound in half-leather or cloth. Size of volumes, 9 x 12 inches—nearly sheet music size.

Every Home in Which There is a Piano should possess this splendid Musical Library. As long as the slightly marred sets last they will be sold to CHRISTIAN HERALD readers at $18.00 for sets in half-leather-binding, and $15.00 for cloth binding, and you may pay in small payments of $1.00 a month. The amount saved by securing one of the remaining sets is shown by the fact that the "World's Best Music" sells regularly for $48 and $36, and the price of sets sold on the low-price Club plan are $25 and $21. As very few sets are left we advise you to order promptly to avoid possible disappointment. The coupon will bring you a set for examination. We feel confident that you will keep the set after you have examined it and compared it with other collections of music. If, owing to any cause, it is not entirely satisfactory, you may return it to us at our expense.

The University Society
78 Fifth Avenue
New York

Signed

Address

C.H. 8-26.

In ordering cloth, change 17 mo. to 14 mo.

The University Society

78 Fifth Avenue, New York

Please send me approval, prepaid, a slightly damaged set of "The World's Best Music" (reserved for CHRISTIAN HERALD readers) in half-leather. If satisfactory, I agree to pay $1 within 5 days and $1 per month thereafter for 14 months. If not satisfactory, I agree to return it within 5 days.

RICH'S FAMOUS JULIA MARLOWE SHOES
 AN ADVERTISING SPECIALTY
 1902

WITHOUT ELASTIC INSTEP WITH ELASTIC INSTEP

With or Without Elastic Instep

The "Julia Marlowe" stamped name on shoes is a recognized guarantee for Absolutely Correct Ladies' Footwear

It is therefore now applied to all of the various styles of high grade Boots and Oxfords made at this factory, instead of designating the "front gore" shoes only as was done heretofore.

In ordering state whether with or without elastic instep.

Look for hot tom stamp and take no substitute.

Lace Boots, flexible machine sewed, $3.00
Lace Boots, hand turned, 3.50
Lace Boots, extension sole $3.50 and 4.00
Oxfords, $2.00; $2.50; $2.75

If "Julia Marlowe" shoes are not sold in your town, we will send, prepaid, on receipt of price and 25 cents.

Write for Illustrated Catalogue

THE RICH SHOE CO.
 Dept. E, Milwaukee, Wis.

M. PHILIPSBORN'S
 SPRING AND SUMMER
 Fashion Catalog No. 244.

A Postal Brings it FREE.

Showing all the the new styles of Tailor-Made Suits, Jackets, Raglans, Silk Waists, Silk Skirts, Wash Waists, Wash Skirts, etc.

This Ladies' BLOUSE SUIT of Black, Blue, Castor or Brown All-Wool Venetian. Jacket daintily trimmed with silk stitched taffeta bands, back and front; small pin tucks silk stitched taffeta reverses and velvet collar lined with taffeta silk. Skirt trimmed to match jacket in Serpentine Flounce effect. Lined with Percaleine.

Mention bust measure waist measure and length of skirt in front.

This stylish man-tailored suit is really worth $20.00, and is offered for $10.00 as a sample of OUR BARGAIN GIVING.

$10 Worth $20.00

SAMPLES OF MATERIAL on REQUEST

America's Largest Mail Order and Retail Cloak House.

Write To-day.

M. PHILIPSBORN,
 138-144 State St., CHICAGO.

Ladies' Shirt Waist Materials

You and your maid. Cannot wear the same patterns in shirt waists if you buy the goods from my stock of "Exclusive" Patterns. Imported Shirtings, the critical trade with—TOM

Ladies interested in getting high class material for shirt waists will appreciate our goods. We handle the best imported wash fabrics designed and made expressly for wash shirt waists. For 4c. postage we send sample pieces of 200 patterns of best Scotch and English Madras, French Penangs and Madapolams, finest qualities Scotch Mercerized chevrons (better than silk for waists) and English Wash Silks, at from 40c. to $1.50 per yard, charges prepaid. Write at once for the line; don't delay. The best patterns are sold first. Liberal discount to ladies soliciting orders from their friends. We allow a discount also on club orders for 25 yards or more, any assortment of patterns. Our illustrated booklet, "Correct Dress for Men," sent free.

TOM MURRAY & CORBY, 253 Clark Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

We Carpet Your Floor for $3

To introduce our new, serviceable and healthful BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides, and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to outwear higher priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any post office east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual colors sent free.

SANITARY MFG. CO., No. 51 BOURSE BUILDING PHILADELPHIA, PA.
 No household can afford to pass this offer.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Rim Strainer, fits any pan. Agents make $3 to $5 dollars per day. Large catalogue new goods free. RICHARDSON MFG. CO. Dept. 6, BATH, N.Y.

EASTER SUNSHINE

A GLEAM FROM CORDOBA, MEX. AN ALBANY, N. Y. SUNBEAM A MEXICAN SUNSHINER

GREAT preparations have been made by Sunshine members of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Branch for Easter. Certain Branches will see that the sick are remembered with bouquets of flowers. Others will carry fruit to the Homes for the Aged. One member in Albany, known as the Roosevelt Sunbeam, has promised a greeting of both flowers and fruit to every aged person who lives in her neighborhood. Pretty picture-cards of flowers will be sent to hundreds of little children who live isolated lives and who can get their greetings only through the post-office. One member has sent a barrel of books and cards to be distributed in a little industrial school where the children, who have few of the joys of life, expect no Easter remembrance.

Bright-colored flowers, as well as white, will be used in the Easter bouquets. The golden color of the daisy's heart will be popular, for, as the children say, "Yellow signifies sunshine," and they want all they can get of it. Potted plants will be carried into many hundred homes by our little Sunshiners this year, and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD asks that anyone wishing to pass on cut flowers, potted plants, or seeds, will please notify Miss Ella Klein, President of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Branch. Every such gift can be placed immediately.

One Way to Spread Sunshine

Miss Idell Hubbard, who is Secretary of the Sherbrooke Sunshine Branch in Canada, writes that they made candy one day, and the storekeepers allowed them to exhibit it in the store windows. They sold thirteen boxes the first day, and the money was turned in for Sunshine use in the Branch. These little suggestions are all so helpful, and form good ideas to pass on to the other Branches.

The Rev. S. Foster Grady, of 231 Bellevue avenue, Trenton, N. J., has charge of the Sunshine Free Library of Trenton, and he will be most grateful for donations of all kinds of bound books.

The Twentieth Century Sunshine Society of Philadelphia has done true sunshine work during the one year of its existence. It has passed on hundreds of articles of clothing and various missions, hospitals and homes have been supplied with reading matter. Games and toys have been given to all the children in these institutions, and entertainments have been provided. Flowers, fruits and delicacies have been freely sent to the sick.

A Sunshine Branch in Minneapolis, Minn., supports a "Sunshine Bed." Sunshine is growing in Nebraska, new members are being enrolled every day. Mr. John Neary, of North Platte, as dues, offers the use of his store for the distribution of sunshine packages. As this town is centrally located, this will enable sunshiners in a large number of neighboring towns to spread their good cheer more freely. The State President of Nebraska, Mrs. Anna E. Moore, pays dues by taking into her home a little girl, caring for her and giving her instruction in music. Mrs. L. R. Scroggs, Occidental Hotel, Seattle, Wash., President of a Division of Alaska, would be pleased to receive donations of books, to send to the people who have been shut-in in that desolate country. Mrs. Scroggs has started libraries at Teller City and at Nome City.

An Appreciative Bible Class

As members of a Bible Class for elderly women, we presented your beautiful and unique Red Letter Bible as a Christmas gift to our instructor, a gentleman of education and culture. He has told us since that he had never read so much of the Bible in such a short time before. It is an incentive to study interestingly. Your beautiful Art Portfolio was distributed among the class, who wish to thank you very much for every picture. Our teacher selected the sheep for himself.

M. L. YOUNG.
 New York City.

Needy Little Ones Helped

Mrs. Almira S. Steele, Founder and Manager of the Steele Home for Needy Children, Chattanooga, Tenn., in acknowledging receipt, through this journal, of a gift of $10 from a reader, who desires to remain unknown, writes: "How very kind of you to remember me in your distribution." She encloses an article from a local Tennessee paper, in which she describes the work of the Home: 860 inmates have been cared for, 97 are married, 27 are teachers, 1 is an evangelist, and many others are out in the world supporting themselves at respectable callings. She has at present 141 children, for less than one-third of whom she receives from the county authorities 91 cents per week each; the others are all cared for at her own expense. She has applied all her own means toward the support of the work for many years. Mrs. Steele has never solicited aid for the Home, but donations are occasionally made voluntarily by friends who know of her work. The Home has been a great blessing to many who would have otherwise been left, untrained and totally unprovided for, to the mercy of the world.

SPRAYING FRUIT TREES

The question of spraying fruit trees to prevent the depredation of insect pests and fungus diseases is no longer an experiment but a necessity.

The readers will do well to write Wm. Stahl, Quincy, Ill., and get his catalogue describing twenty-one styles of Spraying Outfits and full treatise on spraying the different fruit and vegetable crops, which contain much valuable information, and may be had for the asking.

Invalid Chairs

Built by ourselves—every inch of them. Strong. A shaky chair may be safe, but it doesn't feel so. That does harm.

If your dealer won't sell you ours, we will. Freight paid anywhere in the United States. Write for book.

PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY
 8th and Spring Garden, Philadelphia

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation: produces any shade by simple combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars.
 Dept. E. KARL GERSTNER, 83-4th Avenue, New York.

Do You Wear Good Clothes?

That's the kind we make—don't know how to make any other. WE'RE TAILORS you know—it's our BUSINESS.

Your measure can be taken at home by any member of the family. We tell you how to do it. Impossible to make a mistake.

WE GUARANTEE TO FIT YOU. DON'T WANT YOUR MONEY IF YOU'RE NOT THOROUGHLY SATISFIED.

We are tailors to the consumer exclusively. Our immense business lessens cost of production, enabling us to make suits for about one-half what your home tailor would charge.

$10 to $25

Write for "Our Silent Salesman," containing 78 Samples, Fashion Plate, instructions for self-measurement and tape. It's FREE.

HOME BUYER'S TAILORING COMPANY,
 53 Ryerson Building, Chicago, Ill.

GRAVES' TOOTH POWDER

Antiseptic and beautifying. Sweetens the breath. Purifies the mouth. Whitens and cleans the teeth. Hardens soft and bleeding gums. An aid to good health. A standard dentifrice. Endorsed by dentists. At druggists, 25c.

Graves' Tooth Powder Co., Chicago, Ill.

POZZONI'S COMPLEXION POWDER

Beautifies Without Injury.

Made of purest materials. Contains no lead, arsenic, lime or anything else poisonous or injurious. The wooden box preserves the delicate perfume. Sold everywhere.

Full Size Box Sent on Receipt of 50c.
 J. A. Pozzoni Co., Chicago, Ill.

FACTORY SALE OF LACE CURTAINS

Save dealer's profits by ordering direct from the manufacturers. Handsome new catalog contains engraving ninety-six patterns. All grades: Nottingham, Renaissance, Brussels, Le Point, Cable Net, etc., enabling you select at home from a variety found only great metropolitan stores. We will send yours anywhere on approval without a cent in advance. Examine them at home, as found, just as represented. Then send us price. Write today for 1902 catalogue pamphlet, "The Care of Lace Curtains," and M. M. FLETCHER COMPANY, 72 Madison St., Chicago.

The handsome Renaissance Pattern, full size curtain here shown, per pair, press prepaid, only $1.40

LORDS PRAYER

SMALLEST EVER COINED.

To introduce our novelties we will send a Rolled Gold Bangle Ring warranted 3 years, with Lords Prayer in base relief or any initial engraved free. Send size and 10c for mailing, &c.

Vokes Jewelry Co., 202 Western Av. Covington, La.

IF YOU WANT TO EARN MONEY

Man, woman, or youth (either sex) write for plan of attractive employment. Mention this paper.

ROYAL CEYLON COFFEE CO., Alexandria, Va.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE 19th CENTURY.

By Mary Lowe Dickinson

VICTORIA • QUEENLY WOMAN, WOMANLY QUEEN

IF we really desire to become acquainted with great men or women, we do not care to be told their abstract qualities in general or abstract terms. We do not need to inquire their views concerning all the finite and infinite problems of the universe. It is interesting to know the influences that touched their hearts and the experiences that formed their minds, but, if we stood face to face with great hearts and minds, we should know and feel their greatness without tracing all the moral and mental processes by which it was evolved.

Our great writers and preachers often talk about "bringing truths home" to us. Just that is what we want to do in this series with our famous women—to kind that we love in our households. Whenever a new grandchild came she wore its picture in brooch or bracelet, and kept the last baby face near her till the next one came. In her private rooms photographs of the family, even down to the great-grandchildren, filled many a vacant nook; and the broken toys, and even the soiled rag dolls, dear to the heart of childhood, found a place. She loved the old things herself, and clung to them, as any old house-mother clings to her "things." In her private rooms everything had been chosen by the beloved Prince Albert, whom she never ceased to mourn. If in the lapse of years anything had to be replaced, it must be made, if possible, exactly as it was before. How many a dear old woman, who cannot bear to part with the plain belongings of her

VICTORIA'S KINDNESS TO HER COTTAGERS

"bring them home" to our readers: We want to take them on a visit to even the simplest little home in which THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is already a welcome guest, and to show how simple and sweet they can be in their greatness—for true greatness is simplicity itself.

In one little visit, even if our guest made us so comfortable and at ease that we could freely ask her questions, we could not hope to learn about her all that we would like to know. But when she went away, if we knew we could read all that had not been told, would there not come after hours, around the evening lamp, when, with books and chat, we should come to know her better? If such a result as that could follow the introduction into tens of thousands of homes of ten noble women, ours would be a task worthy the best that heart and pen could give, for every household would receive and cultivate their guest as a new friend, whose courage and endurance should cheer the aged, whose achievements should stimulate and inspire the young.

In the hope that she may seem a friend whom thus we may learn to know better, I bring you one who has not been gone long enough to be forgotten—Victoria, rightly called the Queenly Woman and the Womanly Queen.

The story of all the national events that marked her lengthened reign, all the gorgeous ceremonies, the stately pageants, the governmental responsibilities—we will leave for the after reading of the evening hours. It is the queenly woman whom we want to bring home to you today—queenly in just the way that any woman can be queenly, in her self-sacrifice and tender care-taking and unflinching love. You remember the pictures of her aged face. One might not see the empress in it, but no one could look long and not see there the dear old grandmother, just the early life, will understand just how this aged sovereign felt.

Not only to her own family was she a good grandmother, but everywhere that she came in touch with children she loved them, and they were dear to her. In the years at Balmoral, her Scottish home, hardly a peasant's family that has not one child bearing a royal name. In all her private homes she tried to cling to the old-time family life. She loved the birchwood fire, the waxen candles, and yielded very late and reluctant consent to the use of coal and gas. Wherever she might be, she expected and received daily reports from Parliament; but she also expected each child and grandchild to send her a daily message, opening all family mail herself, and answering many of the letters with her own hand. Nor was all this love and care for childhood simply an outlet for the weakness of old age. The lovely grandmother was only the natural development of the ideal mother. It is said that she never ceased to study the different temperaments of her nine children, adapting instruction and guidance to the peculiar need of each. They all wore the same christening robes, and, as in poorer families, the best gowns when outgrown were passed on to the next.

At Osborne, the boys had their carpenter shop, and nothing delighted them more than to fashion some gift for their mother, unless it was the pleasure of having her come and look on as they worked or having a visit from her in the Swiss chalet, where her boys and girls together learned to do domestic work by really "keeping house." She shared their games, she dressed their Christmas trees with her own hands, she prayed for them and with them. She wrote that it was one of the trials of her life that she could not be free to put her own children to bed. One of

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Some watchmakers
harp on Railroad Watches.
More than twenty

Elgin Watches

have been sold for every mile of railway trackage in the world. Sold by every jeweler in the land; guaranteed by the world's greatest watch works.

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO.
ELGIN, ILLINOIS.

John Wanamaker

One dollar is all!

A single Dollar (if you act at once) is all it will cost you to secure possession of RIDPATH'S History of the World. A great big set of 9 Royal Octavo volumes with 4000 illustrations, and many maps and color plates. The rest you pay in monthly payments of $2 each.

Your Last Chance!

IF you'd like to own the best World's History in existence,—a history that's as interesting as a story-book and almost as reliable as the law of gravitation,—send for the free prospectus and specimen-page book to-day, using the coupon in the corner.

We've a pamphlet, prepared by the publishers of the history, which tells just what the work is, how it came to be written, and the sort of readers it aims to entertain and interest. This pamphlet also contains specimens of the illustrations and text pages, and if you're interested, and mail us the coupon, we'll send it to you free of cost.

Reading that pamphlet will settle in your mind, once for all, whether you need the history or not; and you'd best settle it now, for this is our last advertisement of Ridpath's History at HALF PRICE.

John Wanamaker
PHILADELPHIA NEW YORK

CUT ALONG THIS LINE

Without cost to me, please send me the RIDPATH'S History of the World, 9 volumes, with 4000 illustrations, and many maps and color plates. Text pages, and information as to how to obtain the history on the installment plan. I will send no money now, but will pay for it as I receive the books.

Name _____
Address _____

KNOX'S GELATINE

IS NOT THE KIND OUR GRANDMOTHERS USED

Knox's Gelatine (spelled K-N-O-X) has upset old gelatine beliefs by its convenience and purity. Used almost exclusively by the present generation who want pure food. It is up-to-date.

Free my book, "Dainty Desserts for Dainty People" for your grocer's name. Or instead send a 2c. stamp. For 5c. in stamps, the book and full pint sample. For 15c. the book and full two-quart package (two for 25c.). Pink color for fancy desserts in every large package. A package of Knox's Gelatine will make two quarts—a half gallon—of jelly.

CHAS. B. KNOX,
55 Knox Avenue, Johnstown, N. Y.

Bailey's Rubber Massage Roller.

Makes, Keeps and Restores beauty in Nature's own way.

THE cup-shaped teeth have a suction effect on the skin that smooths out wrinkles, rounds out the beauty muscles, and gives perfect circulation of the blood.

It is so constructed that it treats every portion of the face and neck perfectly, even to the "crow's feet" in the corners of the eyes. A jar of skin food GIVEN with every roller.

For sale by all dealers, or mailed upon receipt of price, 50c. Rubber Catalogue Free. Agents Wanted

C. J. BAILEY & CO.,
22 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

Beautiful Mantels

Nothing adds more to the beauty of your home. We have many styles to show.

Very Latest Designs

Rich effects in hardwood and tile. Woods selected for their

RARE BEAUTY OF GRAIN

We sell direct from factory at factory prices. Freight paid to your home.

Write for handsomely illustrated booklet telling how best mantels are made and giving instructions for properly setting mantels, tiles and grates.

WHITE MANTEL AND TILE CO.
618 Gay St.,
Knoxville, Tenn.

Curtains Sold Direct from Mill are the best expensive. We offer a practically unlimited stock of beautiful patterns and this pattern, 54 inches wide and 52 1/2 yards long, sold at 25c. per yard.

Handsome 1902 style, made of fine, strong material, of every variety in Brussels, Aubergin, Louis XV and Marie Antoinette effects, and also Roll-up Curtains from 75c. to $5.50 per pair. We prepare all charges.

The High Point Manufacturing Co.
33 C Union Square, New York City

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write The Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE 19th CENTURY

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

the family said, "It was mamma who always taught us our catechism." If any mother would read a model birthday letter, let her take Victoria's tender epistle to the Prince of Wales on his eighteenth birthday.

It would not be fair to leave this life, as if its only crown were this transcendent one of motherhood. In human judgment, she was a perfect mother. In human judgment, she was even more than a perfect wife. With the coming into her life of her young cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, love came also. Hers was a radiant and flower-strewn road, swiftly traversed, to the time of the declaration of her intention of marriage, which, by royal custom, she must make herself, as also the announcement to her Council. After the former, she wrote to King Leopold, her uncle: "Albert seems perfection. I love him more than I can say." Of the second, she says in her diary: "I felt my hand shake as I read my short announcement, but I did not make one mistake." Then the flower-strewn path wound on to the beautiful wedding day. When the Archbishop of Canterbury suggested that the word "obey" be omitted from the ritual, Her Majesty said: "I wish to be married as a woman, not as a queen." And when, after twenty years of happy married life, she sat by the bedside of the dying Prince, while they sang the "Rock of Ages," he kept murmuring over and over, not any royal name, but "My wife, my little wife!"

In the mausoleum built at Frogmore in the beautiful "Garden of Silence," beside the sculptured form of the beloved Prince, was left an empty marble slab. After years of waiting, years full of the best service she could render, the marble slab was lifted, and amid the homage and sorrow of all nations, the queenly woman was laid beside her own.

For those who feel drawn to study other phases of this wonderful life we append a list of the chief events of her reign. Among them may be found not only topics for the family group after the lamps are lighted, but for circle, or club, for groups of the King's Daughters, the Christian Endeavor, or the Epworth League:

PERSONAL

1. Childhood of Victoria.
2. Coronation of Victoria.
3. Life at Balmoral, Osborne, Windsor.
4. Literary work of Victoria.

PROMINENT EVENTS

1845. Repeal of the Corn Laws.
1847. Irish famine and emigration to the United States.
1848. The Chartist agitation.
- 1853-55. The Crimean War.
- 1857-58. The Indian Mutiny.
1859. The assumption of the direct government of India.
- 1861-65. 1. The "cotton famine," and (2). The delicate relations with the American belligerents.
- 1866-72. 1. The reform bill. 2. The confederation of British North America. 3. The disestablishment of the Irish Church. 4. The abolition of religious tests at the universities. The system of purchase in the army. The Alabama claims treaty.
1876. Assumption of the title of Empress of India.
- 1876-82. 1. The wars in Abyssinia, Ashantee, Egypt and Soudan. 2. Rapid progress of the Australasian colonies. 3. Prolonged agitation for Home Rule in Ireland.
- 1899-1900. War in South Africa and the troubles in the Far East.

WITH JESUS

LEAN on Jesus, he will rest you
In the weariness of life;
Lean on his great heart, so tender,
As you faint amid earth's strife.

Work for Jesus, he will bless you,
Open for you in the way
Wider doors which you may enter
In his service day by day.

Live for Jesus, and your spirits
Shall mount up on eagle's wing;
You shall run and never weary,
With him walk, with glad heart sing.

Berlin, Mass. PHEBE A. HOLDER.

The Strenuous Life

is productive of the progressive man. The needs of the progressive man require a progressive and protective Life Insurance policy. The contracts of The Prudential are the embodiment of all that the words progress and protection imply.

The Prudential

Insurance Company of America

JOHN F. DRYDEN, HOME OFFICE, PRESIDENT. NEWARK, N. J.

Fill out this slip and send to us.

Without committing myself to any action, I shall be glad to receive, free, particulars and rates of Policies.

For $..... Age.....

Name

Address

Occupation.....

DEPT. 70

Spring House Cleaning

Is the time to substitute things up-to-date for things worn out. Begin at the kitchen, establish a step-saving system by using a

"Hoosier" Cabinet No. 15

It is compact and convenient. Holds at your fingers' ends everything used to prepare a meal. Gives time and strength for reading, sewing, etc. Write for catalog, free. Shows many other cabinets, sewing tables, etc., $5.50 and up.

This trade mark is on every Cabinet. Don't buy until you see our Catalogue or a real Hoosier Cabinet. The Hoosier Mfg. Co., 26 Adams St., New Castle, Ind.

2 MILLION

Ingersoll Watches

were sold last year because they were guaranteed to be accurate timekeepers

EVERY

INGERSOLL Dollar Watch

is guaranteed to keep good time for one year—it runs ten years with good treatment—A handsome, accurate timepiece for the price of ordinary repairs

For sale by 25,000 dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price

Our book tells about this and all our other watches. Send for it—it's free. Address Dept. (61)

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO.
67 Cortlandt Street, N. Y.

is sound, restful sleep—the kind that means good health and sweet temper. A good mattress is the first requisite to such sleep. Our handsome booklet,

"Ezybeds of Kapok" tells about the softest, most comfortable, springy and sanitary mattress made—the "Ezybed" Kapok Resilient Mattress, which we sell on 60 nights' trial, express prepaid, and guarantee to be absolutely odorless, non-absorbent and vermin proof. Booklet also illustrates and suggests arrangements of window seats, cozy corners, etc., which can be beautified by Kapok Cushions. Send for Free Booklet.

The Bohnert-Brunsmann Co.,
DEPT. C, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Close Examination

OF DIXON'S AMERICAN GRAPHITE PENCILS.

reveals the fact that only the finest materials and workmanship enter into their construction. That is why they always give satisfaction. Try them.

When not at dealers, mention this publication and send 16 cents for samples worth double. JOSEPH DIXON CRUCIBLE CO. Jersey City, N. J.

A Train That Took Its Own Photograph.

A large, handsome engraving, 18x28 inches, has been made of "The Burlington's Number One" while going at 60 miles an hour between Chicago and Denver. It is the best picture of a train in motion ever taken, and "the train took the picture itself." This is explained in a folder which will be sent free on application. Price of large engraving 20 cents. Postage stamps will do. Address P. S. Eustis, General Passenger Agent, C. B. & Q. Railway, 209 Adams Street, Chicago.

New, Profitable Work for intelligent men and women, part of all your time. RARE OPPORTUNITY. N. Y. O. CO., 178 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

A CUBAN DOLL SOCIAL

WHY so many live hens were carried into the little Cuban town of Jaruco, three or four days before Easter, was a problem. They came every way, across horses' backs and under people's arms. These hens were promptly put to "sit" in boxes, and stuffed with as many bits of meat and as much cornmeal, seasoned with red pepper, as they could accommodate. The problem might, however, have been solved by Senora Lutgardia; for had she not, sitting peacefully in the patio of the El Faro Mission House, overheard the small Angelita holding forth to a dozen or more little girls gathered in the mission parlor to play with the wonderful dolls sent by kind friends in the States?

"You know," Angelita said, "Miss Woody told us Easter was a time to make joyful offerings because Christ had risen from the grave. We should do all the good we can, then, to people we love. Now, I propose we bring all the eggs we can get to the mission."

ANGELITA

"Where can we get eggs?" asked little Carlotta. "We have no hens."

"Get your father to get one from the country, can't you?" replied Angelita. So it was decided that each child bring as many eggs as possible, and Miss Woody was to be coaxed to let them dress the mission room all by themselves, and then they would ask the teachers in, and present the beautiful eggs. All pledged to secrecy, the little girls put the dolls to sleep, and went home, not noticing the presence of Senora Lutgardia as she sat behind the well and the tall coleus.

Saturday before Easter Sunday, busy little fingers twined long wreaths of the "Christmas Flower," and arranged bouquets of the pure white disks of the moonflower over every available picture, framed as they already were, in the bright red spines of the century plant that make the hedges along the road. A large dish of perfect Marechal Neil roses, with buds too heavy to be supported on the slender stems, glowed in golden sweetness amid their light green leaves, upon the centre table. These were brought by Mr. Paine from Madruga, the second mission station started by El Faro Christiano. Clusters of the exquisite coffee blossoms, with their drooping white flowers and dark green feathery foliage, hung round the windows.

All the children except little dark-eyed Anita were assembled. Because she came not, Angelita's fair face clouded.

"I want to sing some hymns and have a little prayer meeting," she said, "to sort of dedicate our Easter offering, you know, before the teachers come, but we can't go on without Anita. I wish she'd hurry."

It must be understood that one form of mission work at El Faro is the Children's Doll Social; a function which the dear little maids on this blessed occasion resolved into a prayer meeting under Angelita's guidance. Angelita, before the adult choir was formed, led much of the singing in the regular services of the mission. Since the choir's organization, she devoted her sweet voice to the children's societies.

Had she known how Anita ached to

CONCLUDED ON LAST COLUMN

Great Thoughts Grandly Spoken

Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed's Splendid Library of After-Dinner Speeches, Classic and Popular Lectures, Great Addresses, Stories, etc., in ten elegant volumes, superbly illustrated with fine photographs and color plates.

"IN these volumes the Honorable Thomas B. Reed has," as Secretary of State John Hay well says, "joined the same eminence as editor that he already enjoyed as orator." As the Editor-in-Chief, he has brought to the work the same keenness of vision, the same mastery of the English language, and the same mastery of the art of selection, as only he could, the assistance of men of international fame and splendid resources.

Besides the Editors and the Committee of Selection, a large number of collaborators were enlisted at home and abroad, in the task of interviewing great speakers and thinkers in person, and gaining access to unpublished and ordinarily inaccessible records. The process, therefore, of selection and labor, seemingly endless time, and expense, is concentrated in the history of book making, save perhaps in such monumental works as the Britannica and the Century Dictionary.

After-Dinner Speeches. (Vols. I, II, III)

These three volumes of the Library contain the most uniquely comprehensive collection of the thoughts and words of post-prandial orators ever published. About the Banquet-Board, no less than in the Forum, the great thoughts of the masters of the world have been given expression. By them parties and policies have often been made and unmade. By them also the diners, and later the world, have been given the inside view of gigantic enterprise, herculean effort, and sublime achievement. In periods, scintillant with wit, and made longer by stronger links in English and American unity. The silver-tongued Grady rent the curtain of sectional prejudice, and brought the Puritan and the Cavalier into a common, consensual brotherhood. In these pages living men speak living thoughts in a living language. We get at a banquet-board with a host of speakers the like of which the world has never seen. As Congressman Landis, of Indiana, says of these volumes: "We behold the galleries radiant with fair women. We hear the shouts, and the applause with laughter—then comes a pause—a shock—the lightning of wit, and the thunder of applause; men and women rise, Modern Eloquence transports us, and 'we are there.'"

Let a speech be reproduced as given, with all the introductory remarks. We hear the "applause," the "cheers," and the "laughter" of the guests.

Classic and Popular Lectures. (Vols. IV, V, VI)

The lecture platform has been the vantage ground from which masterful men have moved the thoughts of their time and prepared for posterity a better, a cleaner, a grander world to live in. In the three volumes of Modern Eloquence devoted to lectures, among other delights, we travel "Dark Continents" with Stanley, and listen spell-bound to Wendell Phillips teaching us to know the greatest of his race—"Toussaint L'Ouverture." We listen as General Gordon tells us that pathetic story, the "Last Days of the Conqueror," and speculate with George M. Searle, "Are the Planets Habitable?" We gather new ambitions and strength and purpose as Edward K. Bok gives us his "Keys to Success," or we take to heart the humanity of Robert Collyer's "Clear Gift." "Big Blunders," by Talmage, is in the great preacher's best vein. In an idle hour we recall with Major Pond "Memories of the Lyceum," and have a laugh with Robert Jones Burdett's "Rise and Fall of the Moustache." We glean the wisdom of our time that lies within these pages and hold fellowship with the orators of our mother tongue, without need of a dictionary. Many of the lectures have never before been put into type. Nearly all have the benefit of the author's revision.

"An Audience of 9,000,000"

There is a lecture in Volume V. which was attentively heard by 9,000,000 people. It was delivered by John B. Gough, and in his library after he died was found a book containing the names and addresses of 140,000 persons who, by the forcefulness of this lecture, had been induced to sign the pledge.

Great Addresses. (Vol. VII, VIII, IX)

These three volumes contain one of the most unique features of this most unique work. Phillips Brooks, the well-beloved, brings the Great Emancipator home to us in the "Character of Abraham Lincoln"; Henry Van Dyke's "Books, Literature and People," and Balfour's "The Pleasures of Reading," would alone be sufficient for the bookman, but there are a score or two just as good. The range of this work is the marvel of those who read it. For here we have Newell Dwight Hilditch's "The Pulpit in Modern Life"; while Cardinal Manning, with his fine, broad view, discusses the "Persecution of the Jews"; Blaine, in one of his greatest inspirations, gives his grand delineation of "Garfield, the Man and the Patriot," while a few pages further is found Choate's immortal epic, "On the Death of Daniel Webster." So on—and on—until we find we have named the major part that is conceded great and worthy in our national literature. Every address is complete.

Anecdote, Repartee, Reminiscence. (Vol. X)

Every means which ingenuity could devise, and splendid resources make possible, were exhausted to make this collection representative of the best in American anecdote, repartee and reminiscence. It is from exclusive sources to which only men in the positions of the Editor-in-Chief and his associates could have access. Here are the stories for the clergyman, statesman, diplomat, banker, business man, physician—in fact, for men in all callings and in every walk in life. This volume contains, also, a complete so that it is possible to refer instantly to any speaker, topic, time or place.

Analytical, Subject and Concordance Index

HON. THOMAS B. REED

Editor-in-Chief

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

HON. JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Member of English Parliament.

ROBERT JOHNSON, Author and Litterateur.

ALBERT ELLERY BERGH, Expert Collaborator.

COMMITTEE OF SELECTION

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Author of "The Man Without a Country."

GEORGE McLEAN HARRIS, Professor of English Literature, Princeton University.

MARCUS BENJAMIN, Editor, National Museum, Washington, D. C.

JONATHAN P. DOLIVER, United States Senator from Iowa.

LORENZO SEARS, Professor of English Literature, Brown University.

TRUMAN A. DE WEESE, Member Editorial Staff, "Chicago Times-Herald."

JOHN B. GORDON, Former United States Senator from Georgia.

EDWIN M. BACON, Former Editor "Boston Advertiser."

WILLIAM W. MILES, Member Editorial Staff, "Philadelphia Evening Telegraph."

NATHAN HASKELL DOLL, Associate Editor "International Library of Famous Literature."

F. CONLIFFE OWEN, Member Editorial Staff, "N. Y. Tribune."

CHAMP CLARK, Member House of Representatives from Missouri

JAMES B. POND, Manager Lecture Bureau; Author of "Eccentricities of Genius."

J. WALKER McSPADDEN, Managing Editor "Edition Royale" of Balzac's Works.

CLARK HOWELL, Editor "Atlanta Constitution."

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING COLUMN

hurry, her earnest brow would not have been so grave. In a little outhouse Anita stood patiently watching a large black hen. "You know you always do lay at this time," she said, "and I can't take four eggs unless you hurry. Do be quick, I must go. They won't wait for me; besides, they will get all the dolls, and how can I sing hymns without my doll Maria to hug?" The hen eyed her imperturbably; Anita looked at the hen, then she stamped. "Oh well," she exclaimed desperately, "I know you will lay, and if you can't do it here, you shall there," and she flew at the surprised hen, with both hands crammed her into a palm-leaf basket and went flying up to "El Faro," holding the basket tight by its slender string.

"Here I am," she exclaimed, "just wait till I put this stupid hen into Mr. Wood's room; he won't care. I must have four eggs, and I only have three. They are beauties, though," and she proudly added them to the already full basket.

"It's time we begin our hymns," said Angelita, "I've kept Maria for you, but you were so late I thought you would never get here. Here's Maria."

"It was all the hen," said Anita, hugging joyfully to her heart the tow-headed beauty. The sweet, childish voices, led by Angelita, rang out in the beautiful hymns taught them by Mr. Clark and others of the mission, and after singing several, Angelita laid down her book, saying, as her young face grew reverent, "We have time for a prayer-meeting before the teachers come. Prayer, and praise, too, for Miss Petterson says the Bible tells us to always praise and give thanks, before we ask for anything more, and," continuing her little speech rather shyly, "I want us all to give the dear God thanks for the mission and ask him that friends in the States will send us more workers and help, that the good news may be told in every town about Jesus."

"Oh, stop, stop a minute!" cried Anita, as they were about to kneel; "do wait until I can see my hen, for—" expressing what many another has found to be true, "I can pray so much better when I have offered all I have." Flying to Mr. Wood's room, she softly opened the door, nearly screaming with delight when she saw on the bed as lovely a pinky white egg, delicately transparent and warm, as hen ever laid. Senora Blacky was circumspectly picking her steps over the white spread, with intentions of finding a way out of her unusual abode. On Anita's entrance, she paused, head on one side, and her leg upraised, considering the sudden intruder, but Anita's spring put deliberation to flight. Astonished and protesting, the annoyed hen flew over Anita's head, out through the open door and into the quiet patio. There, amid the coleus plants and gourd vines, she recovered her equanimity and marched about with satisfied cackle.

"Now we're ready," announced Anita, but Angelita was disturbed by a rustle in one corner of the room, she raised her head asking "What is the matter?"

"Violetta won't kneel, I never saw such a doll," almost sobbed a tiny child, "her knees won't bend, she is so stiff!"

"Lay her flat on her face," promptly spoke Anita, "the Bible says people got down on their faces," so comforted, the little group began the prayer meeting, and who can say they did not pray more earnestly because of the sweet motherly love generated in the childish hearts by the cherished dolls.

L. C. W.

SPECIAL OFFER

TO CHRISTIAN HERALD READERS

A large handsome portfolio containing

11 sample photographs and chromatic plates and 50 specimen pages of brilliant After-Dinner Speeches,

Lectures, Addresses, Anecdotes, etc., will be sent free of charge, on request. With this we will also submit a special proposition which easily will place this great work in your possession.

John D. Morris & Co.

1101 Chestnut St.

Philadelphia

Gentlemen: Referring to your advertisement of Hon.

Thomas B. Reed's Library of

Modern Eloquence in THE

CHRISTIAN HERALD, I shall be pleased to receive portfolio of sample photographs and chromatic plates, also full particulars regarding prices, etc.

Name.....

Business..... Street.....

City and State.....

INQUIRY COUPON

John D. Morris & Co.

1101 Chestnut St.

Philadelphia

Gentlemen: Referring to your advertisement of Hon.

Thomas B. Reed's Library of

Modern Eloquence in THE

CHRISTIAN HERALD, I shall be pleased to receive portfolio of sam-

THE NEW WOMAN

Made Over by Quitting Coffee.

Coffee probably wrecks a greater percentage of Southerners than Northern people, for Southerners use it more freely.

The work it does is distressing enough in some instances; as an illustration, Miss Sue W. Fairall, 517 N. 4th St., Richmond, Va., writes, "I was a coffee drinker for years, and for about six years my health was completely shattered. I suffered fearfully with headaches and nervousness, also palpitation of the heart, and loss of appetite.

My sight gradually began to fail and finally I lost the sight of one eye altogether. The eye was operated upon and the sight partially restored, then I became totally blind in the other eye.

My doctor used to urge me to give up coffee, but I was wilful and continued to drink it until finally in a last case of severe illness the doctor insisted that I must give up the coffee, so I began using the Postum Food Coffee, and in a month I felt like a new creature.

I steadily gained in health and strength. About a month ago I began using Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and the effect has been wonderful. I really feel like a new woman and have gained about 25 pounds.

I am quite an elderly lady and before using Postum and Grape-Nuts I could not walk a square without exceeding fatigue, now I walk ten or twelve without feeling it. Formerly in reading I could remember but little but now my memory holds fast what I read.

Several friends who have seen the remarkable effects of Postum and Grape-Nuts on me have urged that I give the facts to the public for the sake of suffering humanity, so, although I dislike publicity, you can publish this letter and my name if you like."

$1.00 Worth of Music FREE

If there is a piano in your home, we will send you without charge seven splendid musical compositions, two vocal and five instrumental. Three of these selections are copyrighted and cannot be bought in any music store for less than $1.00. With them we will send four portraits of great composers and four large reproductions of famous paintings of musical subjects.

Why We Make This Offer

We make this offer to reliable men and women to enable us to send information regarding our Library of the World's Best Music, which is absolutely the best collection of vocal and instrumental music ever published. It contains more music, more illustrations, and more biographies of composers than any other musical library. It is for general home use and employment, as well as for students. Send your name and address, and ten cents in stamps to pay for postage and wrapping. Mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD when writing.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY (Dept. D)
78 Fifth Avenue, - - - New York

The FAMOUS ST. LAWRENCE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

are strictly high grade, guaranteed instruments, and are designed for the best musicians.

MANDOLIN—Solid rosewood, neatly inlaid around edge and sound hole, celluloid bound edges, inlaid frets, pearl position dots. An instrument noted for its tone and splendid appearance. Retailer for $9.00. Our price, $4.95.

GUITAR—Standard size, beautifully inlaid around sound hole, top edge and down back; edge bound with celluloid, finger board is fretted absolutely correct, pearl position dots, best American patent heads, improved metal tail piece. Regular $10 value. Our price, $4.20.

MEIERHOFF VIOLIN—Meierhoff's Conservatory—Stradivarius model, full ebony trimmed, rich amber or dark red, fine bow with it free. Retailer charge $15 for such an instrument. We ship C. O. D., subject to examination at express office, the money to be paid to the express agent when the instrument is found entirely satisfactory. Write for Free Catalogue of Musical Instruments and Sundries of all kinds. SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

WATCH THE PRESIDENT SUSPENDER

at work and you'll see why it is so comfortable. Trimmings can not rust. Every pair guaranteed. New model now ready for men of heavy work, also small size for boys. 50c. everywhere, or by mail postpaid. C. A. Edgerton Mfg. Co., Box 209, Shirley, Mass.

HER EASTER GIFT

"MY flower! All for me, Missus? My Easter gif? Is Easter Mont-Lawn, Missus?"

So glad to get a flower, the first plant she had ever possessed, she babbled on to the good lady who had brought into that gloomy tenement room the fresh white and green glory of a spirea for this little one who had so longed for a live plant all her own that the news had reached those who go about seeking to make poor children happy. Most children in New York know something of what Easter means, if for no other reason than that they go to missions and chapels and receive potted plants at Easter time. But there are some who do not know—some who do not go to church or mission—who have hardly so much as heard of Christ or Easter. But every child who has been to Mont-Lawn, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, has heard of Christ; every child who has been there has seen, of course, flowers growing—a miracle to little eyes that have looked only on stone pavements of courts and alleys, where never grass creeps through or buds burst forth. What more natural than that a little one who had hardly heard of Easter before, and who now heard of it in connection with flowers and Christ, should think of Mont-Lawn, too?

"MY FLOWER? ALL FOR ME?"

"My flower is bootiful, Missus," she murmured in the poor stumbling speech of the child of the slum.

The giver's companion said: "See, how ragged she is! Why do you give her flowers instead of clothes?"

"She wanted the flowers so! And Easter is coming. She can nurse and tend and water her plant—there are buds on it—and it will be fuller than now of plummy white blossoms by Sunday. She will feel that is more truly her own because she has helped it to bloom."

"But, see!" insisted the utilitarian, "her stockings! and the holes in her shoes!"

"Why," said the other smiling, "she is to be put into better clothes, of course—even to nice new shoes and stockings, for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD gave me the money to buy them. That's sort of duty work, you know; but the flower—the flower is her Easter gift."

Many "friends of little children" have kindly written to say that they have been remembering Mont-Lawn's waifs during the winter, and have been laying aside certain sums to send on as Easter offerings to be applied to giving the children of the crowded tenements a chance for their lives when the hot summer comes. Every little one blessed by these gifts will be grateful.

Friends wishing to remember THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home by bequest, have written asking for correct legal form, and in response, the following is given:

I hereby give and bequeath to The Christian Herald Children's Home, the sum of ——— dollars.

Framed Her Art Gems

Mrs. R. E. D., E. Nashville, Tenn., writes: "We want to thank you for the beautiful Art Portfolio. Some of the pictures are now framed and adorn my husband's study, and they are constantly admired by our many friends."

Easy Work & Good Pay for Bright Boys

ANY active, intelligent boy can make money in spare time by selling THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. Will not interfere with other work or school hours. No capital required—we will send without charge to copies the first week. These can be sold for 5 cents each, and will provide money to order magazines at wholesale prices the following week.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

is the easiest magazine in the country to sell. The right boy can secure enough customers in a few weeks to start a good business that will supply him with plenty of pocket money. Thousands of other boys are doing it. A booklet containing photographs of some of our most successful boys and letters telling how they work will be mailed free on request.

Special Offer—In addition to the regular profits on the magazines sold, we will divide $200.00 next month among the boys who sell over 15 copies each week.

Write to-day for the booklet. State whether you wish to start at once selling the magazines and we will send you the 10 free copies.

Circulation Bureau

THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

TO ANY LADY SENT FREE ON RECEIPT OF HER ADDRESS

Richardson New Design for 1902

No. 255, Wild Rose design, with FRENCH KNOT

DO NOT confound this Doily with the cheap so-called "linen" Doilies and Center-pieces that are being sent out which are nothing but a combination of cotton and other base fabrics. Richardson's Doilies are all made from the very best round thread Belgian Linen.

THIS DOILY of finest round thread Belgian linen, stamped with the most exquisite design ever shown in this country, ready to work, with full instructions and Course of Lessons by the world-renowned art embroiderer, Professor Tsuneo Takahashi and wife of Japan, also pattern in colors, showing the exact effect of every thread, so that the most unpractised can work it perfectly. Our system is a new one, and the only perfectly easy and simple plan yet devised. It makes it impossible for even a child to err in doing the work.

Some of these designs of ours on this linen are alone sold in stores for as high as $2.50 each. Catalogue of 34 New designs in Sofa Pillows, Doilies, Damask Scarfs, Hemstitched Drawn Work, Tray and Splasher, etc., sent free. Attached to above most unusual offer (all being free) we make but one fair condition, viz.:—that you promise to ask for and accept from your dealer only Richardson's Silks when you work out the designs, or if you are unable to find our silks, write us. Address, enclosing 10 cents to cover registration and postage. Order Design by number.

THE RICHARDSON SILK COMPANY, Dept. G, 220 and 224 Adams Street, CHICAGO.

NOTE.—The Richardson's Silks in competition with all the world were awarded the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1900, together with three Special Gold Medals for Embroidery and Sewing Silks and other items in this line. Therefore, it is not alone over other American silks that we claim superiority. Richardson's Silks have won the right to be recognized as better than any other silks in the world, and experts in silks recognize them as such.

Thorough, scientific course by mail, adapted to individual needs. Long-established Responsible. Successful. Practical. Instructors experienced and competent. Editors of 5 popular publications. Our students' contributions given preference at liberal rates. Descriptive catalogue free. Address SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM, No. 149 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

CONSECRATED HYMNS

For Devotional Meetings and Young People's Societies. Edited by Adam Geibel, R. Frank Leiman and H. C. Lincoln, assisted by 200 prominent Christian Workers. Specimen pages free. 20 cents for examination copy; $15.00 per hundred. GEIBEL & LEHMAN, 1022 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, Pa.

LACE PATTERNS

To introduce our goods and catalogue, we will furnish the following patterns on cambric at 5c each: 5x7 BUTTERFLY used in applique and for Hat and Handkerchief; 8x8 Dolly wide Tie End; narrow Tie End; Honiton and Point Lace Turn Over Collar Point Lace Handkerchief. We will mail all 7 cambric patterns for 25c. With each order, we enclose an illustrated lesson on Lace Making, and a lesson on Colored Embroidery with stitches fully explained and illustrated; also our illustrated Catalogue of Lace Patterns, Stamped Linens and Fancy Work Materials. LADIES' ART CO., Dept. 13, St. Louis, Mo.

VOTRE INSTITUTE gives you as many lessons as you can prepare in any mail course for a dollar per month. Languages, short-hand, book-keeping and college courses. Wade Park Ave., Cleveland, Ohio

Laughlin

FOUNTAIN PEN

The Best at any Price.
SENT ON APPROVAL

To responsible people. Your choice of these popular styles, superior to the $3.00 grades of other makes.

Sent Postpaid for Only

$1.00

By registered mail, 8c. extra.

It Costs You Nothing

to try it a week. If you do not find it the best pen you ever used and pre-eminently satisfactory, send it back and get your money. Finest quality hard rubber holder, highest grade, large 14K. gold pen, any desired flexibility, in fine, medium or stub. Perfect ink feed. Do not miss this opportunity to secure a strictly high grade guaranteed Fountain Pen at a price that is only a fraction of its real value.

Ask your dealer to show you this pen. If he has not, or won't get it for you, (do not let him substitute an imitation, on which he will make more profit), send his name and your order direct to us, and we will send you with Fountain Pen, one of our Safety Pocket Pen Holders without extra charge. Remember, there is no "just as good" as the Laughlin. Insist on it; take no chances. If your dealer has not this widely advertised writing wonder, it is neither your fault or ours; so order direct. Illustration on left is full size of ladies' style; on right, gentlemen's style. (Either style, richly trimmed with heavy solid gold mountings, for $1.00 additional). Address

LAUGHLIN MFG. CO., 100 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

Growth in Grace*

The Christian's Ideal and How It May Be Attained

FINALITY has no place in the Christian religion. It is true that when once the soul has laid hold by faith on Christ and has cast itself wholly upon him for salvation, that it is saved absolutely. It has entered into life, but that is not the end. It is only the beginning. All through the epistles, the thought is kept clearly before the early Christians, that development is expected. The new life that Christ imparts must pervade the being, bringing the character into accord with God and into increasing likeness to Christ. At conversion the soul is like a country that has fallen into anarchy. The lower propensities have been in control. One or another has possibly attained the mastery. With some persons it is indulgence of the fleshly appetites, with others it is avarice, with others, ambition. According to the constitution or the circumstances of the individual, this or that tendency manifests itself while other evil passions clamor for gratification. In Galatians 5: 19-21, Paul gives a list of some of the worst of these which he calls the works of the flesh. In Romans 7: 15-24, he shows how anarchy results from their contention, so that the whole nature is enslaved and compelled to do things of which it is ashamed. Every one who has made the effort unassisted to rise out of that condition knows how true is the description. The introduction of Christ's power into the region of these discordant elements is the beginning of the new life. Allowed to work in the soul, the new life brings those elements into subjection, liberating the soul from their dominance. The process is often slow, but it is always certain if there is submission to it and loyal fidelity to Christ's sovereignty.

That is the negative side of Christian character. The convert resists temptation and refrains from committing the sin in which he formerly delighted. But even yet there is something more. It must be a poor life that is spent in self-restraint. To be perpetually on the watch against evil, to be occupied continually in self-repression, is a gloomy, joyless life. So Christ gives us something richer and better. He would consecrate and purify these very tendencies that are so hard to repress and use them in his service. As he took the energy and zeal which Saul was using in persecuting the church, and employed it in building up the church, so he will take the propensities which in the unconverted man lead to evil and give them new objects and fit opportunities for exercise. The strong nature does not lose its strength by sanctification, but becomes by its strength a power of greater usefulness. The impulsive Peter, and the gentle John do not change their character, but each finds a sphere in which his characteristics are especially needed.

It is related of Agassiz, that to someone who showed him a way of becoming rich, he said he had no time for money-making. It is so with the Christian who is intent on growing in grace. He has no time nor inclination for the pleasures and dissipations which undermine and retard the spiritual life. He does not leave the world for a monastic or ascetic life, but in his business and his professional pursuits he seeks ever the development of his higher faculties, and endeavors to live as Christ would have lived in such circumstances. To show always the patience under annoyance, the cheerfulness under trial, the forbearance under ill-usage, the kindness toward the people around him, the ready helpfulness and sweetness of disposition in all circumstances that characterized Christ—that is the Christian's ideal when he begins to grow in grace. And how is it to be attained? There is but one way: "Reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord we are changed into the same image." There is no one who will spend some time every day in dwelling on Christ's character and communing with him in prayer, who will fail to grow more like him through the influence of the Holy Spirit.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League, and Baptist Young People's Union for April 6. II. Peter 3: 17, 18; I. Peter 2: 1, 2; Eph. 4: 12-15.

Smallest Complete Camera

The Pocket Poco is the latest member of the famous family of Poco Cameras. It embodies in the most compact form every adjustment requisite to the making of perfect pictures. It is the only pocket camera in which nothing has been sacrificed for size, using either plates or films, and having a ground glass for focussing. The simplicity of the makes it the surest camera for the beginner, while its perfect equipment makes it the ideal instrument for the expert. Send for the Poco Catalogue for 1902, describing the Pocket Poco in detail, and other Poco Cameras large and small.

Pocket Poco

ROCHESTER CAMERA AND SUPPLY COMPANY,
512 Poco Street, Rochester,
New York.

McCray Refrigerators

Fine Tile, Odorless Wood & Other Linings
Built to Order

Also a full line of stock sizes ready for immediate shipment. For Residences, Hotels, Clubs, Restaurants, Groceries, Meat Markets, Hospitals, Public Institutions, etc.

THE MCCRAY SYSTEM
insures perfect circulation of pure, cold air; absolutely dry; never sweats; therefore is

PERFECTLY HYGIENIC
Iced from Outside House. Unequalled for Economy of Ice.

Physicians, prominent men, hospitals and sanitariums endorse the McCray Refrigerators.

Built to order for Mr. Frank Torrence, Springfield, Ohio

McCray Refrigerators are Guaranteed

Catalogues and estimates sent free. Catalogue No. 28 for Residences, No. 45 for Public Institutions, Hotels and Cold Storage Houses. No. 11, Groceries and Meat Markets. Order now to secure prompt delivery.

MCCRAY REFRIGERATOR COMPANY, 227 Mill Street, Kendallville, INDIANA.

Branch Offices:
New York: 11 Broadway. Washington: 210 11th St., N.W. Boston: 22 Commercial St. San Francisco: 109 Front St.
Chicago: 111 Wabash Ave. Baltimore: 411 N. 10th St. St. Louis: 414 N. Third St. Portland: 225 Wellington St.
Cincinnati: 110 N. High St. Philadelphia: 110 N. 2nd St. Columbus: 8 S. 6th St. Birmingham: 1-203rd Ave.

Address main office unless you reside in one of above cities.

ARTISTIC MONUMENTS

COST NO MORE THAN PLAIN ONES

"Lest we Forget"

IN WHITE BRONZE

MARBLE is entirely out of date. GRANITE soon gets moss-grown, discolored, requires constant expense and care, and eventually crumbles back to Mother Earth. Besides, it is very expensive.

WHITE BRONZE

is strictly everlasting. It CANNOT crumble with the action of frost. Moss-growth is an IMPOSSIBILITY. It is more artistic than any stone. Then why not investigate it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred public monuments. We have designs from $4.00 to $4,000.00. Write at once for free designs and information. It puts you under no obligations. We deal direct and deliver everywhere.

Gravestone dealers themselves are buying White Bronze for their own lots. Over $70,000 worth of work sold to Christian Herald readers in the last few years.

THE MONUMENTAL BRONZE CO., 70-90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

Absolute Range Perfection!

Your money refunded after SIX MONTHS' FREE TRIAL if

Clapp's Ideal Steel Range

is not perfectly satisfactory to you. My superior location in Ohio on Lake Erie, where iron, steel, coal freights and skilled labor are cheapest and best, enables me to manufacture the best possible range at the lowest price. Largest, most complete range factory, run by men of twenty years' experience insures your getting the "top notch" in range construction at a positive saving of $10 to $20. Send for my complete catalogue (FREE) of all styles and sizes, and book describing the good and bad points of a steel range, which you should see whether you buy of me or not. All printed matter and photos free. My motto the Golden Rule and the BEST for the LEAST money.

C. D. CLAPP, (Practical Stove and Range Man) 620 Summit St., Toledo, Ohio

Sold for Cash or on Monthly Payments

The AMERICAN BOY

Biggest, Brightest, Best Boys' Paper in the World
Reckless Butterworth says, "It enters into their life"

Trial: 3 months for 10c
Regular: $1.00 a year

Boys are enthusiastic over it. Clean, inspiring stories. Information, encouragement, advice. Games, Sports, Animals, Stamps, Printing, Photography, Debating, Science, Puzzles. How to make boats, traps, etc. How to make and save money. How to succeed. Meets universal approval. The only successful attempt ever made to lead a boy in right directions, and at the same time claim his interest. One hundred pictures each month. Send and be surprised at the feast of good things for that boy.

Address SPRAGUE PUBLISHING COMPANY
275 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

"I Earn $500 a Year more since enrolling. Have shorter hours and better prospects." In this school—chartered by the State of Massachusetts—young men are taught by mail and fitted for better positions.

Mechanical, Electrical, Steam, Textile Engineering; Heating, Ventilation, Plumbing—including Mechanical Drawing. A few

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS

(the only expense being the actual cost of instruction papers and postage) will be awarded to early applicants.

Handbook describing courses, methods and regular terms on application.

American School of Correspondence, Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

A GOOD SALARY

is in reach of every one who will undertake to be trained for it BY MAIL by the I.C.S. METHOD. Circular free. Mention position for which you wish to qualify.

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS,
Box 861, SCRANTON, PA.

Mellin's Food

is nourishing and comforting.

Send for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass.

NEW, PRACTICAL SANOLEUM WASHABLE WALL COVERING.

WATERPROOF germ and insect proof, ornamental and sanitary, made in attractive designs for all rooms of the modern house. SANOLEUM is not paper, but is as readily hung as wall paper—can be washed at pleasure, is inexpensive and everlasting. Every roll is warranted. By using SANOLEUM the walls are kept sweet, clean and in hygienic condition. Send two cent stamp for samples and full information.

THE SANOLEUM COMPANY,
421 E. MILL ST., AKRON, O.

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—by a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. Has no taste or odor. Is air tight and acid proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake.

Sold everywhere. Made by
STANDARD OIL CO.

61 FLOOR FINISH

Walk on it, dance on it, let the children play on it. Cleans perfectly with cold water—requires no other care.

Send for booklet, "Floor Plan."

PRATT & LAMBERT
New York—Long 1st and City
Chicago—368-378 26th Street

$3.90 KITCHEN CABINET

Size 27 x 42, height 30 inches. Made of select material, nicely finished; has two large movable bins, insect proof, each will hold 50 pounds of meal or flour. Has tight, roomy drawer and large kneading board. Send for large Catalog House Furniture No. 26, also Refrigerator Catalog—Picture Post Co.

E. H. STAFFORD & BRO., Chicago, Ill.

Wanted Lady Agents in every town in New England to sell the None Such Trading Pad. Every housekeeper buys one. New; large profits. Sample prepaid, 15 cents. Write at once for territory. J. K. ADAMS, 349 Worthington St., Springfield, Mass.

THE ABIDING GUEST

○ THOU dear Lord, who stayest
When all the guests are gone,
When in its silent chamber,
The soul sits down alone.

Our garlands are all withered,
Our sweet companions flown;
The lamps that lit our feasting
Have gone out, one by one.

The gladness and the beauty
Have vanished from our sight;
The footsteps of our loved ones
Have died away in night.

Thanks to thy name, that ever
Thou comest at our will,
Thy voice is heard the clearer,
When all the house is still.

As on the Mount of Vision,
Amidst the shining there,
Thy over-awed disciples,
Looked up and saw but thee.

So we, our brightness faded,
Our dear companions flown,
Lift up our troubled faces,
To find thou art not gone.

Thanks to thy name, that ever
In grief thou dost appear;
Amidst each deepening shadow,
We know thy sunshine's near.

Be ruler of our feastings,
Thou love of love alone,
O, thou dear Lord, who stayest
When all the guests are gone.

The "Western Evil" in Shanghai

MR. MAURICE GREGORY, Secretary of the Friends' Association for Abolishing State Regulation of Vice, 47 Devonshire Chambers, London, England, sends to this paper a communication, in which he seeks to draw the attention of American Christians to a matter of vital interest to the moral and spiritual future of China, his purpose being to enlist the co-operation of the American with the British churches in devising some measures of prevention or reform. During recent troubles, says Mr. Gregory, missionaries of the interior, driven into Shanghai, have been much stirred by the scenes of European legalized vice witnessed there. The European section, which came under the joint control of the European and American Governments, and which is known as the "Model Settlement," on account of its fine streets and buildings and general physical cleanliness, and which is considered by the Mongolians in every respect a typical specimen of Christian civilization, flaunts its licensed and outrageous vice in the face of the "heathen Chinese," who, in his own municipal regulations, never dreamed of setting the seal of governmental approval or toleration upon houses of ill-fame; indeed, some time ago, the Taotai, or Mayor, of the native section, prohibited, and wiped out those that had sprung up in that division of Shanghai.

Mr. Gregory quotes Mr. H. C. Tjader, of Shanghai, who in the North China Daily News recently pointed out that "in a not distant future, Shanghai will be connected by rail with the great and important cities in the interior, as a matter of course, this protection and encouragement of vice peculiar to the Christian Government of Shanghai, will be transplanted all over this land, which will go far toward obliterating any helpful influence that Christian missionaries or Christian civilization might exert." Mr. Gregory urges that American and British churches stand shoulder to shoulder in undoing as far as possible what has been done, and in preventing extension of the evil.

Framing the Art Portfolio

Dear CHRISTIAN HERALD, I send another way to frame the Art Portfolio. Bind the picture with passe-partout picture-binding. Can be bought in white, gray, red, black, dark green, and brown, at ten cents a roll, thirty-six feet in roll. Get two pasteboards and one glass the size of the picture to be framed. On one board paste the picture. On back board put in fasteners for cord. Put fasteners one inch and a half or three inches from top, and two inches in from side. The flat-headed paper-fasteners will do—100 in box, for eleven cents. Now tie the back board—clasp in—the picture and glass together, lengthwise, with cord; carpet chain will do. Cut passe-partout the length wanted for one side at a time; dampen with wet cloth, put on the long side of picture; remove string and bind the sides; slip cord through the fasteners and picture is ready to hang.

Maxwell, Tenn. T. ESTHER RUCH.

"Premiums Exceed Expectation"

Mrs. M. J. B., Watertown, Mass., writes: "I received the beautiful Red Letter Bible. It came by express in perfect order, and I am very, very much pleased with it. I intend it for a Christmas gift to a niece. The Art Portfolio is beyond my expectation. Lovely pictures! Finely executed! Each one has a character and beauty of its own, and merits admiration."

I Just Love Malt Breakfast Food

You Should Use Malt Breakfast Food

First. Because malt gives to the gluten wheat granules from which the Food is made, a most delicious and appetizing flavor, very different from that of the insipid flat mushes so commonly used.

Second. Because the malt adds its well-known strengthening and tonic properties to the Food in the purest possible form, making it the most valuable cereal known.

Third. Because the malt makes this form of Cereal the most digestible and therefore of special value to children or invalids. But it is equally good for the adult and the athlete.

Sold by Grocers.

"Breakfast Menus for a Month," by the world's most noted cooks, free on request.

A half-pound sample free on receipt of six cents for postage.

The MALTED CEREALS Co.
Burlington, Vt.

All the Virtues of Malt,
All the Strength of Wheat.

AN IDEAL SHAMPOO

is obtained by using

7 SUTHERLAND SISTERS' SCALP CLEANER

It positively eradicates dandruff. Keeps the hair healthy, uniform in color, and lustrous. One 5-cent package convinces.

SOLD BY OVER 28,000 DEALERS

A Flying-Machine at Last

Scientific kite-flying within the reach of all. A marvel of simplicity. Any boy or girl can fly it. Tandems delight both young and old.

Special Introductory Size by Mail, 10c., 3 for 25c.

Agents wanted everywhere

Zimmerman Flying-Machine Co.
26 Wood St., Fremont, Ohio.

Vapo-Cresolene

AN INHALATION FOR

Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Coughs, Grip, Hay Fever, Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever,

Don't fail to use CRESOLENE for the distressing and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. For more than twenty years we have had the most conclusive assurances that there is nothing better. Ask your physician about it.

An interesting descriptive booklet is sent free, which gives the highest testimonials as to its value.

ALL DRUGGISTS.

VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 150 Fulton Street, New York.

COLORADO

MORE interest is being taken in Colorado as a health and pleasure resort than ever before.

Americans are beginning to realize that here, at home, within easy reach, is a country more delightful than Switzerland in scenic attractions and with a pure dry climate which has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors.

I wish you would send today for a copy of our book which tells all about Colorado in an interesting way. It is full of illustrations and has an excellent topographical map. Enclose 6 cents in postage to

P. S. EUSTIS,
General Passenger Agent,
C. B. & Q. Ry.,
209 Adams Street,
Chicago

THE NEW INCANDESCENT LIGHT

The Yotto Lamp

Burns a mixture of 85% Air and 15% Gas

Thereby Reducing Gas Bills 85%

No chimney used. Household size, 75 candlepower, $1.00 each complete. Sold by Gas Fitters, Chimney and Dept. Stores all over U. S. If your dealer hasn't them, send us $1.00 for one, carriage paid. Catalogue P. FREE. Write to-day.

American Incandescent Lamp Co., 55 Park Place, New York

The KHOTAL

is a gas range for city or country homes, small, compact and powerful; burns without smoke, soot or smell; generates its own gas from ordinary kerosene; economical in first cost and maintenance. Prices from $3.75 upwards. Send for catalogue.

HYDROCARBON BURNER COMPANY
196 Fulton Street, New York City

THE "BEST" LIGHT

is a portable 100 candle power light costing only 20c per week. Makes and burns its own gas. Brighter than electricity or acetylene, and cheaper than kerosene. No Dirt, No Grease, No Odor. Over 100 styles. Lighted instantly without a match. Every lamp warranted.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio.

PROFITS Large profits and permanent income by selling our Identification Outfits, Key Tag and Pocket Book with Special $1,000.00 Accident and Health Insurance Policy.

COMMERCIAL REGISTRY CO., St. Louis, Mo.

THE "1900" FAMILY WASHER FREE.

Greatest Invention of the Age. Time, Labor and Expense of Washing Clothes Cut in Two.

No More Stooping, Rubbing or Boiling of Clothes.

Every Household Needs One.

THE "1900" BALL-BEARING FAMILY WASHER SENT FREE

without deposit or advance payment of any kind, freight paid, on 30 days' trial. The 1900 Ball-Bearing Washer is unquestionably the greatest labor-saving machine ever invented for family use. Entirely new principle. It is simplicity itself. There are no wheels, paddles, rollers, cranks or complicated machinery. It revolves on bicycle ball-bearings, making it by far the easiest running washer on the market. No strength required, a child can operate it. No more stooping, rubbing, heating of clothes. Hot water and soap do the work. It will wash large quantities of clothes, no matter how soiled, perfectly clean in 4 minutes. Impossible to injure the most delicate fabrics.

SPRINGFIELD, ROCKLAND CO., N. Y., Oct. 29, 1901.

"1900" WASHER COMPANY.
I have given your washer a fair trial. It is one of the best washers I ever saw. It washed three pairs of my dirty and greasy overalls and shirts in ten minutes and washed them clean. My housekeeper says it would have taken her two hours to have washed them the old way. It will wash ten shirts, with collars and cuffs, in seven minutes. It will wash three washes without changing the water, only adding soap suds and about two quarts of hot water after the first wash.

I have been a delegate and attended twenty-six conventions held in different parts of the country, and my name is known on nearly every railroad in the United States and Canada. I am an engineer of the New York Division of the Erie road and have run an engine for forty years.

Write at once for catalogue and full particulars to

"1900" WASHER CO.
33Y, STATE ST., BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

LESS WORK AND MORE MONEY IN THE DAIRY FOR THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE.

Over 250,000 now in use.

They save work!
Increase the product.
Improve the quality.
Highest Award at Chicago, Paris, Buffalo and every important Exposition held since 1879.

CATALOGUES ON REQUEST

THE DE LAVAL SEPARATOR CO.
General Office
74 CORTLANDT ST.
NEW YORK.

CHICAGO PHILADELPHIA SAN FRANCISCO
MONTREAL TORONTO WINNIPEG

The IDEAL SQUARE STEAM COOKER

With Doors. Cooks a whole hen over 1 burner, on gas, oil, gas, or common cook stoves.

Reduces Fuel Bills One-half

Has water gauge and replenishing tube outside. Makes tough meats tender. Will hold 12 one-quart jars in canning frame. We also make the world-renowned round Ideal Cooker with whistle. We pay express. Send for illustrated catalogue—Agents' Bonanza.

Agents Wanted.
TOLEDO COOK CO., Box 16 Toledo, O.

"SHYNEY-SHYNE" SILVER POLISH

Contains no acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful lustre. Once used, always used. We want a million orders this season. By mail, 15c. Two boxes, 25c. Till June 1st will send package of flower seeds free with each box.

THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dept. C.

THE WORLD'S PEACE

Five Million Women Work for International Harmony

FIVE million women, representing nearly every country on the face of the earth, banded together in the interests of peace!—is not this a force with which engines of destruction, political and mechanical, must reckon in the developments of the future? What nation will go to war with nation if the mothers, wives and daughters of both, clasping hands across all chasm of differences, say: "We cannot have it so, beloved ones. We cannot have you fight each other to the death. We women are pledged to protect you from this awful thing. We pray you by better ways seek righteous judgment."

Fitting story for Easter—the season sacred to the triumph over death and the grave of the Prince of Peace—is that of the Woman's Universal Peace Alliance, which, though it came into existence only a few years ago, now numbers, as the President, Princess Wiszniewska recently announced, "over five million women in Europe and America, all working together." The immediate forerunner of the Alliance was the Woman's League for International Disarmament, which, under the Princess' leadership, took form in 1896. When in 1897 the celebrated pronunciamento of the Czar in favor of general disarmament was published, it is said that the first telegram thanking Nicholas II, was that which the Princess sent. Inspired by the action of the Czar, the League redoubled its activities, and the Princess was able to collect and send to the President of the Hague Peace Congress, an enrollment of some 700,000 signatures declaring in favor of peace and arbitration. In 1900, the League, greatly enlarged by addition of individuals and of various bodies of women in different countries, held its first International Congress under the name of the Woman's Universal Peace Alliance, at the Paris Exposition.

PRINCESS WISZNIEWSKA

The delegates discussed all possible plans then presenting for forwarding the cause of peace by education—education which teaches how moral victory and honorable industrial conquest are much more glorious than the laurels and spoils of carnage. They do not indulge the Utopian dream that all recourse to war can be abrogated at once; but they do declare a reasonable hope that by the end of the century war will no more be held by civilized nations as a right, wise, or effective way of settling difficulties. The growth of their association gives ground for such aspiration.

Guided by the Central Council at Paris, groups of women in France, Russia, Great Britain, Spain, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Italy, Portugal, Bulgaria, Roumania, Egypt, Syria, Japan, North and South America, are exchanging from country to country acts of friendship and treaties of peace. The Princess, too, has recently issued an appeal to all women and organizations of women everywhere, urging union with the Alliance. M. L. AVARY.

CORNISH PIANO OR ORGAN Free

For a Year. PIANOS

With Instrumental Attachments $155 up.

We will ship any Cornish American Piano or Organ upon the distinct understanding that if not found entirely satisfactory after 12 months' use we will take it back, thus giving you one year's free trial in your own home. You take no risk when you buy on the celebrated CORNISH PLAN. Cornish Pianos and Organs occupy a field by themselves. In quality and tone, in mechanical superiority and superb finish they stand unrivaled.

You pay no middleman's commission.—No dealer's profits when you buy a Cornish Piano or Organ.—You buy direct from factory to home and owing to the enormous number of instruments we make, the manufacturer's profit we ask is very, very small. In proof of our absolute integrity we give to every purchaser a guarantee which is practically a bond on the whole of our million dollar plant. This guarantee not only binds us to carry out to the letter every promise made in this advertisement but warrants each instrument for 25 years.

ORGANS with multitone action $25.00 up.

MINIATURE PIANOS and ORGANS, absolutely correct in coloring, sent FREE to all intending purchasers to aid them in making a selection best suited to the color scheme of their home, also our New Souvenir Catalogue, which gives all details of the latest styles in PIANOS and ORGANS, handsomely illustrated in colors.

Pianos, $155 up. Organs, $25 up.

WRITE TO-DAY for the Miniatures and Catalogue.

No matter how much or how little you wish to pay for an instrument, we can please you and save you money.

Anyone willing to do a little work for us may earn their Piano or Organ FREE. The FIRST SALE in a new community carries with it a handsome cash bonus.

CORNISH CO., NEW JERSEY.

FOR 50 YEARS PIANO AND ORGAN MAKERS TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.

THE LEONARD-CLEANABLE REAL PORCELAIN LINED REFRIGERATOR

This Porcelain is the same material that the blue and white preserving kettles are made of. A luxury at the price of a necessity.

MADE IN GRAND RAPIDS.

This Style, Polished, quarter sawed golden oak case; size, 35 in. long by 22 in. deep, by 40 in. high. Porcelain lined, $28.00. Sliding shelves adjustable to any height. Other styles and sizes from $20.00 to $50.00. In zinc lined, $8.50 to $30.00. With the LEONARD-CLEANABLE every part is accessible. It strains the back to remove the whole ice box which some makers compel. Here is a vital point! THE LEONARD-CLEANABLE ALL METAL ICE RACK purifies the condensation and prevents ice dripping upon food. Avoid refrigerators with under wooden sticks—they mould and become musty. Still another point: OUR EIGHT WALLS WITH MINERAL WOOL INTERLINING save ice bills. Where is another equal to the Leonard? We ship the Leonard to you freight free anywhere east of Omaha or north of Tennessee, where we have no dealer; pro rata beyond. Guaranteed to be greater value than any other, or your money returned without comment. Sample of our Porcelain lining with booklet How to Use a Refrigerator and catalogue sent FREE.

Grand Rapids Refrigerator Co. Grand Rapids, Mich.

ROSES FREE

Every reader of this paper should have one of our Handsome New Illustrated 80 page Catalogues for 1902. It tells of the best Roses and hundreds of other Plants, Bulbs, Seeds and Fruits, offering them to you at most attractive prices. Liberal Club Rates given. Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this Summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the catalogue and Roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting. THE GEO. H. MELLEEN CO., Louisville Greenhouses. Established 1877. Box J, Springfield, Ohio.

Any child can wash with PEARLINE. Really nothing but soaking in PEARLINE and water to loosen the dirt, and then rinsing out. No washboard needed; better without. Washboard ruins PEARLINE saves clothes. Less rubbing, less wear and tear, less steaming over washtub, less ill-health for every woman who uses PEARLINE. 657
Pearline rescues women

Enemy to Dirt and Disease Germs

no matter where they are—in clothing; on the hands; on the floor; in spittoons, sinks, bathrooms, toilet-rooms, cellars, all over the house; in the sick-room; in stores, offices, work-shops; in public halls—everywhere that dirt and disease germs are a nuisance and a danger.

No matter where, or how hard to get at.

Banner Lye

will get rid of them.

Ordinary disinfectants are costly and, with ordinary methods, don't do the work. Banner Lye is cheap and does the work.

Best results are obtained by using very small quantities. Directions on every package.

Banner Lye is not old-style lye.

SOAP-MAKING—A can of Banner Lye will make ten pounds of good, clean, hard soap.

At grocers' and druggists'. Send for book showing uses. The Penn Chemical Works, Philadelphia, U.S.A.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC (REGISTERED)
NEW WOOD FINISH
FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK
RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD OR METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED.
A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED
MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, MAHOGANY, CHERRY, GREEN, BROWN, BLACK, BRILLIANT, OR IN NATURAL, CLEAR, IVORY & YELLOW. COLOR CARD & BOOKLET FREE
SAMPLE CAN by mail, postpaid for 10¢
THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.
DEPARTMENT 5 CLEVELAND, O.
QUART CAN BY EXPRESS PREPAID 75¢

SEED BOOK FREE

Do you want one? Handsomely illustrated with photographic reproductions from nature. Contains many colored plates, and is filled with bargains that will surprise you. No other seed book like it.

140 Varieties, 12 Cents.
5 kinds of Best Beets, 10 of the Grandest Cabbages, 12 of the Choicest kinds of Lettuce, 6 of the Greatest Onions, 7 Grand New Tomatoes, 100 kinds of Gorgeous Flower Seeds, making in all 140 sorts, which will produce bushels of choice vegetables and immense quantities of lovely flowers, all for 12 cents and addresses of three friends who buy seeds and plants. Seed book free. Write to-day.
F. B. MILLS, Seedsman, Box 60 Rose Hill, N. Y.

Dr. Lyon's
PERFECT
Tooth Powder

Used by people of refinement for over a quarter of a century.

Shade Won't Work—
Because it isn't mounted on
THE IMPROVED
HARTSHORN
SHADE ROLLER.
A perfect article. No tacks required. Notice name on roller when buying your shades.

NEW SEED CATALOGUES

WHETHER one be owner of a big farm, a little garden plot, or just a window-ledge for the growing of green things, one welcomes the spring catalogues sent out by florists, seed-growers and nurserymen, for these annuals are often valuable compendiums of farm and garden lore. The following can be had by addressing a card to the publishers:

Burpee's Farm Annual. Here are pictures and descriptions "to make the mouth water" of golden self-blanching celery, crisp lettuce, fresh radishes, rich-flavored tomatoes, juicy melons, sweet corn, dainty cauliflower, and all other table delights as they are grown on Fordhook Farms, "the largest trial grounds in America," and as they may be grown elsewhere by those who seek seed and information in the right place; while fine grass, clover, oats, buckwheat, and other grains divide space with medicinal herbs, greenhouse and outdoor flowers and shrubs. This is the twenty-sixth year in which Burpee & Co. have sent out books supplying the public with excellent advice about vegetable, flower and farm seeds. Every family, progressive farmer, gardener and florist should have this catalogue. Pp. 132. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Garden Annual. A gorgeous cluster of "Queen Lilies" adorns the cover, and inside is interesting information about growing these "noblest of the flowers" and all their lovely sisters of garden and greenhouse. Dwarf oranges and bananas, which, though grown in tubs as ornamental shrubs, can be made to produce edible fruit; the "Lemon Ponderosa," the "White Blackberry," the "Ever-bearing Strawberry," and the "Tree Strawberry" are among the novelties treated—not, however, to any displacement of the good, homely onion, the lowly beet, the humble squash, the golden pumpkin, and their most worthy company. Gardeners seeking rare and commonplace treasures should send for this. Pp. 33. J. Roscoe Fuller & Co., Floral Park, N. Y.

Childs' Rare Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits. This handsomely illustrated catalogue presents a bewildering array of lilies, roses, pansies, sweet peas, and other beautiful and sweet-smelling things. Luscious melons, grapes, cherries, peaches, etc., are temptingly spread before the ambitious fruit-grower, while the nutritious potato, the rich egg-plant, and other vegetables find place among roses and lilies, plums and strawberries, for the benefit of the thrifty market gardener. Pp. 137. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y.

Everything for the Garden, Farm, Lawn and Greenhouse. The title is well chosen. The catalogue is handsomely illustrated. Visitors to the Pan-American will remember the Peter Henderson lawn and bedding exhibits there. Pp. 103. Peter Henderson & Co., 35-37 Cortlandt street, New York.

Vicks' Garden and Floral Guide. Instructive talks about country life, gardens, farms, what to plant and sow, berrying and kindred topics. Pp. 133. Vicks' Little Gem Catalogue. A pretty booklet for the gardener's or farmer's table. James Vicks' Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

Seed Annual. This comes from Western seedsmen, but the fine watermelon on the fourth page would do credit to Georgia. Every variety of seed that gardener or farmer can want is found here. Pp. 100. D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

Storrs & Harrison Co. Catalogue. An instructive presentation of trees, plants, seeds, bulbs, grasses, and everything useful and beautiful that mother earth can produce. Pp. 169. Storrs & Harrison, Painesville, O.

Flower Seeds. A gem of a booklet, full of pretty blooms and practical information. Published "by the pioneer seedswoman of America." Carrie H. Lippincott, Minneapolis, Minn.

Mills' Seed Catalogue. A "Klondike Tomato" adorns the cover; and the treasures of flower and vegetable garden and of the farm shown within are rich enough to suggest repetition of the name. Pp. 65. F. B. Mills, Rose Hill, N. Y.

Catalogue of Vegetable and Flower Seeds. Early cucumbers, fine spinach, peas, good hay, and other desirable farm and garden products, together with new and old gems of horticulture, catch the reviewer's eye. Pp. 77. James J. H. Gregory & Son, Marblehead, Mass.

Flowers for Springtime. But flowers and small fruits for all the year round are told about in this booklet. Pp. 97. Miss Mary Martin, Jericho Road, Floral Park, N. Y.

Our New Guide to Rose Culture. Who does not want to know all about rose-growing? The publishers of this book have been growing roses fifty-two years. Pp. 115. Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa.

Rare Florida Fruits and Flowers. This pretty pamphlet of information about tropic and semi-tropic products is always welcome to flower-lovers. Pp. 29. Jessamine Gardens, Jessamine, Fla.

Holmes' Tested Seeds. Timely words about novelties and specialties and high grade seeds of all kinds. Pp. 65. H. L. Holmes, Second and Chestnut, Harrisburg, Pa.

A BLIND WANDERER.

Didn't Know That Food Could Restore Her.

A well known writer uses Grape-Nuts as a tonic when feeling the effects of extra heavy work. She writes: "Grape-Nuts should be taken regularly as one would a tonic. I eat mine cold in the morning with hot milk or cream poured over it, and it is delicious, nourishing and strengthening."

Some time ago I said to a lady friend who was a great sufferer from dyspepsia and has been an invalid for five years, and who was a mere skeleton, "If I had known you sooner you need not have suffered all these years." She looked at me in surprise and asked me what I would have done. "I should have put you on Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food," I replied quite confidently. "Did you ever hear of it?" Oh yes she had heard of it but never tried it as she had never had her attention called to it especially and had not thought it applied to her needs.

"Now," I said, "If you will just set about it and try Grape-Nuts for a week, three times a day, I will guarantee you will rise up and call me blessed."

She took my advice and followed it faithfully. When I saw her about a week later she looked like a different person although she had only gained two pounds in weight, but said she felt so much better and stronger and has greatly improved in health and strength since using the food.

She is getting well and you can imagine her delight is unbounded. My own experience and that of others is sufficient evidence of the scientific value of a food that supplies nourishment to the system and builds up the brain and nerve centers." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Baby's Reclining Go-Cart

The handiest in the world is also the best-built. You can turn it into a baby-carriage (reclining or half reclining position) with just a twist of the wrist. You can bring the foot-part up without letting down the back. You can do anything you want, and yet nobody sees any mechanism.

The Bloch

is its name, and the name is on every Bloch Go-Cart. It is beautiful, strong and light, and light looking. It doesn't wobble nor run sideways, nor injure the furniture. It doesn't take up much room. Running gear is patented. No one needs a baby-carriage these days. If your dealer won't supply it, we'll ship it (freight free) to any part of the United States. Write for picture catalogue.

PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY
Eighth and Spring Garden, Philadelphia

A NICE GO-CART For Your Baby AT FACTORY PRICES

Do you intend to buy a pretty Go-Cart for your baby? If so, write us for our catalogue; shows all the latest styles of sleeper Go-Carts, from the cheapest to the best, and at prices much less than you can purchase in the stores, because we sell from factory to you, and pay freight.

Write and see if we cannot please you.

MARQUA CARRIAGE & TOY CO.,
Dept. 3, CINCINNATI, O.

SEWS ANYTHING
from silk to coarsest fabrics. The celebrated
BALL-BEARING ARLINGTON
(equal of any $40 to $65 Machine).
Combines highest grade mechanical efficiency with beautiful appearance. Finest and most complete attachments. BALL BEARING, hence easy running, noiseless. Guaranteed for 20 years. 250,000 sold. Testimonials from every State.
Write for Free Catalogue showing all styles and samples of work.
Arlington guaranteed machine from $11.95 up.
Our Automatic Cabinet at $17.75 is a wonder.
CASH BUYERS' UNION, Dept. A-18, CHICAGO, ILL.
REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO

GO-CARTS DIRECT FROM THE FACTORY

SAVE 1/4 to 1/2 by buying Baby Carriages and Go-Carts direct from the manufacturer. WE SELL DIRECT TO THE CONSUMER AT FACTORY PRICES. This handsome COMFORT SLEEPER, made from imported steel, strong, durable, lasting; SENT UPON RECEIPT OF $6.00. Write for Catalogue showing fifty late styles.
E. F. PAHL & CO., 3d St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

CLEAN CUT CAKE TIN
FREE TO AGENTS
Flat thin knife cuts loose a perfect cake.
$2 Outfit free Exp. prepaid, Dept. 1
HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, Chicago, Ill., or Buffalo, N. Y.

WHAT IS HOME—WITHOUT A TEXT?

A Bonanza to Agents

McKINLEY'S LAST WORDS

With his Favorite

Photograph

Cards in assorted colors, flags embossed in silver. Size, 11 x 7. Price, 25 cents each, post paid. Agents wanted for these and other Texts and Wall Mottos. Hundreds of pretty designs. Sell wonderfully well. Big Percentage. Write for terms.

Ministers, Y. M. C. A. Secretaries, Sunday-School Teachers, Colportage Agents and others can make a large sum by taking this agency. Send for catalogue.

POST Self-Cleaning Self-Filling FOUNTAIN PEN CO.
112 West Fourteenth Street, New York

$1.25 FOR NOTHING.

Our new Mammoth Catalogue Net 99 costs us $1.25 per copy to print and mail—send us 10c in stamps to help pay postage and this wonderful book will be sent free—you deduct the 10c from your first order of $1.00. This book contains 480 pages, size 14x10 1/2 in., equivalent to over 1000 pages of the ordinary catalogue—it saves from 25 to 75 percent. on everything to Eat, Wear and Use, contains over 15,000 illustrations and quoted wholesale prices to consumers on over 150,000 different articles. It required 47 car-loads of paper to print this enormous edition. With this book in your possession you can buy everything you need, at all seasons of the year, cheaper than the average dealer.

Made-to-order Clothing catalogue with large sample, free. We pay Expressage. Lithographed catalogue of Carpets, Rugs and Draperies for the asking. Carpets Sewed Free. Lining Furnished Free and Freight Prepaid. Address
JULIUS HINES & SON, Baltimore, Md. Dept. 213

ARE YOU DEAF

The Morley Ear-drum makes up for all deficiencies of the impaired natural ear. Entirely different from any other device. No drugs. No wire, rubber, metal nor glass. Invisible, comfortable, safe. Adjusted by any one.

For sale by leading druggists. If yours doesn't have them, write for booklet, FREE.

THE MORLEY COMPANY, Dept. E,
19 South 16th Street, Philadelphia

SUNLIGHT AND OPEN AIR.
Hasten the Invalid's Recovery.

TRICYCLES and WHEEL CHAIRS

Built to Order in Every Size and Style.

We will be pleased to quote you prices on our special work.

Catalogue Free on request.

Z. C. FAY TRICYCLE & INVALID CHAIR CO.,
Elyria, Ohio.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Racine than all others together. Write for catalogue.

RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY,
Box J, Racine, Wisconsin

PARKER'S HAIR BALM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents Dandruff & hair falling out. 50c and $1.00 at Druggists.

"INASMUCH—"

WILD tempest swirled on Moscow's castled height;
Wild sleet shot slanting down the wind of night;
Quick snarling mouths from out the darkness sprang
To strike you in the face with tooth and fang.
Javelins of ice hung on the roofs of all;

The very stones were aching in the wall,
Where Ivan stood a watchman on his hour,
Guarding the Kremlin by the northern tower,
When, lo! a half-bare beggar tottered past,
Shrunk up and stiffened in the bitter blast.
A heap of misery he drifted by,
And from the heap came out a broken cry.

At this the watchman straightened with a start;

A tender grief was tugging at his heart,
The thought of his dear father, bent and old,
And lying lonesome in the ground so cold.
Then cried the watchman, starting from his post:

"Little father, this is yours; you need it most!"

And tearing off his hairy coat, he ran
And wrapt it warm around the beggar man.

That night the piling snows began to fall,
And the good watchman died beside the wall.
But waking in the Better Land that lies
Beyond the reaches of these cooping skies,
Behold, the Lord came out to greet him home,
Wearing the coat he gave by Moscow's dome—

Wearing the hairy coat he gave
By Moscow's tower before he felt the grave.

And Ivan, by the old Earth-memory stirred,
Cried softly with a wonder in his word:

"And where, dear Lord, found you this coat of mine,

A thing unfit for glory such as thine?"
Then the Lord answered with a look of light:
"This coat, my son, you gave to me last night."

"A Link in Charity's Chain"

WITH a check which came to this office for a charitable cause, a letter signed Carl La Brousse was received, giving the following touching story, which the writer characterized as a "bright and beautiful link in the great chain of American charity":

On January 31, 1892, I was going by the Big Four Route from Cincinnati to St. Louis. At Indianapolis, where we had to change cars, some emigrants from Russia boarded our train. A family named Kanzler, which especially drew my attention, consisted of a man and wife and four children, one of them a baby. The woman looked grief-stricken; their only food was stale bread and the ice water on the train. Near St. Louis, one child, four years old, died on the train. It was starved to death. The people were Protestants and could speak German. As I was the only man in the car familiar with German, I tried to speak some words of comfort to their almost broken hearts. The woman told me with tearful eyes that there was a famine in Russia; that their cattle had been sold or killed; that they had come to America, hoping to better themselves by work. She was afraid, she said, the American people would throw the child off the train, and so she covered it with her shawl. I assured her that the American people were too sympathetic to do anything like that; and then informed the conductor of the sad affair, and he telegraphed to St. Louis. We took up a collection on the train, $37.50 being given in small sums. At St. Louis the police were waiting, and the father had to go with the dead child to the City Hall or police station, I suppose, for a coroner's inquest. I bought some milk and sandwiches for the woman and her other children and we had made up another collection in the depot of $17.50, when a well-dressed man walked up and said, "What is the matter with those people? Are they poor?" When we told him the circumstances he opened his purse and handed the woman a ten-dollar bill. We asked his name, but he declined to give it. We heard later it was the actor Hoey. Altogether we raised $65 for this poor family. The city of St. Louis buried the child and the railroad company granted extension of time to the family tickets. The poor woman's countenance became almost transfigured with gratitude. Thus she found out the meaning of American charity.

She was a Christian. She prayed and found consolation and peace, and she blessed America's kindness to the stranger.

Gems of Artistic Beauty

R. F. D. Middlebury, Vt., writes: "The Art Portfolio received in good condition, and is, indeed, a gem of beauty. May THE CHRISTIAN HERALD be blessed the coming year and be a soul-winner."

*From Lincoln and Other Poems, by Edwin Markham, author of The Man with the Hoe. A collection of wonderful interest to the lovers of good poetry, by one who has come to be recognized as the greatest living American poet. Especially fine are the poems entitled "Lincoln," "The Mighty Hundred Years," "St. Elizabeth of Hungary," and "The New Century." Pp. 125; cloth binding. Price, $1. McClure, Phillips & Co., N. Y., publishers.

COSTS NOTHING TO INVESTIGATE. WRITE FOR PROPOSITION ANYWAY.

DON'T BE HARD UP!

$20 to $35 AND EXPENSES WEEKLY. $1,000 TO $1,500 ANNUAL INCOME

CAN BE EASILY EARNED. NO EXPERIENCE. NO CAPITAL.

Mr. Tassell made $1,500 first 5 months. Mr. Muncy, of Texas, made $12.50 first 2 hours, over $200.00 first month. Mrs. Howard, of Iowa, sold 24 first week. Mr. Smith, of Colorado, made $205.00 first month. Mrs. Beard, of New York, $400.00. Miss Wiggins, of Indiana, $200.00. Miss Nesne, of Minn., $205.00. A lady in Pa. made $42.50 in 12 days, besides attending to her household duties. Agents all making money showing, taking orders, selling and appointing agents for our famous Quaker Folding Bath Cabinet.

WRITE US AT ONCE. Ladies and Gentlemen working for us make $25 to $35 and expenses weekly. New plan, 6 hours a day. Let us start you. The Quaker is the greatest seller and money-maker for agents known. Absolute home necessity. An article of merit which you can conscientiously recommend. Every user sends from 3 to 10 customers to you. Enormous demand year around in every city, village or the country. Everybody buys—business men, families, physicians, stores, etc. No more bathtubs or doctor bills.

Just think! You enjoy Turkish, Sulphur, Perfumed, Hot Air or Medicated Vapor Baths at home for 3c. each. Far superior to water baths and bathtubs. Water baths cleanse the outer skin only. Our method makes the skin breathe, opens the 5,000,000 pores, causes profuse perspiration, expelling all impurities from the blood and system, inwardly and outwardly. Produces Cleanliness, Health, Strength, Vigor, a Clear Skin and a Your sleep sound. You feel younger, like a new being. Prevents disease. Indorsed by the most eminent physicians and over 1,350,000 users. Relieves Colds, La Grippe, Rheumatism, neuralgia, malaria, bronchitis, eczema, catarrh, dropsy, headache, and blood, skin, nerve, and kidney troubles. A Hot Springs Treatment at home.

Description: Weighs 10 lbs. Best made. Easily carried. No assistant or experience necessary. Child can operate. Ladies enthusiastic. Sent on 30 days' trial. WE ARE RESPONSIBLE. Capital $100,000.00. Largest Manufacturers of Bath Cabinets in the world. ENGAGE WITH US.

WRITE US ANYWAY for Our New Plan, Terms, Illustrated Pamphlet, Testimonials, etc. FREE

THE WORLD MANUFACTURING CO.,

525 World Building,

Cincinnati, Ohio.

CANOPY TOP SURREY, $59.65

Full Fenders, Oil Burning Lamps, Spring Cushions, Full Bolted Wheels, 1 1/2 Steel Axles, End or Brewster Springs, Fine Finish. Every Vehicle Guaranteed Two Years. Our Complete FREE Vehicle and Harness Catalogue gives full descriptions of these and many other styles. Write for it NOW.

SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

PAY ONE PROFIT—SAVE TWO.

By our Manufacturer's One Profit selling system you can buy Vehicles and Harness direct of us and save the Jobbers' and Retailers' profits. Freight? Yes, you pay the freight, but so does the dealer. If he pays it he charges you a profit on freight also. Do you see?

$45.90 FULL LEATHER TOP BUGGY

Distance Axles, Spring Cushions, End or Side Bar Springs, Hickory Gear Woods, Full Bolted "B" Grade Wheels.

I Can Sell Your Farm

or other real estate for cash, no matter where located. Send description and selling price and learn my wonderfully successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Do your corns foretell the weather?

Get a box of A-CORN SALVE, and let the weather take care of itself. 15 cents, by mail. Money back, if you say so.

Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

THE ALTON'S ENGINEER.

IF YOU WILL SEND THE ADDRESS OF A PERSON WHO, WITHIN A YEAR, WILL HAVE USE FOR THE CHICAGO & ALTON RAILWAY

(TERRITORY COVERED OUTLINED IN ABOVE MAP), WE WILL MAIL TO YOU A PICTURE, 4 1/4 X 3 INCHES, OF THE ALTON'S ENGINEER. IF, IN ADDITION, YOU WILL TELL US IN WHAT PUBLICATION YOU READ THIS ADVERTISEMENT, WE WILL SEND TO YOU A PAMPHLET ABOUT THE BIGGEST CAMERA IN THE WORLD.

GEO. J. CHARLTON, GENERAL PASSENGER AGENT, CHICAGO & ALTON RAILWAY, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

"The Jewel in the Crown of Southern California."

LOS ANGELES

One of the most beautiful of all the California cities, and the city that showed the greatest percentage of growth in the census of 1900, is the "City of Angels," called Los Angeles. It is most easily reached from New York and New England and the territory east of Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati, by the

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

and their connections. Several excellent hotels, a large number of fine boarding houses and delightful suburbs in every direction make Los Angeles a center for winter tourists.

"Four-Track Series" No. 5, "America's Winter Resorts," sent free on receipt of a two-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

YOU DYE IN 30 MINUTES

Soiled and faded clothing of all kinds made to look like new with the celebrated TONK'S FRENCH DYE. So simple a child can use them, be twice the strength of other dyes, and retain their brilliancy for years, as the colors are permanent. Will not Freeze, Boil or Wash Out. To introduce them give your dealer's name and we will send you 60 packages for 40c, or 1 for 10c, any color. Say whether for wool or cotton. Write quick, catalogue and color card free. Agents want.

FRENCH DYE CO., Box 426, Vassar, Mich.

Ward's Horn of Plenty

Our famous no-middlemen system of providing all the luxuries and necessities of life has been adopted by two million people who appreciate our ability to help them make four dollars do the work of five. THE HORN OF PLENTY IS OPEN TO YOU—WILL YOU TRY IT?

ANNOUNCEMENT—The spring and summer edition of our catalogue No. 70 will be ready March 15th. It will be the finest and most complete book of its kind ever published, containing over 1,000 pages and 17,000 illustrations. It costs us almost a dollar to publish and distribute this catalogue, but we will send it to you for 15c, by mail or express prepaid. Almost any family can save $100.00 a year by having our catalogue. Send for it today and enclose 15 cents to partially pay postage or expressage. If you already have our No. 70 catalogue don't send for another as we intend to mail you the supplement mentioned below.

IF YOU HAVE ORDERED goods from us in the past year, we will send you a 100-page supplement containing all additions to our stock since No. 70 catalogue was issued. It will not be necessary for you to ask for this supplement as we want you to have it and will send it anyway.

IF YOU HAVE NEVER ORDERED goods from us or had our big catalogue, send 15c today and get our latest, it's the key to the door of prosperity.

Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago

The House that tells the truth.

G & J Bicycle Tires

YOU JUDGE
the worth of a tire by its speed, good wearing qualities and ease of repair.

G & J TIRES
are made from the best rubber; are light enough to be resilient, strong enough to be durable, and easy riding, thus insuring comfort and safety.
Catalogue at your Agent's or by mail.

G & J TIRE CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
Also Makers of G & J Tires for Motor Bicycles, Carrriages and Automobiles.

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels
only

$21.95

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish steel wheels to fit any axle.
Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free.
Address Empire Manufacturing Co., Quincy, Ill.

LET US SEND Our LEADER BICYCLE

High Grade, 1902 model, for your examination. It is the wonder value of the new year, the perfection point in bicycle construction.
Up-to-date in design, size and trimmings. Weighs twenty-two pounds, and guaranteed to carry A Rider Weighing 600 Pounds.

Send for this wheel, examine it critically; costs you nothing to examine it. If you like it, pay Express Agent $9.95 and expressage. If you don't like it, return it. Write today for 1902, large free Catalogue of BICYCLES and SUNDRIES.

$9.95

Sutcliffe & Co., Louisville, Ky.

GOOD, HONEST Buggies

Sixteen years experience in selling standard grades of Vehicles and Harness

Has made our work favorably known for its reliable quality. It is

BUILT FOR SERVICE
Substantial—Honest Material—Real Work.

AND THE PRICE IS ALL RIGHT, TOO

A shrewd discerning buyer, securing the market for the best values, cannot afford to be without our Catalogue. A postal will bring it FREE.
CASH BUYERS' UNION (Inc.), Dept. B-14, Chicago, Ill.

JUST A WORD.

Any of our full line of Carriages and Buggies sent anywhere on

30 Days' Free Trial.

How can we do this? Because we manufacture our own factory all vehicles we sell. Get one of our free money saving catalogues.

Kalamazoo Carriage & Harness Mfg.
Co., Station S, Kalamazoo, Mich.
(Promoters of the Free Trial Plan)

$26.50 BUYS A BUGGY

(with top $33.50) of very superior QUALITY, STYLE and DURABILITY

Entire output of two enormous factories, sold direct to consumer. We manufacture full line Buggies, Carriages, Harness, guarantee all goods, ship on approval.
WE DEFY COMPETITION &
SAVE DEALERS' PROFIT.

Money back if not satisfied. Send for CATALOGUE and SPECIAL OFFER.
UNION BUGGY COMPANY, 262 Saginaw Street, Pontiac, Mich.

The Life of the Wheel

depends upon the make of the wheel.

ELECTRIC WHEELS
last almost forever. Fit any wagon, straight or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 186, Quincy, Ills.

$75 Month and Expenses; no experience needed; position permanent; self-seller.
FRANK MFG. CO., Station A, Cincinnati, O.

More Beacon Lights!

Consecrated Gifts for the Bowery
Mission Rescue Work

"GOD bless the Bowery Mission," is the prayer of very many readers of this journal, who are writing us letters of approval and support of the Mission rescue work. These encouragements are lending new life and zest to the workers. Below we give extracts from a few of the letters received:

Two years ago, last October, my youngest child, a son twenty years old, died in Cuba. For my dear boy's sake, as well as my own, I am particularly interested in the boys of the Bowery Mission, for I have heard him speak about the place, and I know, if he were here to-day, he would say: "Mamma, send the dollar to help rescue the boys." I am not able to work hard, but will try and send that amount yearly, for my sympathies are for the poor misguided boys, who have not will power enough to resist the temptations of evil companions.

Mrs. H. M. B., Westboro, Mass.

I pledge myself to pay this sum ($1) each year, as long as God shall spare my life.

Mrs. H. L. B., Enfield, Mass.

I desire to add my $1, and hope to make the same payment annually. About a year ago, when in New York, I spent a half hour or so in the Mission meeting, and was then convinced that the work being done was a most worthy and excellent one.

D. S. H., Boston.

I pledge to send $1 every year toward the support of the Bowery Mission. May many souls be brought to the Saviour.

Mrs. IDA A. B., Green Haven, N. Y.

I enclose $1, and pray that it may be the means of saving some poor wandering one.

M. E. C., Westport, Conn.

I will be glad to send $1 yearly.

Mrs. M. M., Brooklyn.

I give my pledge to pay the same amount ($1) each coming year. May the great work be abundantly blessed.

Miss L. J., Vineland, N. J.

I pledge myself to send this amount every year. You are doing a grand and noble work, and I hope your success may be very great.

EDITH S., Woodbridge, N. J.

I will be pleased to pay one dollar per year to the support of that good work. Eternity alone will reveal all the good work done by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

RACHEL S. M., Jersey City, N. J.

I think there is a wonderful amount of good being done in this direction, and gladly contribute my mite, praying that a blessing may accompany it.

JOHN McC., Buffalo, N. Y.

The following contributions have been received:

| | | | |
|---|--------|--------------------------|--------|
| Mrs. John Rhodes | $1.00 | H O Snyder | $5.00 |
| Friend, New Orleans | 1.00 | Mrs. W E R. Hudson | 1.00 |
| Mrs. L A Santonius | 1.00 | Ne | 1.00 |
| Mrs. R A Turner | 1.00 | I H N. Lowell, Mass. | 1.00 |
| Subscriber, Pawtucket | 1.00 | M W. Benton Harbor | 1.00 |
| L J Conkey | 1.00 | M | 5.00 |
| For the Master's Cause, Quakers-town, Pa. | 1.00 | A M Waitt | 10.00 |
| Mrs. E D Griswold | 1.00 | Sam Hopley | 1.00 |
| Mrs. S P McCosh | 1.00 | Mrs. A Swickard | 1.00 |
| Miss Annie McEwen | 1.00 | Mr & Mrs A Williams | 1.00 |
| Mr and Mrs J Remhart | 2.00 | I H N. Barrytown, N Y | 1.00 |
| Mrs. W S Campbell | 1.00 | For His Sake, William | 1.00 |
| G S Campbell | 3.00 | Mrs. Lank | 1.00 |
| L M Oliver | 1.00 | Mary E Chichester | 1.00 |
| Mrs. M McCune | 1.00 | L A H Benning | 1.00 |
| Kathleen McCune | 1.00 | Mrs M M Snyder | 1.00 |
| C S Arnold | 1.00 | Mrs Wesley Forrest | 1.00 |
| Mrs T Robertson | 1.00 | Theresa Forrest | 1.00 |
| Mr and Mrs George F Bauer | 2.00 | Mrs Lizzie Platt | 1.00 |
| George H Blake | 5.00 | Mr T J Straunge and wife | 2.00 |
| E L M. Brooklyn, N Y | 2.00 | Mr & Mrs S B Stringfield | 1.00 |
| Tiffany & Co | 10.00 | Mr & Mrs L D Wood | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Jane Doran | 50 | Ellis A Reed | 1.00 |
| Mrs J M Phillips | 1.00 | Hollydale, Va. | 1.00 |
| "Oregon," Summer Lake, Ore. | 1.00 | Mrs N J N. B'klyn | 1.00 |
| Mrs J L H Waldrop | 1.00 | C R Gearhart | 2.00 |
| Mrs J L Ferguson | 1.00 | Mrs C Shakelton | 1.00 |
| Mr & Mrs G Laughlin | 2.00 | I H N. Hudson, Wis. | 1.00 |
| Aurora, Ind. | 1.00 | Ethel Morris | 1.00 |
| M M Shailer | 2.00 | Estella Knowles | 1.00 |
| C O D, Mechanicsburg | 1.00 | Mrs A W Wheelock | 1.00 |
| H C M, Paterson, N J | 2.00 | Marie E Vinton | 5.00 |
| E C Smith | 2.00 | S E T. Lebanon, N H | 50 |
| I H N, Lanark, Ill. | 1.00 | Reader, Me | 1.00 |
| Lydia O Manz | 1.00 | Wm P Symonds | 10.00 |
| Sarah E Smith | 1.00 | M S Milburn, Neb | 20.00 |
| Mrs A J Bonafield | 1.00 | Mrs A M Hall | 1.00 |
| Mrs Veburg | 1.00 | Eliz Davis | 1.00 |
| Mrs M Oldham | 1.00 | E P Davall | 1.00 |
| Mrs E J M. Ladonia | 1.00 | Mrs H M Holmes | 1.00 |
| Tex. | 1.00 | J B M. Leroy, Ill. | 1.00 |
| Lucinia Robinson | 1.00 | Mrs Frank Schledora | 1.00 |
| Mrs Mary E Mitchell | 1.00 | L H Poole | 1.00 |
| Mrs W W McKinney | 1.00 | Mrs H Turner | 1.00 |
| E G Christman | 1.00 | Sam'l Sward | 1.00 |
| J H Christman | 1.00 | Mrs A M Dodd | 1.00 |
| Miss Amelia Bordon | 1.00 | C W Greene | 1.00 |
| Mrs D B Stanley | 1.00 | Jane R Johnston | 1.00 |
| Mrs O Baker | 1.00 | J Y Bonnell | 1.00 |
| E C Burger | 50.00 | M J Bonnell | 1.00 |
| J Hull Browning | 25.00 | Mrs M H Dunlap | 1.00 |
| Mrs Frank Rowland | 25 | Mr A C Howe | 1.00 |
| | | Mrs A C Howe | 1.00 |

DIAMONDS ON CREDIT

Terms to suit your convenience

"Neglected lie the polished darts
When Cupid toys with glittering gems."—Byron

Cupid has laid aside his "polished darts" to make a capture with his Diamond Lasso. When Diamonds lose their power to win a woman's favor, the game is closed.

ANY HONEST PERSON CAN WEAR A GENUINE DIAMOND AT ONCE

We will send for your inspection any Diamond ring, brooch, locket, earrings, scarf-pin, cuff-buttons or other article in our half-million-dollar stock and you may wear it at once on the balance you may pay in small amounts monthly, just as you would put a part of your earnings in a savings bank. Diamonds will pay six times better than any savings bank. Your local jeweler, if he is posted, will tell you that an increase of at least 20 per cent. in Diamond values is certain this year.

GOOD FAITH makes GOOD CREDIT. No matter where you live, if you are honest you may have all the courtesies of a CONFIDENTIAL CHARGE ACCOUNT on such monthly terms as your income will justify you in accepting. We require no cash in advance. We send Diamonds, Watches and Jewelry subject to approval—if you do not buy you are nothing out, for we pay all charges. We make it easy from start to finish.

WE ARE RELIABLE. Step into your local bank and ask how we are rated. They will refer to their Dun's or Bradstreet's book of commercial ratings, and tell you that we stand very high; that our guarantee is good, and further, that you may accept our representations without question. We make liberal exchanges at the full price paid us, when other goods or larger Diamonds are wanted.

OUR GREAT CASH OFFER. If you prefer to buy for cash, we give you a bill of sale, with the option of returning the Diamond at any time within one year and getting spot cash for full amount paid—less ten per cent, the reasonable cost of doing business. For example, you can wear a fifty dollar Diamond for a whole year for $5, less than ten cents per week. No other house makes this offer, nor does any other house follow us in liberal terms and low prices.

DO NOT WASTE MONEY ON IMITATIONS. No person with an ounce of self respect would wear an imitation Diamond. The amount you pay for a worthless imitation, would make the first payment and put you in possession of a Genuine Diamond whose value would constantly increase. Genuine Diamonds are the most easily convertible "cash asset" any one can possess.

Write today for our illustrated CATALOGUE "D," which explains our Confidential Credit System, and terms. We send to all inquirers our unique Souvenir Pocket Piece and Calendar.

LOFTIS BROS & CO. DIAMOND IMPORTERS AND MANUFACTURING JEWELERS
101-103-105-107 State Street Opposite Marshall Field & Co. CHICAGO, U. S. A.

PRESENTS FREE

You can secure any one of our 100 ELEGANT PRESENTS by ordering a little work in our behalf. Our Special Novelty Stone set collar Buttons are the latest creations in the jewelry trade. Heavily Gold Plated, each with a beautiful cut diamond in the center. Cut diamond Stone, Comes in Ruby, Emerald, Amethyst, etc. Every lady and gentleman needs collar buttons. Show our new Buttons and you will sell to all who examine. We are manufacturers of jewelry novelties, not the inferior quality offered in so many Scheme Ways, but honest goods, 11k Gold plate, goods that sell on sight and bring us future trade which we are after. AN HONEST OFFER OF A PRESENT—Send name and address and we send the Stone Set Collar Buttons, free postpaid. $1.10 the 24 at 10c. each. Send us the $2.40 and we send you the present you select and have earned. Full instructions and our Large Premium List showing 100 other reliable presents for you to select from sent with goods. Address
CHAMPION SUPPLY CO., Dept. 749, CHICAGO, ILL.

Split Hickory Vehicles

are made of first grade, second growth hickory. Split—not sawed—and they will outwear any vehicle on the market. We know this to be a fact and we will send them anywhere

On 30 Days' Free Trial.

Take the job from the depot, run it a month and if you are not fully satisfied it is the greatest bargain you ever heard of, send it back without paying us one cent. Send for free catalogue showing our full line of vehicles and harness.

OHIO CARRIAGE MFG. CO., Station 54, Cincinnati Ohio.

No. A456 $49.00. Different from the ordinary buggy, is our latest style for 1902. We use Long Distance Axle with belt collar which keeps out all dust and mud, runs 1000 miles without reolling. Combined Quick Shift Shaft Coupler and Anti-Rattler, positively prevents all rattling, can change from shaft to pole in one minute. Wheels and Gear, every stick of timber guaranteed best second growth hickory, every forging and bolt best Norway iron. (Wheels furnished any size.) Plano Body, 20, 22 or 24 inches wide, 55 in. long. Corrugating Body, 24 in. wide. Spring cushion and back, upholstered with best grade gold figured Trimmings, green velvet or whipcord; high wings on seat cushion. Top lined with a special light color to match seat trimmings, edges of top lining pinked, back stays pinked and stitched a special design to match top lining, bottom of body and panels carpeted to match trimmings. (Leather or dark broadcloth trimmings, dark top lining and carpet to match when desired.) Dash rail, panel back rail, prop nuts, seat handles trimmings, painting and everything to match. We give you choice of any style upholstery and any style and color painting you prefer, but sell direct to you at wholesale prices. We ship subject to NO MONEY. examination without any money with order, and if you are not satisfied in every way, and do not feel you have saved money and have a better buggy than you could have bought elsewhere for anything like our price, return to us and we will pay all freight. We warrant our buggy 3 years and guarantee safe delivery. Do you want, or are you interested in any way in a vehicle or harness of any kind? If so, send for our new free vehicle Catalogue. We have all styles at prices that will interest and save you money.

MARVIN SMITH COMPANY, 53 N. JEFFERSON ST., CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

DEAL DIRECT WITH THE FACTORY

Don't pay retail price for carriages or harness. Write for our catalogue and learn about our system of selling direct from factory to customer. Two profits are saved to you. Satisfaction is guaranteed, or you can return the purchase and we will pay freight charges both ways. We have the largest assortment of buggies, surreys, phaetons, and other high grade vehicles, as well as harness and other horse accessories, in America. Write for the catalogue to-day.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE & HARNESS CO.
ST. LOUIS, MO. } Write to nearest office. { COLUMBUS, O.
P. O. Box 54. } { P. O. Box 712.

Back of Every Good Complexion

Pears'
Soap

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
T. De Witt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, APRIL 2, 1902

VOL. 25—NO. 14. PRICE 5 CENTS
Offices: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1902, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

FROM A PHOTOGRAPH

SEE ARTICLE ON PAGE 292

A NATIVE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEETING IN FOO-CHOW, CHINA

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

To be Answered in the Issue of April 9

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unequalled blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 16

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 23

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a life in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Miscellaneous Questions

H. F. Flandreau, S. D. How many persons witnessed the ascension of Christ?

The eleven saw him ascend, and two angels testified that he did ascend. (See Mark 16: 19; Luke 24: 50, 51; Acts 1: 2, 9).

F. Y. B., Watertown, Mass. Will you please tell me how many legal voters there are in the United States?

At the last Presidential election there were 13,600,000 votes cast. This is probably twenty per cent. or more below the real number of legal voters.

J. M. B., Bridgeport, Ala. What did Job mean by saying (19: 26), that in his flesh he would see God?

The Revised Version reverses the statement, and, doubtless, with greater accuracy. It renders it, "Without my flesh shall I see God." Even at that early time, men were beginning to realize that death was not the end of life, but after the flesh had been laid away in the grave, there was a part of a man which would survive and would enter into God's presence.

Reader, New York. The superintendent of a Sunday School in this city has laid down the principle that no one is fit to teach in his school who ever goes to the theatre, plays at cards or drinks intoxicating drink, and he requests the resignation of any teacher who does either of the three. I am much attached to the girls in my class, and I have the happiness of believing that I have been the means of leading more than one of them to Christ, but I am fond of dancing and do dance occasionally. Am I bound to resign?

We would rather recommend you to give up the dance. We cannot prove that there is any intrinsic wrong in dancing, but unquestionably it has led to evil in many cases. The girls who know their teacher dances, may not have their teacher's self-control and they may not be as careful as she about the places where they dance, or the character of their partners. In following her example they may drift into sin. The Apostle Paul declared that there was no harm in eating meat, but if he learned that meat caused his brother to offend, he would eat no meat as long as the world stood (I. Cor. 8: 13). If you act on his principle you will quit the dancing-floor and go on teaching.

L. A. P., Ware, Mass. What takes the place of miracles in our day?

If you mean as evidence, we should say that every genuine conversion takes the place of miracles. It is a greater achievement to change the disposition of a person than any miracle on record. There is nothing more difficult. The drunkard and the vicious person redeemed from the bondage of sin, and becoming a pure, holy, consecrated being, is an astonishing spectacle. Nothing could work such a change but the divine power.

Major J. N. Parker, of the Salvation Army, writes: "I saw your editorial on 'How Shall the Christian Dress?' Evidently you have overlooked Num. 15: 38-41, which is a specific command, together with the reasons. A most without exception, all sects drift into a dress peculiar to themselves. The more spiritual, the more simple and unworldly. As you state, some go to extremes on this line; due, possibly, to fanaticism, or because of the extremes of the world. We are told to 'come out from among them, and be ye separate,' (II. Cor. 6: 17). Surely we can have nothing that will help us to obey this command literally so well as a distinct dress. It is a great cross to wear a distinctive dress; yet, Jesus said, 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me' (Matt. 16: 24). It would be impossible for us to do our work in the Salvation Army without it. The visitation of the saloons without it, would call forth scores of insults, where we have but one without it. The Salvation Army uniform would really seem to be a veritable sign-post to help and to heaven for thousands who grope in the darkness for both. Our uniform is a great safeguard from temptation. Those who wear it are neither so solicited to evil, or so likely to go into or do evil, as if without it."

Subscriber, Rutherford, N. J. Liquor is the blight of a certain home, but the wife herself is a total abstainer. The pastor and officers of the local church all support the liquor traffic. The pastor said he would never preach a temperance sermon. There are thirteen saloons in the town, open Sundays as well as week-days, and the owners of eight of them are on the paying member list of the church. Is the wife right in refusing to go or contribute to that church, believing there cannot be any spiritual blessing? By staying away, she will accomplish nothing; whereas, by going, she may and very probably will, find other members of her own way of thinking. With God's blessing, this little, earnest, praying band of Christians may "leaven the whole lump," and be the means of bringing about the needed reform. Work and prayer have overcome equally difficult obstacles. Let her write to Pastor Sheldon, of Topeka, Kan., for his little pamphlet on Temperance, which may help her greatly.

William G., Minneapolis, Minn. What is the origin of the word "Reverend," as applied to clergymen of the different denominations, and why do they use it, as the word is used only once, and that in regard to God himself? Psalm 3: 9.

The title is one of courtesy merely (like "Mr." or "Mrs."), and has so long been in use that it has become an established habit, in addressing clergymen, to thus identify them with their sacred vocation. Beyond this, it has no significance.

Reader, Azalia, Ind. How many times was Jesus anointed, and by whom?

The question has been disputed from early times and there are still people holding divergent views. Each of the evangelists mentions an anointing. All authorities agree that Matthew and Mark refer to the same incident. Some contend that John's narrative refers to a different anointing, but the majority of scholars think that he refers to the same. Some again hold that Luke's account is also of the same incident, but the majority believe that it was of another. That is to say, that there were two anointings, one in Galilee, described by Luke, and the other at Bethany, described by Matthew, Mark and John. If we assume that this is the correct view, we must also assume that there were two women who did it. The one who anointed him in Galilee, a "sinner," that is a person of unchaste life, and the other at ham, inasmuch as the five brothers were still living. These are a few of the passages directly implying the doctrine, though there are teachers, very sincere in their belief, who put another construction on the passages, and others making them harmonize with the doctrine that the soul has no separate existence.

Mrs. M., Monticello, Colo. When man and wife work together, is it not unjust for the wife to claim all the pay? Should it not be divided?

Their interest is mutual, and certainly, in the case stated, each should have a voice as to expenditures. Some men are so gallant that they will cast all their earnings in a wife's lap, trusting implicitly to her judgment in making the best use of it. Where both husband and wife are bread-winners, neither should claim the exclusive direction in money matters, but they should make them a subject of mutual and just agreement, with generous confidence on both sides.

F. B. R., Ashton, Ill. What is the history of the stone in Westminster Abbey, on which all of England's sovereigns have been crowned, and which will soon be used at the coronation of Edward VII?

The stone enclosed in the coronation chair, has a singular history. It is known as the Lia Fail, or stone of destiny, and according to legend, was the very stone upon which Jacob pillowed his head when he had the wonderful dream of the ladder and the angels. Further legends trace its travels from the East to the "Western Isles," where a portion of the Hebrews found exile. It was taken to Ireland, thence to Scotland, and used as a coronation stone there for many years. After the Union, it was removed to Westminster Abbey.

Mrs. J. W. C., Centre Cross, Va. Why is it that the brigands could not have been caught when that large sum of money was paid to them for the release of Miss Ellen M. Stone? It is a mystery to many readers.

It is not an easy matter, in a mountainous country, for troops unfamiliar with the district to surround or capture natives who know every pass, rock, cave and crevice in the range. Doubtless the bandits took all precautions to secure their own safety before they liberated the prisoners. The men who paid the ransom were pledged not to aid in capturing them and, even to bandits, the pledge of a Christian's word is sacred.

A number of our readers have written to THE MAIL BAG commending our position on the subject of card-playing. E. A. C. writes:

I was much gratified to see the answer in regard to card-playing and theatres, also the article in the "Editorial Forum." Even deacons and their families indulge in these amusements. If children are allowed to play at home, and if they go elsewhere and engage in such games I do not see how their parents can draw the line. If they acquire fondness for such things the parents are to blame. I should not wish to take such a responsibility.

Mrs. J. C. M., Malcolm, Neb., writes: I have been fighting card-playing, and after reading in my HERALD, under the head, "Christian and Cards," I cannot see why a member of the church could think for a moment that there is nothing hurtful in a game of cards. The card itself is hurtful. It is the gambler's tool. Christian people should not handle cards, much less teach the little ones to play. Yet how many fathers and mothers set the example.

Alex. P., Unionville, Md. There is no such passage.

W. R. G., Portland, Me. He is living in California, we believe.

Reader, St. Louis. Yes, we will be pleased to receive accounts of notable old-time revivals in an State, but all such communications should be strictly accurate in every particular.

Mr. W. H. Sanger, of Claremore, Indian Territory, can use to advantage in his Sunday School religious papers, Sunday School quarterlies, lesson papers and hymn books. Any church or Sunday School having a surplus of these can help find a good field for their use.

Miss Bessie G., Millbrook, Pa. It would seem that the contact with God's people might be the means of saving such a person. It is very hard to draw the line. Certainly, a person living in open and flagrant sin and defiant of all good, should not be invited to go to the front in church work.

Mrs. J. M. M., Ethel Landing, Pa. Jean Paul Marat was a noted French revolutionary leader, doctor, scientist, philosopher, writer and politician. His career and his dramatic death at the hands of Charlotte Corday are related in the histories and encyclopedias.

Reader, Brooklyn. The heirs can collect a debt due to the estate, and a man's children are entitled to payment of debts due to their parent. Even if the debt were a private one, the heirs knowing nothing of it, that fact would not absolve the debtor who is bound in honor to pay it, although it may not be legally collectable.

M. J. Brown, Catskill, N. Y. In 1777, Washington and a committee called on Mrs. Elizabeth Ross at her home in Philadelphia, and asked her to make a flag from a design they brought. In the original design, the stars were six-pointed, but Mrs. Ross suggested that five-pointed stars be substituted. The suggestion was adopted.

THE PEACEFUL RIVER

Flow on, sweet river, gently flow,
Thou symbol of a life of peace,
Thy quiet waters breathe release
From life's tempestuous sea of woe.
The waterfowl upon thy breast
Float idly as a dreamer's boat,
And when the sunset tints the West
And the robin sings his evening note,
Still thou proceedest on thy way,
Till in the days of yet to be,
The waters that we see to-day
Flow out into the boundless sea.

O, Thou who all my life hast crowned
With tender mercies, grant, I pray,
That as I drift, from day to day,
Upon life's river, seaward bound,
The waters may as peaceful be,
Calmed by the Spirit from above,
Until I reach the boundless sea
Of Thy eternal Life and Love.

No. Tonawanda, N. Y.

HENRY SIDER.

Bethany, who was Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus. Some have supposed that the sinful woman of the Galilean anointing was Mary Magdalene, but there is little evidence in the Gospels to support that view.

E. D. Who was the king for whom cards were invented?

There are various accounts of the origin of playing cards. Probably the oldest is that current in China. A standard Chinese dictionary says cards were invented in the reign of the emperor, Seun-ho (1120 A. D.), for the amusement of that monarch and his wives. Other accounts attribute their invention to the Brahmins, the Arabs and the Saracens. The earliest reliable mention of them is found in the account books of the treasurer of Charles VI., of France (about 1392), who paid one Jacquemin Grignonner, "for three packs of cards of divers colors and many devices, to be taken to the king for his amusement," etc.

W. D. Y., Gas City, Ind. Is there any passage in the Bible explicitly teaching that the soul may exist apart from the body after death?

Paul evidently looked forward to such a condition when he said that he was willing to be absent from the body and present with the Lord (II. Cor. 5: 8). He refers to the subject again in I. Thess. 4: 14, when he speaks of Christ bringing with him before the resurrection them who sleep in him. John saw (Rev. 6: 10) the souls of the martyrs under the altar, clearly without their bodies. The Parable of Dives and Lazarus (Luke 16: 19-31) implies that the resurrection had not taken place when Dives made his petition to Abra-

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, APRIL 2, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

TWO SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS

MOUNTAIN ABORIGINES OF VIGAN, LUZON

EVANGELIST MARQUEZ AND FAMILY

MANILA'S QUAINT SCHOOLS VISITED

BY AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN observant friend of mine, who has been a resident of Manila for twenty-two years, said recently that the people who come for a week or ten days, go away to lecture and write books; even after a few months some will write a magazine article; but if a man has been in the Philippines for a year or more, he cannot even be induced to hazard a verbal opinion. This is largely true, for as one gains even a slight knowledge of the language, and touches that unsolved problem, the Oriental's method of thought, and sees the extremes of life—poverty undreamed of, that could not exist outside nature's great poorhouse, the tropics, and wealth that brings ease and luxury that would shortly kill an American—he comes to realize that all generalizations are worthless, and that talk about desire for free government and personal liberty by the average Asiatic is merely empty vamping. The new system of education in the Philippines, headed by Commissioner Bernard Moses, formerly professor in the University of California, and Dr. Fred W. Atkinson, a Harvard alumnus, as General Superintendent, is rapidly making history. Several former I. W. U. students are in that army of teachers who are now scattered over a territory as long as from Duluth to Galveston, and who are, jointly and severally, the most homesick outfit the sun shines on, when they get their prior to the revolution, when the friars were driven out and their lands confiscated. These friars came to the Archipelago on every ship that brought the conquerors, whether from Mexico or Spain. Many of them took that same heroic part as did Father Marquette, and, like him, filled early graves in that land where they had gone as standard-bearers of the Cross. Whatever may be the vices of the modern friars, and of many of the priests, too—and these are often unspeakable—credit is due the friars for introducing the Roman alphabet and Arabic numerals. All of the main dialects were reduced to writing, and a scant religious literature was published. No book was allowed to circulate that did not bear the seal of the church.

Among the early friars were Jesuits, who have ever been students as well as schemers. But after a time they were expelled from the islands, and the Dominicans and Augustines became the leaders in matters educational. It seems that many of the early friars were themselves teachers, and if the beautiful legends

CONTINUED ON PAGE 298

NATIVE "PENITENCIAS" IN MANILA
To do Penance, they Prostrate Themselves in the Roadway

GOSPEL WORK IN AGUILAR, MANILA
It Began under Difficulties, with a Meeting in the Open Street home letters, written from six to fifteen weeks previously. In the old days, the church was the state and the state was the church. The bondage was far more complete, until that May morning when "Dewey discovered the Philippines," than in the worst days in Mexico, are to be accepted, some were men of

AGUINALDO ON THE U. S. "VICKSBURG"

A MUSICAL FILIPINO FAMILY AT ZAMBOANGO

AGUINALDO'S MOTHER

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

... SERMON BY ...
Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.

THE LOST SCEPTRE

TEXT—I. Cor. 15: 54:

"Death is swallowed up in victory"

ABOUT eighteen hundred and seventy Easter mornings have awakened the earth. In France for three centuries the almanacs made the year begin at Easter, until Charles IX made the year begin at January first. In the Tower of London there is a royal pay-roll of Edward I, on which there is an entry of eighteen pence for four hundred colored and pictured Easter eggs, with which the people sported. In Russia, slaves were fed and alms were distributed on Easter. Ecclesiastical councils met in Pontus, in Gaul, in Rome, in Achaia to decide the particular day, and after a controversy more animated than gracious, decided it; and now through all Christendom, in some way the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after March twenty-first is filled with Easter rejoicing.

The royal court of the Sabbaths is made up of fifty-two. Fifty-one are princes in the royal household, but Easter is queen. She wears richer diadem, she sways a more jeweled sceptre, and in her smile nations are irradiated. How welcome she is when, after a harsh winter and late spring, she seems to step out of the snowbank rather than the conservatory, to come out of the North instead of the South, out of the arctic rather than the tropics, dismounting from the icy equinox; but welcome this queenly day, holding high in her right hand the wrenched-off bolt of Christ's sepulchre, and holding high in her left hand the key to all the cemeteries in Christendom.

My text is an ejaculation. It is spun out of hallelujahs. Paul wrote right on in his argument about the resurrection and observed all the laws of logic; but when he came to write the words of the text, his fingers and his pen and the parchment on which he wrote took fire, and he cried out, "Death is swallowed up in victory!" It is an exciting thing to see an army routed and flying. They run each other down. They scatter everything valuable in the track. Unwheeled artillery. Hoof of horse on breast of wounded and dying man. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, of Napoleon's track of ninety thousands corpses in the snowbanks of Russia, of the retreat of our armies from Manassas, or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Beth-horan with their armies, while the hailstorms of heaven and the swords of Joshua's host struck them with their fury. In my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that a black giant proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his host all the aches and pains and malarias and cancers and distempers and epidemics of the ages. He marched them down, drilling them in the northwest wind and amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave-mound. He pitched tent of charnel house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread commanded by consumptions, some in double-quick, commanded by pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit, and some by one stroke of the battle-axe of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the door of hospitals and sick rooms, and won all the victories in all the great battle-fields of all the five continents. Forward, march! ordered and all the generals and commanders-in-chief, and all presidents and kings and sultans and czars dropped under the feet of his war-charger. But one Christmas night his antagonist was born. As most of the plagues, and sicknesses, and despotisms come out of the East, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the same quarter. Power is given him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands, and marshal them against the black giant. Fields have already been won, but the last day of the world's existence will see the decisive battle. When Christ shall lead forth his two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead, and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the riven sepulchres will take him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take him from above, and death shall be swallowed up in victory.

The Conqueror of Conquerors

The old braggart that threatened the conquest and demolition of the planet has lost his throne, has lost his sceptre, has lost his palace, has lost his prestige, and the one word written over all the gates of mausoleum and catacomb and necropolis, on cenotaph and sarcophagus, on the lonely khan of the arctic explorer, and on the catafalque of great cathedral, written in capitals of azalia and calla-lily, written in musical cadence, written in doxology of great assemblages, written on the sculptured door of the family vault is "victory." Coronal word, embannered word, apocalyptic word, chief word of triumphal arch under which conquerors return. Victory! Word shouted at Culloden and Balaklava and Blenheim, at Megiddo and Solferino, at Marathon, where the Athenians drove back the Medes; at Poitiers, where Charles Martel broke the ranks of the Saracens; at Salamis, where Themistocles in the great sea-fight confounded the Persians, and at the door of the Eastern cavern of chiseled rock, where Christ came out through a recess and throttled the King of Terrors, and put him back in the niche from which the celestial Conqueror had just emerged. Aha! when the jaws of the Eastern mausoleum took down the black giant, "death was swallowed up in victory." I proclaim the abolition of death.

The Sepulchre in Ruins

The old antagonist is driven back into mythology with all the lore about Stygian ferry, and Charon with oar and boat. Melrose Abbey and Kenilworth Castle are no more in ruins than is the sepulchre. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloak-room at a Governor's or President's levee. We stop at such cloak-room, and leave in charge of a servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing-room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet, and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of this world. At the close of an earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved and brightened and purified and glorified.

You and I do not want our bodies returned as they are now. We want to get rid of all their weaknesses and all their susceptibilities to fatigue and all their slowness of locomotion. We want them put through a chemistry of soil and heat and cold and changing seasons, out of which God will reconstruct them as much better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn in Central Park is better than the sickest patient in Bellevue Hospital. But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation; the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best mood, in the very parlor of the universe, the four walls burnished and paneled and pictured and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all the ages has been able to invent. Victory!

Chariots of Fire

This view, of course, makes it of but little importance whether we are cremated or sepulchred. If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ashes. If any prefer incineration let them have it without cavil or protest. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law, as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best spirits have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated—P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelistic singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula Bridge; John Rodgers, cremated by persecution; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford; Pothinus, and Blandina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius—at least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated, and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies. If the world lasts as much longer as it has thus far, there perhaps may be no room for the large acreage set apart for resting-places, but there is plenty of room yet, and the race need not pass that bridge of fire until it comes to it. The most of us prefer the old way. But whether out of natural disintegration or cremation, we shall get that luminous, buoyant, glad, transcendent, magnificent, inexplicable structure called the resurrection body; you will have it, I will have it. I say to you to-day, as Paul said to Agrippa: "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" That far-up cloud, higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of? Drops of water from a river, other drops from a lake, still other drops from a stagnant pool, but now embodied in a cloud and kindled by the sun. If God can make such a lustrous cloud out of water-drops, many of them soiled and impure, and fetched from miles away, can he not transport the fragments of a human body from the earth, and out of them build a radiant body? Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones and muscle and flesh are made, set them up again if they have fallen? If a manufacturer of telescopes drop a telescope on the floor, and it breaks, can he not mend it again so you can see through it? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which he originally fashioned, can he not restore it. Ay, if the manufacturer of the telescope, by the use of a new glass and a change of material, can make a better instrument than that which was originally constructed, and actually improve it, do you not think the fashioner of the human eye may improve its sight and multiply the natural eye by the thousandfold additional forces of the resurrection eye?

"Why should it be thought with you an incredible thing that God should raise the dead?" Things all around us suggest it. Out of what grew all these flowers? Out of the mold and the earth. Resurrected! Resurrected! The radiant butterfly, where did it come from? The loathsome caterpillar. That albatross that smites the tempest with its wings, where did it come from? A senseless shell. Near Bergerac, France, in a Celtic tomb under a block, were found flower seeds that had been buried two thousand years. The explorer took the flower seed and planted it, and it came up; it bloomed in bluebell and heliotrope.

Two Thousand Years Buried

yet resurrected into vigorous life. A traveler says he found in a mummy-pit in Egypt garden-peas that had been buried there three thousand years ago. He brought them out, and on the 4th of June, 1844, he planted them, and in thirty days they sprang up. Buried three thousand years, yet resurrected. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Where did all this silk come from—the silk that adorns your persons and your homes? In the hollow of a staff a Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations. The pageantry of bannered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silkworms. And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly body, this insignificant earthly life, our bodies unfold into something worthy of the coming eternities? Put silver into diluted nitre and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force organizes.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The insects flew and the worms crawled last autumn feeble and feeble, and then stopped. They have taken no food. They want none. They lie dormant and insensible, but soon the south wind will blow the resurrection trumpet, and the air and the earth will be full of them. Do you not think that God can do as much for our bodies as he does for the wasps and the spiders and the snails? This morning at half-past four o'clock there was a resurrection. Out of the night, the day. In a few weeks there will be a resurrection in all our gardens. Why not some day a resurrection amid the graves?

Ever and anon there are instances of men and women entranced. A trance is

Death Followed by Resurrection

after a few days; total suspension of mental power and voluntary action. Rev. William Tennent, a great evangelist of the last generation, of whom Dr. Archibald Alexander, a man far from being sentimental, wrote in most eulogistic terms—Rev. William Tennent seemed to die. His spirit apparently left the body. People came in day after day and said: "He is dead, he is dead." But the soul that fled returned, and Will Tennent lived to write what he had seen while his soul was gone. It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world, from which it comes back, a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life to which it must return. Do not this waking up of men from trance and this waking up of insects from winter lifelessness and this waking up of grains buried three thousand years ago make it easier for you to believe that your body and mine after the vacation of the grave shall rouse and rally, though there be three thousand years between our last breath and the sounding of the archangelic reveille? Physiologists tell us that while the most of our bodies are built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing, and the loss of a finger is a hindrance, and the injury of a toe-joint makes us lame, still that we have two or three useless physical apparati, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell what they are good for. They may be the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state, to be indis-

The Woman with the Shining Face *

By REV. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN, D.D.

IN the providence of God, on account of a serious illness, I have been obliged recently to spend a little time in the tropics, and my steps were directed toward Jamaica, in the West Indies. I shall never cease to be grateful for the restored physical strength that came to me while there, and to all nervously exhausted people everywhere I would say, turn your attention to this beautiful island if you would have almost instant help.

Jamaica is a network of places which are almost beautiful beyond description. Not the least interesting feature of the island is the people. The natives are like the Southern negroes in many respects, and yet unlike them in so many, that the traveler is interested in all whom he may meet from the moment of his landing. There are, however, thousands of people in Jamaica who have come to labor in the fields, picking coffee and gathering the fruit of different kinds, who are natives of East India, and are known in the island as coolie laborers. They have been practically "farmed out" by the English Government to contractors in the island, and are obliged to work five years, for which they receive a shilling a day, and are permitted to renew the was to be found there of those who had renounced Hinduism and embraced Christ.

It was my pleasure, while in Jamaica, to meet, and learn to know intimately, the manager of the United Fruit Company, Mr. E. B. Hopkins, one of the leading Christian workers of the island, and a man whose life is telling for Christ. He said to me one day, "There is a young woman missionary laboring here in Jamaica whom you ought to know. She is in every way remarkable." One day, while riding in the electric cars at Kingston, the capital, with Mr. Hopkins, he said to me suddenly, "There she is." It was the missionary. She was plainly clad in white, but the light that shone in her countenance lent her the best beauty that can adorn a woman's features. It was Miss M. B. Croll who sat in front of us—the missionary of the United Free Church of Scotland. She had formerly labored in India, where she learned the language, but because of ill-health, had been obliged to return home. Finally, she was assigned to what seemed a hopeless work in this portion of the West Indies; but it has turned out to be a most remarkable work. She has established a church for the East India people, with sixty or seventy members, and they are standing, despite opposition to their new-found poor lepers, while they cannot touch Miss Croll, kiss her shadow and are grateful for the benediction of her presence. By appointment of the Governor, she is one of the chaplains to visit prisoners in the penitentiary. She visits new settlements, and has established in different parts of Jamaica missions which will ultimately grow into churches. When the ten years of service are over, these coolies are gathered together in a great building—seven or eight hundred of them—and for at least a month kept under the severest discipline, before they are transported to India. It was my privilege, on the last day of my stay, to pass through this great barracks with the missionary. She said to me, "This is exactly like the bazaars in India." Men, women, and little children were everywhere; they squatted down on the floor, after the manner of the inhabitants of India belonging to their class, their arms and ankles, necks and even their foreheads in many cases covered with silver bangles. They rose to salute the missionary again and again, kissed her hand, made their salaam, and when she sat down to tell them the story of Christ, they listened as I have never seen people listen to the Gospel. She came away from the great crowd, having deeply impressed the people, I am sure; but I feel very contract for another five years, which most of them do, making their stay in Jamaica ten years in all. They are to be seen in all parts of the island. As one rides through the country, he finds them in the fields, tramping along the highway, clad after the peculiar custom of the people of their own land, with white turbans upon their heads. They are of dark skin, but with well-cut features, and perfectly straight hair. Their homes are thatched-roof huts, the sides being generally made of the dried cane stocks. As a rule, the dwellings are without a floor, for, singularly enough, the government taxes a house with a floor, while one without is exempt from taxation. It would seem almost as if the administration put a premium upon a filthy home. Religiously, these coolies are Hindoos, and for a long time practically nothing of a missionary character was known for them on the island, but to-day that is all changed.

A SECTION OF THE COOLIE SETTLEMENT IN JAMAICA, W. I.

MISS CROLL AND SOME OF HER NATIVE ASSISTANTS IN MISSIONARY WORK

One day, while riding just out of Port Antonio, I saw a little building, in front of which was a sign, reading, "Presbyterian Church for the East India People." At once I was interested, and then learned that a devoted missionary, laboring among these people, had led many of them to Christ, and that a fairly good membership faith, as true and loyal followers of the risen Christ. I went with her to the little church out at the end of the city of Kingston, and I have rarely seen one so interested as the missionary, when she turned over the pages of the church roll, and told me of this one and that, until I felt as if I knew them all.

Miss Croll's work is varied in character. When a ship with people from the East Indies comes into the harbor, she is one of the first to go on board by courtesy of the government. These poor coolies have been shut up for weeks in a poorly ventilated vessel; and when the missionary goes on board they rarely turn to look at her at first, but when she begins to speak in their own language, with shouts and with sobs they gather at her feet. She never fails to tell them the story of Christ, and they remember her through all the years of their service.

There are lepers in Jamaica among the coolies, and Miss Croll counts it a joy to visit these poor, oppressed souls, saying a word of cheer to this one and praying with that one, until it again becomes literally true, as in the old times, when one of her illustrious sisters, as she passed through the hospitals, found the patients turning to kiss her shadow as it fell across their cots. These confident that she made a deeper impression upon me than upon any of them. She is practically the minister of the little church, and labors constantly to lead the people fully to know Christ.

As we rode together she pointed out the Chinese temple and said: "Do you know there is not a missionary in the city working for them [the Chinese], and so I have decided to begin the work." I spoke to her about the beautiful scenery of the Blue Mountains, and she gave assent, but went back immediately to the work which was on her heart, and said: "Is there anything in this world that can compare with the joy of leading souls to Christ?" And I felt rebuked that I had spoken of anything else. "Oh!" she said, as I bade her farewell, "If I could only have a missionary to assist me. Some young woman who would give her life to Christ, and some rich man or woman somewhere who would support this missionary. What a joy it would be to me, for then, don't you see," she said, "instead of leading one to Christ, I might at least in every case have the joy of seeing two come." We said good-by, she to go her way and I mine, and I have not yet ceased to thank God for the privilege of two hours of such delightful fellowship.

THE LOST SCEPTRE

insensibly valuable in the next state. The Jewish rabbis and the scientists of our day have found out that there are two or three superfluities of body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state.

I called at my friend's house one summer day. I found the yard all piled up with the rubbish of carpenter's and mason's work. The door was off. The ladders had torn up the floor. The roof was being fixed in cupola. All the pictures were gone, and the paper-hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before when I visited that house everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And, lo! what was his joy when, at the end of six months, he returned and he found the old house had been enlarged and improved and glorified. That is your body. It looks well now—all the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after a while your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic, and every nerve, muscle and bone and tissue and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burnished and adorned and raised and cupolaed and enlarged, and all the improvements of heaven introduced, and you will move into it on resurrection day. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Continued

A cruel heathen warrior in South Africa heard Mr. Moffat, the missionary, preach about the resurrection, and he said to the missionary: "Will my father rise in the last day?" "Yes," said the missionary. "Will all the dead in battle rise?" said the cruel chieftain. "Yes," said the missionary. Then said the warrior, "Let me hear no more about the resurrection, there can be no resurrection, there shall be no resurrection. I have slain thousands in battle. Will they rise?" Ah, there will be more to rise on that day than those whose crimes have never been repented of will want to see. But for all others who allowed Christ to be their pardon and their life it will be a day of victory.

The thunders of the last day will be the salvo that greets you into harbor. The lightnings will be only the torches of triumphal procession marching down to escort you home. The burning worlds flashing through immensity will be the rockets celebrating your coronation on thrones where you will reign forever and forever and forever. Where is death? What have we to do with death? As your reunited body and soul swing off from this planet on that last day you will see deep gashes all up and down the hills, deep gashes all through the valleys, and they will be the emptied graves, they will be the abandoned sepulchres, with rough ground tossed on each side of them, and there will be fallen monuments and cenotaphs, and then for the first time you will appreciate the full exhilaration of the text "Death is swallowed up in victory."

Hail the Lord of earth and heaven!
Praise to thee by both be given;
Thee we greet triumphant now,
Hail the resurrection thou!

SALVATION AND SERVICE

PETER, ÆNEAS
AND DORCAS

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 13
ACTS 9: 32-43

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "JESUS CHRIST MAKETH THEE WHOLE"
ACTS 9: 34

THE LESSON STORY

TO have a sick friend who had been bedridden for eight years, cured instantly, not with medicine or surgery, but by word of mouth—can we realize what a marvelous thing that would be? It would add still more to the wonder of it if the person effecting the cure were only a common man, once engaged in a lowly business. Thus it was that Peter made Æneas well. Peter, once a fisherman, but now the Apostle of Jesus, went from town to town, preaching the Gospel, and healing all manner of diseases. All that he did was done in the Name of Jesus Christ. As a great firm in London acts all over the world through the agents that speak and deal in its name, so Jesus in the book of "Acts" works through his disciples, who act "in His Name."

The people had such confidence in Peter that they brought their sick and laid them in the streets, that, as Peter was passing by, his shadow might fall upon them, and heal them. One day, on his journeyings, Peter came into Lydda to see how some friends of Jesus were getting on, who had been obliged to leave their homes in Jerusalem because of persecution. They told him about "such a sick man," who had been paralyzed for eight years, and could not even turn himself upon his bed. His name was Æneas. Peter, out of the kindness of his heart, and also with a desire to show how great was the power of Jesus, went to the home where Æneas was. Æneas was lying on a heavy rug or cushion, placed on the floor. On just such beds people in Lydda slept at night, and in the daytime they rolled them up, and put them in some out-of-the-way place. When Peter stood by the bed of Æneas, he looked at him and said: "Æneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole; arise, and make thy bed." Peter had no sooner spoken the word, than Jesus sent strength into the sick man, and he got up and rolled up his bed, and put it away, and then he walked out of the house, and into the streets of the town. People who saw him wondered at what had been done, and when they were told that it had been done in the Name of Jesus, they themselves became his friends.

Joppa-by-the-sea was a city only ten miles from Lydda, and it did not take long for the news to travel there of the wonderful cure of Æneas. There had just died in Joppa a most charitable and well beloved woman. It had been her delight to make garments for the poor, particularly the widows and orphans. She had probably done more than she was able to do, and so had brought on sickness and death. Her body had been prepared for burial, and her friends had gathered around her for the last sad rites. But when it was told what had been done for Æneas, some one dared to hope that Peter might, in the Name of Jesus, even bring the beloved Dorcas back to life. And so they sent to Lydda for him. Peter started for Joppa at once, nothing doubting that in the Name of Jesus he might even raise the dead. When he came to the house, and to the room where the dead woman was lying, he found her weeping friends gathered about her, and they showed Peter the very garments, the clothes and dresses, which Dorcas had made for them, which they were even then wearing. But he would not let them stay. He wanted to be alone with God, and he wished the room to be very quiet, so that when Dorcas should come back to life, she should not be frightened by the loud cries of the weeping women. When all had gone out, Peter knelt down and prayed that the life of Dorcas might come back. So sure was Peter that it would be done, that he crossed the room to where she was lying, and spoke to her, and said: "Tabitha, arise!" How quickly she opened her eyes! And when she saw Peter she sat up. She must have known Peter. Then Peter took her by the hand, and helped her to stand up. And while she was standing Peter went to call her friends to come back and see her alive and well again. Can we imagine how surprised and happy they were to have their dear friend back again. There were more tears, but they were glad tears. Instead of loud weeping, there was joyous laughter.

Lydda was not a large city, and we may be sure that everybody who lived there came in that day to see Dorcas, and tell her how glad they were to have her back again. And when it was told them that her life had been brought back by the power of Jesus, they became his followers. Peter stayed in Joppa many days, teaching the people to love and serve Jesus. A man by the name of Simon, whose business was making leather, a tanner by trade, gave Peter a home in his house. Many people, no doubt, came to visit Peter there, in order to hear more about Jesus.

Illustration and Application

The saints which dwell at Lydda. We commonly think of saints as a favored few, endowed with graces to which most of men are not expected to aspire. All "Called But all the church members at Lydda were to be Saints" called "saints," and we are all "called to be saints," that is, holy ones. The command is "Be ye holy for I am holy." To be holy is to be whole, which means perfect bodily health first of all, and one can hardly have that without a holy heart, which will be not only cleansed from sin, but whole also in the completeness of its consecration to God. Of such the Scotch say: "He is o' and o'" that is, out and out. Let us waste no time arguing against sanctification. We should all seek a "higher life" than we have, at least, and we can surely love God with all the heart, that is, more than anything else, or God would not have required it. It is not the same love that one feels for his mother, or his wife; but the love of supreme loyalty, that puts God's will about everything else in the control of life.

Peter said to the sick Æneas, "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole." Only God can give salvation and holiness. Ministers are but the channels through which the power of Christ pours. When we go about, does Jesus of Nazareth pass by again in power to bless? We may not be able to heal, but we are able to help in other ways in Christ's Name.

Arise and make thy bed. As when Jesus healed Peter's wife's mother, she "arose and ministered unto them," so now, when Peter healed Æneas, he bade him follow salvation with service. For a long time others had made his sick-bed, but now he was to help himself, and make his restored powers useful.

All over the land at this season there are new converts, who were recently made whole by the power of Christ. Let them turn quickly to some service, however lowly, before the habit of idling in the church, which has palsied so many members, has fastened on them. And let them do even so simple a household duty as bedmaking to the glory of God. Doing their tasks in that Spirit we may be sure they will not skimp them. We can not be good Christians and bad workmen at the same time.

Showing the coats and garments which Dorcas made. There have been many famous women in the world, but few queens are so well known as this lowly Dorcas, "full of good works." See her in life, sitting out of doors beside her little cottage, spinning and weaving coats and garments for the little orphans that played about her feet, and for their widowed mothers, mending their old clothes while they chatted at her side. Overworked in her zeal to help, she sickens and dies. No hired mourners were needed that day. Around her corpse they stood, one saying through her tears, "She made me this dress"; another, "This apron was her gift to me"; another, "This waist was her dear fingerwork." Ah! That is better than flowers! To be "remembered by what we have done." The monuments of stone that kings have built have crumbled, but the monument Dorcas made with her needle keeps her name a household word, through the "Dorcas Societies" in which the apostolic succession of her benevolence still blesses the world. Peter called her back to life for a little more of service, a second life, which death again cut short. But she lives in a double immortality forever; immortal with God in heaven; immortal also on earth in the influence of her good example, that has prompted like deeds in every age since then. Tens of thousands of widows and orphans have been clothed by "Dorcas societies."

"THIS WOMAN WAS FULL OF GOOD WORKS AND ALMSDEEDS"

A young couple were married with very little money. When a table, bedstead and dishes had been bought for their one room there was nothing left for chairs. The man would not run in debt, and they were expecting to use a tub and box for chairs, but a kind widow in the neighborhood found them out, and supplied them with some of her own chairs—not new, but they put a great comfort into that low room. The tables turned some years afterward, and the widow became poor, while the man she had helped was prospering. But she never wanted, nor her household, for the necessities of life. She lived on the interest of those old chairs. Her kindness was a fruitful seed. Not alone gifts, but often a word or smile has been thus fruitful.

THE TRADITIONAL TOMB OF DORCAS

You gave on the way a pleasant smile
And thought no more about it;
It cheered a life that was sad the while
That might have been wrecked without it;
And so for the smile and its fruitage fair
You'll reap a crown some time—somewhere.

Dorcas was appreciated, but do not depend on gratitude here. Little Jack, four years old, worked hard pulling weeds for his cousin Frank who forgot to thank him, and he was very unhappy about it. At first he was sorry he had done the work for one so ungrateful, but after awhile he said to his aunt, "Now I'm not sorry. 'Has Frank thanked you?' said his aunt. 'No, but inside of me there is a good feeling. It always comes when I've been kind to any one, and do you know I've found out what it is. 'What is it?' 'It's God's thank you.'"

The showing of the coats and garments which Dorcas had made, on the part of those who have been beneficiaries of her bounty, may well remind us to "show forth the loving kindness of God." What a shame if our secret religion or neglect of Christian testimony, and conversation we hide "the coats and garments" God has given to us! Or do we hide from our own thought God's gifts because they are familiar?

We come back to the immortal influence of good deeds, in which Dorcas fulfilled those promises: "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance" (Psalm 112: 6); "Blessed is that considereth the poor. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive" (Psalm 41: 1); God will "keep us alive," if not by prolonging, renewing our lives, like that of Dorcas, by the mending influence of every good deed. This is an old story, but a good one, of a little boy who gave a penny to go in a missionary box, his sister, who was a missionary's wife in Africa. With his penny a tract was bought, and I name written upon it, with a prayer that God would bless it. For awhile it lay unnoticed, and then was found and read by the missionary's interpreter, who was quite a strong character, but not a Christian. The tract led him to be a Christian, and he led many others to the same blessed life, and they others, and so in widening circles that boy "being dead yet speaketh" in his penny tract, as Dorcas is still doing in the societies that bear her name in the benevolence she has prompted.

God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly
What he has given;
They live on earth in thought and deed as truly
As in his heaven.

Jesus in his journey was thirsty and weary. "Jacob's well was there" to meet both of these wants. In it Jacob, long dead, still ministered to men and to the living. Peter Still Son of God. So in every song that is written Peter Still Lives Also every noble book, every college built, so one or more live on in earthly immortality. ought to be noted in this lesson that Peter, as well as Dorcas, still lives in immortal influence. A Protestant Irish girl, who had been somewhat instructed in the Bible, and had become greatly interested, startled the teacher of a Bible class that she joined soon after reaching the United States, who had just quoted Paul, by asking: "And where does Paul pray now, ma'am?" "O, Mary, Paul's dead!" "Paul dead! Is that so? Well then, it's a great loss! Sure I expected to hear him prache some day when I got to this country. Oh, I'm jural disappointed." There is, however, a very real sense in which Paul still lives and preaches on earth—in his great sermons and letters that we have in the New Testament. So Peter lives, not in popish legends, but in his deeds and words, which have inspired men in all ages to follow the example of Peter's Master, who came not only to lead men to God but to teach them to be good to one another.

LEARNING HOW TO MAKE HATS AND BONNETS

A COMPANY OF BUSY TYPE-WRITERS

HEBREW TECHNICAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

Uplifting East-Side Womanhood

BENEFITS IRRESPECTIVE OF CREEDS

A SIGNIFICANT movement of the times is the action of the society of the New York Hebrew Technical School for Girls, in determining that the institution shall be non-sectarian, and in recommending that the word Hebrew be dropped from its title, the object of the proposed change being to broaden the use of the school and to open the way for all children to share its benefits. The corps of teachers is already composed of both Christians and Hebrews, the energetic and capable young principal, Miss Gratia Goller, being a Protestant. For a number of years Christian girls have been availing themselves of the exceptional opportunities afforded by the establishment, although no official understanding that such could be the case had been made public. In adopting this course there was no suggestion on the part of the society that Christians should aid them in the support of the institution, or any hint that the proverbial generosity of the Hebrew citizens of New York is not fully equal to that worthy task.

Coincident with this announcement of policy came the information that the well-known Hebrew philanthropist, Mr. Adolph Lewisohn, Vice-President of the institution, had contributed $75,000 toward the erection of a new school building; the President, Mr. Nathaniel Myers, adding $5,000 to this sum. On the courteous invitation of Mr. Myers, the representative of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD paid a visit to the school, and was taken by him through all the rooms where the classes were in operation. In one, Miss Goller was initiating a room full of girls into the useful mysteries of book-keeping. In another, the pencils of Miss Moore's stenographic class were flying over note-books. In a third, young women were learning to make hats; in a fourth, a class were studying costume designing; in a fifth, deft fingers were embroidering all sorts of beautiful things on linen and silk. Still another class were making dainty baby clothes; another, useful shirt-waists; some were running sewing-machines. In one room, the lick of type-writers almost deafens one. Such a hive of industry it was from top to bottom! Every room was crowded to its utmost capacity. Certainly a new building is needed, for the quarters at 267 Henry street are not large enough to accommodate the work now being done there. About two years ago there were only four typewriting machines in the establishment. The enlargement of this one class is an illustration of how all the work is growing. The number of girls knocking at the door of the institution with the plea: "Teach me how to make an honest livelihood," is legion. The average age of girls admitted is about fifteen. The system of instruction is such that in a remarkably short time a studious pupil is sufficiently mistress of a trade to be self-supporting as wage-earner or valuable as her mother's help at home.

The section is largely Jewish and foreign; and the people very poor. Many pupils when entering the school are unable to speak English, and as their industrial training goes on, they have to be taught the use of our tongue. It is not intended that beneficiaries shall feel themselves objects of charity, and a matriculation fee of $2 is charged; also a weekly tuition fee of fifteen cents; the girls are encouraged to buy their own supplies, which are furnished at cost. However, to the deserving unable to pay anything, the opportunity to secure free training, which fits them to make an honest living, is not denied. The institution desires to aid just this class.

The public understand the conditions of this crowded East Side, where evil places abound and luxurious vice flaunts itself in the honest face of struggling girlhood. Understanding this, they know without telling the value of such work to New York City, and indeed to the nation. The aggregate earnings of the girls sent out from this school in honorable callings exceed $25,000 for the first year, that is, a little more than $5 a week, each; and the average wage increases up to $10, $12 and $15. Ethical training is not neglected. The institution grew out of a Sabbath School founded by Mrs. Minnie D. Louis, a kindly Jewish lady, in 1884; and her good work is not forgotten. Christian and Jewish teachers strive to impart to their charges something higher than mere industrial training. The following is taken from President Myers' last report:

"Just before Christmas, our 164 girls were told that, however poor they might be, they could all do something for others poorer than themselves, and they were asked to bring to the school each some piece of fruit. The result was an aggregate of eleven large baskets to be given away. On the last afternoon before the Christmas holiday, two children were selected from each class to take this fruit to the neighboring Beth-Israel and Gouverneur Hospitals. They distributed it among the patients, and visited the sick in the various wards, and then returned to tell their classmates what they had seen. Once the younger children of the Jewish Sabbath School brought of their own accord, $2.01 for the suffering poor at Beth-Israel Hospital." This Sabbath School is attended by over 200 children.

The cosy library room seems to be the social centre of the place. Here the girls gather for innocent games and merry times together. Here, Mrs. Ferdinand L. Loeb, Chairman of the House Committee, standing at a pretty flower-decked table, was serving tea and cakes to visitors on the day the writer called; and many of the most distinguished Hebrew philanthropists in New York were there to see the school, partake of its hospitality and remember it with generous contributions. May it find all the help so beneficent an enterprise deserves.

Although $80,000 has already been contributed toward the new building, much more will be needed, says President Myers, to cover the improvements planned. The new building must have many and large classrooms, a lecture hall, an assembly room, a counting room for the practical instruction and thorough training of the pupils in the commercial classes, kitchens for cooking classes, a larger library, a gymnasium, swimming-pool and roof-garden. "In fact," says Mr. Myers, "we are determined that this school shall be completely equipped to fulfil in every way the object of its creation, viz: to elevate the character and improve the condition of poor girls in this section of the city."

YOUNG DRESSMAKERS DESIGNING COSTUMES

THE CLASS IN BOOKKEEPING—MISS GOLLER AT THE BOARD

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Editor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly.
Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should be made in the nearest money to payables to the remitter. Registered as second-class.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S. add postage. Money at one dollar a year.
Change of Date. Letters at least two weeks to change to new date. After that time no change is allowed.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when subscription expires.
Change of Address. Give both old and new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.
Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

Recruits for the Pulpit

SOME of our contemporaries take a depressing view of the statistics furnished by our most prominent colleges. It is unquestionably a significant fact that the number of students who are preparing for the ministry has fallen off. In one college which in 1893 had 79 students studying theology, there are now only 15. In another the number has sunk from 192 to 80, and in another from 80 to 30. At present we are not feeling the effect of the decrease, because there are a large number of ministers who are without charges; but in a few years, if the falling off continues, the need of ministers must be felt. That, however, is not so much the problem to be considered as is the cause for the decrease. Why is it that young men studying in our colleges are turning away from the ministry to choose other professions?

Various causes have been suggested. One of them is that young men see that the prospects of a ministerial career are not encouraging. They perceive that there is very little opportunity of amassing a competence during the early years of the ministry, and that when a minister attains the age of fifty he finds it very difficult to get an invitation to the pastorate. He is consequently obliged to look forward to a brief career of some twenty or five and twenty years during which he may receive a fair salary, and afterwards he is condemned to inactivity and pauperism. The prospects are really not so dark as this. There are in our pulpits many men above fifty years old whose ministry is heartily appreciated, and never more so than since it has ripened and mellowed with the passing years. But it is possible that pessimistic views of the rewards to be gained in a ministerial career have been a contributory cause of the decrease. But if the fact were proved, it need not give rise to so much depression as is expressed. Questions of quality ought to be considered. What is the value to the church of the young man, who, feeling that he has a call to the ministry, would be deterred from entering in by financial considerations? Or, to go further, What is the value to the church of any minister who has entered the ministerial calling for the sake of the money there is in it? The New Testament view of the ministry is of men who say with the Apostle Paul, "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel"—men who, having no thought of themselves or their own material interests, are possessed by a love of souls and a desire to serve Christ. Such men are not concerned about their own future, but are content to leave in the hands of Him whom they serve, the rewards that may come to them. If there are not so many of such men as there formerly were, that fact is to be deplored, but the church does not suffer by the loss of those who draw back from the pulpit because the prospect of gain in it is small. In his parable of the laborers in the vineyard, Christ showed that those who bargained for pay were dissatisfied in the end, while those who made no bargain, but trusted in him who employed them, were treated with a generosity that surprised them. So it is in the ministry. Christ honors faith and the confidence in him that inspires to the performance of duty without the pledge of reward. All others he and his church can dispense with.

Parental Duty

OUR courts of justice in the larger cities of many States have before them for adjudication cases which are of vital concern to Christian parents. Some of them are tragical, and in nearly all of them there is an element of disgrace and heart-breaking sorrow. It is evident from the facts disclosed, that there now is in the lives of our young people a moral laxity which is common enough in the Old World, but from which we flattered ourselves American society was free. We thought that our young men and women might be trusted with the liberty that the young people of Europe do not enjoy, and that they had high principles which would keep them from evil. No longer can we entertain such confidence. Time and again we read in the disclosures of the courts, that the liberty granted has been abused, and young men have deliberately plotted the ruin of girls who have been easy victims. The theatre, the dance, the drinking of intoxicating drinks, have combined to bring the light of many a home to darkness worse than death.

It is time to call a halt in our system. Rescue in many cases is now impossible; irreparable mischief has been done. But the boys and girls are growing up and they may be saved from the evil that has overtaken their brothers and sisters. The only way is by an awakening of the parents to their duty. They have to learn that the training of their children is a solemn and imperative obligation. Not in the public schools, nor in the hour they may pass once a week in the Sunday School, can they get the moral fibre that will keep them in the hour of temptation. There is need for home training, for the inculcation of moral and religious principle, for the holding up of ideals of honor and virtue, and for the warning against the beginning of evil that approaches in insidious ways. There should also be a careful supervision of the acquaintances young people make, of the books they read, and of the places where they spend their evenings. All this involves tact, and some little exertion and trouble, but the result may be the saving of children from ruin and the parents from broken hearts.

Safe and Smooth Now

HOW blessed is the thought that the terrible mystery which once affrighted the souls of men has been dispelled. One tells of a dark pool in the neighborhood of his native place, which was said to be unfathomable. It was impossible to see an inch into the awful black waters. The young people looked upon its frowning face with a shudder, and were mortally afraid of standing on its brink.

One day, a boy, braver than his fellows, ventured to put his foot over the edge, when, to his surprise, he found the water quite shallow. Encouraged by this, he waded in very slowly and cautiously, feeling his way, and though the water deepened, it was so gradual that in the middle of the pool it only reached up to his waist. He walked from one end of it to the other, and dispelled forever the frightful mystery, so that the smallest boy delighted to wade in the black water.

So Jesus has sounded the lowest depths of the darkness which we call death, and now we know that following in his steps we have nothing to fear. The bottom is good, the waters shall not overflow us, and his own hand shall lead us through.

In the old days in the South, a gentle Christian lady lay on her death-bed. At the last her mind wandered, and she fancied herself in the carriage returning, perhaps after nightfall, from a long journey. Presently she murmured with a smile, speaking to the coachman, as she thought:

"The carriage goes smoothly now, we must be nearly home, ar'n't we, Dave?"

The old colored coachman sat weeping in the room, and hearing the question, he sobbed out:

"Taint po' Dave, Mistis; de good Lord done tuck holt er de lines;" and hearing that precious word of faith, the aged saint fell into quiet sleep, and passed out into the home beyond.

Yes, the way is safe, for Jesus has gone before, and the carriage goes smoothly there, because, when human hands are loosened, he holds the lines and guides the trusting soul into his own eternal rest.

Winged Riches

"RICHES make themselves wings," says the proverb, and many times, in Scripture, is the warning repeated for the benefit of those who are bending their energies toward the accumulation of wealth, at the sacrifice of spiritual character. Bunyan's figure of "the man with the muckrake," who was so absorbed in the gathering of straws that he did not see the Shining One bending over him, holding out the crown he might have had for the reaching, is an allegorical presentation of the same truth which the Bible so frequently emphasizes, and which Christ himself has immortalized by pronouncing that man a fool who "layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God."

In these days, so prolific of the upbuilding and demolition of great fortunes, the lesson comes home with tremendous force in the application. By defalcation, a bank's treasury is depleted, and the depositors lose all; a great business collapses, and the stockholders suffer; an investment company fails, and hundreds are plunged into poverty; by a convulsion of nature, business blocks are consumed, factories are overwhelmed, or a score of ships are sent to the bottom of the sea. Trust funds are swept away in a moment and widows and orphans rendered penniless, or, through a defective will, an estate is thrown into the courts, where it lingers until the last dollar is absorbed in expenses. A church becomes rich, and lo! it dies of spiritual paralysis, and its riches vanish. Plunderers and marauders, within and without the law, make havoc with the hordes of the money-worshippers. In these and in a thousand other ways, we are made to confess the truth of the declaration that "riches make themselves wings."

Life is brief, even at the longest. If, as we Christians hold, it is designed as a school of experience, in which we are to search out and follow the divine will as revealed to us through Jesus Christ, it is folly to waste our energies in the mad race for riches. If we obey the Christly injunction to seek first the Kingdom, we can safely leave the rest with God, knowing that all things needful to our existence here will be added unto us. Such is the promise, and the Promiser is faithful. Yet on every side we see the distressing results of this insane race for wealth. It is grasping the shadow and throwing away the substance. If we might state it as a mathematical proposition, we would assert that a man's growth in grace declines in proportion as his riches increase, for it is as hard to-day as it was in the time of Christ for a rich man to enter the kingdom. There are happily, many faithful stewards who employ their possessions for the noblest of purposes, but these mark the exception.

Covet not riches. If your lot in life is a humble or moderate one, make the best of it and envy nobody. When you see great fortunes growing, whose owners have bent their very souls to the accumulation, remember that there is a point at which a man ceases to be master of his money, and the money takes the reins in hand and assumes the mastery. "A slave to mammon" is no misnomer, for every yellow coin may become a scourge, to lash the conscience of him who has made the sacrifice to folly. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

Christian Endeavor in China

SEE ILLUSTRATION ON FIRST PAGE

THE growth of the Christian Endeavor movement in China has certainly been marked. Four years after the founding of the movement in the United States, the first society was organized in Southern China, at Foo Chow, where Dr. and Mrs. H. N. Kinnear, missionaries from Ohio, are located. Dr. Kinnear for fifteen years has been a missionary in China.

He relates many interesting facts relative to the work. In China, as a rule, the men and women hold separate meetings, and come together only when called to do so. There are junior and intermediate societies as well as those of the older inhabitants, and there are several denominations represented in these Endeavor societies. The Epworth League works in harmony with the Christian Endeavor.

Christian Endeavor in China stands for needed reforms, such as opposition to the binding of women's feet, also to the dread opium habit. These native reformers are now numbered by thousands in the Southern sections. At the time of the Boxer outbreak, the Christian Endeavor work was prospering and was being rapidly extended to the Northern part.

Dr. Kinnear, to whose wide experience as a missionary I am indebted for many of the facts in this article at the early age of thirteen years, decided to go to China as a missionary. This decision was made at the time of his conversion. His parents, who reside at Kingsville, O., at that time thought his determination to go as a missionary but a boyish fancy.

Dr. Kinnear, at the age of twenty-one, graduated from the medical department of Western Reserve University. Some fifteen years ago he left a good practice at Ashtabula Harbor to go to his present field. Some six years ago, on his return to this country, his first wife having died, he married Miss Ella Johnson, of Bethlehem, N. Y., and both are doing a good work in Foo Chow where Dr. Kinnear renders medical aid to thousands of sick and poverty-stricken Chinese who come to him at Ponasang Missionary Hospital. FRANK MCCLURE.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Miss Stone's Release

MORE details of the rescue of Miss Stone from the brigands, who captured her and Mrs. Tsilka last September, are sent to the London Daily Graphic by a correspondent, who saw them soon after their release, in the house of M. Kimoff, the Protestant pastor at Strumnitz. Both ladies, he says, appeared to be in good health, though Miss Stone limped slightly. She had suffered a severe sprain some days before by putting her foot through a trap-door in the floor of a room which she entered in the dark. Mrs. Tsilka's infant, who was born in captivity, was a fine, bright, healthy child, who had not suffered by the hardships and exposure she had undergone. It was a thrilling meeting between the brave missionary and the representatives of the American Board, who have through all the long months since the capture worked tirelessly to effect her release. The negotiations had been extremely difficult, because the bandits were fully aware that there was little prospect of their retaining their ill-gotten gains if the Turkish troops acquired knowledge of their hiding-place. They therefore insisted on absolute secrecy and a sufficient period of time to elapse between the payment of the money and the release of the captives to enable them to reach a place of safety. On the other hand, the Americans had to take measures of precaution to avoid the possibility of the bandits retaining their prisoners after the ransom had been paid. Happily all the difficulties were finally surmounted, though there was a period of intense anxiety while the rescuing party were waiting to see if the brigands would keep their promise to release their prisoners. But at length the glad news came that at three o'clock on the morning of Sunday, February 23, Miss Stone and her companion had walked into the home of the Protestant pastor of Strumnitz, having been set free in a desolate region near that town during the night. The story of the 172 days of captivity is awaited with the most intense interest, though it is possible that pledges may have been exacted from Miss Stone which will prevent the story being fully told. It is gratifying, however, to learn that they were well treated during their captivity, and that all the comforts which the bandits could obtain were provided. The brigands fully realized that their one hope of obtaining the money they demanded depended on the prisoners being in good health. It was, however, inevitable that they must suffer many privations and hardships in the caves of the mountains and during their journeys from one hiding-place to another. Providentially, Miss Stone had with her a Bible, which had been taken by the bandits from one of the teachers in her party when she was captured, and though everything else, even to her clothing, was taken from her, she was allowed to keep the Book, from which she derived great comfort during the long time of loneliness and suspense. She found, as other tried believers before her have found, that the inspired words of the Psalmist are true:

Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage; the bands of the wicked have robbed me but I have not forgotten thy law. This is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickened me (Psalm 119: 54, 61, 50).

A Wireless Telephone

Marconi's discovery of wireless telegraphy has now been applied to the telephone. A few days ago experiments were made in Washington, D. C., which showed that although the system was not yet perfect, the principle was as effective for telephoning as for telegraphing. A steamer equipped with a set of the apparatus cruised up and down the Potomac for short distances, maintaining communication meanwhile with a fixed station ashore. The apparatus used was very simple, consisting merely of an ordinary receiver and transmitter and a pair of steel rods, with bell-shaped attachments, which were connected with twenty feet of wire in circuit with the instrument. The steel rods were merely driven in the earth for several feet when it was desired to establish communication at a given point. During the tests the sound of a mouth organ being played on shore was distinctly heard in the instrument on board the vessel, and the human voice could be distinguished in counting and singing. Articulation, however, was not quite distinct enough to enable the receiver to make out connected sentences. The inventor says, however, that with larger and more powerful instruments, which will take full advantage of the earth currents, there is hardly a limit to the distance the instruments will work. If this is true, it will bring people into closer and more intimate communication than ever. People who have scoffed at the idea of communication between heaven and earth should take note of these new discoveries and should learn by experience the power of prayer; but in that case it is not necessary to "take full advantage of the earth currents," but rather to avoid them.

When thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall reward thee openly (Matt. 6: 6).

A Grown-up Baby Party

A society journal describes a recent entertainment in high-class circles which is certainly unique. It says:

MISS ELLEN M. STONE GREETING HER RESCUERS AT STRUMNITZA

"The hostess received her guests attired in a beautiful French infant robe, tied in at the waist with a sash, while a broad-brimmed hat and a string of rattles about the neck completed the costume. Many of the most dignified personages of society went attired as girl babies. There was baby talk and baby walk and all sorts of infantile amusements. It is evident that there are at least in some ranks of society people who have not yet begun to follow the Apostle's example:

When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things (I. Cor. 13: 11).

A Mammoth Preserved in Ice

A marvelous discovery has recently been made by Dr. Herz in Siberia. It is of a mammoth enclosed in ice, which must have been frozen more than ten thousand years ago. Dr. Herz reports that he found it near the River Ebrosowka at the foot of a declivity. It was lying down, with its feet curiously bent under its body. Dr. Herz concluded that it had fallen down from high ground and had been instantly killed, as its neck was broken. There was grass in its mouth and food in its stomach. It was covered with a coat of thick red-brown hair. Its tongue was nineteen inches in length, and its tail, with long hair upon it, was still intact. The ice in which it had so long been enclosed had preserved the huge creature perfectly. It must have been a suggestive spectacle, that of this animal being disclosed after a hundred centuries, with the grass still in his mouth that he had bitten off the moment before his death. What changes have taken place in the world since he lived and moved upon it! Yet, even in that remote period, as in this, all things depended upon God, whose power sustained them.

Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting thou art God. A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night (Ps. 90: 2, 4).

Rewarded for Patriotism

An unexpected legacy has been received by a young man in Cincinnati. He is the son of German parents who came many years ago to this country. They married here and settled in Cincinnati, where their son was born. He is intensely loyal and proud of his American birth. When President McKinley issued his call for volunteers at the beginning of the war with Spain, the young man was among the first to respond. He saw service in Cuba and afterwards re-enlisted for service in the Philippines. He has been in several skirmishes and has made an excellent record. His father, writing to his home in Germany, mentioned his son's bravery and loyalty. The account deeply gratified the young man's grandfather, who had never seen him. He immediately added a codicil to his will, expressing his pride in his grandson and bequeathing to him twelve thousand dollars as a token of approval of his loyalty and bravery. Doubtless the old man is as proud of his German birth as his grandson is of his American birth, and as Germany derived no benefit from our war with Spain it might have been supposed that the grandfather would not have felt called upon to reward his grandson for his service. But the reward was not so much for what he had done as for what his conduct proved him to be. That is the principle on which God rewards his children. It is not for their achievements in his service, but for the spirit that prompted those achievements.

By their fruits ye shall know them (Matt. 7: 20).

BRIEF NOTES

Rev. Louis E. Meyer, of Hopkinton, Ia., states that after careful statistical study, he is convinced 204,540 Hebrews had been baptized during the nineteenth century.

Countess Schimmelmänn, whose evangelistic work in this country is well remembered, expects to pay a visit to England next June. With ten helpers she distributed last year 230,000 Gospels, books, and tracts in Europe, and visited 318 ships.

Earl Hall, the new building for the social and religious life of Columbia University, New York, was formally dedicated on March 8, when it was opened to both officers and undergraduates. The building was given to Columbia by Mr. William E. Dodge, as a memorial to his son, Earl, and cost about $125,000. It will be the permanent home of the Columbia Young Men's Christian Association.

Rev. Harvey S. Murdoch, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has resigned the pastorate of the Cumberland Street Presbyterian Church, to become Field Secretary of the Soul-Winners, who are working in the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee.

Large quantities of wheat are being sent from Russia to the famine-stricken districts in Siberia. Several sections of the Trans-Siberian Railway have given way under the pressure of extra traffic, and 1,300 truck loads of grain are standing in the sidings waiting to go forward.

One of the most cheering signs of the times in Japan is found in the rapidly increasing sales of the Scriptures. If Bibles and Testaments and parts are included, we have for the last three years an advance from 45,000, through 98,000, to 137,000, and 92,000 for the first six months of 1901.

Rev. Francis Edward Smiley has concluded the services he has been holding at Chester, Pa. There were a large number of persons from all the churches of the town present at the closing service, and it was stated that all the churches were receiving accessions to the membership. Mr. Smiley went thence to Cairo, Mich., and expects to begin work at Watertown, N. Y., soon.

A press despatch from Baltimore, Md., says that a man in the northern district of that city had an awful experience on March 11. He was made very angry by some annoyance, and began cursing and blaspheming in a shocking manner. Suddenly his words became inarticulate and finally ceased. The man was stricken dumb, and on the next day had not recovered his power of speech.

Queen Alexandra of England, has done a beautiful and kindly act, quite in accord with her usual character. Hearing that a poor boy in London, suffering with consumption, was unable to go into a hospital for treatment, she directed him to be taken to a well known sanitarium, where the most skilful specialists in the country are engaged, and undertook all the expenses of his treatment.

THE GOSPEL ON THE STAGE

INCIDENTS OF THE WORK AT THE PREACHING SERVICES IN THE PARK THEATRE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

SERVICES of a deeply interesting character have been held in Brooklyn, N. Y., during the past two months. They are an echo of the successful tent work that was done in the city during the summer. It was then found that there were a large number of persons who wandered aimlessly about the city streets and the suburbs, on a Sunday evening, who were disinclined to attend church, but would go into a religious meeting held in some informal way. As the winter set in, the crowds diminished and the tent work was discontinued, but there were still many walking the streets in the evening who were evidently not of the church-going order. This was especially noticeable in the neighborhood of the City Hall, and resorts soon multiplied in that section which pandered to depraved tastes and led to demoralization. In view of this fact the Brooklyn City Mission and Tract Society, which had conducted the tent work, made the experiment of opening the Park Theatre on Fulton street, facing the City Hall, for Sunday evening services.

The work was placed under the charge of Rev. E. D. Bailey, Major Fred. Gardner and Mr. T. C. Horsfield, and has proved very successful. The large parquet has been filled and the dress-circle largely occupied. It was easily recognizable that the congregation was not composed of regular church-goers, though it was an orderly and attentive one. At the earlier services, it was wisely planned that music and singing should have a prominent place, and the addresses were made short and pointed. As the service proceeded, there was more speaking and the musical part of the programme was diminished, but the change did not discourage the hearers. Close attention was paid to the speakers and a good impression was undoubtedly made. When an invitation was given for persons to rise who wished the prayers of God's people for conversion, there was a numerous response, and there were workers at hand who conversed with those who rose. The results have been very gratifying. At the end of seven services, upwards of fifty persons had pledged themselves in Christ's strength to a new life, and had given their names and addresses to the workers, and many others were inquiring the way to Christ.

Some of the persons thus brought under Gospel influence were people whom a church service would not have attracted. One was a business man from Wisconsin, who had come to New York to buy goods. He wandered over to Brooklyn on a Sunday evening, and seeing a theatre open, entered without any idea of the evening's entertainment being a religious service. He was deeply affected by one of the hymns with which he had been familiar in childhood. As the service proceeded and an earnest appeal was made to the prodigals who had left the Father's house to return, he was visibeen living a life of gaiety and frivolity. She entered the theatre one Sunday night, and as the familiar strains of the hymns greeted her ears, she wept, and a flood of sacred memories swept over her heart. A kindly Christian lady noticed her emotion, and sat by her side, and pointed her to Jesus as the Friend of sinners. She listened eagerly to the promises quoted by the speakers, and has now turned from her evil associates, and is rejoicing in the pardon that she fully believes she has received from Christ.

Another remarkable incident was that of a young man who had quitted his home, declaring to his parents that he would never enter it again. He was at the Park Theatre on the following Saturday night, and on Sunday as he passed it again, and saw it lighted up, he went in. Finding that it was not a play, but a Gospel meeting that was going on, he rose to leave the theatre. But one of the workers spoke to him and persuaded him to remain. He was soon paying close attention. The Holy Spirit touched his heart, and he broke down in penitence. He was led to tell his story, and was ultimately induced to return to his home, where he was received as one who had been dead and was alive.

On Sunday evening six young girls, workers in factories, stayed a few minutes in front of the theatre as they strolled along Fulton street, and were invited to enter. They did so hesitatingly, but appeared interested in the service. A kind, motherly Christian lady talked with them afterwards and won their confidence. She has continued the acquaintance thus formed and has been able to give them judicious counsel, which has borne fruit.

These are only specimens of many similar trophies of the work already accomplished. The Mission is profoundly thankful for the blessing God has bestowed. It hopes to continue the services until tent work can be resumed if subscriptions can be obtained for payment of the seventy dollars which each service costs for the hire of the theatre. Not more than $400 have so far been contributed, but Mr. John W. James, the treasurer, believes that when the Christian public learns how much good is being done, the deficiency will be made up and funds supplied for the continuance of the services. His address is 1495 Pacific street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MAJOR FRED GARDNER REV. E. D. BAILEY
LEADERS OF THE SERVICES IN THE PARK THEATRE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

bly moved. He was among those who asked for prayer that night and gladly accepted the offer of a Christian worker to go with him to his hotel and there pray and talk with him. There is good reason for hoping that he returned to his Western home, a new man in Christ Jesus.

Another interesting case was that of a girl who was formerly a member of a church in New Jersey, but has been resident in Brooklyn for two years past, and has

OUR COMPLETE COURSE IN SHORTHAND

ISAAC PITMAN'S 20th CENTURY REVISION
By Special Arrangement with Isaac
Pitman & Sons, 33 Union Square, N. Y.

LESSON VII.

64. When convenient the st loop may be employed medially, thus vestry, testing, jesting.

65. A large loop, extending two-thirds of the length of the stroke to which it is attached, represents str. This str (ster) loop is not written at the beginning of a word. At the end of a word it is invariably read last. The same rules for writing apply to it as to the circle s and the loop st, and it is written backward to straight letters and inside curves; thus pass, past, pastor; mass, master. This loop may be used medially, as in masterpiece.

66. The circle s is added to a final loop, as in the following examples, taste, tastes, lustre, lustres.

Exercise 14

0 first, put ('). shall, should, them
(these ('). (this, (these (').

Exercise 15

1. Steep, pest, stick, kissed, stuff, foist, statue, statute.

2. Jest, jester, jesters, elastic, pastors, foster, Chester. 3. A king's ministers occupy high posts; they can speak first, and they may make or mark the peace of the rest. 4. If chosen by vote, those who have the power to register such a vote should use it to put in office just advisers and those honest in counsel. 5. By these the head of the state may be safely advised, and in this way his rule may be fixed. 6. Ministers who fail, go out of office if they shall have lost power in the house; in early times kings dismissed them. 7. Many are the jests on the way some kings bolster up dishonest ministers. 8. In early days staid officers have many times lost power, as they refused to be unjust.

REVIEW

1. In addition to the consonant l, what other sign is used to represent s? 2. How is the circle s written between two straight strokes (l) when at an angle; (2) when running in the same direction? 3. How between curves? 4. How is st indicated? 5. How is str represented? 6. Is the sign for str used initially? 7. When may the signs for st and str be written in the middle of a word? Give some examples. 8. Show by examples how a final s may be added to st and str.

Large Circles SW and SS or SZ

67. A large INITIAL circle written in the same manner as the circle s, represents the double consonant sw, thus seat, street, sum, swum, sore, swore, but sway, swaying.

68. A large MEDIAL or FINAL circle, written in the same way as circle s, represents ss or sz. This large circle may be supposed to contain the second-place short vowel e, and thus to represent ses, sez, zes, or zez; thus, (ses) necessity; (sez) passes; (zes) possessive; (zez) causes. Other vowels may be expressed by placing the vowel-sign within the circle; thus, (e) exist (ekzist), (o) exhaust, (i) exercise. Final s is added by continuing the circle; thus, (e) exercises.

69. When a word has a final accent, the stroke s and small circle or the small circle and stroke s are generally used, and not the large circle, thus (s) races, but (s) recess; (s) paces, but (s) possess.

Exercise 16

(Lord, (thing, (think.

Exercise 17

1. Switch, Swedish (sh up), swing, swill, swiftest, swive. 2. Possessor, accessory, unsuccessful; roses, analysis. At the desire of Lord Swanage, they wrote essays on Genesis. 4. The successful essay bore the name of Thomas Davis. 5. Many were full of errors, but the master seen to think highly of Davis's as possessing many excellence. 6. A thing given by many was a synopsis of the book.

Vowels and S and T

70. As an initial circle or loop must always be read first, and a final circle or loop must always be read last (see paragraphs 62, 63), it is necessary, when a word begins or ends with a vowel, that stroke consonants be employed, and no circle s or loop st, to which vowels cannot be placed. Compare, for example, (a) asleep, and (a) sleep; (u) pu, and (u) pussy; (d) dust, and (d) dusty.

The student is recommended to purchase the Key to the Shorthand Instructor, which forms a Key to all the Exercises appearing in these lessons, as well as to all the Review Questions. It is an indispensable companion for all students mastering the art without teacher. The price of the Key is 50c., and all orders should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office. Lesson No. VIII. will appear in the issue of April 16.

The Whole Family

SOMETHING to interest the whole family! Mildred's eager voice summoned me from my desk, her mother from her kneading-bowl, and Bobby from his blocks on the floor. We were all disappointed, for Mildred's hands were empty, and she had nothing to show us.

"I am thinking about a game," she explained, "inventing one, in fact; a game to be played with checkers or marbles on the dining-room table, and one so fascinating that grandfather and Aunt Fanny and Phebe, and Eluathan and you, and even the children may take part in it. If I succeed in carrying out my design, I will make my fortune."

"I am sure of that, Mildred," I said, and went back to my work. But her phrase, "the whole family," lingered in my thoughts, and I planned a game in which every one of them may, if they choose, have a share.

It is the game of happy living at home. You begin it afresh every morning when you rise from your bed, and you discontinue it only when you lay your head on the pillow at night. If you take up this game in real earnest, you will find it absorbing. Many of the moves, though apparently simple, are extremely complex, and it surpasses every other game in the round world, by a possibility of surprises on which you cannot count. It is always watched by a host of invisible spectators, who, more or less, help or hinder the players; in the Bible these watchers are sometimes described as "a cloud of witnesses," or perhaps as angels sent on errands from the King. When the King sends them they are friendly and resourceful, compassionate, too, and sympathetic. Far more than we dream, when our game of happy living ends in roseate gladness at the close of any day or year, are we indebted to those bright angel convoys, whose duty it is "to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation." But there are malevolent watchers, too, emissaries from the pit, swift to catch us unawares, and to make us trip and stumble. Often the joy of an entire household is sadly obscured because some one of its members has fallen a victim to the assaults of the wicked one. A sullen mood, a froward disposition, a sour temper may effectually darken a home and make a whole family quarrelsome, perverse and hateful. In the wake of too much candor of the critical variety, follows alienation, and the living that ought to be cheery and genial becomes morose, ill-adjusted and sorrowfully disjointed.

One morning, we will fancy, the mother gets up too late to have time for her morning prayer in her closet. She, who is almost the pivot of the home machinery, has forgotten to seek her "new supplies of grace" from the Friend who alone can fill her soul with peace and strength. At once, the day starts wrongly. The father goes to his task with a sense of apprehension, the children are not properly armed against their temptations at school, and the maid in the kitchen is cross and inefficient. All because one person, the mother, set out in her own strength on her difficult daily undertakings, instead of in that of Christ the Lord. Anybody else, in this game of happy living, can equally spoil the pleasure, but the mother's is the most significant and conspicuous place, so that if she fails, she drags the rest down with her.

Everyone in the whole family should begin and end each day with prayer.

Let us make happiness more our aim in these lives of ours. Let us be very sure that God means the whole family to be at peace, and to be not merely contented, but joyful, as we go through this world to the next.

"AN EVIL BEAST"

"An evil beast," said the brothers of Joseph to the sorrowing father, "hath devoured thy son." The story was false. Joseph, by the strange way of Egypt, had set out on a path that should lead to great promotion. But "an evil beast" had preyed on the brothers, and had murdered love in their hearts. Unspeakably cruel, unutterably wicked and base, the demon of jealousy had taken possession of those shepherds of the olden time, and turned them into brigands and robbers, into men whose native gentleness and brotherly kindness was transmuted into wolfish hate and rage. The evil beast of jealousy still walks abroad on the earth, still poisons home happiness and sows discord between loving hearts. Whosoever is wise will give no admittance to jealousy in thought or life; will carefully bar the portals of the soul against its entrance, for "jealousy is cruel as the grave."

AUNT PRUDENCE'S CORNER

—LILLIE. Be so lovable that people will not prefer your sister to you.
—ELLA E. P. It is, as you say, heart breaking that so many people

SATURDAY NIGHT

'TIS the close of the week, and its worries are ended;
The rents are repaired, and the stockings are mended,
The work of the six days is finished and over,
The Saturday evening, what angel wings hover!
Thank God, who so tenderly, one day in seven,
Sends down to our earth the sweet resting of heaven.

The mother is weary, so many her duties,
By loving contentment transfigured to beauties;
But deep in her heart there is gladness and joy,
As she touches the bright head of girl and of boy.
The father, whose toil has so seldom vacation,
On Saturday offers to God an oblation,
For blessed is the Sabbath when heaven flows in,
And its tranquil arrest hushes turmoil and din.

We may walk through the world, with slow footsteps to-day,
We, once who went merrily over life's way,
We may know the hard lessons we've learned in life's school,
Where the Master has taught us by line and by rule,
But the spirit of childhood, so fearless and gay,
Abides with the loving till earth's latest day,

And somehow, we're always most happy and light,
When God gives us leisure and Sunday's delight.

Attitude to Repentant Men

Christ's attitude to repentant sinners is one of invitation, of pardon, of tenderest compassion. The Bible is full of the sweetness of divine mercy. Our sins are blotted out; they are forever taken away. We may be as scarlet, but the blood of atonement shall wash us and we shall be whiter than snow.

We meet the penitent culprit in a very different spirit. Often we are incredulous as to his sincerity. The man or the woman who has fallen finds few hands extended in amity. Most people hold their garments away, stand aloof, or pass by on the other side. The temper of justice is vindictive, not reformatory. We make it desperately hard for the transgressor to get back into the strait and narrow path again.

Surely we should imitate Christ in our treatment of the sinner, and, in the relation of society to the outcast, the convict or the prisoner, whose term is finished behind the bars, there should be a radical change.

Concerning Carpets

"Well," remarked Mrs. Modern, "when I build my new house, I'll have hard wood floors and do away with carpets. Then house cleaning will cease to be a terror. With rugs, which may be taken up every week, half the trouble of life is lifted from one's shoulders."

"I like a carpet," said Madame Old-School, plaintively. "It's warm, it's soft, it's decorative, and it shows the money it cost. No slippery floors and scrappy rugs for me, if you please."

The daughter, just from boarding-school, looked up from the plate she was painting for her mother's birthday gift. "I'd rather have a rag carpet than the finest Axminster ever woven. A rag carpet sewed at home and woven on a hand loom. It's pretty and artistic."

"I hate that word artistic," said Madame Old-School, with emphasis. "It's a rubbishy word."

Mrs. Modern pensively smiled. "When I build my house, I'll need no carpets. While I hire, I must have them to conceal the poor floors. But I draw the line at geometrical designs and wreaths of flowers. My carpets are all-over patterns, wood color or moss color or even mud color, and they make a good, harmonious groundwork for my rooms, and if Millicent wants a rag carpet for her own chamber, there is no objection."

"We shall never think alike," said she of the Old-School.

THE GOAT-DEALER — "You are as close as a nut, Gabriel," says Francesca

WHEN old Gabriel, the goat-dealer, comes round to sell and to buy, it is the event of the year in the little Piedmont village, high up in the hills. Mother Francesca has a goat she can part with; she and her old covey, Gabriel, drive a hard bargain with many words, and one would think them bitter foes, yet they are friends at heart. "You are as close as a nut, Gabriel," she cries. Rosa, the farmer's wife, has money in her purse, and though she has a milch-goat and its kid already, she purchases a yearling as an investment. Having to leave the flock, it pulls against the leash, but Rosa's arm is strong, and she will manage an obstinate goat as well as she does the sturdy children who troop around her in the low-eaved cottage. It will soon learn to love her, too. "Come, come!" she says, "You've got to mind! The sooner, the better!"

have an unintelligent hostility to our friend, the dog. I agree with you perfectly and fully in your sentiment about animals.

—JASPER. A woman's yes is not always final. Ask your friend again.

—CARELESS NANCY. Receipts should be numbered and filed away.

—SUSAN. If in doubt, do not say yes to a man's suit. When you are really in love, you will not be so doubtful.

—SEVERAL READERS. In an early number of this paper you will find something about the national flower.

TO THE FIRST ROBIN

O merry robin redbreast,
I'm glad to see you here,
You've come to bring your roundelays,
The blossom time to cheer.

I see your mate is near you,
You mean to build a nest,
And you may choose what tree you will,
For you're a welcome guest.

SARA HANSCOMB.

Chapter XXI.—Two Voices

DURING his drive to the dock that afternoon, Immanuel Rossi found himself very much occupied with a spirited discussion, which he seemed compelled to carry on with some unseen but persistent intelligence, which strongly disapproved of his decision. Young Rossi did not stop to question himself as to the nature of the counter current of thought which thus interested itself in his personal affairs. Who of us does? Call it what we will—conscience, intuition, or one from out the "cloud of witnesses" who love us—we have all heard the voices. This particular debate if reported would have run as follows:

"Why did you not stand by your determination to go to the farm?"

"Why should I go to the farm; there is nothing for me to do there."

"Yes, there was something there for you to do. You are on the wrong road, my lad. You must get back to your Master."

"But I am going to Newport especially to see Sir Joseph Barron. I wish to consult him about the New York building."

"You are going to Newport to see Miss Margaret Livingstone."

"Well, what if I am; she is very much interested in my work."

"She is very handsome; but what has she done for the poor?"

"I—I don't know exactly; she gave her violets to that poor woman, for one thing."

"Yes, and stopped at the next florist's for a fresher bunch."

"I don't believe it; but if she did she helped the florist that much."

"You are seeing things through the wrong pair of eyes to-day. Stop and telephone young Livingstone that you cannot go with him."

"No, I will not. I am going."

This closed the debate, and the young man, feeling vaguely sore and uncomfortable, presently joined his friend with an eagerness, which was again the occasion of a quiet stare and a suppressed smile of amusement. "Sis has bagged her game all right, I reckon," was Livingstone's mental comment on the unwonted tone and manner of his guest.

There was enough of excitement in the process of going on board and the subsequent getting under way to keep uncomfortable voices quiet. Immanuel Rossi found that he could lean back in his cushioned chair on the white deck of the yacht without a twinge. Indeed, he presently found himself wondering how he could have conceived of such folly as a sojourn in the lonely little hut on the back hill-road. He definitely labeled it "hut," smiling with kindly tolerance at its unpainted, weather-beaten walls, its unpruned lilacs and its envolving tangle of mayweed. He drew deep breaths of the salt air, and bared his hot forehead to the keen wind which was tossing up a bevy of sparkling white caps on the blue waters of the Sound.

"You look like another man already," observed his host genially, as he threw himself into a chair at his side. "There's nothing like sea air for sweeping the cobwebs from a man's brain."

Rossi agreed with him unqualifiedly. He even added to the statement by declaring that sea air was vastly better than country air.

"Well, I don't know about that," said Livingstone lazily. "I'm awfully fond of country life myself. We must have you up in the Berkshires with us this fall; it's simply immense in October." After a pause, he added with studied indifference, "Did you tell me your place was up that way?"

"No," said the other stiffly. "But—I may buy a place there before long." He said this with a curiously defiant air.

"I don't see why you should not, old man," smiled Livingstone. "I'll show you a snug little cottage at Newport that's in the market just now for a song, if you're interested in real estate."

"I am interested in real estate," said young Rossi, determinedly. After a little he burst out, "Where did you get this boat, Livingstone? It's a perfect beauty; I think, I believe—"

"It is one of old Herreshoff's build," replied his host, concealing his astonishment under an excessive devotion to his cigarette. If I were you though, I'd have a steam yacht; they are more useful. If you want to take a run to the Mediterranean, for example, you can go in your own boat. I haven't any use for the liners; one might as well be on a Brooklyn ferry. There's no privacy. The Jacksons invited Sis to go abroad with them this summer; but she vowed she would never sail again on a Cunarder. It's so beastly common, don't you know."

Immanuel Rossi was deep in another discussion with that troublesome voice. He silenced it this time by saying: "But I tell you I can do both; I have enough. There's one big block finished and another one going up. I've spent money like water; and there's no satisfying the people; they want the earth. But I'll go on with it; I mean to."

Aloud, he remarked on the fact that five of his tenants had left that morning to go into the fair but specious apartments across the street from his mammoth and expensive building. "I've already, made the rents so low that they return but three and a half per-cent," he said with some show of irritation, "to say nothing of a band concert in the central court every week, a swimming bath, a banking and loan office, and any number of other things; I've spared nothing."

Livingstone laughed outright at the expression on his guest's dark face. "You're learning your little lesson all right," he said easily. "I could have told you all this and more six months ago; but I saw you didn't want to hear, so I let you alone."

"It's a terrible question though," said Immanuel, half to himself. He scowled as he said it, and shrugged his shoulders with a slight shiver.

"Come inside awhile, old fellow, and we'll have a mouthful to eat," cried his host, springing to his feet. "It's a question which you and I are not called upon to settle at the present moment, thank heaven!"

Margaret Livingstone, charming as a wood-nymph in an expensively simple gown of white, relieved with touches of pale green, was the first to greet the young men on their arrival. Her slim hand, cool and soft like a flower, lingered just for an instant in Immanuel's, while she murmured: "Behold a penitent, Mr. Rossi; I have such a disappointment in store for you that I hardly know how to tell it."

Young Rossi looked down into the gray eyes uplifted to his, and said so nearly what any other of the gilded youth of her acquaintance might have said that the young lady was almost shaken from her admirable poise for an instant. "I am at this moment far out of the reach of any disappointment whatever, Miss Livingstone."

She noticed that his dress was beyond criticism, and that his manner was quietly masterful.

"It's awfully good of you to say that, Mr. Rossi," she said, with a little laugh. "But when I tell you that Sir Joseph Barron was recalled to England by an urgent telegram this very day, why—"

The brilliant eyes were shadowed with wistfulness. "Of course," she went on, with a little impulsive gesture like that of a troubled child: "I should never have thought of asking you to waste your precious time on us; I thought—I believed that you would be glad to meet so eminent an authority on the tenement question as Sir Joseph."

The young man smiled down at her. "What will you think of me if I tell you that I am content to forget the tenements for a while?" he asked in a low voice. "There are other things—a man must live

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

OVAL FAIRY SOAP

Is just as pure as it looks. It is simply impossible to make a better soap for toilet or bath—and yet the price is 5 cents a cake: each cake wrapped and boxed.

Fits every hand. Fit for any hand.

THE N.K. FAIRBANK COMPANY
Chicago · New York · Boston · Philadelphia · St. Louis

We have no agents or branch stores.

New Spring Suits and Skirts.

HERE are a few of the advantages which you have in purchasing your suits and skirts from us:

First—We make every garment especially to order, thus insuring a good fit and finish.

Second—We thoroughly sponge and shrink all of our wools.

Third—We pay express charges everywhere.

Fourth—Our prices are lower than those charged by retail stores.

Fifth—You take no risk in ordering from us. If what you get does not please you, send it back and we will refund your money.

Our Catalogue illustrates:

New Cloth Gowns, tailor-made from Paris models, $8 up.

Silk-lined Suits, in attractive styles, lined throughout with taffeta, $15 up.

New Skirts, in many styles and fabrics, $4 up.

Rainy-Day Skirts, a universal necessity, $5 up.

Attractive Wash Skirts, $3 up.

Shirt-Waist Suits and Wash Dresses, for "every-day" and state occasions, $3 up.

Raglans, Rain-Proof Suits, Skirts and Coats, Riding Habits, etc.

Write to-day for Catalogue and Samples; you will get them free by return mail.

THE NATIONAL CLOAK CO.
119 and 121 West 23d Street, New York.

TRADE MARK

COLUMBIA YARNS

For knitting and crocheting, the famous Columbia Yarns are unequalled. The well-known brands—German-town, Spanish, Saxony, Shetland Floss and Shetland Wool, are all celebrated for softness, elasticity, and evenness of thread, brilliancy and durability of color. They are sold by dealers everywhere, and each skein is bound with the Columbia Ring Label, without which none are genuine. The third edition of Columbia Book of the Use of Yarns ready April 15. At your dealer's. Price, 15 cents.

Pullman Sleeper Combination Go-Carts

Called "Pullman" because they can by an instantaneous adjustment be turned into a Baby Carriage. Are a boon to baby and mother alike. Always ready when baby wants to sleep or sit up comfortably; a perambulator in the park or street; a hygienic bed at home. Over 50 HANDSOME 1902 STYLES beautiful reed-work; upholstery and parasols of best materials; green enameled, specially trued gears of Bessemer steel; wheels rubber tired, with latest improvements throughout. Also a complete line of Baby Carriages from $3.75 up. Sent subject to approval, to be returned at our expense and money promptly refunded if not satisfactory. Write for our catalog to-day, FREE.

CASH BUYERS' UNION, (INC.)
164-164 W. Van Buren St., Dept. C-18, Chicago, Ill.

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY MAILED FOR ONE CENT. Self-Pronouncing Edition, Morocco bound, gilt edges, fully indexed. Contains 29,000 words also Rules for Spelling, Punctuation, Use of Capital Letters, Tables of Weights and Measures, Parliamentary Law, Postal Information, Bankruptcy Law, etc.

STANDARD PUBLISHING CO., 41 N. 6th St., Philad., Pa.

CLASS PINS this style, with any 4 letters or figures and one or two colors of enamel, sterling silver, 25c. each; $2.50 a doz. Silver plated, 10c. each; $1.00 a doz.

Special designs in pins or badges made for any class or society at reasonable prices; send design for estimates. Catalogue free. Bastian Bros., Rochester, N. Y.

LYMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOG TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati.

KEEP YOUR TEETH WHITE with RUBIFOAM
The Delicious Dentifrice

Price, 25 Cents
At Druggists

For free sample vial address
E. W. HOYT & CO.
Lowell, Mass.

Exceptional Values in Fine Waists, Skirts, Costumes, Capes
Jackets, Raglans, Petticoats, Etc.
Portrayed and described in our new Spring and Summer Fashion Catalogue, No. 79
Mailed free for the asking.

THIS HANDSOME SILK WAIST $2.98
No. 4442 O. Representing a handsomely made as illustrated, of a fine quality taffeta silk, in black, old rose, light and royal blue, is trimmed front, back and on sleeves with clusters of pin tucking, and finished with numerous silk-covered buttons, has standing collar, made over fitted lining. Price $2.98

This Handsome $4.98 Tailor-Made Skirt.
No. 4456 O. Made as illustrated in the graduated flounce style, of an excellent quality Venetian cloth, in black, navy blue, brown and pearl gray; tastefully trimmed with four bands of taffeta silk and numerous rows of cording; well lined and stiffened. $4.98

Samples Free.
Send $1 and either or both of the above described garments will be forwarded to your nearest express office C. O. D. with privilege of examination for balance and charges.

Agents Wanted.
Write for Particulars

EDWARD B. GROSSMAN & CO.
170-172 STATE ST. CHICAGO
THE GREAT MAIL ORDER CLOAK HOUSE

"REVERSIBLE" Linene Collars & Cuffs.

MANY ADVANTAGES.
Perfect in fit, never ragged or uncomfortable. Very convenient, stylish, economical. Made of fine cloth and exactly resemble linen goods. Turn down collars are reversible and give double service.

NO LAUNDRY WORK
When soiled, discard. Ten collars or five pairs of cuffs, 25c. 15 mail, 30c. Send 6c. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuffs. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. P, Boston

SHORTHAND. Students of the Christian Herald Lessons should get the "Shorthand Instructor," upon which the lessons are based. 256 pp., $1.50. ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, 33 Union Sq., New York. Booklet free.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 296

his own life." He said the last words in the defiant tone which Livingstone had remarked on board the Gull.

"Do give the poor fellow a rest on the slums, sis," advised that young gentleman fraternally. "I know you're considerable of a crank on the subject; but one can't eat, drink, and sleep tenements every day in the year, don't you know. Short periods of relaxation are necessary to health and spirits." He winked openly at his sister at the conclusion of this speech, with a laugh which to Immanuel seemed apropos of nothing.

"How foolish you are, dear Robert," cooed Miss Livingstone. "I know I am tiresome about my poor people sometimes, but Mr. Rossi is very kind and sympathetic."

"Mr. Rossi wants to go over the Mills-Satterlee place to-morrow," said Livingstone, "so don't distract his mind from a named a most desirable city residence upon which they advised him to secure an option without delay.

Young Rossi read this letter on the shaded breeze-swept veranda of the Livingstone cottage one morning, then he put it in his pocket and strolled across the lawn to the spot where Margaret Livingstone, in pink and white and a fetching garden hat, was clipping the half-blown roses from a hedge of hybrid perpetuals. Her basket was heaped with the flowers, and her face, as glowing and pure in tint as the roses, was lifted to him with a bright smile of welcome as he approached.

"May n't I hold the basket?" he asked, "or shall I cut the roses?"

"I have enough, I think," replied the young lady. "I am going to arrange them in the summer-house; you come and help, if you like."

An array of bowls and vases filled with

Copyright, 1902, Louis Kappan, N. Y.

"I HAVE BOUGHT THE MILLS-SATTERLEE COTTAGE," SAID THE YOUNG MAN

gilt-edged real estate investment with any pathetic yarns about consumptive sewing girls."

"Are you really going to buy that place, Mr. Rossi?" she asked, with a surprise which was no less charming because entirely unaffected. "It is quite the prettiest cottage in Newport," I think.

She blushed becomingly after this little burst of enthusiasm, and withdrew to a position behind mamma's chair, which was now occupied by that most gracious of grande dames.

No guarded or questioning glances from the maternal eyes disturbed Immanuel Rossi on this occasion. He was made to feel in a thousand delicate ways that he was at home. And to be at home in a Newport cottage is a pleasant experience.

Young Rossi found it increasingly so as the days flew by. He looked over the Mills-Satterlee property, and after an unpleasant little confab with that teasing voice, which clamored loudly against his decision, wrote to his lawyers instructing them to purchase the place for him. Mr. Smalley replied by return of post, congratulating him on seizing so favorable an opportunity of securing a valuable investment. He added that all real estate was temporarily depressed at the moment, and water awaited them in the little octagonal rustic building, which commanded a charming view of the sea through its vine-wreathed windows, thrown wide this morning to admit the fresh ocean breeze.

"I have bought the Mills-Satterlee cottage," said the young man without preamble, this when the two were seated by the table.

"I must congratulate you," replied Miss Livingstone, selecting with care three or four magnificent blackish crimson roses, and placing them in a slender cut-glass vase.

"That is, I have told my lawyers to secure it for me," explained young Rossi. "They are obstinate fellows sometimes—lawyers, I mean; I've had lots of fights with mine already."

Miss Livingstone smiled by way of reply; she was fully aware of the subject of the disputes mentioned.

"It was over the tenements," he went on, watching the slim taper fingers, as deliciously white and pink as the buds they were coaxing into a nest of cool green leaves. "I've a lot of tenements, you know; and some of them are shameful dens: uncle fixed them up as much as he could, but they're slums yet!"

TO BE CONTINUED

NEW-SKIN
TRADE MARK
REGISTERED
WATERPROOF
LIQUID COURT PLASTER

Heals Cuts, Abrasions, Hang-Nails, Chapped or Split Lips or Fingers, Burns, Blisters, etc. Instantly Relieves Chilblains, Frosted Ears, Stings of Insects, Chafed or Blistered Feet, Callous Spots, etc., etc.

A ointment on the sensitive parts will protect the foot from being chafed or blistered by new or heavy shoes.

Applied with a brush and immediately dries, forming a tough, transparent, colorless waterproof coating.

Mechanics, Sportsmen, Bicyclists, Golfers, Etc.
In all habits of house, scratch, or scurf, their skin. "NEW-SKIN" will not wash off, and after it is applied the skin is as soft as silk. "NEW-SKIN" makes a temporary new skin until the broken skin is healed under it.

Pocket Size - 10c.
Size of Illustration

Family Size - 25c.
2 oz. Bottles - 50c.
For Sale in all Drug Stores and Hospitals

At the Druggists, or we will mail a package anywhere in the United States on receipt of price.

DOUGLAS MFG. CO.
Dept. 33
107 Fulton St., New York

THE EQUITABLE
"STRONGEST IN THE WORLD"

J.W. ALEXANDER
PRESIDENT

J.H. HYDE
VICE PRESIDENT

According to the Bureau issued by the Census Office
1,000,000 deaths occurred in the United States during 1900.

ONE MILLION PEOPLE!

This is about the number that will die this year in the United States.

It is not probable that you'll be one of them, but it's possible.

Had you not better provide against the possibility?

Whilst doing so, you can provide for your own old age —

By means of an Endowment Policy.

Send for Particulars.

THE EQUITABLE SOCIETY Dept. No. 60
120 Broadway, N. Y.

Please send me information regarding an Endowment for $..... if issued to a man..... years of age.

Name

Address

THE "1900" FAMILY WASHER FREE.

Greatest Invention of the Age.
Labor and Expense of Washing Clothes Cut in Two.

No More Stooping, Rubbing or Boiling of Clothes.

Every Household Needs One.

THE "1900" BALL-BEARING FAMILY WASHER SENT FREE

without deposit or advance payment of any kind, freight paid, on 30 days' trial. The 1900 Ball-Bearing Washer is unquestionably the greatest labor-saving machine ever invented for family use. Entirely new principle. It is simplicity itself. There are no wheels, paddles, rockers, cranks or complicated machinery. It revolves on bicycle ball-bearings, making it by far the easiest running washer on the market. No strength required, a child can operate it. No more stooping, rubbing, boiling of clothes. Hot water and soap all that is needed. It will wash large quantities of clothes (no matter how soiled) perfectly clean in 6 minutes. Impossible to injure the most delicate fabrics.

An Enthusiastic Admirer.

CHICAGO, July 17, 1901.

Binghamton, N. Y.
I started to wash with your "1900 Ball-Bearing Washer" at 10.30 A. M. and in half an hour the contents of two machines were washed clean, rinsed and hung on the line. A neighbor called as I started to wash my little boy's waists (which were terribly dirty), and in 10 minutes I wrung them out, and we were very much surprised to see that there was not a spot left. On Monday we did a big wash of 15 machinefuls of clothes in 4 hours. The lady living upstairs saw that we turned out so much work in such a short time that she asked us to loan her the Washer for Tuesday, which we did. She has a Washer, which she could never use, as it took a man to turn the machine. The "1900" is by far the best machine I ever saw. It works so easily that my little boy can run it. You are at liberty to refer anybody to me for further proof.

MRS. A. H. CENTNER,
636 Diversey Boulevard.

Write at once for catalogue and full particulars to

"1900" WASHER CO.
33V, STATE ST., BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

MANILA'S QVAINT SCHOOLS VISITED

CONT'D FROM PAGE 287

rare devotion and piety, as well as dauntless courage. But after a time these Orders grew wealthy, and the friars gradually assumed certain judicial functions, organized and supervised a far-reaching scheme of taxation on the common people, and added to themselves the powers that have made them feared and hated.

The menial work of teaching was relegated to native assistants, and while a large percentage of the people in the towns can read their own dialect and some can read Spanish, the general education is limited to the knowledge gained from a sort of compound that succeeds the primer and early catechism. This book is about the size of a common-school American history and contains a section of arithmetic, one on grammar, another on geography with maps of Spain and all its separate provinces, of the Philippines and of Italy; a section devoted to the history of the world, and the largest of all to the Roman church. The United States is mentioned once under "geography." The student learns that it is a country "about the centre of North America, with high mountains, great forests and rough, irreligious people, and maize and petroleum and cotton are the products."

In August and September, while I was pursuing a line of investigation for the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations, I gained access to several of these boys' boarding schools and colleges. In these the friars themselves teach, and most of the schools are modern, having grown up out of the revival of learning brought in by the return of the Jesuits in 1859, after nearly two centuries of exile. An ancient one known as the San Carlos, at Cebu, is under the Dominicans, and has three hundred young men in training for the priesthood. After all our pains, here we were only permitted to walk through the damp, musty corridors of the old prison-like building, and see the black-robed boys crossing themselves. The windows are all so high that they just light the ceilings, and the only glimpse of sunlight these novitiates receive is in the dirty inner courtyard, and for exercise they tramp around the dismal corridors, mumbling prayers and counting beads. The walls are from six to ten feet thick, and bars and bolts guard the doors. On certain feast days, relatives may come and kneel on a stone and speak in a whisper through a grating as large as your hand in the door. Is it any wonder that such men cling to a musty creed, and teach nothing and know nothing of the good news of salvation?

While the Puritan founders of old Harvard were still battling for their rights across the sea, the Royal University of Santo Tomas was established in Manila. It has had its fluctuations and at times has enrolled several thousand students. It is now showing marked evidences of age, and its main college, San Juan de Le Tran is not equal to the Ateneo College of Manila (which we also visited), in any way except in the building occupied, which is quite modern. Santo Tomas is controlled by the Dominican monastic Order. Probably the most interesting feature to us in its museums was the complete collections representing the industries, weapons and worship of the various mountain aborigines, the Negritos and Igorrotes. The library of this old university is a gold-mine for the antiquarian.

The San Jose Medical College is also a part of the university, and has about one hundred students who attend clinics in the San Juan de Dios Hospital. The work done is of low standard. The "Divinity School" of the university is now closed for want of students. From this university Jose Rizal went to Europe to win renown as a linguist and honors at surgery at Vienna. He it was who returned to his native land and became a true reform leader. His great novel in the Tagalog language, Noli Mi Tangere, was the Uncle Tom's Cabin of the revolution of 1896, and with other writings and utterances cost Dr. Rizal his life. He was shot on the Luneta, the great Manila pleasure drive, by order of the Spanish Government. A few months ago the anniversary of Rizal's birth was declared a holiday in the Philippines.

E. W. HEARNE.

Mellin's Infants' Food

can be adapted to the needs of different children.

Send for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company, Boston, Mass

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

now prepared by an improved process, the result of years of scientific investigation, may be confidently relied upon as being of

Absolute Purity and Free From Disagreeable Taste and Odor

MOLLER'S OIL always gives satisfactory results because of its perfect digestibility and the fact that it may be taken continuously without causing gastric disturbance.

In flat, oval bottles only, dated. See that our name appears on bottle as agents, Explanatory pamphlets mailed free.

Schieffelin & Co., New York

Established 1856. 1250 W. Wash. St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Why Not Save Money?

Thousands of ladies save money by wearing Merritt's Lustre Wool Petticoats.

Stylishly cut and perfectly made to your order at Factory Prices. We want to send you one for your examination and trial, at our expense. Material is very light weight and lustrous, steel-like in elasticity and durability.

Free samples and illustrated booklet "A" of styles sent on request.
GEO. MERRITT & CO.
Makers of high-grade Woolen Fabrics, Comforts, Shirt Waists, etc.

Make Ironing Day Pleasant

for the entire household by using the

THE GEM IRONING MACHINE

Saves worry, confusion and work and prevents loss of time usually required. Costs only 10¢ per hour to heat by gas or gasoline. Soon pays for itself. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sent FREE—Illustrated booklet, "Modern Methods of Ironing." Write today. Valuable suggestions. DOMESTIC MANGLE CO.
Box C, Racine Junction, Wisconsin.

Learn Book-keeping

BY MAIL—AT YOUR OWN HOME.

This is the chance of a lifetime for young men and women and you should not miss it. New method, any one can learn it within 6 to 8 weeks and places you in position to earn good salary at once. Thoroughly practical and remarkably inexpensive; we find positions, too, free of charge. Write to-day for full particulars. Michigan Business Institute, 62 Institute Building, Kalamazoo, Mich.

CORNS PERMANENTLY RELIEVED FREE

ALLEN'S ANTISEPTIC CORN PLASTER relieves corns permanently. To prove it I will mail free plaster to any one. Send name and address—no money.

GEORGE M. DORRANCE, 221 Fulton St., Dept. G, New York

Cash for REAL ESTATE

no matter where it is. Send description and cash price and get my wonderfully successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHEAP RATES

California, Washington, Oregon, Colorado. We give point rates on household goods of intending settlers to the above States. Write for rates. Map of California, Free.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL FREIGHT CO.
38 Market Street, Chicago, and 40 West 28th Street, New York

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars. Dept. E. KARL GERSTNER, 83-4th Avenue, New York.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

THE ELECTROMOTIC Teething Necklace

Brings rest and relief to both mother and child. Calms the nerves, and is as effective as it is harmless.

We all know that the magnet has a power of attraction at once simple and mysterious.

The principle of the Electromotic Teething Necklace is as mysterious as that of the magnet; although it will not affect an adult, it does act immediately upon the sensitive organism of an infant—instantly calming the nerves and inducing a healthful and refreshing sleep. This is known and vouched for by thousands of mothers who use it.

Price, by mail, 50 cents.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL. Send your name and address with 50 cents, and you will receive the Electromotic Teething Necklace at once. If dissatisfied at the end of 30 days, return the Necklace and your money will be refunded without question.

HENRY C. BLAIR, 800 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

YOUR SUMMER OUTING

THE railroads have decided to sell tickets to Colorado next summer at very low rates, so that people in moderate circumstances can go there at moderate cost for their vacations. There is no place where one can derive so much benefit in a given time as in Colorado.

The climate is delightful, the mountain scenery is famous the world over. As to the hotels and boarding houses, they are excellent and not expensive. Ask me to send you a copy of our hand-book of Colorado. It tells all about places and prices. Gives a lot of useful information and has a good map of the state.

P. S. EUSTIS,
General Passenger Agent,
C. B. & Q. Ry.,
Chicago, Ill.

A SWELL AFFAIR

DENT'S Toothache GUM

Should be carried in the pocket. Stops the pain of an aching tooth instantly. Known and praised everywhere. Avoid useless imitations; get Dent's, the original and only effective. All druggists or by mail, 15c.

C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

SALESMEN AND AGENTS WANTED

BIC WACES. Our Famous PURITAN WATER STILL, a wonderful invention—not a filter. 22,000 already sold. Demand enormous. Everybody buys. Over the kitchen stove it furnishes plenty of distilled, aerated drinking water, pure, delicious and safe. Only method. Distilled Water relieves Dyspepsia, Stomach, Bowel, Kidney, Bladder and Heart troubles; prevents fevers and sickness. Write for Booklet. Yes Plan, Terms, etc. FREE. Harrison Mfg. Co., 143 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

"SHYNEY-SHYNE" SILVER POLISH

Contains no acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful lustre. Once used, always used. We want a million orders this season. By mail, 15c. Two boxes, 25c. Till June 1st will send package of flower seeds free with each box.

THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dept. C.

New, Profitable Work for intelligent men and women, part or all your time. RARE OPPORTUNITY. W. G. FAY MFG. CO., 178 Broadway, N. Y.

DAVIS' Cake and Pastry Flour is prepared by our own process and retains just the part of the flour best suited for delicious cake and flaky pastry.

Free Send us your grocer's name and we will mail you free our beautiful new book, entitled containing photographic reproductions of twenty-eight cakes and desserts with complete receipts for making. The only illustrated receipt book published.

"Davis' Cake and Pastry Pictures,"

Ask your grocer for Davis' Cake and Pastry Flour or send us $1 for four packages, express pre-paid. Regular price 25c. per package. Address

R. T. DAVIS MILL & MFG. CO.
209 2nd St., St. Joseph, Mo.

Makers of the famous Aunt Jemima's Pancake Flour.

California Ostrich Feathers

Direct From the Farm at Producers' Prices. For Spring wear, beautiful, natural colored booms, 1 1/2 yards long, very thick, select feathers, $9.75, prepaid. Don't pay $3.00 for an Amazon plume when we send you, prepaid, an equally good one, 15 in. long, black or white, for $2.00. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Souvenir Catalogue and price list for 2 cent stamp.

CAWSTON OSTRICH FARM,
Post Office Box 2
South Pasadena, California.

Captured Monsters and Military Goods Catalogue. 1,000 Illustrations, Regular Cyclopedic, mailed free. F. Bantman, 579 Broadway, N. Y.

What does a chimney do to a lamp?

MACBETH'S is the making of it.

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

1877 FOR 25 YEARS 1902
we have successfully treated all forms of Cancer, Tumors and other new growths except in the stomach, and the Thoracic Cavity
Without the use of the knife.
As a logical result of our success

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS Sanatorium

has become the largest and most complete sanatorium in the world for the treatment of a special class of diseases, and has no rivals.

All physicians are cordially invited, as our guests. Upon receipt of a description of any cancerous tumor we will mail you a complete and sealed THE MOST VALUABLE and COMPREHENSIVE TREATISE ever published on this special subject, and will give you an opinion as to what can be accomplished by our method of treatment, and will refer you to former patients.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, North Adams, Mass.

Benjamin Franklin Said—

"Empty your purse into your head, and no man can take it from you."

A little money, and such times as you can spare, will give your brain a training that will increase your earning power, win promotion, qualify for better work. I. C. S. Textbooks make it easy for busy people to learn by mail.

Courses in Engineering, Mechanical Drawing, Architecture, German, French, etc. Write for circular, mentioning subject that interests you.

INTERNATIONAL
CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS,
Box 861, Scranton, Pa.

5% Guaranteed

On Deposits of $50.00
and Upward

It is folly to speculate with hard earned savings. This Company's business is free from speculative features. It keeps its depositors informed in detail regarding its operations, earnings and character of its assets and securities. Its business is subject to yearly inspection by the State Banking Department. We are privileged to use testimonials of old depositors and leading business men and clergymen.

Write for detailed information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

FOUND AT LAST!! AGENTS WANTED!!

U. S. Pat. Apr. 26, '98 & Aug. 22, '99. Canadian Pat. Sept. 20, '99.

The Stephenson Shirt-Waist Holder and Skirt Supporter is always ready for use. Holds waist down, skirt up. Absolutely no sewing. Reduces waistline. Made of steel band and aluminum. Will not rust or corrode. Avoid worthless imitations. Greatest Agent's article ever invented. Big profits, quick seller. Sold only by Agents. Sent prepaid 25 cents each.

C. L. STEPHENSON & CO., 110 W. 42d St., N.Y.

FREE! RAILROAD ANNUALS FOR 1902. Every "Book Lover" in the U. S. should secure one of our beautifully engraved "Buell Hampton" Annuals. SENT FREE. Write today before supply is exhausted. Address, FORBES & CO., Publishers, P. O. Box 1478, Boston, Mass.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

The Wisdom of a Child*

HOW much do you love mother?" a little child was asked. "Up to the sky, along a bit, and down on the other side."

Little Sidney put his curly golden head down on his dear nurse's knee. He loved nurse "so welly mutz," he must pray for her.

"Bless Lizzie," he prays with clasped hands, and then adds with great fervor, "bless the very chair she's sitting on!"

A gentleman found his little daughter crying bitterly because she had had a tumble.

"Never mind, Wynn timer," he said; "won't a chocolate make it better?"

"No," said the child between her sobs, "but two would do it."

It was pretty to see a city child in a copse carpeted with wild hyacinths. She gathered great bunches of the blue flowers, and shaking them on either side of her head, cried, "They ring the sweetest music I have ever heard."

A child of about five was staying at the house where at that time I most frequently visited. She was put to bed one evening without the curtains of her room being drawn. It was one of those nights when clouds come over and veil the sky and then disperse. Some one went up to see whether the dear little girl was asleep.

She said, "The stars all went in just now, and then came out shining brighter than ever; I think they must have gone to look at Christ."

My little girl, three or four years old, walking out one day saw a funeral. Telling us of it next morning, some one kindly and solemnly said that one day she too must die and be buried. An emphatic denial was the immediate reply.

"Oh, yes, dear, indeed you must."

I glanced anxiously at my child, for I had purposely kept the subject of death away from such little ones. Never shall I forget the horror expressed on that young face, instantly succeeded by a look and tone of glad triumph as she appealed to me.

"No, I shan't; shall I, mamma? Jesus died instead of me, and I shall live forever."

After a short prayer for aid, I replied. "Well, dear, your body must die, but your body is not really you. Your soul's you; that which thinks and feels and loves."

She seemed satisfied, but I wondered if she understood. A week later she looked up at me and said, "My body will die, but my body is not me; my soul's me, isn't it, mamma?"

A child said, "When I say my prayers I always see everything. When I say, 'Deliver us from evil,' I see God going out with a spear to fight Satan; and when I say 'Forgive us our trespasses,' I see him with a big rubber cleaning a black-board."

"I felt a d'op of rain," said a tiny urchin, as he trotted down the lane by his mother's side.

"Really? I did not," said she.

"How could you, when it came on my nose?" was the reply.

A nurse was putting the finishing touch to her charge's toilet, preparatory to sending the little girl into the dining-room for dessert. Seeing a speck of dirt on the child's face, she took the corner of her apron and damped it in her mouth. The guests were suddenly convulsed by hearing through the half-open door a shrill childish voice, "Tompny or no tompny, me won't have my face spit-washed."

*From Children's Sayings, by William Canton Pp. 157. Cloth binding. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York, publishers.

Purity

A clear, healthy complexion inspires the same admiration as does the lovely Easter Lily. Sunshine and cultivation do for the lily what intelligent care does for the skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap

the only soap made especially for the face, is a valuable tonic. It cleanses and stimulates the pores. Soothing, healing, refreshing, it puts the skin in a perfectly healthy condition, and keeps it smooth, firm and white. An ideal soap for the toilet, bath and nursery.

Sold by dealers everywhere. 25 cents.

Special Offer Our booklet, telling how to improve one's looks, and trial size package of Woodbury's Facial Soap and Facial Cream sent for 5 cts. (stamps or coin) to pay postage. Address Dept. 62.

The Andrew Jergens Co., Sole Agents, Cincinnati, O.

CORNISH PIANO AND ORGAN MINIATURES

FREE

TO ALL READERS.

FROM $155.00
how we send instruments on ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. With the catalogue we will forward prepaid to any interested person a set of Piano and Organ Miniatures FREE absolutely correct in coloring, to aid them in making a selection best suited to the color scheme of their home. This unique advertising matter has been prepared by us at great cost and no intending purchaser can afford to be without it.

ALL FOR NOTHING. Write for it to-day and mention this paper. Full particulars of our Co-Partnership Plan are also sent, showing how you can get a PIANO OR ORGAN FREE. No matter how much or how little you wish to pay for a musical instrument, we can please you and save you money. Write today.

CORNISH CO., Washington, New Jersey. Established 50 Years.

We will forward without cost to you anywhere our new 1902 Souvenir Catalogue, with embossed and colored plates, illustrating all our styles of Pianos and Organs. It will prove to you that we really sell a better instrument for less money and on more liberal terms than any other reputable firm in the country, also.

FROM $25.00 Cash or Installments.

The FAMOUS ST. LAWRENCE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

are strictly high grade, guaranteed instruments, and are designed for the best musicians.

MANDOLIN—Solid rosewood, neatly inlaid around edge and sound hole, celluloid bound edges, inlaid frets, pearl position dots. An instrument noted for its tone and splendid appearance. Retail for $9.00. Our price, $4.95.

GUITAR—Standard size, beautifully inlaid around sound hole, top edge and down back; edge bound with celluloid, finger board is fretted absolutely correct, pearl position dots, best American patent heads, improved metal tail piece. Regular $10 value. Our price, $4.20.

MEIERHOF VIOLIN—Meierhof's Conservatory—Stradivarius model, full ebony trimmed, rich amber or dark red, fine bow with it free. Retailers charge $15 for such an instrument. Our price, $4.90.

SEND NO MONEY We ship C. O. D., subject office, the money to be paid to the express agent when the instrument is found entirely satisfactory. Write for Free Catalogue of Musical Instruments and Sundries of all kinds. SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

You Can Play It Without Learning

ZOBO

Solid Brass. 5 in. long.

Price 25c post-paid

The Musical Wonder

ENTERTAINS EVERYBODY EVERYWHERE

For Church, Sunday-School or Home Societies. Free Illustrated Catalogue sent on application.

Strauss Mfg. Co., 142 W. 14th St., Dept. 19 New York.

Gems of Song

for the Sunday School.

288 Pages, Full Bound in Cloth.

Over 200 Popular Hymn and Tune Writers Represented. $25.00 per 100. Sample Copy, post free, 20 cents.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

California

morning and evening trains

For busy people who want to make the journey quickly with the conveniences of luxurious travel.

Leave Chicago { 10 a. m.
8:00 p. m.
11:30 p. m.

VIA

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN UNION PACIFIC AND
SOUTHERN PACIFIC R'YS

The best of Everything.

ALL AGENTS SELL TICKETS BY THIS ROUTE

frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT, ANY COLOR ENAMEL, STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

$10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle.
$12.75 for the celebrated 1902 Klein King or Klein Queen.
$15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MORGAN & WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC TIRES, A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE.
10 DAYS FREE TRIAL For the most wonderful bicycle offer ever heard of, WRITE FOR OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

$3.28 FOR THIS REVOLVER

Harrington & Richardson's "Premier" Automatic double action, self-cocking, hard rubber stocks, finely finished.

Catalogue of Guns, Rifles, Revolvers, Fishing Tackle, Golf and Bicycle supplies of all kinds.

STARK & WECKESSER, 49 S. Main Street, Dayton, O.

FOUR GOOD REASONS why you should buy BUCCIES direct from our factory
1st—YOU SAVE the DEALER'S PROFIT.
2d—You get all custom made & best material.
3d—You get our TWO years guarantee.
4th—Our $21 Buggy, $16 Surrey and $37 Top Family Wagon are wanted for cheapness and give great satisfaction. Harness $3.95.
Repairs, 4 tired wheels $5.75. Buggy Tops with curtains $4.75. Shafts $1. We instruct purchasers to be good agents. Catalog free.
U. S. Buggy & Cart Co., 53 & 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

More Lamps Set Up!

The Old Bowery Mission Lighthouse Remembered

DURING the past week, a number of letters have been received, containing offerings from readers who wish to "set up a lamp" in the Gospel Lighthouse on the Bowery. All the letters show the warmest interest in the rescue work and express the desire of the writers to have a share in that work. We give below a few extracts, which are characteristic of all:

I thank God for the work of the Mission, and wish there was one in this place, and all over the land, there are so many dear ones to be saved or lost.
S. J., Hubbardston, Mass.

I enclose two dollars for the Bowery Mission, and may God bless the effort for the saving of precious souls, and THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for its ministry in all cases where help is needed. I promise to pay the same each succeeding year, the Lord willing.
H. L. K., Boston, Mass.

Please find enclosed $1. May the lights increase in the "Old Lighthouse," and many be brought out of darkness into the "Light."
MRS. D. A. H., Topham, Me.

A friend and I desire to send $1 each as helpers in the Mission work. We are anxious to add our mites to help the grand work that is going on there.
A. D. W., Middlet, W. Va.

Enclosed find $2. I will try to keep it up each year. I wish to contribute my mite toward sustaining the light that is guiding so many of the unfortunate ones of your great city to the greater Light that is to illuminate the world.
E. L. E., Mt. Vernon, Ill.

Enclosed please find one dollar. Will send yearly, God willing. Miss E. L. K., Brownsville, Tex.

My thoughts have been long dwelling upon sending one dollar for the Bowery Mission. I will continue the same every year as long as I shall be able.
MARY F. G., Alamance, N. C.

I send $5 for Jesus' sake. I do not want my name given. Will send for the Rescue work while I have it.
MRS. A. M., Tallapoosa.

My husband and I wish to be numbered with those who have set up a lamp in the old Gospel Lighthouse. Enclosed find $2 and pledge for 1902. May God bless the gift.
MR. AND MRS. JOHN H., Rolfe, Pa.

I enclose $1, and pledge myself to send the same as long as my life is spared.
MRS. S. M. F., Fort Plain.

Of all the relief work carried on by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, the Bowery Mission appeals to me most strongly (S. E. B., Wyomanoek, N. Y.)

Enclosed find $1 to brighten the light in the old Bowery Mission.
M. L. G., N. Y. City.

These contributions have been received:

| | | | |
|------------------------------|--------|------------------------------|-------|
| Mrs. J. L. Church..... | $1.00 | Mrs. A. K. Richman..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Catharine Ball..... | 1.00 | Mrs. M. A. Knight..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. C. G. Hinman..... | 1.00 | Mrs. S. Putnam..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. M. F. Campbell..... | 1.00 | Katie Rapp..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Lydia Y..... | 1.00 | Mrs. W. A. W. Seibert, | |
| Richard Ripley..... | 1.00 | Col..... | 1.00 |
| Priscilla Hutchinson..... | 1.00 | Mrs. D. W. Noyes..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Minnie Watkins..... | 1.00 | Mrs. B. F. Jellison..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. A. E. Kunthe..... | 2.00 | Mrs. B. F. Jellison..... | 2.00 |
| Subscriber, Denver..... | 1.00 | Ella McEwen..... | 2.50 |
| Mrs. R. D. Swin..... | 50 | B. O. L. Botetourt, Va..... | 1.64 |
| I. H. N. Aspinwall, Pa..... | 3.00 | Mrs. S. C. Baldwin..... | 1.00 |
| Anon..... | 1.00 | Mrs. J. T. Baughey..... | 1.00 |
| G. M. Walker..... | 5.00 | D. L. Harbaugh..... | 15 |
| H. L. Abbe..... | 2.00 | Mrs. Wm Bunker..... | 15 |
| Mrs. L. P. Abbe..... | 1.00 | G. F. Brown..... | 5.00 |
| C. B. Miles..... | 1.00 | G. D. Telfer..... | 15 |
| A. Friend, Lafayette..... | 1.00 | —, Bloomfield..... | 1.00 |
| Myra Alger..... | 1.00 | Jas. N. Hersh..... | 1.00 |
| E. J. Lamb..... | 1.00 | Lucy Pietzsch..... | 50 |
| Mrs. E. J. Lamb..... | 1.00 | Mrs. Pietzsch..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. J. A. Bass..... | 1.00 | Martha Pietzsch..... | 50 |
| Agnette Boe..... | 1.00 | —, Casanova..... | 2.00 |
| J. G. Carr..... | 1.00 | Mrs. A. H. Walker..... | 1.00 |
| Miss S. A. Simonds..... | 1.00 | Percy Gibson..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. K. S. Palmer..... | 1.00 | A. V. & C. J. Talbert..... | 1.00 |
| Mrs. W. A. Rouse's..... | 1.00 | W. Van Norden..... | 25.00 |
| Point, N. Y..... | 1.00 | Clyde Salisbury..... | 3.00 |
| Jennie Davis..... | 1.00 | Theo. L. De Vinne..... | 5.00 |
| M. L. Riggs..... | 1.00 | Rev. N. Currie..... | 1.00 |
| L. A. S. Plymouth, Mass..... | 1.00 | C. G. Morris..... | 1.00 |
| W. D. Hart..... | 1.00 | Mrs. Chas McDonald..... | 1.00 |
| Mr. & Mrs. G. W. Haz- | | Lucinda A. Treat..... | 1.00 |
| let, N. J..... | 2.00 | Mr. & Mrs. W. M. Sipple..... | 5.00 |
| Mrs. S. U. Cookinhour..... | 1.00 | A. Believer in Christ..... | |
| Mrs. Alfred James..... | 1.00 | Holmdel, N. J..... | 5.00 |
| Mrs. Jacob Tinkle..... | 50 | Mrs. N. E. Los Gatos, | |
| Mrs. Jas. A. Morgan..... | 1.00 | Cal..... | 5.00 |
| Mary J. Shellenberger..... | 2.00 | —, South Norfolk..... | 5.00 |
| Friends, Logan, | | —, Whitesboro, N. Y..... | 1.00 |
| Nev..... | 3.00 | Mrs. Hiram Koch..... | 50 |

Evangelist Moody Remembered

The anniversary of Mr. Moody's birthday was celebrated as "Founder's Day," by the Northfield schools on February 5. Mr. H. M. Moore, of Boston, president of the Board of Trustees, spoke to the young women at their morning chapel service, relating how Mr. Moody had come to him when he had decided to organize a school for the purpose of giving girls a Christian education, telling him of the great need he had observed among girls in the humbler walks of life, especially in the rural districts. Rev. Henry Varley, the English evangelist, told how he had first met Mr. Moody in 1864 on his first trip abroad. He recounted a number of incidents, illustrating Mr. Moody's indomitable perseverance and energy, also his power in prayer and deep spiritual life. At Mount Hermon, a service was conducted in the Memorial Chapel, and in the evening a service was held at the Northfield Bible Training School, similar in character to the others.

Faith—Milord, You're Right!

Uneeda Biscuit

FROM FACTORY TO YOU

with just a manufacturer's profit added, saving you what the jobber and dealer have been making. We manufacture in our own factory every job we offer, and we make them so good that we ship them any-

30 Days' Free Trial.

Pay when pleased. Send back if displeased. We take the risk. Our free 1902 catalogue now ready. It is full of up-to-date this year's styles of buggies and harness. Don't confuse us with any other firm. We are pioneers of the free trial plan. Write for free catalogue.

KALAMAZOO CARRIAGE & HARNESS MFG. CO., Station S, KALAMAZOO, MICHIGAN.

PAY ONE PROFIT—SAVE TWO.

By our Manufacturer's One Profit selling system you can buy Vehicles and Harness direct of us and save the Jobbers' and Retailers' profits. Freight? Yes, you pay the freight, but so does the dealer. If he pays it he charges you a profit on freight also. Do you see?

$45.90 FULL LEATHER TOP BUGGY

Distance Axles, Spring Cushions, End or Side Bar Springs, Hickory Gear Woods, Full Bolted "B" Grade Wheels.

CANOPY TOP SURREY, $59.65

Full Fenders, Oil Burning Lamps, Spring Cushions, Full Bolted Wheels, 1 1/4 Steel Axles, End or Brewster Springs, Fine Finish. Every Vehicle Guaranteed Two Years. Our Complete FREE Vehicle and Harness Catalogue gives full descriptions of these and many other styles. Write for it NOW.

SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

No. 717 Surrey. Price, $75.00. As good as sells for $35.00 to $50.00 more.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Manufacturing Co., Elkhart, Ind.

29 YEARS SELLING DIRECT.

We are the largest manufacturers of vehicles and harness in the world selling to consumers, and we have been doing business in this way for 29 years.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS

but ship anywhere for examination guaranteeing safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied. We make 195 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness. Our prices represent the cost of material and making, plus one profit. Our large free catalogue shows complete line. Send for it.

No. 232 Wagon has rubber covered steps and 3/4 inch Kelly rubber tires. Price, $67.00. As good as sells for $40.00 to $50.00 more.

The Best Carriage Offer

Our carriages and harness, sold direct from our factory at wholesale prices, save you two profits.

We have sold more carriages direct than any other house in the world, because ours is the

Most Liberal Offer and Complete

Written Guarantee ever made by any Responsible Manufacturer.

Our goods have a reputation that we will uphold. Our plan is fully explained in our illustrated catalogue, SENT FREE—No matter when, where, or how you buy, you need this catalogue as a guide.

It describes vehicles and harness fully, and quotes lowest prices ever offered. Write now.

Factory and General Office, Columbus, Ohio.

Western Office and Distributing House, St. Louis, Mo.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE AND HARNESS CO.

Write to the nearest office—ST. LOUIS or COLUMBUS.

No. 5034. Concord Spring Buggy

Enjoy Your Veranda & Lawn this Summer

For real comfort, ease and summer pleasure, rest and soothe yourself in one of the celebrated

Old Hickory Chairs

They are made entirely of hickory from original designs. Last a lifetime in sunshine or rain. Comfortable, stylish and wonderfully appropriate for interior as well as exterior use. Chair illustrated above is our No. 29 Woven Back Rocker. Popular style and good value. Fine for the exhausted woman, fretful child or tired business man. Price, $2.75, two for $5.00. Freight paid east of Mississippi River.

If your furniture dealer will not supply you, remit direct to us.

SENT FREE: Finely illustrated catalogue with prices. It abounds with suggestions. Ask for it.

The OLD HICKORY CHAIR CO.
461 Cherry St., Martinsville, Ind.

$2 Fine Bath Cabinet $2

PLACED IN YOUR HOME FOR

Write today for our special 10 day offer. Robinson Bath is guaranteed to relieve Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Kidney Trouble, Catarrh, etc. Send for our new book, free.

30 STATE AGENTS WANTED

Position is worth $1,200 to $1,500 per year and expenses.

Write for full particulars.

Robinson Thermal Bath Co.
910-917
Jeffersonville, Ind.
Toledo, O.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC

(REGISTERED)

NEW WOOD FINISH

FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK

RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD OR METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED.

A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED

MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, MANGANY, CHERRY, GREEN, RED, BLACK (BRILLIANT & DRY), NATURAL (CLEAN), IVORY & YELLOW. COLOR CARD & SAMPLE FREE.

SAMPLE CAN 1/2 Pint, (any color) 10¢

by mail, postpaid, for

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.
DEPARTMENT C
CLEVELAND, O.

QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS.

CRACKS IN FLOORS

are unsightly, unclean and unsanitary

Grippin's Wood, Crack and Crevice Filler is the only perfect and permanent remedy, and is conceded to fill a universal want. A clean paste, easily and quickly applied. Adapted to all kinds and conditions of wood. Average cost about $1.00 per room of 200 sq. ft. Write today for our booklet and testimonials. Enclose stamp.

GRIPPIN MFG. CO.,
Dept. B,
Newark, New York.

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

25 designs, all steel. Handsome, durable. Cheaper than a wood fence. Special inducements to church and cemeteries. Catalogue free.

KOKOMO FENCE MACHINE CO.,
445 North St.,
Kokomo, Indiana.

YOU CERTAINLY WILL

If you order fence from us once you are certain to do it again.

THE ADVANCE FENCE

is sold direct from the factory to the farmer at wholesale prices. You get the best price. Entirely interwoven. No loose ends. Many heights. Write for free circulars and special prices.

ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 N. St., Peoria, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO EARN MONEY

Man, woman, or youth (either sex) write for plan of attractive employment. Mention this paper.

ROYAL CEYLON COFFEE CO., Alexandria, Va.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE SALOON

The Red House and its Unique Place in Christian and Social Work

At a cost of $50,000 the "Red House," a public-house or saloon, but without beer or other intoxicants, has been erected and opened in the slums of London. Nowhere in this country is such a building to be found, nor has it a counterpart in Europe. The venture has been carried to a successful conclusion through the efforts of the pastor of St. Augustine's, Stepney, the Rev. Harry Wilson. The Bishop of London took a close personal interest in the scheme. This model public resort comprises in addition to an open house for refreshments, a large hall for meetings and entertainments and a club-room and lodgings for workingmen. Its circulars read:

THE RED HOUSE AND ITS FOUNDER

Red House, 99 Commercial Road, E. An invitation to men who do not go to church. Our Red Room is open to you on Sunday morning from 12.30 to 1.30, so you will drop in for an hour? You will find a nice room with books and newspapers and a bright fire. Working clothes are all right for the Red House, so come in just as you are. My friend will sing you two beautiful songs, and we will have a little talk about religion, and I will tell you "why religion is the happiest thing in the world." The coffee shop is, of course, closed on Sunday, but you can get a cup of coffee upstairs in the Red Room, where men in their working clothes are always welcome. So come, if you like, on Sunday mornings and bring your mate with you.

In the basement there is a large dining-room, after the style of a restaurant; on the ground floor a large coffee bar; upstairs on first floor a recreation room, where temperance meetings and concerts are held; on the second floor a class room for religious instruction, and a small room for private teaching; at the top a floor of cubicles for single men lodgers, and above that rooms for workers to live in. The idea is to provide a bright, happy and comfortable place, where the workingmen can spend their evenings free from temptations—in other words, to provide a substitute for the public house. They are thus helped socially and morally. Good, plain, well cooked food is served. Cool drinks, iced tea, coffee and lemonade are served during the summer when desired. On Sundays hot coffee and rolls are served with the religious exercises and the men seem equally eager for each. During the week there are no sermons, just friendly talks by the pastor or his assistants, and the men are encouraged to make themselves at home.

A Mighty Power for Good

Mrs. E. B. Hinckley, O., writes: "Your patrons certainly know that you perform your promises. I will simply say the pictures are beautiful. As the Bible is the Book of books, so THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is the paper of papers—a mighty power for good."

NATURAL FOOD

builds strong bodies and healthy minds.

Disorganized food causes weak bodies and weak minds.

Logicians tell us that there can be no physical defect without a corresponding defect mentally. All criminal tendencies come from disorganized minds. Scientists of several nations declare that "what we eat, we are."

SHREDDED WHEAT WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT

gives mental as well as physical health because it is a Naturally Organized Food; that is, Contains all the Properties in Correct Proportion necessary for the Complete Nutrition of the human body and mind. White flour is a disorganized food because properties that build strong bodies and minds have been removed from the wheat.

Sold by all grocers. "The Vital Question" (sent free) is a hand book of right living. Send for it.

THE NATURAL FOOD CO., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

"Deny me not my birthright, I want to be a man, My birthright includes Natural Foods."

THE IDEAL SIGHT RESTORER

WE RESTORE SIGHT!

CLASSES RENDER DEFECTIVE VISION CHRONIC.

Write for our ILLUSTRATED TREATISE ON THE EYE, Mailed Free.

THE IDEAL COMPANY,
239 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK.

A Medical Dept. for Treatment of Constitutional Diseases under Skilled Specialists.

ELECTRIC Handy Farm Wagons

make the work easier for both the man and team. The tires being wide they do not cut into the ground; the labor of loading is reduced many times, because of the short lift. They are equipped with our famous Electric Steel Wheels, either straight for stager spokes. Wheel is any height from 24 to 60 inches. White hickory axles, steel bounds. Guaranteed to carry 4000 lbs. Why not get started right by putting in one of these wagons. We make our steel wheels to fit any wagon. Write for the catalog. It is free.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., BOX 136, QUINCY, ILL.

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels

only $21.95

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish Steel Wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co. Quincy, Ill.

Free Trial. Get a HAWKEYE

It is sold on thirty days' free trial. Copper tanks, three walls, most perfect heating and ventilating system, fully guaranteed. 6-horse machine $7.50 on trial. Write for free book, or send 10c for catalogue and a year's subscription to leading poultry paper.

HAWKEYE INC. CO.
Dept. Z, Newton, Iowa.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE. Bull-tight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalog Free. COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47 Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

REMOVES AILMENTS PECULIAR TO WOMEN

COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT.

Thousands of letters like this prove our assertions:

"Curtis, Miss., Sept 1st, 1898 The brace I bought of you two years ago did all you claimed for it. It freed me from the worst forms of illness peculiar to my sex. Before using the Brace I suffered with prolapsus, periodical cramps, inflammation, constipation, headache, and other things of 20 years' standing. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctors before trying the Brace.

"Mrs. Susie Woodard."

Send for full information with book or, mailed free in plain, sealed envelope. Address

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE CO.,
Box 171, Salina, Kansas

SIMPLE IN CONSTRUCTION—COMFORTABLE ADJUSTABLE TO ANY FIGURE.

PETS LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY OF ALL KINDS ABSOLUTELY STOCK PEDIGREED AND REGISTERED POULTRY SCORED FREE

all bred and raised at the Epitomis Experiment Station where the Agricultural Epitomis is edited and printed amid the activities of real farm life, in which results of experiments made at this Station are given from month to month together with other information of inestimable value to every farmer, gardener and household generally, with any size farm down to the smallest garden plot. We breed nothing but the best and purest strains of all kinds of Stock and Poultry including Angora Goats, Scotch Collie Dogs, Belgian Hares, Etc., and all the best strains of Poultry. It is our aim to aid every one whose stock and poultry is not absolutely pure to start in right. A postal card with your name and address and calling attention to this advertisement, will get you full particulars together with descriptions and illustrations of our Pets, Stock and Poultry which we give absolutely free. Address

EPITOMIST EXPERIMENT STATION, Spencer, Ind.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Fruit & Shade Trees. 16 years' experience. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Dansville, N. Y.

"Use the means and heaven will give you the Blessing." Never neglect a useful article like

SAPOLIO

Indoor or outdoor ROSES

We grow annually nearly a million rose plants, including a thousand varieties. To introduce them we offer our Great Trial Collection, 16 D. & C. Roses $1 sent, postpaid, to any address, satisfaction and safe arrival guaranteed. These roses will bloom this season continuously. All different kinds, properly labeled. Strong plants on their own roots—not cuttings. FREE with every order for the above the great new Rose Yellow Mamam Cochet as one of the 16 varieties and a return check good for 25 cents on next order, provided you mention where you saw this advertisement, also the 55th Annual Edition of Our New Guide to Rose Culture, 114 pages, tells how to grow, and describes our famous roses and all other flowers worth growing. Also free on request.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO. West Grove, Pa.
Established 1850. 70 Greenhouses.

"The breed that lays
Is the breed that pays"

Increase Your Income

RAISING
Pure-Bred Poultry.

SINGLE COMB White Leghorns

Lay more eggs and make more money than any other breed. We will start you in the chicken business with a complete pen of pure-bred hens and a fine cockerel. We will teach you how to feed and care for them, furnish you diagrams and specifications for the buildings they need, how to incubate and breed, how to raise the growing chicks, how to get the greatest number of eggs and how to sell your products with the largest profit.

A postal card will bring you full particulars.

The WHITE LEGHORN POULTRY YARDS,
Box C, Waterville, N. Y.

A LITTLE BEAUTY is what they call the 55 egg.

MARILLA INCUBATOR.

"Pretty is as pretty does" applies here, too. It is not a toy—made just like our large machines. Guaranteed to please you. "Satisfaction or no sale" our motto. Marilla Brooders the best made. Heated like a house. Crowding impossible. Complete catalogue for 4 cents.

MARILLA INCUBATOR COMPANY, BOX 34, ROSE HILL, N. Y.

The Sure Hatch

is the incubator for the poultry raiser, whether farmer or fancier. Anyone can run them, because they run themselves. Anyone can own them, because the price is right. Machine and results guaranteed; you take no risk. Our Common Sense Brooder is the best at any price, and we sell it very low. Handsome catalogue containing hundreds of views and full of honest poultry information, mailed free. When writing address nearest office.

Sure Hatch Incubator Co., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, O.

THE EGYPTIAN LOTUS.

The true sacred ancient Lotus, leaves 3 feet, and lovely pink flowers 1 foot across; hardy, free blooming, easy to cultivate in TUBS OR PONDS. Blooming size roots 50c., large tubs 75c. to $1 each. RED, WHITE, BLUE & YELLOW Water Lilies 50c. Cultural directions and Water Lily Catalog free.

GEO. B. MOULDER, City Park Smith's Grove, Ky.

POULTRY PAPER, illus'd, 20 pages, 25 cts. per year, 4 months trial 10 cts. Sample Free. 64-page practical poultry book free to yearly subscribers. Book alone 10 cts. Catalogue of poultry books free. Poultry Advocate, Syracuse, N. Y.

RUNS ITSELF!

As simple in operation as a gentle summer shower. You strike a light and the Petaluma Incubator does the rest. No worry. No loss. Hatches every fertile egg. 4 sizes. Catalog free.

PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO.,
Box 64, Petaluma, Cal. Box 64, Indianapolis, Ind.

DON'T SET HENS

the same old way when our new plan beats it 10 times. 100 Egg Hatcher Costs Only $2. Over 14,000 in use. 100,000 tests. 500 Agents wanted for 1902, either sex. Pleasant work. Big profits. Catalog and 10c Egg Formula FREE if you write today.

Natural Hen Incubator Co., B 84, Columbus, Neb.

$5 INCUBATORS FREE

Self regulating. Guaranteed for 2 years. Hatches every good egg. Send for catalogue No 60. Sell six and get one free.

INVINCIBLE HATCHER CO., SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

GIVING*

The Law of Generosity and its Reflex Influence on the Giver

PASTORS who shrink, as many do, from appealing to their people for gifts to the Lord's work, may take encouragement from the Apostolic example. Immediately after that sublime chapter on the resurrection (I. Cor. 15) Paul's next words are, "Now concerning the collection." Money is necessary to spread the Gospel and to do missionary work and to care, as the Church ought to do, for the sick and the destitute. There can be no doubt that giving is a duty, and when the really consecrated Christian man can be brought to recognize the fact he will do it. No one has proved that fact more decisively than has this journal. Its readers have given with marvelous generosity, and have responded nobly to the appeals it has printed for Russia, India, China, and the needy in our own land. In the whole history of religious journalism there has never been so magnificent example of Christian beneficence as that which the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have given to the world. It has been necessary only to state the need, to explain the circumstances which have caused the need and the means proposed to relieve it, in order to elicit gifts in abundance.

An instructive lesson has been taught by the correspondence connected with the gifts of our readers to these various causes. The testimony of the givers has been remarkable. They uniformly declare that the gifts they have sent have been blessed to themselves. Though it has often happened that those gifts have involved self-denial, that the givers have had to do without luxuries and in some cases actual comforts, in order to send the money, they have felt more happy in denying themselves than they would have felt in spending the money for personal uses. The money sent has given them more pleasure than it would have given them if it had been used in any other way. This is the testimony of experience and it is confirmed by the testimony of others. It seems to be a law of our nature that the surest way to happiness is not self-indulgence, but in doing a kindness to some other person. The experiment is worth making even from a selfish point of view, because every one wants to know the sure way of becoming happy.

Not only does giving and the habit of helpfulness tend to happiness, they tend also, by some unknown law, to actual increase of means. The giving, generous man, who gives wisely and carefully and not merely in lavish indifferent good nature, generally becomes a prosperous man. A case in point may serve as an example. It was that of a young man starting in business. He was energetic and enterprising, and was fairly successful, but again and again was brought into straits by heavy bad debts. He could not bring himself to press a debtor for payment, and people took advantage of his leniency. Then his friends would go to him for help in their business emergencies, and if he had money, at command he would lend them what they needed. He has been known to take a man who had failed in business, and supply him with capital to make a new start. Of course, he often lost large sums in this way. Yet the man has prospered beyond his most sanguine hopes. In spite of all his losses, he has more money than he ever dreamed of having, and he still continues his helpfulness. His friends ask him if he will never learn by experience; but his experience, often painful, has never led him to refuse to help a friend who is in need. The secret of his prosperity probably lies in his own excellent business ability, but perhaps not all the secret. It may be that God sees in him a man who may safely be trusted with money, a man whom prosperity will not spoil, and for his own sake, as well as for the sake of others, God has supplied him with means. This is not an isolated case. There are many who have proved the truth of Solomon's words: There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League, and Baptist Young People's Union for April 13. II. Cor. 8: 1-5; 9: 6, 7; I. Cor. 16: 1, 2.

A 50c. HAT FOR MAN OR BOY SENT BY MAIL TO ANY ADDRESS. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Colors: Gray Mix, Brown Mix, Black Mix.

MEN'S HAT No. 1
In soft rough finish

Colors: Black, Brown, Maple, Steel, Pearl.

MEN'S HAT No. 2
In smooth finish

Colors: Black, Brown, Maple, Steel, Pearl.

BOY'S HAT No. 3
In smooth finish

Colors: Gray Mix, Brown Mix, Black Mix.

BOY'S HAT No. 4
In soft rough finish

We give as reference the First National Bank of Middletown, N. Y. Our object is to deal direct with the wearer of the hat, and give good value, so that a buyer of one hat will want another.

MIDDLETOWN HAT CO., 44 Mill Street Middletown, N. Y.

Any one of these hats to be sent by mail to any address, upon receipt of fifty cents in cash, postal order or stamps. If the hat is not satisfactory, return it and money will be refunded.

In ordering, give head size, and color and number desired.

Our No. 1 shape is also made in a $1.00 grade. Colors are gray mix, black mix, and brown mix. Try one. You can return it and get your money back if you don't like it.

ESTABLISHED SEVENTEEN YEARS.

Any Young Man or Woman Can Earn a BICYCLE FREE

without interfering with present occupation, by riding and selling our HIGH GRADE "OAKWOOD" and "ARLINGTON" 1902

In addition to FREE BICYCLE we will give $1,000.00 IN GOLD to those making the LARGEST SALES in April, May and June, 1902.

No catalogues or circulars to distribute. BICYCLES FROM $8.95 UPWARDS. All new styles; no second-hand wheels; no old models. Our highest priced 1902 "Oakwood," strong, graceful frame, seamless tubing, G. & J. tires, Garford saddle, adjustable handle bar. Everything guaranteed first-class. Only $18.75. Equal to any wheel sold for $50.00. You can sell it for $25 the day you receive it. Write for particulars concerning FREE BICYCLE and CASH PAYMENT OF $1,000.00. Address CASH BUYERS' UNION, DEPT. D-18, CHICAGO, ILLS.

REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO.

TO ALL WHO SUFFER FROM SPINAL DEFORMITIES

85 per cent. cheaper than the old methods. 100 per cent. better. Weighs ounces where others weigh pounds. For men, women and children; none too young, none too old to be relieved. We offer the only Scientific Appliance ever invented for the relief of this unsightly condition; relieved the inventor, Mr. I. B. Sheldon, of curvature of the spine of THIRTY YEARS standing.

Throw away the cumbersome and costly plaster-of-paris and sole-leather jackets. Our appliance is light in weight, durable and conforms to the body as not to evidence that a support is worn. It is constructed on strictly scientific anatomical principles, and is truly a godsend to all sufferers from spinal troubles, male or female. We also make Scientific Appliances for protruding abdomen, weak back, stooping shoulders. Send for free booklet and letters from physicians, physical instructors, and those who know from experience of our wonderful appliances. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Write to-day for measurement blank. Don't wait.

After having worn the plaster-of-paris jackets, I can truthfully say your appliance is far more comfortable to wear. It corrects curvature quite as well and fits the body so perfectly that no one would suspect I was wearing one. You have my lifelong gratitude and well wishes. Yours truly, IDA BLOOD.

The plaster-of-paris jacket above mentioned weighed 8 1/2 lbs. The Philo Burt Appliance put on in its place weighed 17 ounces—a difference of over 7 pounds.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO., 30 FOURTH ST. JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

Premiums Worth $12 FREE

for selling only $12 worth of the celebrated Niagara Extracts, Perfumes and Toilet Preparations. You save 50 per cent. by buying direct from the manufacturers. We ship the premium with the goods without a cent in advance, and allow 30 days in which to sell the goods. The Niagara preparations are famous for their strength and purity, and sell easily; or perhaps you can use the whole case in your own home. Remember, we send any premium you may choose from our catalogue right with the goods you order. The premium is your profit. Our furniture is made in our own factory and is fully guaranteed. We are the only firm in the world making its own goods and premiums and are thus enabled to give astonishing values.

A sample package of Niagara Talcum FREE Powder with our new catalogue of a hundred useful premiums easily earned.

S. A. COOK & COMPANY, I Cook Bldg., Medina, N. Y.

BURPEE'S

Largest Mail-Order Seed House in the World. In buying BURPEE'S SEEDS direct by mail you get your money's worth in the Best Seeds that Grow—and you have your choice of Rare Novelties for 1902, which cannot be had elsewhere. Write to-day (a postal card will do) for our complete Catalogue—FREE to all who intend to purchase seeds.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.

ROSES FREE

Every reader of this paper should have one of our Handsome New Illustrated 80 page Catalogues for 1902. It tells of the best Roses and hundreds of other Plants, Bulbs, Seeds and Fruits, offering them to you at most attractive prices. Liberal Club Rates given.

Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the Catalogue and Roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting.

THE GEO. H. MELLER CO.,
Lansdown Greenhouses. Established 1877. Box J, Springfield, Ohio.

INCUBATORS AND BROODERS

BEST HOT WATER PIPE SYSTEM. Simple, durable, economical and safe. Hatches stronger and more chickens from 100 eggs than any other. Prices reasonable. 96-page illustrated catalog of Incubators, Brooders, fancy poultry and poultry supplies free.

C. C. SHOOKMAN, Box 411, Freeport, Ill.

KICKING, SHYING, BALKING

or Runaway Horses broken, of any bad habit by my system of colt or horse training. Results accomplished in a few hours. It is HUMANE and NEVER FAILS. Particulars Sent Free.

PROF. JESSE K. BERRY, Pleasant Hill, O.

GODLESS COMMERCE

The Doom of Ancient Tyre a Warning to Modern Materialism

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

TYRE was the great maritime world-city in the day of Jerusalem's humiliation and fall. Tyre was the centre of the world's commerce, as Jerusalem ought to have been, and yet will be, the centre of the world's allegiance to God.

Eve's first word after she was driven out of Eden was, "I have gotten." And the spirit of Cain's seed was characteristic. The getting and having, the commencement of the world's commerce, was in the hands of Cain and his posterity. The men of God in ancient times dwelt in tents; they were "strangers and pilgrims on the earth," and made it manifest that they were seeking "a better country, that is, an heavenly. Wherefore God is not ashamed of them to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city" (Heb. 11: 13-16). They worked for their daily bread, but not for a life of luxury and pleasure. Cain's posterity, and those who possessed the same spirit, lived for the world, and lent all their powers and energies to the development of the world's resources, with no such outlook into the future. They were at home on earth; and thus, in their eyes, commerce was the main thing. Buying and selling, the pride of possessing, was their life.

Is not this the very spirit which actuates the world of our own day? Is there no city—are there not many cities which correspond to the spirit and to the description of ancient Tyre? And is not this prophetic photograph of the Babylon of the tribulation (Rev. 18) a picture which might well represent any of the large commercial cities of our day? Let us learn the lesson which God would teach us from the fall of Tyre, lest the spirit of getting and the pride of having should rob our Lord of the witness which is his due, that his members, the members of his body, are "not of the world, even as he is not of the world."

The sin of Tyre which is first brought home to her is the same as that of Ammon, Moab, and Seir—evil speaking against the people of the Lord and against his land. The men of the world cannot tolerate that God should claim the world that he created.

"The Word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, because that Tyre hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gate of the peoples: she is turned unto me: I shall be replenished now that she is laid waste: therefore thus saith the Lord; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyre." Is this spirit, which exults over the fall of a rival with the hope of profiting by it, something antiquated, which can only be found in a museum of antiquities? Alas! it is the very spirit which pervades commerce in every land, in every city, town, and even little village, where there may happen to be two village shops. Who is there that asks, when he opens a business, or sets up a manufactory, how far this will affect other men of business who have been long established there? All he thinks of is whether he himself can make a business. If other businesses go to the wall, he does not mourn over them, but says with Tyre, "Well, that is fortunate for me; I shall be replenished." What is the chief occupation in the Parliaments of the nations? It is not, as it will be in the millennium (Isa. 32: 1), the great subject of national righteousness; that is always thrust aside for what are reckoned more important considerations. How can we increase our commerce? How can we outdo our neighbors, and profit by their failure? It is the spirit of Cain, the spirit of Tyre, the spirit of the prince of this world.

God is against such a spirit. The commerce of the world, as it is now carried on, is in distinct defiance of the warnings given by God in the past history of Tyre. Tyre saw in the desolation of the temple what made it easier for her to pursue her selfish commerce on her own lines. The temple had attracted many people, who sought after righteousness; now Tyre would have the monopoly of strangers for her trade. But God had said: "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther."

Tyre was composed of two cities: one on the mainland, the most ancient; the other on a rocky island which is now joined to the mainland. The former must have once been fortified: the latter was by nature, a fortress, and was celebrated for the Melkarth temple, which stood on a second island to the north of it. Insular Tyre was once only a fishing village, and her pride must meet with the deepest humiliation. God said, "I am against thee, O Tyre, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up: And they shall destroy the walls of Tyre"—the island was surrounded by Hiram II. with a strong wall—"and break down her towers. I will also scrape her dust from her"—the demolished temples and houses of business—"and make her a bare rock. She shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea; for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God" (Ezek. 26: 3-5). All that she had made herself to be should be destroyed; nothing would remain but her native barrenness. What a picture of the end of all that is of self, of the earth, earthy!

HOW TO GET ALMOST

Anything You Want

WITHOUT SPENDING A PENNY

We Have Paid
$170,000 to
55,000 Ladies

We have paid it in valuable premiums, and you can have one as well as they. These ladies simply wrote us a letter, and we sent each one, prepaid, a package of Hold Fast Skirt and Waist Supporters. Each sold as many as she chose to her friends and sent us the money; and we sent her, freight prepaid, her choice from our hundred premiums. We will do the same with you. The picture shows the Supporter. It is the only automatic supporter ever invented. No hooks needed; no buttons; no sewing of any kind. You ladies know what a convenience that means. There are one million and a half women wearing them now, and every woman who sees them wants one. There was never an easier article to sell, as the price is only 25 cents each. Simply show the Supporters to your friends and they will sell themselves. You will sell as many in each family as there are women and girls, and each one sold sells others. You can thus earn a premium that will last you a lifetime, in a few odd moments that would otherwise be wasted. Last year over one million of the Supporters were sold in this way. We have premiums for selling any quantity, from a half-dozen up to a gross. You can sell as few or as many as you choose, and get a premium accordingly. Try it and see how easy it is. See what a pleasant opportunity this is for spending your leisure profitably. Write today before someone else sells to your friends.

Send us no money

Simply write us and we will send the Supporters, charges paid. We trust you with them, so that you do not invest a penny. You have no risk whatever, for if you don't sell all of them you can send the balance back. When you have sold what you want to, send us the money you receive for them, and we will send you any premium to which you are entitled.

We pay all freight

We pay all transportation charges on the Supporters, and also on your premium. From beginning to the end you invest nothing whatever. Here is a chance to earn any of a hundred premiums, in a few odd moments, without any investment or risk. At the same time you are furnishing your friends with Supporters which each friend will thank you for showing her. Won't you write us today?

If you wish to see the Supporters before beginning to sell, send us 25 cts. in stamps and we will mail you one.

PRICE REDUCED TO 25c EACH

27-Piece Silver Set

This set, consisting of 6 knives, 6 forks, 6 table-spoons, 6 teaspoons, butter knife, sugar shell and pickle fork, is packed in a tasty velvet covered cabinet, satin lined, and makes a beautiful display in a china closet or sideboard. Our reputation for good premiums only is behind the quality of the plating. The design is the very latest copy of solid silver. This set will make a very nice present for your lady. FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

Oak Chair

This chair is of solid oak (not stained) with a highly polished antique finish, handsomely carved and turned, and an embossed leather (cobblers) seat. It is large and very strong; will last a lifetime, and is well worth $5. of anybody's money. Order one quick and let us prove our statement. FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

LARGE CATALOGUE OF PREMIUMS
MAILED WITH EVERY ORDER

32-Piece Tea Set

Consists of 6 plates, 6 cups, 6 saucers, teapot and lid, sugar and lid, 2 bread plates, 6 sauce dishes, cream pitcher, slop bowl; total 32 pieces. Handsomely decorated as shown above. The value of this offer is apparent to all well posted merchants and makes it unnecessary for us to say anything further, except that: FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

WE OFFER 100 PREMIUMS LIKE THESE

Address The Colver Co. . . Dept. S, . . 811 Schiller Bldg . . CHICAGO

FREE! 42-PIECE DINNER SET TO LADY AGENTS

For the sale of only TEN one-pound packages of our Imperial Cream Tartar Baking Powder, and to assist our Agents in making quick sales, we allow them to give FREE with every pound, a beautiful decorated and gold traced Cup, Saucer, seven-inch Plate, Fruit Saucer, Individual Butter, cake Glycerine Soap, cake Shaving Soap and Box of Face Powder.

A 15-POUND ORDER SECURES A 56-PIECE TEA SET. We also have Spices, Extracts, Coffee and Soap Offers with many Valuable Premiums to agents such as Watches, Chairs, Couches, Tables, Side-boards, Desks, Sewing Machines, Lamps, Musical Instruments, and hundreds of other useful articles or liberal cash commission. See our plans first, before taking up others. A 56-piece Tea or Dinner Set given to any lady who assists us in securing Three Agents. 60 LADY AGENTS WANTED.

Write at once, it will pay you to do so. WE PAY THE FREIGHT and allow time to deliver goods before paying for them. P. S.—REFERENCES: Postmaster, any Mercantile Agency, Express Companies or Banks. CHARLTON A. MARSHALL, 146 W. Front St., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

Is a portable 100 candle power light, costing only 2 cts. per week. Makes and burns down gas. Brighter than electricity or acetylene, and cheaper than kerosene. No Dirt. No Grease. No Odor. Over 100 styles. Light instantly with a match. Every lamp warranted.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.
THE BEST LIGHT CO.,
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets, under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Racine than all others together. Write for catalogue. RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box 4, Racine, Wisconsin.

Now We Have It!

A Perfect Square Steam Cooker

With doors. Large meat cooked over a burner. Wonderful saving of fuel and labor. Doors steam tight. No burnt fingers. No lifting top dishes out to get at the lower ones. Water gauge on outside. Special rate for ten days. Agents wanted, salary and commission sent for printed matter.

OHIO STEAM COOKER CO., 27 Ontario Bldg., TOLEDO, O.

The True Significance of our Proposition:—

“$10 Secures a $480 Lot IN GREATER NEW YORK”

is not yet fully realized by the majority of The Christian Herald readers. Much as the newspapers are constantly printing, much as we've told in our advertisements, comparatively few people outside of New York have any adequate conception of the real situation here—of the densely crowded conditions in the old city—of the terrific crush at the bridge, and the struggle for foothold on the incessant trains when the great tide of humanity surges homeward to Brooklyn. Do you know that nearly half a million people pass through this one artery of communication between the two boroughs daily, besides the tens of thousands who are carried by the 22 ferry routes running constant boats?

This simply goes to show what vast multitudes live in Brooklyn to-day in spite of this awful congestion. But a marvelous change is coming soon, in new bridges and tunnels, and with these must come an immensely augmented rush to the City of Homes, followed by the inevitable increase of building operations and consequent growth in realty values. Last year nearly three thousand new buildings were erected in Brooklyn, costing between twelve and thirteen millions, of which one-fifth were in the 29th Ward, where Rugby lies. What will the record be when even the first new bridge, now nearing completion, with its direct trolleys through Rugby, is opened? What will it be when the immense projects of the Pennsylvania Railway, which now has a station at Rugby, are in full operation? What will it be when still other bridges and tunnels are completed and hundreds of thousands more people, now waiting, can be accommodated? The last decade has seen an increase in Brooklyn's population nearly equal to the total population of Boston—500,000. What will the next decade show?

It's safe to say that the wildest prophecies of to-day will fall far short of the reality; but by conservative estimate New York's population will exceed that of all London in ten years' time. Think what that means to the investor—for history shows that the increase in New York's population and realty have been maintained in almost equal proportions. If the general public could realize as we do the full significance of the present situation, and its inevitable consequences for the future, every foot of Brooklyn's undeveloped land would be bought up before another sunset! That people the country over are beginning to realize it, is evidenced by the fact that we have sold over two million dollars' worth of land here in but little over a year—faster and faster each month as the facts become better appreciated—over a million dollars' worth the past four months—$270,000 worth since our last Christian Herald advertisement appeared. It's a magnificent record to have given satisfaction to investors of over two million dollars! And yet—we cannot help asking ourselves, in view of the facts as we on the ground can see them—

“Why Not $6,000,000, Instead of $2,000,000?”

Mayor Low Said

in a recent message: “There are three bridges planned for and in course of construction across the East River (to Brooklyn). It is evidently the duty of the City to carry forward all these bridges as rapidly as possible, the first of which it is estimated will be completed within the next 20 months.”

Over $35,000,000 has been appropriated for these bridges, and the first (shown above) will have double the carrying capacity of the old bridge.

—and we know it's simply because many of our statements at first appear extravagant to those unacquainted with the wonderful New York situation, and that we haven't yet gotten the full confidence of all the people—in other words, the proposition seems too good to be true. If everyone who has read it believed it to be what those who've come here have found it to be—“a plain statement of facts, not exaggerated in the least, but just as represented,” we should long since have sold our last lot. Hundreds of The Christian Herald readers have trusted our advertisements, taken us at our word, and afterwards investigated to their complete satisfaction—yet what of the others? Why not thousands instead of hundreds? For months we've been telling in The Christian Herald pages of these unparalleled opportunities for safe investment of large profit, offering 20% guaranteed increase within a year, offering a $480 lot for only $10 down and $6 a month until paid for—a lot intrinsically worth thousands of dollars and which will bring thousands of dollars inside of ten years; offering free life insurance and non-forfeiture agreements with it; offering a free trip to New York to examine it; offering to return all the money you've paid us, with 6% interest added, if you find on investigating within a year that we've misrepresented our proposition in any particular. We know there's nothing in the world to equal this in the three essentials of a sterling investment, viz.: safety, certainty and rapid increase, and we challenge the world to equal it in all three particulars.

Nor do we ask you to rely entirely upon our own word—sufficient, perhaps, as that would seem to be, with our long and honorable record—15 years in 26 cities, with nearly 40,000 customers and the highest endorsement of the commercial agencies. We add to all this the convincing testimony of Rugby buyers who know from personal examination—of representative citizens from all parts of the country who have bought, who have seen, and are more than satisfied, many doubling again and again their original mail investment.

Now, you've read our ads., wondered at them, believed in or doubted them, talked about them, thought about them, asked about them, written The Christian Herald perhaps, (many have, we know) to inquire if we were all right and been told “Yes, decidedly”; you're in the market for profitable investment—any man, woman or child will exchange one dollar for two—and yet, you're still holding off—letting the opportunity slip by. (The earliest moment your first payment reaches us, that moment you begin to share in the increase in values.) Each day scores of others are buying; now

Why Don't YOU Buy, Too?

Haven't we given you every assurance, guarantee and protection you could ask for? Isn't the reputation of the largest and most successful real estate firm in the world, behind these guarantees? and could we afford, with a lifetime of business opportunity ahead of us yet, to hazard our good name and future work by anything short of fair, square and honorable dealing—even if we had the mind to?

Is there anything more we can do to convince you? If there is, please tell us, and we'll try to meet it to your satisfaction. We believe we can do it. Just tell us. That's all.

WOOD, HARMON & Co., “Dept. B7,” 257 Broadway, New York

VIEW OF ENTRANCE TO PRESENT BRIDGE

Our Final Word of Counsel:

These lots are selling very fast. To secure best selections and an immediate share in the increase of values, send us $10 now. Then, if you're not perfectly satisfied, on examining our entire proposition within one year, that it's just as represented, we'll gladly return to you—cheerfully and without quibbling—all the money you've paid us. Isn't this fair? Sit right down and mail us $10. You'll never regret it!

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., Editor

NEW YORK, APRIL 9, 1902

VOL. 25—NO. 15. PRICE 5 CENTS
Offices: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

THE BLOSSOMS OF THE SPRING

FROM THE FAMOUS PAINTING BY SCHRAM

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. It appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Issue of March 26

What ten American scenes and places should Prince Henry have seen or visited here, in order to receive the most accurate impression of the nation's spirit and character and of our republican institutions?

Answered in Present Issue

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 16

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 23

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a line in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Question of the Week

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

The widespread diffusion of advanced education is a blessing unqualified, even though it is true, that to obtain this intellectual culture requires a steadfastness of application and inflexibility of purpose through so many years of one's life that there is left little time or inclination for acquiring such skill in the mechanical arts, or in the various branches of manual labor, as would lead to success in any line of productive industry. Is it possible for an educated person, one of real intellectual stamina and vitality, ever to become a burden upon the community? If Plato had chosen some productive industry, or carved statues as a life-occupation, would his influence have been as potent or far-reaching? Or could Emerson, our own philosopher, have said of him: "The thinkers of all civilized nations are his posterity, and are tinged with his mind?" An English author, speaking of those who follow intellectual pursuits, says: "The very prevalent idea that lives of this kind are failures, unless they leave some visible achievement as a testimony and justification of their labors, is based upon a narrow conception, both of duty and utility. Men of this unproductive class are sure to influence their immediate neighborhood by the example of their life." It is not the fault of the individual, but of the community, if such a life is a burden instead of a blessing. Perhaps Paul would not have taken up the making of tents at Rome, if he had never heard of Socrates.

M. R. D. DINGWALL.

It is a blessing, but a qualified one. We need some people with an advanced education, but we need many more people with a practical, common, business education. We do not need chemists and zoologists for laborers on the farm, but men who understand how to till the soil so that it will produce the best crops and with least injury to the land, and who knows how to care for the domestic animals so that they will be most serviceable on the farm, and best suited for market. In the mines and in the shops we need men with a common, practical education, not men versed in the technical theories concerning the materials with which they work. This is a practical, business age, and men must have a practical, not a technical, education, to make a success of life in it. We do not need more of the few with an advanced education, so bad as we need more practical business training for the mass of laboring men, who are the real producers of wealth.

CHARLES F. COOPER.

Once the man of affairs was seldom a scholar, and studious habits seemed unfavorable to development along practical lines. But the purpose of advanced education has broadened within a generation. It now includes the evolution of all the faculties and capabilities of man. The trained intellects of to-day are the leaders, alike in thought and activities, in material and moral advancement. It is the men of education that build steamships and railways, develop mines, enrich soils, irrigate lands, make countless useful inventions, and foster the church and the school. As the true idea of education prevails men will be fitted to work with both hand and brain, and the "productive industries" will develop, and skilled labor with the hands will become as honorable and as respected as skilled labor with the brain. When advanced education becomes more general, the nation will be better housed, fed and clothed, and will become more industrious, law-abiding and happy.

voysage of self-discovery, their mental horizon has widened, new possibilities have opened up to them, and new ambitions have been developed. This creation of uncertainty renders a right choice a most serious question. How many young men with college educations are standing about waiting for something that will never come, because the work that lies nearest at hand is not to their liking? Many students form so strong a habit of vacillating in regard to their vocation that it is impossible for them to decide. Finally, they give up trying to decide, and drift hopelessly along. The best course for such to pursue is to resolutely look the whole situation over, and compel themselves to make a choice.

E. S. SAWYER.

Certain physicians claim to need a new name for a new disease, which they not infrequently find among university graduates, whom they are called to treat. The disease is induced by melancholy, which these students feel from disappointing their friends by not becoming distinguished. Certainly, to them, education is not an unqualified blessing. Nor is it likely to be so to any who, along with a cultivated mind, does not possess strong common sense and a Christian character. Parents and teachers should inculcate in those under their care a belief in the dignity of whole result could be known, it would be found that in quite as many cases it is a bane. The trouble is that we cannot forecast whom they are who will prove worthy of an advanced education, and make a good use of it. Besides this, it often happens that those who can give the time and the money to secure such education, are those whom Providence has not endowed with the natural talents to turn it to a good account. And then, education has become so much the fashion that rich men will put their children through the educational mill, whether or not they have an aptitude or desire for learning. The operation of these various causes results in a large degree in the wrong people getting the opportunity of a liberal education, while the right people miss it. The result is incalculable misdirection of talent, with consequent loss, failure, disappointment and vexation untold. The square peg gets into the round hole, and the round peg into the square hole. It is contended that a liberal education is the best equipment for any kind of work. I think it a false contention. If a boy does not begin work early in life, he is likely to be permanently lazy. And if he gets an education much superior to the demands of his daily work, it tends to make him disdainful and dissatisfied with his work. We require yet multitudes of manual workers, and, therefore, the public school is the school for the great majority. If a man has the ambition and the genius to rise above this level, let him rise; there are plenty of facilities.

JOSEPH HAMILTON.

Answers have also been received from W. W. Case, Jessie Belle Riker, Mrs. James A. Gale, W. J. Mosier, James Bell Major, F. L. Sawyer, M. J. Tarpley, Percy V. D. Shelly, Mrs. A. S. Kirkendall, Anna Maria Sohn, Helen E. Malone, Ida Gryn, Isaac Pennington, Alvia J. Hunter, Wm. G. Hunter, Josie Schubert, Lavinia Perrine, Mrs. Jennie E. Reading, Edna L. Mackmer, Mrs. Zuelia Emerson, J. G. Osborne, J. G. Davis, Fred. C. Frese, J. B. McGregor, Florence Terrett, J. Flomerfelt, Hilie B. Wallace, L. Algernon Linder, Wilbur Pressley, Persis H. Shafer, Mrs. Fred Bahler, Mary E. Blose, L. T. Rightsell, E. C. Walters, Eli Good, Rosella J. Wallace, W. S. Mac Tavish and Mary S. Williams.

Miscellaneous Questions

A. H. Bedford, N. Y. If a minister preach a good sermon, but still one based on gross misapprehension of his text, would it, or would it not, be worth while to suggest to him that he might better have chosen a different text?

As none of us are gifted with omniscience, and as the interpretation of a text may, after all, vary greatly, it would hardly be wise to charge a pastor with misapprehension, simply because he did not take our view. Still, in discussing the sermon with him, it might be quite in order to suggest a different interpretation.

Student, Brooklyn, N. Y. When were the books of the New Testament, as we have it, brought together as one book?

There is no absolutely certain knowledge of the date. We know, however, that in the second half of the second century efforts were made to so combine them, because there are records of disputes about the authenticity of certain books—notably the Second Epistle of Peter and the authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The version as we now have it, was finally settled at the Council of Carthage in 397 A.D.

Mary W. W., East Whitman, Mass. What is the meaning of the phrase "the end of the world" in Heb. 9:26?

The culmination of the times, the last of the dispensations. The writer of the epistle was comparing the Christian with the former dispensation, and referring to the series of sacrifices which had been offered, showed that there had been a supreme and final sacrifice fulfilling the types of the former sacrifices. Doubtless he shared the belief of Paul and the other apostles, that he was living in the closing days of the world's history.

T. J. V., Frackville, Pa. 1. Who was Nana Sahib and what became of him? 2. Who was the father of Lydia H. Sigourney, the poet hymn-writer?

1. Nana Sahib, a leader of the Sepoy revolt of 1857, was the adopted son of Bajie Rao, ex-Pasha of Poona; he was educated as a Hindu nobleman; acquired English, and associated freely with European officers. When the mutiny broke out, he treacherously betrayed the English, after pledging them his assistance. The English, under Sir Henry Havelock, drove him into Nepal, and in 1860 his death was reported. 2. Ezekiel Humbley a worthy citizen of Norwich, Conn.

Extraordinary Sale of Red Letter Testaments

$1.50 BOOK FOR 50 CENTS

OUR ANNUAL CLEARING-OUT SALE is still going on. We have a number of Red Letter Testaments that are somewhat "shopworn," and others that have been slightly rubbed or almost imperceptibly damaged in various ways. Take, for instance, the wear and tear resulting from the handling of books at the counter. Careless people will rudely open a book and turn it back to test its flexibility. Of course the threads stretch, and the book can no longer be considered a perfect copy. While there is nothing on the outside to indicate the "stretch," and although the life of the book is practically unimpaired, we feel it our duty to consider a book so handled as legitimately subject to a discount.

But even though a book be not rudely used, if exposed on the counter, it will get somewhat rubbed, or a little dusty, and after a few days of service as a specimen book, it is laid aside as defective, though not a page is torn, and the cover remains almost unblemished. Then when the season is over these books are carefully examined and brightened up, and sold at a reduced price.

Since the last clearing-out sale, during the course of the year, we have accumulated a limited number of Red Letter Testaments, practically new but for the imperfections noted above, which, although

Originally Valued at $1.50, we Now Offer at 50 Cents Each, and which is positively limited to the stock described. We guarantee that no books with torn pages or torn covers are included in this lot, and we further guarantee to refund the money, should the purchaser not be satisfied with the bargain. We know this is a remarkable proposition in connection with a bargain counter sale, but we shall stand by this guarantee in every case.

We would advise all who desire to take advantage of this special sale to do so promptly, as at the rate the Testaments are selling, the supply will soon be exhausted.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES THESE BOOKS ARE PARTICULARLY DESIRABLE. In quantities we will send them at the rate of FIVE DOLLARS FOR THE DOZEN, delivery charges prepaid : : : : :

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BOOK DEPT., Bible House, New York

labor. To be, to feel, to do, are as essential as to know. The system of cramming should be exchanged for one in which heart and hand, as well as brain, receive attention. Excellent was the old Jewish custom of bringing up every son to learn a trade. Paul was none the less a wise Rabbi for being a tent-maker, too.

AMELIA HOYT.

The use of education is to increase the power of the mind, as the use of gymnastics is to increase the power of the body. But these powers are valueless if not used, and the student who devotes himself to scholarship merely for the pleasure it gives him to do so, or the athlete who spends all his time in exercises and games, is like a miser who accumulates money which he does not use. The number of cases in which such waste of learning occurs, however, are few indeed compared with the immense number of men and women to whom higher education has been the means of increased usefulness and happiness to themselves and to their communities. Learned people are sometimes without aptitude for making their scholarship of account in the world, and so may become a burden to the community. On the other hand, it is said that brain-workers are the poorest paid of any. Comparatively speaking, few intellectual men are unable to support themselves.

S. A. SAUNDERS.

While the wide diffusion of advanced education in our time is undoubtedly a great blessing in many cases, I think that, if the College environment seems to prepare some men for success, and the chances of others it destroys. There is a very real danger of the student, during the particularly valuable years of his life—years of keen observation, individuality and confidence—being kept aloof from the practical work of life. When thrown on their own resources, perhaps for the first time in their lives, many find it impossible to adjust themselves to the workaday world. One of their greatest foes is indecision in regard to the supreme problem of their life-work, on the choice of which depends their future weal or woe. During their four years'

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, APRIL 9, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

MME. DE PLANCHES
Wife of Italian Ambassador

COUNTESS DE QUADT
Wife of Secretary, German Embassy

MME. SIDKEY BEY
Wife of Secretary, Turkish Legation

BARONESS MONCHEUR
Wife of Belgian Minister

NEW FACES IN OUR DIPLOMATIC CORPS

THE happenings of the winter at the National Capital has brought the diplomatic corps at Washington into unusual prominence. The events which have developed since the Spanish war have made our own diplomatic body abroad as well as the one at Washington weighty factors in the affairs of the various governments of the world, and, incidentally, of much greater concern to the general public than was the case prior to that occurrence. This is not surprising, when it is remembered that until our trouble with Spain our country had few international interests either diplomatically or commercially. The duties of the diplomats were largely of a social nature. All of that is now changed. The position of the United States Government in the far East has and will require the wisest manipulation. The products of our factories and farms are reaching out into all of the markets of the world, and these things have immensely broadened the field of the diplomatic service.

PHYA AKLARA
Siamese Minister

But there are several other things which have called general attention to the corps at Washington during the past few months. The project of the Isthmian waterway has brought a much larger delegation than usual to all of the legations of the Central and South American Republics. The Philippine question, upon which hinges our trade relations in the East, has led two or three of the Oriental governments to establish new diplomatic missions at our capital; several important changes in the personnel of the European representatives have taken place; and of course Prince

Henry's visit, and his entertainment at the German embassy, focused public attention on the corps during February.

The embassy where Prince Henry was entertained is an ample brick building with an imposing port cohere, and stands on Highland Terrace off from Fourteenth street in an aristocratic neighborhood of the capital. There is a reception hall running through the middle of the lower floor and on each side of it are the handsomely furnished offices of the embassy. The drawing-rooms and ball-room above stairs are finished in white and gold and the furnishings are in rich red damask and plush. The furniture all over the house was brought from Germany, much of it is very old and quaint and reminds one of a peep into an ancestral home of the "Fatherland."

Ambassador von Holleben is serving for the second time at the American post, as he was the German Minister at Washington during the eighties. He is a soldier as well as a diplomat. He was an officer in the Red Hussars of the Guards in 1870, and often appears at social functions in his uniform rather than in his court dress. He is unmarried, and until last year there were no ladies connected with the embassy. But this lack of femininity did not disturb its hospitality in the least, for the bachelor Ambassador is fond of society and a lavish entertainer. He always invited the wife of some other diplomat to assist him, and his dinners and balls were notable events. There are two ladies with the embassy now, the wife of the first Secretary, Countess A. von Quadt-Wykradt Isny, a charmingly attractive little lady, who is just at present in Europe, and Madame von Rebeur Paschwitz, the girlish young bride of the military attache of the embassy, who did honors as hostess of the great house during the Prince's visit.

The most important of the recent changes in the diplomatic corps is that of the Italian Ambassadors. Baron de Fava had been at the head of the Italian mission for more than twenty years, part of that time being its Dean. He resigned last fall, and in December was succeeded by Signor Edmondo Mayor des Planches, one of the Sunny Kingdom's most distinguished statesmen. The father of Signor des Planches was a titled gentleman with extensive landed estates, who, during his lifetime, was well known for his political writings. He educated his son at the University of Piedmont, and after the young Signor's graduation he entered the diplomatic service in 1875. He remained in the foreign office for many years, and was intimately associated with Crispi during that brilliant leader's much-abused career. In 1897 he was appointed Minister plenipotentiary at Belgrade, and in 1900 he was promoted to ambassadorial rank with an appointment at Constantinople, a post which he later exchanged with the ambassador, who was then serving there; he remaining, and Signor Mayor coming to the American capital. Signora Mayor joined her husband in Washington in February, and they have established the handsomest embassy the Italian Government has ever had in the United States. Signor Mayor is one of the wealthiest men of Italy, and has purchased Mrs. Hearst's magnificent home on Twentieth street, with much of its furnishings, including many of its rare pictures and tapestries. They have begun entertaining there on an elaborate scale.

The French Ambassador, M. Cambon, has never brought Madame Cambon to America, partly because of the frail health of their only daughter and partly because the embassy is so poorly housed in the old Admiral Porter property on H street. This latter difficulty will be obviated when the French Government builds—as it now expects to during the coming summer—on the large tract of land which it has bought at the head of Connecticut avenue. In the meantime, Madame de Margerie, the wife of the first Secretary, does the duties of hostess of embassy.

GEN. KHAN
Persian Legation

CONTINUED
ON PAGE 309

CHEKIR BEY
Turkish Minister

BARON MONCHEUR
Belgian Minister

HERR VON HOLLEBEN
German Ambassador

MINLIN CHO
Korean Minister

SEÑOR SILVA
Colombian Minister

SIGNOR DES PLANCHES
Italian Ambassador

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

... SERMON BY ...
Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.

A Celestial Interval

TEXT—Rev. 8: 1:

"There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour"

THE busiest place in the universe is heaven. It is the centre from which all good influences start; it is the goal at which all good results arrive. The Bible represents it as active with wheels, and wings, and orchestras, and processions mounted or charioted. But my text describes a space when the wheels ceased to roll and the trumpets to sound and the voices to chant. The riders on the white horses reined in their chargers. The doxologies were hushed and processions halted. The hand of arrest was upon all the splendors. "Stop, heaven!" cried an omnipotent voice, and it stopped. For thirty minutes everything celestial stood still. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

From all we can learn it is the only time heaven ever stopped. It does not stop at other cities for the night, for there is no night there. It does not stop for a plague, for the inhabitant never says: "I am sick." It does not stop for bankruptcies, for its inhabitants never fail. It does not stop for impassable streets, for there are no fallen snows nor sweeping freshets. What, then, stopped it for thirty minutes? Grotius and Professor Stuart think it was at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. Mr. Lord thinks it was in the year 311, between the close of the Diocletian persecution and the beginning of the wars by which Constantine gained the throne. But that was all a guess, though a learned and brilliant guess. I do not know when it was, and I do not care when it was, but of the fact that such an interregnum of sound took place, I am certain. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

Silence Honored

And, first of all, we may learn that God and all heaven then honored silence. The longest and widest dominion that ever existed is that over which stillness was queen. For an eternity there had not been a sound. World making was a later day occupation. For unimaginable ages it was a mute universe. God was the only being, and as there was no one to speak to, there was no utterance. But that silence has all been broken up into worlds and it has become a noisy universe. Worlds in upheaval, worlds in congelation, worlds in conflagration, worlds in revolution.

If geologists are right (and I believe they are), there has not been a moment of silence since this world began its travels, and the crashing and the splitting and the uproar and the hubbub are ever in progress. But when among the supernals a voice cried, "Hush!" and for half an hour heaven was still, silence was honored. The full power of silence many of us have yet to learn. We are told that when Christ was arraigned, "He answered not a word." That silence was louder than any thunder that ever shook the world. Oftentimes, when we are assailed and misrepresented, the mightiest thing to say is to say nothing, and the mightiest thing to do is to do nothing. Those people who are always rushing into print to get themselves set right accomplish nothing but their own chagrin. Silence! Do right and leave the results with God. Among the grandest lessons the world has ever learned are the lessons of patience taught by those who endured uncomplainingly personal or domestic or political injustice, stranger than any bitter or sarcastic or revengeful answer was the patient silence.

Eloquent Silence

The famous Dr. Morrison, of Chelsea, achieved as much by his silent patience as by his pen and tongue. He had asthma that for twenty-five years brought him out of his couch at two o'clock each morning. His four sons and daughters dead. The remaining child by sunstroke made insane. The afflicted man once said: "At this moment there is not an inch of my body that is not filled with agony." Yet he was cheerful, triumphant, silent. Those who were in his presence, said they felt as though they were in the gates of heaven. Oh, the power of patient silence! Æschylus, the immortal poet, was condemned to death for writing something that offended the people. All the pleas in his behalf were of no avail until his brother uncovered the arm of the prisoner, and showed that his hand had been shot off at Salamis. That silent plea liberated him. The loudest thing on earth is silence if it be of the right kind and at the right time. There was a quaint old hymn spelled in the old style, and once sung in the churches:

The race is not forever got
By him who fastest runs,
Nor the Battel by those peopell
That shoot with the longest guns.

My friends, the tossing sea of Galilee seemed most to offend Christ by the amount of noise it made, for he said to it: "Be still!" Heaven has been crowning kings and queens unto God for many centuries, yet heaven never stopped a moment for any such occurrence, but it stopped thirty minutes for the coronation of silence. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

Learn also from my text that heaven must be an eventful and active place, from the fact that it could afford only thirty minutes of recess. There have been events on earth and in heaven that seemed to demand a whole day or whole week or whole year for celestial consideration. If Grotius was right and this silence occurred at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, that scene was so awful and so prolonged that the inhabitants of heaven could not have done justice to it in many weeks. After fearful besiegement of the two fortresses of Jerusalem—Antonia and Hippicus—had been going on for a long while, a Roman soldier mounted on the shoulder of another soldier hurled into the window of the temple a firebrand, and the temple was all aflame, and after covering many sacrifices to the holiness of God, the building itself became a sacrifice to the rage of man. The hunger of the people in that city during the besiegement was so great that as some outlaws were passing a doorway and inhaled the odors of food, they burst open the door, threatening the mother of the household with death unless she gave them some food, and she took them aside and showed them that it was her own child she was cooking for the ghastly repast. Six hundred priests were destroyed on Mount Zion because the temple being gone there was nothing for them to do. Six thousand people in one cloister were consumed. There were one million one hundred thousand dead according to Josephus. Grotius thinks that this was the cause of silence in heaven for half an hour. If Mr. Lord was right, and this silence was during the Diocletian persecutions, by which eight hundred and forty-four thousand Christians suffered death from sword and fire, and banishment and exposure, why did not heaven listen throughout at least one of those awful years? No! Thirty minutes! The fact is that the celestial programme is so crowded with spectacle that it can afford only one recess in all eternity, and that for a short space. While there are great choruses in which all heaven can join, each soul there has a story of divine mercy peculiar to itself, and it must be a solo. How can heaven get through with all its recitatives, with all its cantatas, with all its grand marches, with all its victories? Eternity is too short to utter all the praise.

A Unique Event

In my text heaven spared thirty minutes, but it will never again spare one minute. In worship in earthly churches where there are many to take part, we have to counsel brevity, but how will heaven get on rapidly enough to let one hundred and forty-four thousand get through each with his own story, and then one hundred and forty-four million and then one hundred and forty-four billion and then one hundred and forty-four trillion. Not only are all the triumphs of the past to be commemorated, but all the triumphs to come. Not only what we now know of God, but what we will know of him after everlasting study of the Deific. If my text had said there was silence in heaven for thirty days, I would not have been startled at the announcement, but it indicates thirty minutes. Why, there will be so many friends to hunt up; so many of the greatly good and useful that we will want to see; so many of the inscrutable things of earth we will need explained; so many exciting earthly experiences we will want to talk over, and all the other spirits and all the ages will want the same, that there will be no more opportunity for cessation. How busy we will be kept in having pointed out to us the heroes and heroines that the world never fully appreciated—the yellow fever and cholera doctors who died, not flying from their posts; the female nurses who faced pestilence in the lazarettos; the railroad engineers who stayed at their places in order to save the train, though they themselves perished. Hubert Goffin, the master-miner, who landing from the bucket at the bottom of the mine, just as he heard the waters rush in, and when one jerk of the rope would have lifted him into safety, put in the bucket a blind miner who wanted to go to his sick child and jerked the rope for him to be pulled up, crying: "Tell them the water has burst in and we are probably lost; but we will seek refuge at the other end of the right gallery;" and then giving the command to the other miners till they digged themselves so near out that the people from the outside could come to their rescue. The multitudes of men and women who got no crown on earth, we will want to see when they get their crown in heaven. I tell you heaven will have no more half hours to spare.

Besides that, heaven is full of children. They are in the vast majority. No child on earth who amounts to anything can be kept quiet half an hour, and how are you going to keep five hundred million of them quiet half an hour. You know heaven is much more of a place than it was when that recess of thirty minutes occurred. Its population has quadrupled, sextupled, centupled. Heaven has more on hand, more of rapture, more of knowledge, more of intercommunication, more of worship. The most thrilling place we have ever been in is stupid compared with that, and, if we now have no time to spare, we will then have no eternity to spare. Silence in heaven only half an hour!

Momentous Intervals

My subject also impresses me with the immortality of a half-hour. That half-hour mentioned in my text is more widely known than any other period in the calendar of heaven. None of the whole hours of heaven are measured off, none of the years, none of the centuries. Of the millions of ages past, and the millions of ages to come, not one is especially measured off in the Bible. But the half-hour of my text is made immortal. The only part of eternity that was ever measured by earthly timepiece was measured by the minute-hand of my text. Oh, the half-hours! They decide everything. I am not asking what you will do with the years or months or days of your life, but what of the half-hours. Tell me the history of your half-hours, and I will tell you the story of your whole life on earth and the story of your whole life in eternity. The right or wrong things you can think in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can say in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can do in thirty minutes are glorious or baleful, inspiring or desperate.

Look out for the fragments of time. They are pieces of eternity. It was the half-hours between shoeing horses that made Elihu Burritt the learned blacksmith; the half-hours between professional calls as a physician that made Abercrombie the Christian philosopher; the half-hours between his duties as schoolmaster that made Salmon P. Chase Chief-Justice; the half-hours between shoe-lasts that made Henry Wilson Vice-President of the United States; the half-hours between canal-boats that made James A. Garfield President. The half-hour a day for good books or bad books; the half-hour a day for prayer or indolence; the half-hour a day for helping others or blasting others; the half-hour before you go to business, and the half-hour after you return from business; that makes the difference between the scholar and the ignoramus, between the Christian and the infidel, between the saint and the demon, between triumph and catastrophe, between heaven and hell. The most tremendous things of your life and mine were certain half-hours. The half-hour, when in the parsonage of a country minister, I resolved to become a Christian then and there; the half-hour when I decided to be come a preacher of the Gospel; the half-hour when I first realized that my son was dead; the half-hour when I stood on the top of my house in Oxford street and saw our church burn; the half-hour in which I entered Jerusalem; the half-hour in which I stopped on Mount Calvary; the half-hour in which I stood on Mars' Hill and about ten or fifteen other half-hours, are the chief times of my life. You may forget the name of the exact years or most of the important events of your existence, but those half-hours, like the half-hour of my text, will be immortal. I do not query what you will do with the twentieth century, I do not query what you will do with this year, but what will you do with the next half-hour? Upon that hinges your destiny. And during that some of you will receive the Gospel and make complete surrender, and during that others of you will make final and fatal rejection of the full and free and urgent and impassioned offer of life eternal. Oh that the next half-hour might be the most glorious thirty minutes of your earthly existence!

A Rapturous World

Far back in history a great geographer stood with a sailor, looking at a globe that represented our plane and he pointed to a place on the globe where he thought there was an undiscovered continent. The undiscovered continent was America. The geographer who pointed where he thought there was a new world was Marti Behaim, and the sailor to whom he showed it was Columbus. This last was not satisfied till he had picked that gem out of the sea and set it in the crown of the world's geography. O ye who have been sailing up and down the rough seas of sorrow and sin, let me point out to you another continent, yea, another world, that you may yourself find, a rapturous world, and that is the world a half-hour of which we now study. Oh, set sail for it! Here is the ship and here are the compasses. In other words, make this half-hour the grandest half-hour of your life, and become a Christian. Pray for a regenerated spirit. Louis XIV, while walking i

MISS STONE ON HER WAY HOME

MISS ELLEN M. STONE is on her way home. She comes by way of Vienna and London. In her first reported conversation after leaving Bulgaria, which was cabled from Vienna, she said to an interviewer: "I am going to London to see my friends, and afterward I shall go home to my mother, who is longing to see me. I cannot say how long I shall remain in the United States, or whether I shall return to Macedonia." The brigands, she said, had treated herself and Mme. Tsilka as well as they could: "They told us it was to their interest to keep us in good health, as nobody would pay ransom for us if we were dead." She expressed herself as deeply grateful to all who had taken part in her liberation. The American Board and all her relatives and friends are looking forward with much pleasure to her arrival in this country, and she will be given a royal welcome. It is safe to say that eager audiences will gather to listen to the series of public addresses she will probably make. Then, perhaps, the public may hear fuller accounts of her experiences during her long captivity. From Turkey, where information travels slowly to America, interesting details of her life among the brigands are being added by correspondents writing from Bulgaria or Macedonia. An Englishman, who was at Strumnitza when she was liberated, describes vividly the scene when Miss Stone, Mme. Tsilka and her baby, escorted by Dragoman Gargiulo, of the American Legation and other friends left Strumnitza for Salonica. It was hard to make a way for them through the crowded streets, where the whole excited populace had collected to wish them good-speed. So many Bulgarian friends wanted to shake hands with them, and kiss them, that it looked as if the ransomed missionaries and the little babe born in captivity could never get clear of the town. At the bottom of the gorge, and where the town ends and the mountain road begins, a number of Miss Stone's converts and many children were grouped, singing, "God be with you till we meet again."

Touching stories are told about the baby. Mme. Tsilka had no other aid, it is said, during her time of trial than Miss Stone's; the little one's first weeks of existence were spent in the gloom of a cave that was filled with smoke, and later it had to endure night journeys over frozen mountains. The robbers called the baby "Kismet-li," the "Luck Child," and were gentle and kind to it. Always, the women were under the close observation of their rude guardians, standing armed at the mouth of cave or door of hut or tent; or tramping at their horses' heads. On day journeys they rode blindfolded. More than once a halt was made. By whisperings around them, the prisoners knew Turkish troops bent on rescue were in the neighborhood, and that their captors were making preparations to give hostile reception. Whether they themselves were in line of fire they could not tell. It will be remembered that on the morning of February 23 (some time after the ransom was paid), the women were found on the mountains, where the brigands had left them, by the Albanian peasant Aguiah, who conducted them to the home of the Protestant pastor at Strumnitza. Into the house, the peasant, a wild-looking mountaineer with a sheepskin over his shoulder, followed them. He was fierce and rough enough in appearance to be himself a brigand, but with great gentleness in his keen dark eyes, he bent over the chair where the young mother sat with the little one in her arms and touched its brow with almost paternal pride and tenderness, while he proudly emphasized his superior claim upon it by telling the company how he had been the finder.

THE VILLAGE CHILDREN SANG AS THEY RODE ALONG THE HIGHWAYS FROM STRUMNITZA

A recent dispatch from Salonica states that Mr. Tsilka has been arrested by the Turks, on suspicion of complicity in the kidnapping, the accusation being made that he has received a reward from the Macedonian Committee, whom the Turks hold responsible. Mme. Tsilka, says the cable, knew nothing of the arrangement. Mr. Tsilka's friends in New York, where he spent several years in training for missionary work, believe him incapable of this. Miss Stone has only the highest praise for Mme. Tsilka and her husband; says his arrest is absurd, and that the American Minister at Constantinople has told her that it is her duty to proclaim this openly.

NEW FACES IN OUR DIPLOMATIC CORPS

Mme. de Margerie, a young and most attractive matron, is the sister of the famous playwright of France, M. Edmond Rostand.

The bride of the Diplomatic Corps this winter is an American girl, the youngest daughter of Honorable Powell Clayton, the ambassador for the United States at the City of Mexico. Miss Clayton was married to Baron Moncheur, the Belgian plenipotentiary, in January, where her wedding was one of the leading social events of the gay season in the capital of the southern republic. Baron Moncheur has held a number of important European and Oriental posts, and furnished the Belgian legation very handsomely for his bride with the souvenirs of his extensive travels. Like the Italian ambassador, and indeed all of the European, the South and Central American diplomats, Baron Moncheur is a devout Romanist. Ambassador von Holleben and the dean of the corps, Lord Pauncefoot, of the British embassy, are Protestants; the former Lutheran, the latter Episcopalian.

The two legations which have created the greatest interest since the opening of Congress, have been the Nicaraguan and Colombian. This has been on account of the pending legislation of the Isthmian waterway, and the well known desire of the ministers of both legations to have his country selected for the route of the proposed canal. Senor Corea, the Nicaraguan envoy, a handsome young bachelor who is very popular in society, has been in Washington for the past two years, and has left no stone unturned to create a sentiment in favor of the Nicaraguan waterway. Senor Silva, the Colombian plenipotentiary, is an older man, and has brought the finesse of a finished diplomat to play in the interest of the Colombian route.

Persia and Siam were two of the Oriental countries which have opened legations in Washington since the ending of the Spanish war. The former is represented by General Isaac Khan, an officer of the Persian army, whose gorgeous court dress and many decorations create a stir whenever he appears at any official function. Phya Akhara, the Siamese minister, is the son of a nobleman and was educated at Oxford. He wears European dress, speaks English perfectly, and is as progressive as any up-to-date Yankee. The Korean minister, another new minister of the corps, is also a wide-awake Oriental. He and his secretary are seen in many of the public places of the capital, where he is making a careful study of the American customs. He was in hearty sympathy with the work of the missionaries in Korea and is a frequent attendant at the churches of the capital. The Turkish minister, a late arrival also, without doubt deserves to be called a diplomat. In all of the long trouble concerning Miss Stone, and in which his government has had such vital interest, he managed to keep from saying a word that could implicate either himself or his government. He expressed such profound sympathy for the Sultan, and for himself, with Miss Stone and her friends, and has so sedulously refrained from saying anything else that even the reporters gave up the effort of trying to learn any news of the captive from him. His discreet diplomacy ought to be rewarded by his government if it is not. Minister Chekib Bey is a widower but has two little sons, and his mother came to America with him to take care of them. They all are Mohammed Turks in their religious belief.

Washington, D. C.

ABBY G. BAKER.

CONTINUED FROM
PAGE 307

A CELESTIAL INTERVAL

the garden at Versailles, met Mansard, the great architect, and the architect took off his hat before the king. "Put on your hat," said the king, "for the evening is damp and cold." And Mansard, the architect, the rest of the evening kept on his hat. The dukes and marquises, standing with bare heads before the king, expressed their surprise at Mansard, but the king said: "I can make a duke or a marquis, but only God can make a Mansard." And I say to you, my hearers, only God by his convicting and converting grace can make a Christian, but he is ready this very half-hour to accomplish it.

Again, my text suggests a way of studying heaven so that we can better understand it. The word "eternity" that we can handle so much, is an immeasurable world. Knowing that we could not understand that word, the Bible uses it only once. We say, "For ever and ever." But how long is "For ever and ever?" I am glad that my text puts under our eye heaven for thirty minutes. Those whose hearing is so delicate that they get no satisfaction when you describe the crash of the eternal orchestra, feel like saying, as a good woman in Hudson, N. Y., said, after hearing me speak of the mighty chorus of heaven: "That must be a great heaven, but what will become of my poor head?" Yes, this half-hour of my text is a still experience. "There was silence in heaven for half an hour."

You will find the inhabitants all at home. Enter the King's palace and take only a glimpse, for we have only thirty minutes for all heaven. "Is that Jesus?" "Yes." Just under the hair along his forehead is the mark of a wound made by a bunch of twisted brambles, and his foot on the throne has on the round of his instep another mark of a wound made by a spike, and a scar on the palm of the right hand, and a scar on the palm of the left hand. But, what a countenance! What a smile! What a grandeur! What a loveliness! What an overwhelming look of kindness and grace! Why, he looks as if he had redeemed a world! But, come on, for our time is short.

Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

CONTINUED FROM
PRECEDING PAGE

Do you see that row of palaces? That is the Apostolic Row. Do you see that long reach of architectural glories? That is Martyr Row. Do you see that immense structure? That is the biggest house in heaven, that is "the House of Many Mansions." Do you see that wall? Shade your eyes against its burning splendor, for that is the wall of heaven, jasper at the bottom, and amethyst at the top. See this river rolling through the heart of the great metropolis? That is the river concerning which those who once lived on the banks of the Hudson or the Alabama or the Rhine or the Shannon, say: "We never saw the like of this for clarity and sheen." That is the chief river of heaven—so bright, so wide, so deep. But you ask: "Where are the asylums for the old?" I answer: "The inhabitants are all young." "Where are the hospitals for the lame?" "They are all agile." "Where are the infirmaries for the blind and deaf?" "They all see and hear." "Where are the almshouses for the poor?" "They are all multi-millionaires." "Where are the inebriate asylums?" "Why, there are no saloons." "Where are the graveyards?" "Why they never die." Pass down those boulevards of gold and amber and sapphire and see those interminable streets built by the Architect of the universe into homes, over the threshold of which sorrow never steps, and out of whose windows, faces, once pale with earthly sickness, now look rubicund with immortal health.

"Oh, let me go in and see them?" you say. No, you cannot go in. There are those there who would never consent to let you come out again. You say: "Let me stay here in this place where they never sin, where they never suffer, where they never part." No, no! Our time is short, our thirty minutes are almost gone. Come on! We must get back to earth before this half hour of heavenly silence breaks up, for in your mortal state you cannot endure the pomp and splendor and resonance when this half-hour of silence is ended. The day will come when you can see heaven in full blast, but not now. I am now only showing you heaven at the dullest half-hour of all the eternities. Come on! There is something in the celestial appearance which makes me think that the half-hour of silence will soon be over.

Hark! the clock in the tower of heaven begins to strike, and the half hour is ended. Descend! Come back! Come down! till your work is done. Shoulder a little longer your burdens. Fight a little longer your battles. Weep a little longer your griefs. And then take heaven not in its dullest half-hour, but in its mightiest pomp, and, instead of taking it for thirty minutes, take it world without end.

I have a strangely beautiful book containing the pictures of the medals struck by the English Government in honor of great battles; these medals pinned over the heart of the returned heroes of the army, on great occasions, the royal family present, and the royal bands playing; the Crimean medal, the medal of the Mutiny, the Victoria Cross, the Waterloo medal. In your first half hour in heaven, in some way, you will be honored for the earthly struggles in which you won the day. Stand up before all the Royal House of heaven, and receive the insignia while you are announced as victor over the draughts and freshets of the farm field, victor over the temptations of the stock exchange, victor over professional allurements, victor over domestic infelicities, victor over mechanic's shop, victor over the storehouse, victor over home worriments, victor over physical distresses, victor over hereditary depressions, victor over sin, and death, and hell. Take the badge that celebrates those victories through our Lord Jesus Christ. Take it in the presence of all the galleries, saintly, angelic, and Divine! While all heaven chants: "These are they who came out of great tribulation, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die;
They see the triumph from afar,
And seize it with their eye.

A GOOD MAN CONVERTED

PETER AND CORNELIUS

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 20
ACTS 10: 34-44

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "GOD IS NO RESPECTER OF PERSONS"
ACTS 10: 34

DR. JOSEPH PARKER names the first chapter of Genesis, the first of Matthew, and this tenth chapter of Acts as the three great epoch-opening chapters of the Bible. Most dramatically they present, the first, the creation of the world; the second, the coming of Christ, and the third, the introduction of Christ to the Gentiles, through which the world was to be recreated.

The Lesson Story

Cornelius, the Roman captain, had learned to pray to the true and living God, and he had adopted the Jewish hours of prayer, nine o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon, called, respectively, the "third hour and the ninth hour," time being reckoned from six o'clock in the morning. God was pleased to listen to Cornelius' prayers, and an angel was sent from heaven, even while he prayed, to bring God's answer. Although Cornelius had come to be known as a devout man, and although he had established a God-serving household, and although he was generous in alms-giving, he still felt there was something which he lacked. What he lacked was the knowledge of Christ and the Spirit's power. How sweet the message which the angel brought. "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God!" And then he was told for whom he should send to get the instruction which he needed. He was to send for Peter, who was sojourning at Joppa. The angel gave minutest particulars as to how he could be found. "He lodgeth with one Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the seaside." And Cornelius was not disobedient to that heavenly vision, but sent at once two of his servants, with a soldier as their guard, to bring Peter to him.

At the "sixth hour," twelve o'clock, Peter went up to the housetop to pray. It was not a public place, as one might suppose but a place of retirement. God did not send an angel but a vision to answer his prayer, by which Peter was to be prepared to meet the request which was coming to him from Cornelius. Peter thought that Jesus Christ was to be preached to the Jews alone, and that the gift of the Holy Spirit was only for the Jews. God knew that Peter must have these errors corrected or he could not give to Cornelius the light which he needed. And so a vision was given to Peter. He seemed to see a sheet let down from heaven, in which were many kinds of living creatures, beasts, creeping things and fowls. Then Peter heard the words: "Rise, Peter, kill and eat." But he had been most strenuous about his diet, eating only such things as a Jew might eat, according to the law of Moses. Everything else was to him "unclean." And so he refused to eat what he saw in the sheet. Three times Peter saw the vision, and heard the voice of God saying: "What God hath cleansed, that call thou not common."

Peter did not understand the vision until he was told that three men, the messengers of Cornelius, were at the gate of Simon's house, asking to see him. Then Peter knew that God had been preparing him to go to the Gentile centurion's home.

On the morrow Peter went with them, and took with him some of his Jewish friends who had become followers of the Lord Jesus.

Cornelius, nothing doubting that Peter would come, had made ready to receive him by filling his home with his friends. When Peter reached the door, Cornelius met him, and knelt down at his feet as if he would worship him. But Peter said, "Stand up, I am a man and not a God." And when Peter came into the house, and saw that it was filled with Gentiles, he told them the story of the vision. Then Cornelius told Peter about his prayer for help, and about the angel God had sent to tell him to send for Peter. Then Peter knew that God wanted him to tell the story of Jesus to Cornelius and his friends. How Cornelius and his friends listened while Peter told them all about Jesus! And even while Peter was speaking, God sent the Holy Spirit to be the helper of all who were in the house, as he had sent the Holy Spirit to the apostles and the friends of Jesus while they waited in that upper room, just after Jesus had gone back to heaven. Cornelius and his friends were made able by the Holy Spirit to go out and tell the story of Jesus in any language which they needed to speak, for they, too, were given the gift of tongues. It was the Gentiles' Pentecost. And Peter took water and baptized all who were in the house, and remained for some days to instruct these new disciples. The door of Cornelius' home was the door through which salvation came from the Jews to all of us who are Gentiles. His home may be called the birthplace of foreign missions, and the brotherhood of man.

Illustration and Application

A devout soldier, ver. 7. This chapter presents two devout soldiers, one the Commandant of a Roman garrison, Captain Cornelius, known favorably in all the earth because commended in the Bible; the other, his aid-de-camp, of unknown name on earth, who had probably been won to a devout life by his master's example. The early Christians, a few years later, came to feel that it was inconsistent with a Christian profession to be a soldier. But neither Cornelius nor Peter seem to have thought it sin for Cornelius to assist as a professional fighter in Roman oppression of conquered peoples. Cornelius' devoutness concerned itself with resisting the many personal temptations of the soldier, which are so strong that devout soldiers, even among great commanders, have ever been exceptional. Let us tally those of world eminence. We may well begin with the centurion at the Cross, who exclaimed: "Truly this 'was the Son of God.'" Next comes Cornelius. Gustavus Adolphus is another, teaching his Reformation army to sing,

Fear not, O little flock, the foe
That madly seeks thine overthrow,
Dread not his rage and power;
What though your courage sometimes faints,
The wicked's triumph o'er God's saints
Lasts but one little hour.

Cromwell's Ironsides also marched to battle with psalms and prayers. In later years, when in the British Army great perils were to be faced, it used to be said, "Bring out the saints of old Havelock." When a handkerchief was seen at the entrance to the tent of "Chinese Gordon," no one ventured to enter, knowing their general was taking counsel with God. General Washington, General O. O. Howard, and Stonewall Jackson are the best-known of the devout soldiers of the United States.

All these remind us that one can be devout under the most brave. A Scotch shepherd, whose collie had eaten up his Testament, expressed his alarm lest the Testament, being so full of love, his dog would no longer be of any use for a fight. It is surprising that any Scotchman should have had such a one-sided view of the Testament, which pictures even Christ with a whip of small cords and a two-edged sword in his mouth, and teaches us not only to love what God loves, but also to hate what God hates. (Rev. 2: 6).

Thy prayers and thine alms are come up before God, Faith and works, theory and practice, character and conduct, conviction and courage, are the two wings with which we rise to God, useless each without the other. These are related as source and stream.

Prayer as the Source of Noble Life

The very dreams of Cornelius and Peter were prayers. "God giveth to his beloved in sleep."

In my dreams I'd be Nearer, my God, to thee.

Send to Peter, who shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved (11: 14). These words from Peter's own story of Cornelius suggest that Peter did not regard

Was Cornelius a Christian Before Peter Came?

Cornelius as a saved man, with all his devoutness and prayerfulness and benevolence, before he had received Christ and the Holy Spirit. This is a very serious fact to be pondered by the "good boys" and "good men" who think they are too good to be converted. To them this story says what Christ said to the moral young ruler, "One thing thou lackest." Lovable as Cornelius had been before, when Peter told him of Jesus, there came a change as from twilight to dawn, from Judaism to Christianity, from morality to the Spirit-filled life.

I perceive that God is no respecter of persons. This utterance shows us that Peter was changed also in his Christianity, as from dawn to noon. He had been brought up to believe that salvation was a Jewish monopoly. Three years of contrary teaching from Christ and even Pentecost had not dislodged that root of race prejudice. He had heard Jesus say that "God loved the world"; had seen him heal the Syrophenician's daughter; had witnessed his commendation of the Capernaum centurion's faith: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel"; had heard the parable of the Good Samaritan, and another of the good of all nations in Matthew 23; but after all this he still regarded God's love as bounded by Palestine. He had traveled one stage from his Jewish prejudices in lodging with Simon, the tanner, a trade greatly despised by Jews. He traveled a greater one when he went to be the guest of the Gentile Cornelius. God prepared him by the vision of a sheet or tent full of beasts that to Jewish law were unclean. These he was told to "kill and eat," and when he protested that he had never eaten anything common or unclean, the divine reply was, "What God hath cleansed that call thou not common." This vision is not to be interpreted as putting any slight on the physiology of Moses, which modern physicians are more and more adopting as hygienic, but only as a condemnation of race distinctions among men. To God there are no "common people." Lincoln's word is better—"the plain people." If them he had the greatest confidence. Peter learned that "God is no respecter of persons," that is, of colors, of nationalities, of classes. He bids us "honor all men." Character is his only dividing line. This reminds us that a little girl thought there must have been some babies in Peter's vision, because the Bible speaks of "creeping things." Alas, in another sense many men are "creeping things"—they will crawl to get an office or a dollar or a harmful pleasure. Even these God teaches us to pity and save.

The saving words (11: 14) that Peter brought to the cottage prayer-meeting of Cornelius' neighbors were the following:

- Saving Words
1. Acceptance, v. 35.
 2. Peace, v. 36.
 3. The Lordship of Christ, v. 36.
 4. Remission of sins, v. 43.
 5. The Spirit-filled life, v. 44.
 6. Testimony, v. 46.
 7. Baptism, v. 47.

On that Roman gathering in the house of Cornelius not a were of his devout type. No doubt there were some rough wicked soldiers also. For them, too, the saving words were given. At Plymouth, Mass., years ago there hovered about the wharves a man so openly wicked that he was called "Bloody Nathan." He would literally "swear like a pirate," and in many other respects was defiant of moral principle. But one day a Christian woman invited him to a meeting she had arranged for old people. He promptly accepted, and was at once softened by the new atmosphere of reverence and sympathy. Soon he was praying for mercy, and he became an earnest witness of the transforming power of Christ's imparted life.

He breaks the power of cancelled sin,
He sets the prisoner free;
His blood can make the foulest clean,
His blood avails for me.

THE TRADITIONAL HOUSE OF SIMON THE TANNER

adverse surroundings, for surely no profession is so unfriendly to Christian graces as that of the soldier. A story worth repeating, that was told by an American general as the bravest act he saw in the Civil War, is that of a young officer at a dinner with fellow officers, who were in turn telling foul stories at each new round of wine. When he was reached, he rose quietly, and gave as his toast, to be drunk in water, "Our mothers." A hush came on the unclean lips, and there was no more foul talk. He had conquered by a word that required greater courage than to face the cannon's mouth. Let no one, then, say wearily, "I can not be a Christian in such surroundings as I have," but bravely, like Daniel, do the right, even in Babylon, and, like the saints in Cæsar's, that is Nero's household, when in Rome, do as the Romans ought to do.

But parents and teachers should guide the young especially to choose their residences and occupations, whenever something nobler than money does not prevent, where the environment is friendly to Christian life and growth. It is hard enough at best to live a Christian life. Let us not, like Lot, pitch our tents at Sodom, because there is a chance to make more money, when that chance is combined with the chance of ruining the heart and home.

"A devout soldier" suggests that as Christian soldiers we should be not only devout but soldierly, not only pious but

VENEZUELAN GOVERNMENT TROOPS ON THE FRONTIER
Gen. Pedro Arango and a Portion of his BandINDIAN WOMEN COMPLAINING OF VENEZUELAN ATROCITIES
Their Husbands have been Murdered by Government Troops

Venezuela's Rebellion Spreading

By....
HAROLD MARTIN

OF the many troubles threatening President Castro of Venezuela, none is more annoying or more real than the operations of the Libertador on the Venezuelan coast. Venezuela has an army and a navy, as the yearly budgets testify, and it is humiliating to the Dictator,—the man whom his political heelers call the "Never-Conquered Conqueror"—that he should have to offer $10,000 to any foreigner who would rid him of the continual pin-pricks of a fruit steamer converted into a gunboat. Germany threatens him on one side; France is exacting and insists upon business-like demeanor on the other, while the United States has unkindly shattered the interpretation of a traditional protection which permitted Venezuela to avoid the payment of just debts. Even Colombia is again restive, and threatens alleged invasion. These might be serious complications to any one but President Castro. He declares Venezuela can get on perfectly well without diplomatic relations with any power. But the operations of the Libertador are real; yesterday she sank one gunboat, to-morrow she may sink another, and this is injurious to prestige.

Six months ago, Venezuela was on the verge of war with Colombia. That situation seems now to have disappeared, and powers of no less importance than Germany, France and the United States have taken cognizance of the conditions in Venezuela. In 1896, the Disconto Bank of Berlin made a loan to Venezuela of $10,000,000, for the purpose of enabling her to pay off the interest guaranteed to the railroad companies in the country, which had never been paid. It has been said the German bank drove a good bargain when it made this loan, but, loaning money to Venezuela appears risky, and the greater the risk, the greater should be the prospective profits. The Disconto has been waiting for Venezuela to pay the interest on its $10,000,000 for nearly four years, or ever since Castro marched into Caracas and his predecessor, General Andrade, fled over the mountains to La Guayra. Tired of waiting, the Disconto has asked the German Government to effect this interest payment. So the Emperor sounded Washington, and learned the Monroe Doctrine would not be applied to permit a South American Republic to avoid a just obligation. Then Germany got ready; German warships approached the Caribbean; there was talk of an ultimatum; the La Guayra, Porto Cabello or Maracaibo Custom Houses, one or all, were to be seized and held until the German bank had its money, while newspaper offices in New York looked forward to paying cable tolls on Venezuelan news.

Then suddenly everything stopped. At about this time the visit of Prince Henry was announced, and, by reason of the operations and help of the Libertador, the present revolution against Castro, financed and led by Senor Manuel Matos, had progressed favorably. It appeared that Germany evidently thought it better to wait. This delay was a disappointment to those interested financially in Venezuela. There every foreign resident has for years been waiting with commendable patience for some foreign power to give Venezuela the chastisement they declare she stands sorely in need of, and without which they say she never will behave herself.

Senor Matos, some years ago, after complying with all due forms, leased a piece of property in Venezuela to a Monsieur Secrestat, a Frenchman. When Senor Matos appeared on board the Libertador, off the Venezuelan coast, Castro's government promptly took possession of this leased property. Castro's action became known, and M. Secrestat's son, after obtaining official assurances from Venezuela that he would be permitted to land in that country, sailed from France for La Guayra, with the purpose of arranging the matter of the seizure of the property leased to his father. When he arrived at La Guayra, Castro peremptorily refused M. Secrestat permission to land, notwithstanding the previous assurance to the contrary. This matter was then taken up with the French Government, through the French Consul at Caracas. France is reported to have insisted that Venezuela fulfil her promises in the Secresexpects trouble with Colombia, however, and has but lately declared himself to be ready successfully to repel a Colombian invasion of his frontier.

The Matos revolution in the interior and on the coast of Venezuela is progressing favorably. The reports of rebel victories cause a continued anxiety in Governmental circles in Caracas, which is not offset by Castro's announcements of various rebel routs. The revolt has taken the form of numerous and persistent uprisings, growing in frequency, and these Castro has not been able to suppress. In these efforts against Castro, the Libertador has been helpful and effective. The present revolutionary gunboat was formerly the British steamer Ban Righ, and was chartered and outfitted at London. Here she loaded about 1,000 cases of rifles, a large quantity of cartridges and other munitions of war, and after being temporarily detained by the British authorities, on suspicion of being a Boer filibuster, she reached Fort de France, Island of Martinique, the day before last Christmas. Here she was joined by Senor Matos.

She left Fort de France on January 2, and since then her operations on the Venezuelan coast have been most successful. She is faster than any of the gunboats composing the Venezuelan fleet, and she has landed arms, men and ammunition on the Venezuelan coast wherever she has thought it advisable. On February 7 she sank the Venezuelan gunboat Crespo off Cumarebo. She is acting as an arsenal, storeroom, dispatch boat, hospital, yacht and place of refuge for the followers of Senor Matos, and she is a thorn in the side of the present Dictator. His gunboats can do nothing to the Libertador. They are slow, they need to be repaired, they lack coal and proper ammunition, and they have a wholesome fear of the revolutionary ship. The latest news of the Libertador report her at Dominica, in the Leeward Islands, flying the flag of the United States of Colombia. If this be true, it is but another evidence of the oft-repeated alliance between the Venezuelan revolutionists and the government of Colombia.

A newspaper correspondent, who recently visited the Libertador to interview General Matos, reports the revolutionary gunboat to be a vessel of about 900 tons, very clean and well kept, lighted with electricity, and mounting four powerful cannon, several Gatling guns, and five fifteen-pounders. She is commanded by an Englishman, and her artillery is served by Frenchmen and Venezuelans.

Speaking to this correspondent, General Matos said that his efforts and those of his followers were directed toward saving Venezuela from its present condition of anarchy. He said the country was almost to a man in favor of the revolution, but that the people had neither arms nor money. "Within a few weeks," continued the revolutionary leader, "the remotest villages will know that the hour of revolt has arrived, and, supplied with arms, the thousands who are waiting for us will be ready to take the field."

Foreigners in Venezuela are generally of the opinion that President Castro is riding

CONTINUED
ON PAGE 320

A MARKET SCENE IN CARACAS, VENEZUELA

The Sun-dial Erected by Humboldt, the Celebrated Traveler, is on the Pillar near the Centre of the Photograph tat matter, and to have declined to renew diplomatic relations with her until this was done.

Diplomatic relations between the two countries ceased some seven years ago as a result of trouble arising from the non-payment of French claims against the South American Republic. Soon after this rupture, France assessed the imports of Venezuelan coffee. This was a hard blow to the Venezuelan coffee-growers, as France was their best market. Venezuela has lately tried to bring about a renewal of these ruptured relations, with the result that on February 19 an agreement was signed in Paris, between representatives of the French and Venezuelan Governments, which forms a basis for the resumption of diplomatic intercourse.

Colombia, Venezuela's neighbor on the west, is just now most fully occupied in putting down a long-drawn-out revolution of her own, and is consequently not ready to take armed action against Castro for his continued and open aid to the Colombian insurgents. Castro

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Editor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register your remittances.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year. Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date after your subscription is received.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends. Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

The Passion Play

CROWDED houses, it is announced, have witnessed the Passion Play in Montreal. It has been played in French, but English speaking spectators have been numerous and remained attentive throughout, though not understanding the dialogue. One of the press reports has it that the proprietor of the play, who assumes the part of the Saviour, was until lately playing at other French theatres in the city. The part of Mary is played by a well-known actress, and other feminine parts are taken by members of noted stock companies. The actor-manager, it appears, is delighted with the success of the play, and has already made many thousands of dollars out of its production. A theatrical manager is now proposing to translate the play into English and produce it in New York.

It would appear that the theatre has touched the lowest depth of degradation when it lays its unholy hands on this most sacred of all themes. All the vices have been portrayed on the stage, and though there was reason to complain that they should be presented in so attractive a guise as they were, people were not surprised that the managers thought such spectacles would please their patrons; but what can people, who have applauded the presentation of vice, see to applaud in the portrayal of the most sublime and pathetic scene of all the world's history? True, that divine life, suffering and death have a most momentous import for every human being; but it is not in witnessing a burlesque of that tragic death, that their interest should be shown. It is as if a prisoner under sentence of death, learned that he might be saved from execution by the sublime self-sacrifice of some friend, who had volunteered to suffer in his place, and then that prisoner, instead of being thrilled with grateful love and thankfully availing himself of the freedom, earned at such appalling cost, stayed in prison and produced a stage play in which the dying agony of his benefactor was simulated. Inconceivably vile would such conduct be deemed by all who heard of it. Not even in a prison, could men be found so lost to decency as to witness the scene.

Playwrights have ransacked history and romance for thrilling events that could be turned to account for theatrical purposes, and with more or less success they have dramatized scenes real or imaginary; but this theme of the Cross and Passion they should at least leave untouched by their polluting hands. Who would be thought capable of representing on the stage the men who have done most for the betterment of the world? What a failure would be that of the actor who tried to personate Socrates, or Plato, or Washington, or Lincoln, how much more that wondrous Being in whom dwelt the fullness of the Godhead bodily! "What shall I do with Jesus?" the weak, timid Pilate asked of the howling mob, from whose angry clutch he sought to save the majestic Prisoner, whose personality had touched his hard Roman heart. The same question, consciously or unconsciously, every man must ask himself, and on his answer depends his eternal destiny. A most momentous question, which the buffoons of our day answer by saying: "We will not love and reverence him, but we will make a stage-play of him and get money by mimicking his sorrow and suffering and death." The coarse, brutal proposal reveals spirits more despicable than those of the sons of Jacob, who sold their brother; of Judas, who betrayed his Master; of Benedict Arnold, who played the traitor to his country. Sad experience proves that men still close their hearts against that love which ended in ineffable self-sacrifice, against that tender pleading which comes to them from the Garden and the Cross; but at least they should refrain from turning it into a stage-spectacle for the sake of gain.

Humble Service

DESPISE not the simple nor the humble. God may choose the most insignificant for mighty ministrations. He does not select the great ones of the world, when he means to move a continent or influence a nation. His choice may fall upon the quiet, earnest soul, rather than the ostentatious and self-seeking. By a thousand illustrations, it would appear that simple agents are preferred for the grandest services: Carey, the shoemaker, to transform India from heathen to Christian; Bunyan, the tinker, to set all England thinking; Luther, the unknown monk, to reform the civilized world; Lincoln, the poor country boy, to break the shackles of millions of slaves.

Dr. Wm. Wright, of Nagasaki, tells how a common sailor—a deckhand on some English vessel—planted the seed of Christianity in Japan. In 1854, the English fleet lay in Nagasaki harbor. There was no treaty between the two countries then, and the hostile Japanese troops, under General Wakasa, were assembled on shore, to prevent the people from communicating with the foreign fleet. General Wakasa himself patrolled the shore in a swift gunboat. A British sailor, a Christian, one day committed a small New Testament to the waves, with the prayer that it might be picked up by some Japanese. It was observed by the Japanese General, who ordered it taken up and dried, after which he submitted it to his Dutch interpreter. The man told him it was "The Christian's Bible," which told about God and Christ and eternal life. General Wakasa pondered these things, which seemed vastly more important than the military situation. He learned that he could procure a Chinese translation of this wonderful Book. He sent to China for a copy, and he, with four interested friends, began to study it, devoting their leisure to the work. It showed them the path to peace and happiness. Christianity was at that time a forbidden religion in Japan. There are now many Christian congregations and thousands of native converts. In the first six months of 1901, over 90,000 Scriptures were sold in that country and read without prohibition. But the glory of the first seed-sowing must always be given to the poor sailor who, with love for Christ in his heart, sent his little Testament out over the waters of Nagasaki Bay, like an Ark of promise, to bring Japan to Christ.

The Miners' Truce

ALTHOUGH a thirty-days' truce has been arranged, by mutual agreement, between the coal miners and operators, thus deferring for a time the threatened strike of 140,000 anthracite miners, the real danger is only temporarily averted. In every dispute, there is, somewhere, a point where both interests may meet upon mutual ground, but this point has not yet been reached in the present case. Though mining will go on during the truce, the vexed question as to wages and hours cannot be adjusted, unless each side is willing to concede something to the other. Only by such mutual concessions can the true basis of agreement be reached.

It is a matter for congratulation that, in the present trouble, there have been evidences of sympathy on both sides and of a desire for conciliation. This is a new feature in coal strikes and an encouraging presage. Nothing is gained by angry controversy. Every advantage is sacrificed when violence steps in. If the leaders representing the hosts of capital and of labor in the coal camps will calmly sit down and ponder the history of past strikes, they will find still further occasion for conciliation now. In a single decade, millions of dollars lost to the operators, and millions more lost in wages to the workers, who were less able to afford it. Property depreciating, machinery rusting in the shafts and hunger slaying its innocent victims in thousands of miners' homes. And this is duplicated in every industry and in every field of human enterprise, wherever the contest between labor and capital grows acute. No war like this, which has raged intermittently for generations, and has counted more victims than any of the great military campaigns conspicuous in history.

Whether or not this interminable conflict shall go on until the millennium comes, none now living can tell; but it is certainly remarkable that, with all the accumulated legislative wisdom of the centuries, our statesmen and lawmakers have not yet succeeded in creating tribunals, nor in enacting statutes that could even partially solve the labor question. Local courts of labor (courts of first instance, for initial hearings). State courts of labor, for adjudicating upon cases beyond local jurisdiction, and a National Labor tribunal, with jurisdiction in inter-State and national labor disputes—these have all been discussed and soon dismissed, as they would be simply courts of arbitration, with no power to enforce their judgments. It would be a national blessing if some means, legislative or otherwise, could be devised to facilitate the peaceful settlement of labor disputes without a resort to strikes. The abolition of labor strikes will mark a very important step forward in modern civilization.

Fatal Lethargy

MULTITUDES there are who have become so accustomed to resisting all the ordinary influences of the Gospel, that the calls to repentance come to them now like familiar sounds that reach us in our sleep without breaking our slumbers.

On a quiet country road there was an old turnpike man, whose habit was to shut his gate at night, and take his nap. One dark, wet midnight a traveler knocked at his door, calling, "Gate! Gate!" "Coming!" said the voice of the old man, but there was no movement within. The knock was repeated, and once more the voice answered, "Coming!" This went on for some time, till at length the traveler grew angry, and jumping off his horse, flung open the door, and demanded of the old gate-keeper why he cried "Coming!" for twenty minutes, and never came. "Who is that?" said the old man, in a drowsy tone, rubbing his eyes; "what d'ye want, sir?" Then awaking fully, "Why, bless you, sir, I ask your pardon. I was asleep. I get so used to having 'em knock that I answer, 'coming,' in my sleep, and take no more notice about it."

So the habitual hearer of the Gospel sinks into a lethargy of soul which it seems can only be broken if it please God to bring to bear upon it some unusual and mighty moral power.

That was a grievous paragraph in the newspapers lately, that told of five little children who perished by fire in their own home in New York. They were not consumed by the flames, but they were suffocated by the smoke. The fire did not reach the humble room where their poor mother had locked them in for safety, and without being aroused, apparently, they were smothered in their sleep. Yet they died as readily as if they had been burned to ashes in the raging flames.

We do not fear, perhaps, that our friends and children will be destroyed by outrageous and flaming vices—blasphemy, theft, drunkenness, uncleanness—but how many of them are in danger of perishing by that deadly smoke of indifference, which pours its stifling clouds of carelessness around them, and, if they be not aroused, will send them, asleep, into hopeless death.

Among the Workers

—IN GUTHRIE, OKLA., Evangelist E. L. Williams, of Peoria, Ill., assisted by Professor Fisher, as soloist, has conducted a very successful series of gospel meetings. Evangelist Williams specially desires the prayers of Y.M.C.A.'s that the Guthrie meetings may result in the organization of a Y.M.C.A. branch, and that many may be saved and consecrated.

—WILLIAM E. DODGE, the Christian philanthropist, has added another building to his great gifts to the Young Men's Christian Association. Last week there was opened at Columbia University a hall called Earl Hall, in memory of his eldest son. The building cost $175,000, is a noble piece of architecture, and will be the centre of religious life and activity of all the societies in the University.

—AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY for self-denying but fruitful Christian service is offered to a number of men by the Utah Gospel Mission, of Cleveland, O. This society is prosecuting a greatly-needed colporteur work throughout Mormon regions in the West, and contemplates a large evangelistic work also. In the sections of the country where its chief field lies there are fully 270,000 people, mostly Mormons, yet unreached, and who are chiefly unreachable by any other class of Christian work. The Mission has already visited some 12,000 families since last June. Men for this work should have good health, sturdy common-sense, tact, grit and grace, deep piety, ability to "endure hardness as good soldiers," love for lost souls and readiness to suffer for them; stability of character, a good knowledge of the Bible, mature judgment, ability to get along with others, and at least a fair education. To these qualities for the evangelistic work must be added some ability as a Gospel speaker, the above qualities are necessary to success. The workers live in specially-constructed Gospel wagons, and in the colporteur work each man should be able to carry the personal and printed Gospel message to four thousand families per year. There are no salaries, but all expenses are provided, if desired, by the Mission. Workers are desired to correspond soon with the Secretary, Rev. J. D. Nutting, 739 Republic street, Cleveland, O.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Our Great Gift to Cuba

CUBAN independence, the long-cherished dream of the patriots and the hope for which thousands have laid down their lives, is at last about to be realized. On May

GENERAL LEONARD WOOD
Military Governor of Cuba

20 next, General Wood, our Military Governor in Cuba, will formally transfer the government of the island to President-elect Tomas Estrada Palma, and will then return to the United States. Simultaneously, our military force, which has occupied Cuba since the Spanish-American war, will be withdrawn, leaving only small garrisons at Havana, and such other important points as may be deemed advisable, until the new Cuban government has been fully organized, when native troops will take their places. In return for this priceless gift of independence, which the United States, true to its honorable pledges, and unmoved by all efforts and schemes looking to annexation, has conferred upon Cuba, the government of the island is required to bind itself to make no treaties with foreign powers, which shall impair that independence, or give such powers a foothold upon its territory; it must so arrange its finances that the revenues of the island will be adequate to meet all expenditures; must recognize our right to intervene, whenever necessary, for the maintenance of Cuba's government and for the protection of life and property and the honorable fulfillment of the island's obligations; must recognize the validity of all acts done in Cuba during our occupancy of the island; it must carry out the methods we instituted for the prevention of infectious diseases; and it agrees to sell to us such lands for coal-mining and naval stations as may be agreed upon hereafter—all these conditions to be embodied in a treaty between the two governments. Further, that Cuba may realize the dignity of her new position among the governments of the world, the United States will appoint as its representative at Havana, an Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at $10,000 salary, with full Legation staff, a Consul-General and Consuls at the more important cities on the island. That Cuban independence may be strengthened and supported, we will also take necessary measures to stimulate commerce between the two countries by arranging a tariff favorable to the growth of Cuba's leading industries. Thus it will be seen that the future is bright with promise for the little island republic. Hardly in modern history, can such a gift as it has received at our hands find a parallel. There are doubtless many people here and in Europe who are sceptical as to the wisdom of our course in leaving the people to govern themselves; but we are simply fulfilling the pledge that we gave at the beginning of the struggle. It may be hoped that the Cubans will justify it by the use they make of the freedom we have secured to them. We may say to them, as the great lawgiver said to his own people at the beginning of their national life, when he urged them to make the laws of God their rule of life:

Keep therefore and do them: for this is your wisdom and understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people (Deut. 4: 6).

Saved by his Grip

An employe of the United States Public Stores in New York, had a narrow escape from death a few days ago. He was directed to clean the windows on the sixth floor of the building. As this is a work of some danger, special precautions are taken to prevent accidents. The employe, wears a belt having a strong ring at the back. Through this ring a rope passes, the ends of which have clasps that are attached to bolts on each side of the window frame. If he becomes dizzy while at work, or makes a mis-step he is saved from falling by the rope which passes behind him. In this instance, however, the employe, while leaning backwards at his work, was horrified by feeling the rope part near one of the bolts. Realizing that he could not recover the perpendicular, but must fall to the pavement far below, he leaned forward and grasped the rope. He was seen to fall, but was stopped by the rope which he had instinctively caught. Passers-by happily saw his perilous position and hastily summoned assistance. The man was quickly drawn up and his life was saved. It was a critical moment for him while he was dangling by the

GEN. TOMAS ESTRADA PALMA
First President of Free Cuba

GENERAL VIEW OF THE CITY OF HAVANA, CUBA

bare wall, his life depending on the strength of his grip on the rope. There are many who, through strong propensities and fierce temptation, are in danger of moral falls who might be saved if they followed his example, clinging to Christ with the tenacity with which this man clung to the rope.

Unto him who is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy (Jude 24).

An Empire Builder

One of the most remarkable men of our time passed away on March 26, when Cecil J. Rhodes breathed his last. Starting life as a poor boy, the son of a country clergyman, he was handicapped by the symptoms of consumption, which at length became so pronounced, that he abandoned his education and went to South Africa in the hope of saving his life. He was only seventeen years of age when he landed, and in the opinion of the physicians, he had not a year to live. But the climate agreed with him, he rapidly gained strength, and when, shortly afterward, the discovery of diamonds was made, Rhodes was able to shoulder a pick and go to the mines. His success was phenomenal, and he returned to Cape Town with a fortune, which he promptly invested in mining stocks. He rose to be the head of the Beers Mining Company, and succeeded in forming an amalgamation of other companies with it. The Chartered South African Company soon followed, and he became its president. He entered Parliament, and rose to the Premiership of Cape Colony. It was in this high office that the great ambition of his life manifested itself. He wanted to see the whole of South Africa united under the British flag. Like Warren Hastings in India, he planned and schemed to acquire territory for his country, and after a long struggle two magnificent provinces, now known as Rhodesia, came under British control. Then came the conflict with the Dutch Republics precipitated by the Jameson raid, which even the British press now admits to have been the worst blunder of Mr. Rhodes' life. He resigned his offices and went to London to face the indignation of some and to receive the applause of others who magnificent in the breadth of his projects, passionately eager to build up a great empire, what a contrast does his life present to that of Him whose sway will yet be owned by the whole world.

THE LATE CECIL RHODES

In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth (Ps. 72: 7, 8).

BRIEF NOTES

The French Government has conferred on Miss de Broen a gold medal in acknowledgment of her unwearied and successful evangelical labors in the Parisian suburb of Belleville. These labors have been recognized by the authorities for many years, they having had satisfactory evidence of the results of Miss de Broen's influence.

As a result of a meeting in Baltimore, Md., of a joint commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church North and South, the General Conference of the Northern Church will be urged to adopt at its next meeting a plan for federation in several branches of work.

Bishop Vincent, who has been in Switzerland for two years past, hopes to sail for home in time to attend the Chautauqua meetings in August.

The Pope's income last year was $460,000. This is less than one-half of the sum annually received by his predecessor, Pope Pius IX. An officer has just been convicted of robbing him of $80,000.

Mr. Henry Varley has been conducting meetings at Worcester, Mass. His addresses at the recent Bible Conference at Atlanta, Ga., showed that increasing years had not diminished his old-time energy and power.

A proposal is under consideration to commence a series of noonday evangelistic meetings in Faneuil Hall, Boston. They will be under the charge of Mr. S. M. Sayford, Secretary of the New England Evangelistic Association.

Mr. Merton Smith brings encouraging reports of his campaign in Arizona. His meetings were held in tents, in churches and in halls, as seemed most convenient. He was well received, and many persons made profession of conversion.

Miss Florence Nightingale has recovered from her illness, and though now over eighty years of age has resumed her beneficent activities with renewed energy.

The Bowery Y. M. C. A. branch, New York City, has secured a farm at Woodbridge, N. J., where destitute men can be temporarily employed until placed in situations in the neighborhood. Instructions in farming will be given to the inexperienced.

Miss Remington, whose noble work for the poor of Buffalo, N. Y., was described in this journal last December, has reached a crisis in her Christlike service. Owing to a new law passed by the Albany Legislature, she is obliged either to give up the building she occupies, or spend a considerable sum in alterations, to comply with the new law. It would be a great misfortune for the work to stop, and it would, therefore, be a real charity to furnish her with the funds necessary to meet this unexpected emergency. Contributions should be addressed to Miss Mary E. Remington, 150 Erie street, Buffalo, N. Y.

held opposite views of his character and achievements. At the end of the investigation he returned to South Africa, broken in health and harassed by anxiety. It was recognized that his recovery was impossible. He sank rapidly, and died on March 26. Even his warmest admirers among his own countrymen admit that he was unscrupulous where his country's interests were concerned, but they extol his patriotism, which is further shown by his will, in which the bulk of his vast fortune is left for educational purposes. To the Boers he is, and will ever be, the representative of all that is evil in British policy, and while even they recognize his genius, they hate the man whose whole career was antagonistic to them. Boundless in his ambition,

DR. TALMAGE'S MEXICAN JOURNEY

A GREAT GOSPEL GATHERING
IN NEW ORLEANS--STRICKEN
BY ILLNESS IN MEXICO CITY

WHEN the Rev. Dr. Talmage, Editor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, set out from his home in Washington for New Orleans, on Feb. 12 last, he was in excellent health and spirits. He went to fulfil a long-standing preaching engagement in the Crescent City, where the congregation of the First Presbyterian Church, and thousands of citizens affiliated with other churches, were looking forward to his visit with pleasure. His Southern journey was destined to be an eventful one. He narrowly escaped a train wreck at Valdosta, Ga., caused by an open switch. As it was, the train in which he rode was so roughly shaken up that all the passengers suffered, though not seriously. The Doctor fortunately escaped with no worse misfortune than the loss of part of his baggage.

At New Orleans, a remarkable welcome awaited him. He was received by a distinguished deputation with the utmost cordiality. When he went, on the following Sunday, to the First Presbyterian Church, he found a great multitude assembled, the large building densely packed within, and a much vaster gathering out-of-doors, unable to obtain admittance, as auditorium, galleries, and even the organ-loft, were filled almost to suffocation. Thousands went away disappointed, but an immense crowd remained outside while the service lasted. He spoke with even more than usual force and conviction, and it was evident that the message was enriched by Divine power and made a blessing to many. It seemed to reach the hearts of his auditors and to evoke responses which may have a marked spiritual influence upon the future of many lives. Seldom has Dr. Talmage, in all his long experience as a preacher, faced such a multitude. Only at the memorable gatherings around the Academy of Music, New York; at Ocean Grove, where he preached the Gospel to 10,000 hearers; at the various Chautauquas, and during his preaching tours in Great Britain, has he enjoyed the great privilege of addressing similar assemblages.

Leaving New Orleans, he proceeded to Mexico City, where he arrived safely, though somewhat fatigued with the labors he had undergone. He was to preach and lecture in the Mexican capital. Though the city has an altitude of several thousand feet above sea level, it is unhealthy for foreigners, unless they are fully acclimated. Shortly after his arrival, he had premonitions of an attack from his old enemy, the grip, but his health had been so robust that he gave these warnings little heed. In a few days, they became more pronounced, and one morning, after a restless night, he found himself a thoroughly sick man. His physician advised his removal to Washington at once, and as every hour seemed to aggravate his condition, his wife and friends prepared for the homeward journey, which was begun without delay.

REV. DR. TALMAGE'S HOME IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

He was still quite ill when he reached Washington and was conveyed to his home at No. 1400 Massachusetts avenue, where, in God's good providence and under careful nursing, he soon began to improve. The lethargy slowly gave way before returning strength, and on Monday, March 24, his wife and family and his friends all over the world were gladdened with the news that the patient was on the road to recovery.

From that time, the patient's convalescence progressed uninterruptedly, and the prospects for complete recovery were regarded as excellent, no set-back being apprehended. Dr. G. L. Magruder, the chief physician in attendance issued this statement under date April 1:

"Dr. Talmage's condition is very satisfactory this morning. There is marked improvement in every respect. G. L. MAGRUDER, M.D."

During Dr. Talmage's illness, hundreds of telegrams and letters of inquiry were received at his home in Washington from all parts of the country, and some even from distant lands. These messages of kindly interest poured in upon Mrs. Talmage in such numbers that to reply to all became impossible. They showed how deep, widespread and genuine was the love that glowed in countless hearts for the famous preacher, for whose recovery fervent petitions were being offered everywhere.

While in Mexico, Dr. Talmage had an opportunity to renew his former acquaintance with Gen. Porfirio Diaz, the President of the Mexican republic. He enjoyed a long audience with the soldier-statesman, during which the mutual interests and prospects of the two countries were freely discussed, President Diaz showing himself, as always, a warm friend and admirer of our government and people.

"WELCOME NIGHT" AT THE BOWERY MISSION

AN unusual degree of interest marked the happenings of a recent week at the Bowery Mission, the occasion being the return of the Superintendent, Mr. John G. Hallimond, from Europe, where he was called a month before by a matter of personal business. The hall was beautifully decorated with flags by the house of John G. Wanamaker, the well-known Christian merchant, a corps of men being sent down from his New York establishment to perform that kindly and generous office. Then a company of ladies were busy all afternoon trimming smilax here and there, filling vases with flowers and making the Mission generally most attractive. On the piano was a great horseshoe of roses; in another place a tall stand filled with white lilies; and the superintendent's chair was wreathed with flowers. The "boys" from the Memorial House (a home for homeless men near the Mission), and the "Mission Crew," as the Bowery rescue-workers (saved men who are trying to save others) like to call themselves, lent a hand, helping any way they could. They have reason to love the Mission and its Superintendent, and they wanted to show it.

As Mr. Hallimond, with his wife and daughter entered, everybody rose, and sang a Gospel song of welcome that made the old hall ring. Mother Bird stood on the platform, the first to greet the returning shepherd.

The Superintendent had not expected so demonstrative a welcome, and was deeply moved by it. On the platform with Mother Bird were a number of prominent people, guests of the Mission.

If the friends all over the Union, who are sending in their pledges of "$1 and no more" for the help of the Mission, could have been present at the "experience meeting" which followed, they would have had fresh cause to rejoice that they are aiding in this good work. Their letters are full of encouragement to those who labor here for the old Lighthouse of the Bowery.

Mrs. Bird Tells of a Phase of the Bowery Mission Rescue Work

I was greatly interested in an article in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of Feb. 12, entitled, "Uplifting the Masses." While rejoicing over the fortunes left to the educational classes, you put the question "Ought there not to be some provision made besides to ameliorate the conditions of all the creatures of toil, who are practically the creators of these fortunes?" We have often told the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD what joy is in our hearts over the thousands who have been saved from sick to do hard work, and cannot get employment. While our first thought is to save the man's soul, there is a service of human sympathy and present relief, which must be given before we can talk to them of Christ. We must follow the example of the Samaritan—have compassion and bind up the wounds. Too many of us do as the priest and Levite in this struggle for daily bread, because there are no simple industries that do not demand great physical endurance. It does appear to me that every man who is on his feet ought to be able to earn his daily food.

One young man came to us one night. His pale face told the story. His father and mother had died, and he said tearfully, "All they left me was a sick body." He came for work, of course, but found none. He had been given the one remedy that cold charity presents to a starving man—a ticket which gives him the great privilege of chopping wood for fifty cents a day. But a disabled man cannot chop wood, and as a result, he had been lying in the hospital for two weeks. After these homeless men walk the streets for a few nights, they are thankful to come into our Lighthouse simply to rest; within a few weeks a man told us: "I have fought the wind, the hail, and the rain this winter, until I am a wreck." It is such a problem what to do for such men. Our Bowery Mission is baptized with tears. At one of our after-meetings, a young man, evidently very ill, asked us to pray for him. I said: "My boy, what do you want me to pray for?" His quick answer was: "A bed to die in." He was given a comfortable bed, and two weeks after his nurse brought the dying message from the sufferer: "Give my thanks to the Bowery Mission friends for letting me rest on its benches when I was too sick to have a home." Another boy of twenty-two, came to us one stormy night, his clothing wet to the skin, as he had walked in the rain all day. The boys at the Mission saw his condition. He had three hemorrhages while sitting on our seats the next day. Finding that he had a widowed mother, they bought his ticket to go home to her to die—first putting on him warm flannels and supplying all his needs.

These are only a few instances out of hundreds that come to us. Sometimes we do get discouraged and overwhelmed with the misery that gathers about us. I said one night: "Oh boys, why do you all come to us?" The reply came as a reproof to me, for one of the crowd said pathetically: "To whom shall we go in our trouble, if not to the Bowery Mission?" If some great hearts, who consider their fortunes a sacred trust, would open their eyes to this big suffering world, who constantly crowd into our city, and become victims of poverty, disease and sin; and if they can devise some way of encouraging industry and self-respect, theirs would be the most royal gift ever given. The only hope for us now is in taking care of our homeless men and women, and the Father of us all would say to such a benefactor: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me."

Yours in Service,

MRS. SARAH J. BIRD.

THE BOWERY MISSION HALL, SHOWING THE DECORATIONS sinful lives within our Mission walls, but today, I want to tell you of a part of our work that has never been told—the constant opportunity of cheering and binding up the wounds of discouraged, broken-hearted, proud-spirited men, who, in helping others to reap fortunes, have, by hard work and exposure, incapacitated themselves for self-support, and are now suffering deaths daily from chronic ailments, too did—"pass by on the other side." Our experiences reveal to us cases too cruel to describe.

My plea is only for the honest toiler; not for those who have brought ruin upon themselves through the curse of liquor or demoralized lives. Hundreds come to us who are not able to get work, because there is so little call for the unskilled labor. They are

A Warning to Parents

SOMETIMES a catastrophe flashes a grim light on every-day and common-place social conditions. Such a flash-light has been turned on the homely middle-class life of a part of our people, by an inquiry now being held in the courts of Manhattan. A youth of twenty dies by violence in a hotel. He may have shot himself, he may have been shot by a companion, and a girl of nineteen is suspected and arrested. "The child," said a friend to me, "grew up in our street, a very dainty little girl. I have seen her with her doll a hundred times, with her books going to school, with her little sister going to Sunday School, just a rosy, golden-haired girl, and now she is accused of an awful crime." Probably others saw the dead boy growing up, going to school, playing baseball, doing what other lads do. Yet, before these foolish children were twenty, they had drifted, whatever the outcome, into an acquaintance that was supposed to be criminal. What are parents about that they do not guard their children better? How shall they answer at the judgment bar for their shameful negligence? Occupied with earning a living, absorbed in petty things, parents let the golden time pass away, and lo! the babes of to-day are the grown-up men and women of to-morrow. Fathers and mothers should exercise an unrelenting vigilance over their children's associates, their evenings, and their reading. What is becoming of that old, wholesome fear of God, which once reigned in most homes? Where, on the sabbath, are those who should be in church? The Sunday excursion, Sunday golf playing, and the Sunday-do-as-you-please-child ways of the present are sowing a terrible harvest for the future. There is a fearful warning for parents in cases of accusation like some before the New York courts this spring.

How to Earn Money at Home

The uninitiated would be amazed to know how very general, and indeed urgent, is the wish on the part of women to earn money at home. Married women are anxious to do so, both that they may help their husbands, and that they may have money to spend upon various extra indulgences or advantages for themselves or their children. Girls long for the independence that money gives, but often, recoil from the hard work that alone ensures generous returns. To tell the truth, money is not to be picked up in the streets, nor gained by those who have neither wares to sell, nor ability to produce what brings its market price. The trained worker in any line succeeds if she is brave, resolute, and resourceful. Failure awaits the amateur, who is merely mercurial. Good work brings profits. But few industries can be carried on at home. The self-supporting woman, as a rule, must go to her work, very much as a man does, finding herself bound by defined hours and precise rules. Of course, a woman may take in sewing, or a girl do china painting at home, or a good housewife sell home-made delicacies. As a general thing, however, money-making at home is not feasible, though it depends here, too, on the individual. I know of one case, where a woman began by making sponge-cake, and now has a successful tea-room, where she entertains hundreds of people every week.

On Sunday Afternoons

Writing to Dr. Talmage, an intelligent reader says: "I heard you preach at Boulder, Col., and I have ever since regarded you as a personal friend. On Sunday afternoons I sit down quietly and read your powerful sermons, and feel that I am better fitted to do my week's work. I am a teacher, and often stop and think of the great responsibilities laid upon me. I do really want to train my scholars in heavenly as well as in earthly things. The dear mother who has gone home felt as I do about THE CHRISTIAN HERALD."

Common Prudence

Many disastrous fires have marked the past season, and we are quite sure that in a majority of cases, they were started from somebody's carelessness. Oftener than people think, a smoker's match is the cause of a fire. A match is struck; it is thrown down, only par-

A TRAGEDY

I was going home so happy,
With my flowers and blossoms bright,
And I found this poor dead birdie
Lying so plain in sight.

I'll make a little grave here,
And bury the birdie deep,
And I'll leave my prettiest flowers
To cover its quiet sleep.

A Talk About the Birds

THOUGHTLESS people fancy that the birds have an easy time of it. They do seem incarnations of pleasure as they fly to and fro, their wings flashing through the air, their delicate throats, quivering with song, and their homes high up among the tree-tops, or hidden in the meadow grass. But think how hard a robin or a wren, a swallow or a thrush must work to feed his brood. Think of the weary patience of the mother-bird when the eggs are under her breast. And remember the perils that menace birds. The marauding boy who robs the nest, or aims at a bird with a shot-gun is bad enough, but far worse are the hunters who at certain seasons kill birds that women's hats may be barbarously adorned. Then there are larger birds that prey upon lesser ones, there are cats which lie in wait to destroy and dogs that are little better. A bird's life often ends in a tragedy. Bird study is sure to repay those who devote their time to it, and people often discover that our little brothers of the air are not very unlike ourselves in some of their qualities.

A lady of New Brunswick, N. J., last year wrote the life story of two robins which she had rescued from a cruel fate and brought up by hand. She called them Chupe and Jenny, and nobody who read their history doubted that they were worth putting into a book. Chupe developed a great deal of love for his mistress, and was extremely dependent upon her. Jenny was a bird of extraordinary individuality. The fact is that any animate creature, loved, watched, cared for, and petted, shows traits that some human beings might envy.

Cruelty to Pigeons

The infamous sport of shooting at tame pigeons, let loose that men, who do not deserve the name of sportsmen, may amuse themselves by firing at them, should be put down, not only by legal enactment but by public opinion. Nothing is more degrading to character than the inexcusable cruelty of such mis-named sport.

The Coming Brides

In a thousand homes just now the happiest preparations are making for the wedding days that loom ahead amid lilacs and roses. Elaborate trousseaux are not as necessary as they used to be, for ready-made garments simplify the task of sewing for the maiden who goes from her father's to her husband's house. But a mother likes to send her daughter forth well provided for, not only in her personal outfit, but with household linen, sheets, pillow-slips, table-cloths, and napkins usually given the bride by her own people; the other furnishings falling to the part of the prospective husband. Go to house-keeping if you can, is the advice I would give young people. The first year of marriage is often rather trying. Spend it by yourselves and under a roof of your own, and learn how to adjust yourselves to one another and to the new environment, without the presence of any outsider.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S CORNER

—MRS. J. C. M. Many thanks for your good letter.

—A READER. Miss Helen Gould is a great philanthropist and also very patriotic.

—PAULINA. "Waterfall" was a name applied to hair-dressing in a certain very ungraceful style during our Civil War.

—COUNTRY GIRL. Stay at home and take the position offered you in an office in the village, in preference to going to a great city among strangers.

—PERPLEXED. Your case is puzzling. An aunt and a sister each claim you. The former is disagreeable and nagging, but is now in ill health, and has been in a way kind, as she sheltered you in childhood. The latter accepts your help with her children but pays you nothing. You are afraid that if you don't work for yourself you will soon be too old. I really think your aunt has the present claim. Do not worry about the future.

tially out, and the smouldering flame ignites some combustible substance. Result, houses, churches, streets flame swept, and a town laid waste. Women are apparently unaware that oiled rags used in polishing floors and furniture and laid away for a future occasion in a closet, may start a fire on their own account, from spontaneous combustion. When we remember the great number of household fires, the innumerable quantity of lamps in any village or city, and the proportion of flues that may need overhauling, and join to that proposition the unconquerable heedlessness and recklessness of many persons, the wonder is that property is so safe, and fires so few.

CORNISH PIANO AND ORGAN MINIATURES

FREE

TO ALL READERS.

We will forward without cost to you anywhere our new 1902 Souvenir Catalogue, with embossed & colored plates, illustrating all our styles of Pianos and Organs. It will prove to you that we really sell a better instrument for less money and on more liberal terms than any other reputable firm in the country, also.

FROM $155.00

how we send instruments on ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. With the catalogue we will forward prepaid to any interested person a set of Piano & Organ Miniatures FREE absolutely correct in coloring, to aid them in making a selection best suited to the color scheme of their home. This unique advertising matter has been prepared by us at great cost and no intending purchaser can afford to be without it.

ALL FOR NOTHING. Write for it to-day and mention this paper. Full particulars of our Co-Partnership Plan are also sent, showing how you can get a PIANO OR ORGAN FREE No matter how much or how little you wish to pay for a musical instrument, we can please you and save you money. Write today.

CORNISH CO., Washington, New Jersey. Established 50 Years.

FROM $25.00 Cash or Installments.

Savings Depositors

You perhaps receive 3 to 3½ per cent. on sums that are subject to forfeiture of interest if deposited or withdrawn at other than fixed dates.

Our patrons deposit and withdraw at pleasure, receiving interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum for every day the funds are at our command.

We receive deposits of $50 and upward. The testimony of clergymen and others who have examined our books, of the State Banking Department under whose supervision we are placed by the laws of New York, and other detailed information of interest to prospective depositors will be forwarded promptly on request.

INCREASE OF BUSINESS

| ASSETS: | SURPLUS: |
|-----------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| Jan. 1, 1894 . . . $9,413.45 | Jan. 1, 1894 . . . $450.62 |
| Jan. 1, 1902 . . . $1,557,272.75 | Jan. 1, 1902 . . . $182,056.74 |

Write for detailed information.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

BOOKKEEPING LEARN FREE

Pay your tuition from your earnings after we place you in a position. Our methods excel all others. You can learn at your own home without loss of time or money. We guarantee it. We teach you free and get you a position. "How to Become a Successful Business Man" is the title of an extensive treatise on bookkeeping and business. It explains how you can make more money and better your position in life. The book and full information is sent absolutely free. Write to-day.

COMMERCIAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
Drawer 7, Rochester, N. Y.

Music Learning at Home

Piano, Organ, Guitar, Violin, Banjo and Mandolin. Harmony and Composition. Our booklet tells how to learn to play any of the above instruments without going to a teacher or having a teacher call at your home. Send your name and receive the booklet free. Fifth year of greatest success.

Address: U. S. CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC,
Dept. 9, 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

LORDS PRAYER.

SMALLEST EVER COINED.

To introduce our novelties we will send a Rolled Gold Bangles Ring, warranted 3 years, with Lords Prayer in base relief or any initial engraved Free. Send size and 10c for mailing, &c.

Vokes Jewelry Co., 202 Western Av., Covington, Ky.

Real Estate Wanted

and for sale. If you want to sell or buy (no matter where located) send description and cash price and get (FREE) my successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars.

Dept. E, KAREL GUSTIN & CO., 34th Avenue, New York.

The Foes of National Life

A Sermon by REV. CHARLES M. SHELDON, of Topeka, Kans.

TEXT—Prov. 14: 34: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people"

THERE was never an age of the world when the attention of thoughtful men and women was more carefully directed towards what is known as the "social life of humanity than to-day. We are in the habit of saying that what is called the "social problem" was never so prominent in literature, on the platform, or in the pulpit as now. Yet while this may be true, we ought not to forget that a great many hundred years ago the old Hebrew prophets had a vision of man in social relations fully as grand and fundamentally as profound as the conception which the best reformer has to-day. And while we talk about the place in common discussion which social Christianity has reached in our own time, we ought not to forget that Christ laid down all the fundamental principles which lie at the basis of all true discussion of social life. Whoever wrote the words which we have chosen as the centre of our thought, proclaimed a great fundamental basis upon which men who live in social relations ought to live. And with all our study of the complex questions of social life we have not learned anything better by which to regulate social conditions than the statement in the text.

It is a very significant fact that the Bible conception of a nation, or of the social life of individuals in organized form, lays down the principle that governments are morally responsible just as individuals are. It is a very common, but at the same time superficial idea of national life, that a community may do things which an individual ought not to do; but the Bible teaching, expressed a hundred times in terms like those we are considering, expressly declares that governments that do not heed the voice of God, States that break moral laws, people that disobey divine law, will suffer, and finally be destroyed just as an individual will suffer and finally lose his life if he persists in disobeying the fundamental law of righteousness. This is necessary at the beginning, in order to go on with the unfolding of the statement that righteousness exalteth a nation. There is not one law for an individual and another law for a nation or community. If it is wrong for an individual to sell intoxicating drink, it is wrong for a nation to go into the liquor business for the sake of revenue. If it is wrong for an individual to make money by running a saloon, it is also wrong for a city to license such an institution for money. If it is not righteous for an individual to make money at the expense of a weaker brother, it is also unrighteous for a government to do the same thing through its commercial relations with other governments. If we believe in this fundamental statement at the beginning we are ready to go on with what must follow, and by way of importance is this statement: A government, in order to have that righteousness that exalts and keeps alive, must be taught in every possible way the authority of a divine Being.

The Christian men in the great cities of America, members of churches and professed disciples of Christ, need to fall down on their knees and cry aloud to God, acknowledging his ownership, and asking for that leadership which shall break the fetters of political selfishness, and free the city from the bondage in which it is now held. This beautiful Republic, in which our children are being born and reared, in which the dearest ties of home and affection are being made, the Republic dedicated by freedom's sons to the cause of liberty, is in danger of losing all that is worth preserving, because it sometimes seems to forget the fear of God, and the reverence for divine authority and divine ownership are slipping away out of the hearts and minds of the people.

No nation ever existed with any degree of righteousness which did not have some lofty conception of a divine rulership as the real head of the State. No better service could be rendered a government than for the fathers and mothers in the homes of a Republic to teach their children, from their first years, to fear that God, to whom first should be paid obedience. We need not be afraid to train our children to fear God, not as the Pagan used to fear, but as an earthly child fears to cause sorrow to an earthly father, if he disobeys his wish. It is true that perfect love casting out Pagan fear by the fear of God which is not Pagan is perfectly consistent with Christian love. It has been the habit to sneer at the old Puritan and Pilgrim fathers, as if their theology were of the kind which is now of no account; but this nation would not be half as Christian as it now is, if both the Puritan and the Pilgrim had not had ground into their very being, with every breath they drew, the righteous fear of God. Indeed, it was that more than any other quality which made them what they were, and we shall lose all they wished to bequeath us if we do not insist upon this quality in our children and in ourselves. A nation whose God is the Lord, will always be a law-abiding nation. A nation which has respect for the Being who will bring all men to account in the last great day for the deeds done in the body, will always be a nation distinguished for righteousness.

REV. CHARLES M. SHELDON

Another fundamental necessity for righteousness in a nation's life, is a profound conception of the nature and results of the transgression of the law. It is because we do not have this profound conviction of the results of transgression that we do not use the prophet's voice, and do not act like those who have souls to save. It is very easy to regard the results of sin with complacency. No mother would like to think of her young, innocent boy becoming at once a drunkard, yet how many fathers and mothers think it a very little thing when the boy begins to drink a little. No man would deliberately choose to have his son a liar, yet many a father and mother pass over as insignificant the first little deception of the child, having no horror of transgression at its beginning. Have we dropped out of our habits of thought the intense, deepset horror and hatred of wrong, horror so deep and hatred so great that we cannot bear the thought of its existence in the life of anyone we love?

The results of transgression are the same now as they always have been. All the advancement that science has made, all the progress in the world of art and good literature, all the secrets we have learned of nature and her ways, all the new studies which have busied men in social life, have not changed, and cannot change, the inevitable results of the law of transgression. It hurts a man's soul just as much now to do a selfish thing as it hurt the soul of Jacob when he cheated his brother. It leaves just the same mark on character now, to-day, to do an impure thing, as it left on David's soul a thousand years before Christ. The drunkard to-day reaps the same fruit that Noah reaped. The results of sin have not changed through the centuries any more than the law of gravitation. In fact, we ought to know more about the results of sin, just as we know more about the law of gravitation to-day than was known a thousand years ago. But has our added knowledge of the results of wrong increased our horror for it? No nation is raised to the fullest heights of power, unless it has deep-seated in its organization an understanding of and contempt for wrong within itself. But if we believe that righteousness is the only

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

KNOX'S GELATINE

The Gelatine Standard of Our Day

by which all other gelatines are judged. K-N-O-X Gelatine does not merely look well, it tastes good, digests quickly and unlike other kinds, acts as a refreshment on the system.

A pure-food dessert that is also a health-food.

No Charge For My Book

of seventy "Dainty Desserts for Dainty People" for your grocer's name. Or instead send a 2c stamp. For 5c, in stamps, the book and full pint sample. For 15c, the book and full two-quart package (two for 25c). The pink color for fancy desserts in every large package. A package of Knox's Gelatine makes two quarts—half gallon—of jelly.

CHAS. B. KNOX, 55 Knox Avenue, Johnstown, N.Y.

The FAMOUS ST. LAWRENCE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

are strictly high grade, guaranteed instruments, and are designed for the best musicians.

MANDOLIN—Solid rosewood, neatly inlaid around edge and sound hole, celluloid bound edges, inlaid frets, pearl position dots. An instrument noted for its tone and splendid appearance. Retail for $9.00. Our price, $4.95.

GUITAR—Standard size, beautifully inlaid around sound hole, top edge and down back; edge bound with celluloid, finger board is fretted absolutely correct, pearl position dots, best American patent heads, improved metal tail piece. Regular $10 value. Our price, $4.20.

MEIERHOF VIOLIN—Meierhof's Conservatory—Stradivarius model, full ebony trimmed, rich amber or dark red, fine bow with it free. Retailers charge $15 for such an instrument. Our price, $4.90.

SEND NO MONEY We ship C. O. D., subject office, the money to be paid to the express agent when the instrument is found entirely satisfactory. Write for Free Catalogue of Musical Instruments and Sundries of all kinds. SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

You Can Play it Without Learning

ZOBO BAND

ZOBO The Musical Wonder Sample 25c.

Made of solid brass. Delivered free.

ENTERTAINS EVERYBODY EVERYWHERE

For Church, Sunday-School or Home Societies. Free illustrated Catalogue sent on application.

Strauss Manufacturing Co., 422 W 14 St., Dept. 19, New York

Gems of Song

for the Sunday School.

288 Pages, Full Bound in Cloth.
Over 200 Popular Hymn and Tune Writers Represented.
$25.00 per 100. Sample Copy, post free, 20 cents.

THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

PRAYERS

For Public Worship, Private Devotion and Personal Ministry.

By Abbie C. Morrow. A New and Priceless Help to Spiritual Life. Invaluable to Christians everywhere. Gives aid to persons of all ages wishing to take part in prayer in public, also Prayer Meetings, Special Occasions, Family Prayers, Prayers in Sickness, in Revivals, etc.; also the Prayers of eminent Christians. A Complete Guide to Devotion. Sent postpaid to any address. Fine cloth binding, gold side and back stamps, $1.00; Royal Purple cloth, silver back and side stamps, silver edges, $1.50. Beautifully bound in leather, gilt edges, $2.00.

M.E. Munson, Pub., 77 Bible House, New York

BACKWARD CHILDREN

A school for the education of nervous and backward children, and for the correction of all kinds of speech defects. Individual instruction, beautiful home surroundings, Christian influences. Write for illustrated booklet containing valuable suggestions. Address Reed School, 388 Hubbard Av. Detroit.

LEARN PROOFREADING

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a great and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $25 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail. HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

TYPEWRITING

began with the Remington,
and the

MODEL No. 1. (1874).

REMINGTON

stands to-day for all that is best in

MODEL No. 6. (1902).

TYPEWRITING

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENDIS
Remington Typewriter Company
327 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Irtistic Monuments

Cost No More than
Plain Ones in

White Bronze

Marble is entirely out of date.
Granite soon gets moss-grown, dis-colored, requires constant expense and care, and eventually crum-
bles back to Mother Earth.
Besides it is very expensive.

White Bronze is strictly everlasting. It is of frost, moss-growth, rust, or fire.
It is more artistic than any stone. Then why not invest-e it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred the monuments and by thousands of delighted cus-sers in all parts of the country. Many granite-dealers sented White Bronze in preference to granite for their n burial plots. We have designs from $1.00 to $10,000.
ite at once for free designs and information. It puts under no obligations. We deal direct and deliver ywhere. Over $700,000 worth of work sold to Christian Herald readers in the last few years.

he Monumental Bronze Co.
90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

COLORADO

MORE interest is being taken in Colorado as a health and pleasure resort than ever before.

Americans are beginning to realize that here, at home, within easy reach, is a country more delightful than Switzerland in scenic attractions and with a pure dry climate which has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors.

I wish you would send today for a copy of our book which tells all about Colorado in an interesting way. It is full of illustrations and has an excellent topographical map. Enclose 6 cents in postage to

P. S. EUSTIS,
General Passenger Agent,
C. B. & Q. Ry.,
209 Adams Street,
Chicago

Dr. Lyon's PERFECT

Tooth Powder

Used by people of refinement over a quarter of a century.

THIS AUTOGRAPH IS NEVER ON A POOR SHADE-ROLLER AND NEVER ABSENT
FROM A GOOD ONE.

Stewart Hartshorn
THE GENUINE
HARTSHORN

The Foes of National Life

A Sermon by REV. CHARLES M. SHELDON, of Topeka, Kans.

CONTINUED FROM PRECEDING PAGE

thing that exalteth a people, and if we believe that we need to have a fundamental conception of obedience to divine authority, as well as a fundamental conception of the results of sin, we ought to ask ourselves the question, "How shall we gain this righteousness which is necessary for this present life?"

The means are fully within our reach, and among them we may mention the training of the Republic's life in the family. The government of any people is powerless through its public institutions to shape and to mould character, as the individual family has it in its power to do. If all our colleges were Christian, which they are not, and if all our public schools were distinguished for their spiritual training, which they are not, even then these influences, powerful as they might be, could not take the place of home training; even the church, at its best, with the best religious instruction from the pulpit and the Sunday School can only supplement what ought to be done by the family. This is a safe proposition to make. If half the homes in our cities were Christian homes, if the fathers and mothers of those homes were spending their best time and strength in training their children to be truthful, obedient, useful Christian men and women,
they would not need to fear in any direction for the future prosperity and power of the city.

The father and mother to whom has been entrusted the development, the divine training of a child, cannot trust that development to the State, nor even to the church. The Christian home is the real source of the Christian State. Christian homes make Christian statesmen, and Christian laws, and Christian men who obey the laws, and Christian officials who enforce the laws. It would not be difficult to prove that somewhere in the life of almost every good man or woman, a mother's influence or a woman's influence has been the real source of all that has been worth anything in the man.

But the influence of the home, to be of any real power, must be built up on a profound religious basis. It will not do to trust to what we call morality. A home where the children are taught to love
God, are taught by the father and mother together to love God's Word, a home where Sunday is one of the brightest and best days of the week, because of its being devoted to religious development, the home where some form of family worship is observed every day, the home where the religious grows without force, and as naturally as a plant grows from the seed to blossom and fruit, this is the kind of home which makes possible any government of men worth having, and such a home, representing all that such religious training embodies, will be of more value to the nation than all its crops, its coal or oil, iron or manufactures. Out of such a home will come men and women to build up a real fabric, to construct a real social democracy. From such a home will come, with exceedingly few exceptions, the law-abiding, self-sacrificing, public-spirited man and woman, for whom the Republic need have no fear, for whom it need not build either jail or reformatory. God give the Republic such homes as these, God grant that we see the profound need of such religious foundation for the life of the State.

Another source of righteousness in the life of a nation is the religious training and activity of some Christian organization. The place of the pulpit or its equivalent cannot be taken by anything else.
In fact, the pure home, together with a pure church, or some organization which is really Christian, working together, will be a leaven of righteousness in every community sufficient to leaven the lump.
It is a significant fact, that in a recent report by the Hon. Wm. T. Harris, Commissioner of Education for the United States (Vol. 96, year '97) seventy-five pages are devoted to a consideration of the educational value of the Sunday Schools in this country. A great many children have no homes that are worthy the name. All the religious instruction they ever receive comes to them from the church or Sunday School. It is a fair statement to make, that if the Sunday Schools of this country were wiped out, large numbers of children would be in danger of lapsing into barbarism. The quiet, but none the less effective work being done in our Sunday Schools, must be recognized as a very important factor in the religious and educational work of the Republic.

It is true that the church in many respects is far from being what it ought to be. There are no perfect churches, no perfect church members, no perfect ministers, but neither are there any perfect organizations of any other kind. There are no perfect men and women in any great organizations. There are no fully developed, fully grown men and women anywhere in any organization, but whether we believe in the church as now organized or whether we believe that many changes will grow into it before it is perfected, this we must all believe alike, viz., that some form of distinctive, positively religious public organization must be a part of human society in order to permeate society with righteousness. This is what the church stands for. It is not a money making institution. With all that it lacks, it stands continuously in the community for religious ideals. John Ruskin says:
"Precious indeed are those thirty minutes in which the preacher tries to get at the separate minds of the men and women to convince them of their wickedness, to shame them for all their sins, to warn them of all their dangers, to try by this way and that to open the fast shut doors where the Master himself has stood and knocked yet none ever opened, to call out in those dark streets where Wisdom herself has stretched forth her hand and no man regarded. Thirty minutes, to raise the dead in."

There are, of course, very many other sources of righteousness for a nation's life. The good to be found in the printed page, the influence which comes out of personal friendship, the drinking at the fountain of life bequeathed to us in the lives of the great and the good, our own experience, through which we learn sometimes with pain the hard lesson of the fruit of transgression, all these and many more are rich mines from which righteousness is built up in the life of the Republic.
But after all has been said, the sweet influence of the home and the teaching of our Christian faith in the public religious institution furnish the most effective source of righteousness for the people.
As long as human government shall stand, as long as men shall live together in organized life, nothing will exalt the people except righteousness. In vain are the great warships, the mighty cities, the magnificent public buildings, the fields of waving grain, the hills covered with forests, the earth mined for its ores, the sea with its living treasure or accumulated gems; in vain the boasted political strength of legislative bodies, in vain the power of success in the material accumulation of physical wealth, if beneath and within are not found the principles of God and the love of his law.

The history of this whole earth is simply the history of obedience or disobedience to God. Obedience to him, the recognition of his divine rule, has always resulted in peace, prosperity, happiness, equal rights, equal duties; has always resulted in the strong bearing the burdens of the weak, has always resulted in making the government of men rest upon a basis of love to one another. While disobedience to God as the head of the nation has always resulted in anarchy and in confusion, in resistance, in wrong, in ignorance of human rights, in confusion of duties, in the trampling of the weak by the strong, in the setting up of the throne of selfishness in the place of the altar of service. God save the Republic now and forever, and open our eyes to see that it can be saved only by obedience to his law, by the acceptance of his life, by acknowledging him to be Lord of lords and King of kings over all the nations of the earth.

Sample Bottle FREE!

of Nofrils' pure, delicate and unequalled
Best in the World.

Vylet

A Perfume of exceptional violet fragrance and elegant quality.

Send me your name and address and I will mail you a sample bottle free. I send you a

3 oz. Bottle for $1.00 delivered free—or 1 oz. bottle for 50 cents. This is superior to what others would charge you from $1.50 to $3.00 an ounce. I manufacture and sell direct to the consumer, and have one of the largest laboratories in the world. I claim superiority for my products over those of any other American or foreign makers. Write for my Catalogue No. 2 of Toilet Specialties—Soaps, Perfumes and Powders.

R. NOFRILS, 451 Greenwich St.
New York City.

DEVITT, TREMBLE & CO HIGH GRADE BONDS

A Bond

is the most perfect form of investment known. It combines in the highest degree all of the elements essential to the absolute safety of both principal and interest.

Investors

to whom safety is the first consideration will find among our bond offerings this month several issues to net them five per cent. These bonds are suitable for banks, trust funds, estates and private investors, and are purchased outright by us before offering them to our clients. Denominations $500 and $1,000.

Special circulars giving complete information and price will be mailed upon application.

DEVITT, TREMBLE & CO., Bankers,
233 First National Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

buys the celebrated, high grade
new 1902 Model EDGEMERE BICY-CLE, 28-inch wheel, any height frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT, ANY COLOR ENAMEL. STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

$10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle.
$12.75 for the celebrated 1902 Elgin King or Elgin Queen.
$15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MORGAN &
WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC
TIRES, A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL on any bicycle ordered.
For the most wonderful bicycle offer ever heard of, WRITE FOR OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address,

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

RHEUMATISM

Relieved Without Medicine by Drawing Out the Poison.

We will send a pair of

MAGIC FOOT DRAFTS

ON APPROVAL to any address without a cent in advance. A safe, convenient and unusually sure, common sense remedy that has done wonders in Michigan. If you are satisfied with the help they give you, then send us $1.00. If not, don't send a cent.

I received the trial pair of Drafts, and I am free from all my suffering. They are worth their weight in gold. R. H. DE VAX, Grand Rapids, Mich.
Write to-day for a pair on free trial, and ask for our new booklet, "To One with Rheumatism."

MAGIC FOOT DRAFT CO.,
82 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich.

FOOD AND NEURALGIA.

The Right Food Will Drive it Away.

Good food relieves neuralgia and many other diseases if it is the right kind of food and taken regularly, for the proper food will surely rebuild the cellular tissues and build the right kind of cells instead of diseased cells. When the rebuilding is under way the disease leaves.

That is the fact and the base of the food cure. There are hundreds of thousands of cases to prove the truth of this assertion.

A man in Delaware, Ia., Mr. Thomas Craven, says: "My wife has been greatly afflicted with neuralgia and has never found any medicine that would relieve her."

It was told that if she could be fed on Grape Nuts Breakfast Food for a time she would probably get well, so we started on Grape Nuts. Within a very short time Wife became entirely free from pain and is now, to all appearances, entirely relieved of her trouble.

We cannot find words to express our appreciation of the beneficial results from this greatest food in existence, Grape Nuts.

There's Money
in it!

The breed that lays
Is the breed that pays

Increase Your Income
RAISING PURE-BRED POULTRY.

... Single Comb ...

White Leghorns

lay more eggs and make more money than any other breed. We will start you in the chicken business with a complete pen of well-bred hens and a fine cockerel. We will teach you how to breed and care for them, furnish you diagrams and specifications for the buildings they need, how to incubate and breed, how to raise the growing chicks, how to get the greatest number of eggs and how to sell your products with the largest profit.

A postal card will bring you full particulars.

THE WHITE LEGHORN POULTRY YARDS,
Box C, Waterville, N. Y.

43 Flowers only 30 cents

Worth $1.25
A SPECIAL OFFER made to introduce our goods. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

20 Pkts. SEEDS

1 Pkt. Rambler Rose, 3 col. mxd. 1 Pkt. Diamond Flower.
"Pansies, 10 colors mxd. "California Sweet Peas.
"Washington Weeping Palm. "Double Chinese Pink.
"Mary Semple Asters, 4 colors. "Carnation Marguerite.
"Alyssum, Little Gem, mixed. "Belladonna mixed.
"Bouquet Chrysanthemum. "Poppy—New Shirley.
"Forget-me-not Victoria. "Umbrella Plant.
"California Golden Bells. "Giant Verbena, mxd.
"Lovely Butterfly Flower. "Japan Morning Glory.
"Phlox Drummondii. "Petunia Hybrid mixed.

23 BULBS

1 New Spotted Calla, 1 Beautiful Begonia, 1 Double Pearl Tuberosa, 2 Butterfly and 2 Hybrid Gladioli, 8 Fine Mixed Oxalis, 2 Rainbow Lilies, 2 Scarlet Frezias, 2 Climbing Sweet Mignonette Vines, 2 Splendid New Canna Lilies—1 crimson, 1 golden.

A Return Check Good for 25 Cents on first $1.00 order; also our New Floral Guide, 186 pages. All the above sent postpaid, for only 30c.

If you sell two collections and send us 60 cents with name and address of each purchaser, we will send you, FREE, another complete collection as your commission. Also our $100 Cash Prize Offer.

Write to-day, THE CONARD & JONES CO.

Rose and Flower Growers, Box 0 West Grove, Pa.

ORNAMENTAL LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. Catalogue free

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box D, Winchester, Indiana.

It Costs Less Than You Think
for a strong, durable, attractive Wrought Iron or Wire Fence for your Lawn or Cemetery. Quality and styles unequalled. Write for free Catalogue, 11-219 S. Senate Ave.

ENTERPRISE FOUNDRY & FENCE CO., Indianapolis, Ind.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.
Largest Nursery. Fruit Book Free. Result of 76 years' experience.
STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Danville, N. Y.

Chapter XXI—Continued

DO the buildings make the slums, or the people who live in them?" asked Miss Livingstone, raising her eyebrows. "It seems to me that it is almost as impossible to make those places permanently better as it would be to introduce a new style of sanitary den for wild beasts. Everyone exudes his own environment, you know, just as the little woolly caterpillar on the leaf does. That's Emerson, of course; I'm not clever enough to have said it. But we are what we make ourselves, are we not?"

Immanuel, looking earnestly at the flower-like face opposite him, was at once led to think with a curious thrill of the fair white soul within. "We certainly are," he said musingly. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

Something in the familiar words brought so sudden a cloud over the expressive face of the speaker, that Margaret Livingstone went on with a little tremor in her voice. "Must we, because other people are reaping horrible crops of crime and filth and suffering—from their own sowing, mind—must we refuse the rich harvest of our own wiser choice?"

If the fair Margaret had spent some irksome hours in studying these ecclesiastical phrases, which came so trippingly from her well-cut lips, Immanuel Rossi was not the less impressed by them. "How clearly you put it," he cried admiringly. "You must have thought deeply on these subjects."

Miss Livingstone's curling lashes drooped. "We women have so little share in the world's work," she murmured, and raised her white lids to display a sparkling tear in each gray eye. "We can only think and—suffer!"

Immanuel Rossi leaned across the rose-strewn table, his dark face alight with unmistakable emotion. "Miss Livingstone," he began, "I—"

"Hello! Here you are at last," exclaimed a drawling voice at the window, and Robert Livingstone's sleek head was thrust through the breezy opening. "I've a telegram for you, Rossi. Been looking the place over for you."

Immanuel read the message without ceremony. "I'm sorry," he said rising, "more sorry than I can tell you, but I must go in to the city at once."

"No bad news I hope," said Livingstone civilly.

"No—and yes," said the other. "My secretary wishes to see me at once about some matters I left in his hands."

"How tiresome," cried Miss Livingstone, a trifle sharply. Then she turned to her guest with a slow, sweet smile, "but you will return?"

"I shall return—certainly; that is, if you wish to have me. I am afraid I've made an unconscionably long visit already." The young man's manner was somewhat perturbed, and he spoke the words almost mechanically.

"I fancy you would rather have had me make my appearance armed with a landing-net than with that telegram—eh, Sis?" laughed Livingstone in his sister's ear, as their guest hurried away across the lawn.

Miss Livingstone's sole answer consisted in a vanishing switch of pink and white drapery as she darted upstairs and into her own room.

Chapter XXII—Called Back

WHEN Immanuel Rossi reached New York at the close of a sweltering June day, he betook himself at once to the most aristocratic hotel he knew and proceeded to dress and dine with deliberation. Afterwards he dispatched a messenger boy with a curt summons to his private secretary, Richard Bronson.

That young gentleman was shortly ushered into the presence of his employer. "You sent for me, sir?" he said with an air of surprise.

"Of course; I wished to ask an explanation of this singular telegram of yours," replied Immanuel curtly. The mystified and troubled gaze of the other impressed him most disagreeably. It was almost insolent, he told himself.

"Why, you said—" stammered the private secretary, with an uncomfortable access of color, "You told me that you wished to be summoned at once should anything of moment arise in connection with any of the tenements. I am sorry if it inconvenienced you, sir; but—"

"Why did you not write?" demanded the other.

"You—you mentioned telegraphing, I believe, sir," said young Bronson. "I—"

"What is it all about anyway?" broke in Immanuel. He was angry; and what was worse, he was angry at himself for being angry. Why had he not remained in Newport and demanded an explanation by wire? This stammering, blushing young fellow was not fit to be his deputy.

"From whose standpoint do you look?" demanded that teasing voice again. It had been silent for days, but now it spoke with a more insistent note than ever.

Young Bronson was talking now, eagerly, rapidly. Immanuel forced himself to listen. "It is that old block that is the worst of all. I could not write all; and I thought you would wish to see—to understand. There are an enormous number of tenants, you remember; and yesterday a representative of the State Board of Health called to see you. He says it ought to come down at once. It has become thoroughly infected with tuberculosis."

"With tuberculosis?" repeated Immanuel dully. "But how am I going to help it? It is the people; they are filthy. It is they who infect the buildings. Besides, I cannot afford to build another block this year."

"From whose standpoint are you looking?" again demanded the voice.

"Two women died there last week," went on the secretary in a low voice. "Many of the children have tuberculous swellings in their throats. There have been more than two hundred fatal cases in that block alone in four years."

"I will consult my lawyers with regard to the matter," said Immanuel coldly. "There is other property—" He stopped short; what business was it of Bronson's?

"You may go now," he concluded. "And stay, do not telegraph me hereafter when you can as well write. I shall probably return to Newport to-morrow."

"But Dr. Biggs wished particularly to see you, sir," ventured young Bronson, fixing his aggrieved and astonished eyes on his employer's hardening face. "He was so pleased with the building you have already erected. He has a very practical suggestion to—"

"But I have already told you that I return to Newport to-morrow, my good fellow," said Immanuel, endeavoring to conceal his sudden dislike for this very gauche young man, who seemed disposed to keep him up to his standard and who ventured to show his disapproval so openly. "You may tell Dr. Biggs that I will attend to the block that he complains of, at my earliest convenience. There might be some white-washing done there—Yes, you may order it done at once."

"There was another matter, sir." "It will have to wait, I fancy; I have an engagement this evening. You are always at liberty, remember, to turn over puzzling cases to Mr. Smalley; he will look to them."

He watched the door close on the retreating form of Bronson with a sigh of relief. "What a tiresome fellow he is," he said aloud. "I must get rid of him at once."

"There are some other things to be gotten rid of first," remarked the voice.

The young millionaire twisted uneasily in his chair. "I might as well have it out first as last," he said angrily. "I will not be tormented in this way always."

"No, you will not," agreed the voice solemnly.

"What then?"

"What then?" echoed the voice.

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Giant Flowering Caladium

Grandest foliage and flowering plant yet introduced. Leaves 3 to 5 feet long by 2 or 2 1/2 feet broad; perfectly immense, and make a plant which for tropical luxuriance has no equal. Added to this wonderful foliage effect are the mammoth lily-like blossoms, 12 to 15 inches long, snow white, with a rich and exquisite fragrance. Plants bloom perpetually all summer in the garden, or all the year round in pots. Not only is it the grandest garden or lawn plant, but as a pot plant for large windows, verandas, halls, or conservatories, it rivals the choicest palms in foliage, to say nothing of its magnificent flowers. Thrive in any soil or situation, and grows and blooms all the year, and will astonish every one with its magnificence—so novel, effective, free growing and fragrant. Fine plants, which will soon bloom and reach full perfection, 25c. each; 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00 by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition.

OUR GREAT CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare New Fruits; prettily illustrated; Large Colored Plates; 136 pages; FREE to any who expect to order. Many great novelties.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y.

Of roses we grow annually nearly a million plants, in over a thousand varieties. To further introduce them we offer our Great Trial Collection—16 famous D. & C. Roses $1.00. This collection includes varieties truly great in form, coloring, vigor and hardiness. They will bloom freely this season. All different kinds, properly labeled. Strong plants, on their own roots—no slips. We send them, postage paid, to any part of the U. S., satisfaction and safe arrival guaranteed. Mr. Seymour F. Frisick, East Rockaway, N. Y., writes: "Your great Trial Collection of Roses reached me safely by mail. Every plant lived, has grown finely and bloomed continuously. I would not sell the collection for five times its cost."

FREE with every order for the above the great new Rose Yellow Maman Cochet as one of the 16 varieties and a return check good for 25 cents on next order, provided you mention where you saw this advertisement. The 884 Annual Edition of Our New Guide to Rose Culture, 114 pages—tells how to grow, and describes our famous roses and all other flowers worth growing—free with every order for the above. Also free on request. Ask for it.

THE DINEE & CONARD CO.,
West Grove, Pa.
Established 1850. 70 Greenhouses.

We Carpet Your Floor for $

To introduce our new, serviceable and healthful BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS. Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to wear higher-priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any point east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual colors sent free.

Sanitary Mfg. Company 54 Bourse Building Philadelphia, Pa.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 318

"I shall do as other people do, enjoy myself and spend my money as I like. What business is it of mine that these wretched people are reaping the consequences of their own wickedness?"

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," quoted the voice.

"That is just what I was saying," cried Immanuel triumphantly. "Let them take their medicine."

The voice was silent. Immanuel smiled. Then he leaned forward in his chair. It was as though a curtain had been suddenly rolled up before his eyes—he God-like eyes of his soul, which may see past, present, and future. This was past—long past. The scene was a low-ceiled room, sparsely furnished but clean. A young woman stood by the door, her head bent as though she was listening intently for some distant sound. She was beautiful, but her face wore a piteous look of mingled hope and despair; but hope was dying and despair terribly alive. She started back with a faint cry at sound of a step outside the broken door.

"It's only me, dear. No, there ain't no ether, but maybe it'll come in the morn'g." The speaker, a big-boned Irish woman, was patting the sobbing figure of the younger woman on the shoulder.

When had he heard those voices? How was it that he recognized with a sickening shock the exquisite, woe-begone face of the young woman? "Oh, me!" he groaned, "it is my mother! I—I had forgotten!"

"It is well to remember," said the voice.

He saw the same figure again, but dimly through the swirling flakes of a cruel storm. On and on he followed it, through the storm and the night. He saw it fall and rise again, and fall. It was creeping now like some wounded animal. There was a door; it yielded to the feeble touch. And now Immanuel Rossi knew the place well enough.

"It is Winch's barn," he whispered. Elizabeth's kindly face looked out of the darkness. Her eyes beamed upon him as in the old days. "Manuel," she said remissly, "I'm yer mother as fer's ovin' you's concerned; but you've got another mother 'at loves you jest as much as I do, an' more; she's with you all the while, times 'at I can't be."

"Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister?" asked the voice. Immanuel hid his face in his hands; but the eyes of his soul still saw, and the ears of his soul heard. He saw himself sitting alone on the hay-mow, the lusty sunshine making a golden light about the lonely little figure. Once more he listened to the Presence which abides in every human soul, unchanged and unchanging from infancy to old age—the great I AM.

He seemed now to hear the words of the Book, read in a voice which had lately passed into the silence. "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? Ye are the temple of the living God; for God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

It was not yet daylight when young Richard Bronson was awakened from an uneasy dream to find his employer standing at his bedside. He rubbed his eyes, with a fresh access of amazement, when he perceived that Immanuel still wore the evening clothes in which he had last seen him.

"Has—has anything happened?" he inquired anxiously.

"Yes," said Immanuel, "something has happened. I was out of the way when you saw me last night; I have gotten back by the grace of God. On the table outside you will find an order for Thomson. That infected block must be excised and pulled down at once. Thomson will see to it. I am going away; my address is with the order."

He had disappeared before the mists of sleep were fairly scattered from young Bronson's eyes.

At noon that same day a dusty traveler paused beside the gurgling drip and sparkle of the moss-grown trough on the back hill-road. He drank deeply and cooled his face and hands in the delicious water—looking away over the smiling valley, and up to the wooded crests beyond. "I will stay here," he said, "and let God's voice speak to my soul."

There was plenty of hard work to be done on the neglected little farm. Immanuel dug, cut weeds, repaired fences and cleaned rusted farm implements in a kind of dogged fury. It appeared to him that the hard-wrung drops of perspiration were in a measure cleansing, that through them he might in some way attain peace.

A violet-tinted note, bearing the Newport postmark, reached him in his solitude; he did not trust himself to read it, but buried it unopened at the foot of a giant oak. Nevertheless, he answered it.

"I must tell you," he wrote, "that I have been carried far away from your world by a power outside myself that I would not resist if I could."

Margaret Livingstone knitted her beautiful brows over this strange communication for some moments. Then she carried it to her mother.

"He has probably lost his money," said that lady, astutely. "Your papa says that he has withdrawn his offer for the Mills-Satterlee cottage."

Miss Livingstone shrugged her handsome shoulders. "Only fancy!" she cried, "I might have accepted him!"

"You would have broken the engagement, of course," said mamma. "But," she added sweetly, "I am truly thankful that no such entanglement occurred." And so the matter dropped, until Mr. Livingstone, senior, chanced to mention at dinner one night the fact that young Rossi was fast becoming the talk of the town.

"What has he been doing, pray?" inquired his wife, with a veiled glance at her daughter.

"Making a big fool of himself, Trent tells me," replied Mr. Livingstone, curtly. "He won't have a cent in ten years, if he goes on as he has begun. He's buying block after block of the best paying tenement properties in the city at ruinous prices, and replacing them with costly buildings that won't bring in three per cent!"

"He's a beastly crank," remarked young Livingstone, conclusively. Then he fixed his sister with a basilisk gaze. "Little Margaret doesn't seem quite so much interested in the toiling masses as she did earlier in the season."

"It is possible that I discovered the facts in the case before you did, my very wise brother," answered the young lady, returning the look with interest.

"We could n't have thought of such a thing, under the circumstances," twittered Mrs. Livingstone, in her comfortable staccato. "I must say to you, Robert, that I wish you to be more careful in future as to whom you introduce into the family circle. I am told on very good authority that this young person was of no family whatever, and that his mother was actually buried as a pauper!" Young Livingstone shrugged his shoulders. "That's all true enough," he said. "Old Pickle Armitage cut his daughter off without a cent, because she married a clerk, or something of the kind. But I'm surprised to hear you say anything about that, honored mamma, considering our own plebeian origin."

"Robert!" thundered his father.

"Humph!" ejaculated that young gentleman, disrespectfully, as he strolled away, regardless of the indignation of his injured family.

TO BE CONTINUED

Eminent Physicians

are eagerly studying the problem of baby feeding. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is recommended by the leading family physicians. It is always safe and reliable. Send for book, "Babies," 71 Hudson St., N. Y.

The MAN and the HOUR meet by the time of an

Elgin Watch

Punctuality's watch word is Elgin.
Worn everywhere; sold everywhere;
guaranteed by the world's greatest watch factory. Booklet mailed free.

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO.,
ELGIN, ILLINOIS.

Boys Names Wanted

THE STAR MONTHLY wants names and addresses of bright boys between 12 and 20 years of age. We want to get them interested in our beautifully illustrated magazine of boys' stories, which has a circulation of 100,000 copies monthly, although only eight years old. It contains fine stories and handsome illustrations as well as departments for the Amateur Photographer, the Collector of Stamps, Coins and Cakes, a Puzzle Department, an Educational Contest, and each month awards a number of valuable prizes to subscribers. The subscription price is fifty cents, but if you will send us five boys' names and addresses plainly written and five 2-cent stamps, or 10 cents in silver, we will enter you as a subscriber fully paid for six months in advance. Address

The Star Monthly
OAK PARK, ILLINOIS

Absolute Range Perfection!

Sold for Cash or on Monthly Payments

Your money refunded after SIX MONTHS' FREE TRIAL if

Clapp's Ideal Steel Range

is not perfectly satisfactory to you. My superior location in Ohio on Lake Erie, where iron, steel, coal freights and skilled labor are cheapest and best, enables me to manufacture the best possible range at the lowest price. Largest, most complete range factory, run by men of twenty years' experience insures you getting the "top notch" in range construction at a positive saving of $10 to $20. Send for my complete catalogue (FREE) of all styles and sizes, and book describing the good and bad points of a steel range, which you should see whether you buy of me or not. All printed matter and photos free. My motto the Golden Rule and the BEST for the LEAST money.

C. D. CLAPP, Practical Stove and Range Man, 620 Summit St., Toledo, Ohio

Be a Trained Nurse

and find Ready Employment which is agreeable and profitable. A thorough, practical course of instruction and training is given by an institution established under the laws of the State of Michigan—a course which you can take at home, in your own town, by mail, at small expense, with opportunity to earn during the course more than double what it costs you. Diplomas are issued to our graduates which guarantees our course of instruction.

Terms and all particulars mailed on application.
THE DETROIT SCHOOL OF NURSING, (Inc.) Suite 22-30 Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.

BURPEE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST THAT CAN BE GROWN

If you want the choicest vegetables or most beautiful flowers you should read BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1902,—so well known as the "Leading American Seed Catalogue." It is mailed FREE to all. Better send your address TO-DAY. W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA.

ROSES FREE

you at most attractive prices. Liberal Club Rates given. Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this Summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the Catalogue and Roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting.

Every reader of this paper should have one of our Handsome New Illustrated 80 page Catalogues for 1902. It tells of the best Roses and hundreds of other Plants, Bulbs, Seeds and Fruits, offering them to you at most attractive prices. Liberal Club Rates given. Send us 10 cents for the catalogue and we will present you with Two Fine Everblooming Rose Plants (one white and one red) that will bloom freely this Summer. In addition to this we will send with the catalogue a coupon good for 10 cents with first order, thus giving you the Catalogue and Roses absolutely free. Send NOW and make selection early for Spring planting.

THE GEO. H. MELLENS CO.,
Linnisfallen Greenhouses. Established 1877. Box J,
Springfield, Ohio.

Invalid Comfort

Chairs (out-door or in-door) for a third less than usual; and yet strong and well built—a slinky chair makes people nervous. Our name on all our chairs. If your dealer won't sell you ours, write for book. We pay freight anywhere in the United States.

Philadelphia Baby Carriage Factory,
Eighth and Spring Garden, Philadelphia.

THE EGYPTIAN LOTUS.

The true sacred ancient Lotus, leaves 3 feet, and lovely pink flowers 1 foot across; hardy, free blooming, easy to cultivate in TUBS OR PONDS. Blooming size roots 50c., large tubers 75c. to $1 each. RED, WHITE, BLUE & YELLOW Water Lilies for Cultural directions and Water Lily Catalog free. GEO. B. MOULDER, (Clay Park) Smith's Grove, Ky.

Doctors, Teachers, Ministers, Dentists and intelligent men, in small towns, can learn how to largely increase their income by addressing W. G. FAY MFG. CO., 178 BROADWAY, N. Y.

ARE YOU DEAF

The Morley Ear-drum makes up for all deficiencies of the impaired natural ear. Entirely different from any other device. No drugs. No wire, rubber, metal nor glass. Invisible, comfortable, safe. Adjusted by any one.

For sale by leading druggists.
If yours doesn't have them, write for booklet, FREE.
THE MORLEY COMPANY, Dept. E,
19 South 16th Street, Philadelphia

Safer to cut your corns with an ax than a razor—less danger of blood poisoning. Use A-Corn Salve instead. 15 cts. From druggists or by mail. Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

How to Paint a House Cheap

And Have it Guaranteed to Look Better, Wear Longer and Cost Less than the Best White Lead Paints.

Never Fades, Cracks, Chalks, Peels or Blisters, and is not Affected by Gases.

Fifty Sample Colors Prepaid to Any Address Absolutely Free.

The cost of painting the house and barn, out-buildings and fences is a heavy burden. Cheap paints soon fade, peel or scale off and white lead and oil costs so much and has to be replaced so often that it is a constant expense to keep the bright, clean appearance so desirable in the cosy cottage home or the elegant mansion. To meet the needs of the small purse and at the same time give the rich, lasting, protecting effect of a first-class paint caused the manufacture of Carrara Paint, and it is the best paint for house, barn or fence; for interior or exterior work it has no equal. It is smoother, covers more surface, brightens and preserves colors, is used on wood, iron, tin, brick, stone or tile and never cracks, peels, blisters or chalks; it does not fade; it outlasts the best white lead or any mixed paint and it covers so much more surface to the gallon that it is cheaper in the first cost than most cheap paints. The following are a few of the large users of Carrara Paint.

The Roof of the Great Field Music, Chicago, Covering 7 Acres of Ground, is Painted with Carrara Paint.

The Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, one of the most magnificent hotels in the world is painted entirely with the world famous Carrara Paint.

Pennsylvania R. R. Co.; Pullman Palace Car Company; Chicago Telephone Company; Central Union Telephone Company; Field Museum, Chicago; Kenwood Club, Chicago; Cincinnati Southern; C. & E. I. R. R. Co.; Denver & Rio Grande R. R.; Wellington Hotel, Chicago.

From railroad box car to elegantly furnished general offices of the great railways; from race track fences and stables to fancy club house; from plain brick walls and stone fences to tin roofs and interior finish of stately hotels, from country barn or hay shed or cheap outbuilding to farm residence, suburban home or luxurious city residence, Carrara is used because it lasts longer, never fades, never cracks, never blisters, never peels, covers more surface than the highest priced paints and costs less than the cheap mixed paints that injure instead of protect. There is but one Carrara. It is made by the Carrara Paint Agency, 288 Carrara Works, Barberton, Ohio, and anyone having a house to paint should send for 50 sample colors, free, of this great paint that has stood the most rigid tests for 25 years, and bear in mind that it is the only paint ever manufactured that is backed by a positive guarantee in every case. Write to-day and save half your paint bills in the future.

$45 TOLMAN RANGES $21.75 with reservoir and high closet. Great Foundry Sale. We ship range for examination without a cent in advance. If you like it, pay $21.75 and freight and take range for

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

If not satisfactory we agree to refund your money. Tolman Ranges are made of best wrought steel. Oven 17"x21" in. Six 8 in. holes. Best bakers and roasters on earth. Burn anything. Asbestos lined flues.

Guaranteed 5 years.

Will save their cost in fuel in One Year. Write today for our new catalogue.

JUDSON A. TOLMAN CO.

Dept. R17, 66 Lake St., Chicago.

$12.98 STEEL RANGE.

For $12.98 without reservoir or shelf; $17.98 with reservoir, high shelf and closet, exactly as illustrated, we sell this big steel range that others advertise and sell at $25.00 to $35.00. We undersell everyone in stoves and ranges. Write for FREE Stove Catalogue. Address,

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE TO AGENTS

Flat thin knife cuts loose a perfect cake. #2 Outfit Free Exp. prepaid. Dept. T. HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, Chicago, Ill., or Buffalo, N. Y.

Venezuela's Rebellion Spreading

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 311

for a fall, and that he is now near his last hurdle, and that some foreign power will soon step in and make Venezuela behave decently, as a sovereign nation should, with consideration of herself and others. Unless something of this nature be done, and done effectively, there is nothing to promise that any one of a future series of dictators will be a better or an abler man than Castro.

The latest reports from the Caribbean Sea show a general outbreak of revolutionary activity, and several successes for the followers of General Matos. A revolutionary general named Riera, who landed from the Libertador, has a considerable following in the vicinity of Vela de Coro, and purposes to unite under one command the revolutionary bands which are numerous in that part of the country. It is believed that with these united forces General Riera will have a formidable body of men, which will become the main factor in the revolt. On March 13 and 15, the Libertador landed men and munitions of war at two or three points on the Venezuelan coast, and with the aid rendered by the Matos vessel, the revolutionists have taken the towns of Cariaco, Juan Griego on Margarita Island and the port of Guanta. The latter port was retaken by the government troops, but the revolutionists succeeded in holding Juan Griego, and promise to take possession of all of Margarita Island. Other towns of minor importance are reported to be in the hands of the revolutionists.

It now appears that General Castro himself is about to take the field against the insurgents. Such action on his part will greatly stimulate the efforts of the Venezuelan army, but he is so unpopular in Caracas that it is freely asserted there he will never return to the Venezuelan capital as President of the Republic should he once give his enemies an opportunity to establish their authority at Caracas instead of his own.

New York, March 19, 1902.

"THE LONG JUJU"

Heathen Africa's Religious Centre, and the Hideous Orgies Practised There

FOR many years, travelers and others visiting certain parts of the West Coast of Africa, had heard of "the Long Ju-Ju." Though none had seen it, it was believed to be a place of heathen sacrifice. Quite recently, the Aro expedition was reputed to have discovered and captured the Ju-Ju. The account reveals a condition of affairs that seems unimaginable, even in heathen Africa. A member of the expedition wrote as follows:

The approach to the Long Ju-Ju is through dense bush, which gradually becomes thicker and thicker until one arrives at the entrance of a deep, oval-shaped pit, seventy feet deep, sixty yards long, and fifty yards wide. One then climbs down the precipitous sides of the rock into a narrow gorge and into running water, up which one wades, passing under two fences, until one finally comes to a place where the water comes out of the solid rock in two big streams, which unite below a small island on which are two altars, one made of many trade guns, stuck muzzle downwards into the ground and topped with skulls, the other being of wood, and supporting more skulls, bones, feathers, blood, eggs, and other votive offerings to the Ju-Ju, including the head of the last victim. Over the rock, where is the source of the water, is a roof of human skulls with a curtain. On the left of the entrance, has been hewn out of the rock a flat-topped ledge for sacrificial purposes. On the left of the exit lies another pile of human skulls, and other relics of Ju-Ju rites, and the last sacrifice—a white goat trussed up in the branches of a palm tree and starving to death. Everything which is sacrificed, such as cattle, goats, fowls, etc., must be white. The High Priest of the oracle, who, it appears, is swathed in clothes, is usually out of sight, and addresses the pilgrims in an impressive monotone, having previously been made cognizant of every detail concerning the supplicants and their disputes by a sort of fetish Freemasonry, which certainly extends as far as the limits of Southern Nigeria. The conducting of a visitor to the Ju-Ju is usually a somewhat lengthy process, and when he arrives in its proximity, he is led by a circuitous route and finally marched into the place backwards.

It would seem to be a fair estimate to put the number of pilgrims down at about 500 annually, all of whom pay dearly for the advice or decree which is vouchsafed to them. Probably the number of human sacrifices does not reach a total of fifty per annum, while about 200 people are sold into slavery, and the remainder are allowed to go away free.

SUNDRY CHARITIES

The following sums have been contributed by our readers for the support of the worthy causes mentioned below:

Bethesda Home
S J Kempton 2 00
Foreign Missions
Mrs Wm Gould 3 00
Class in So. Farnsworth Bapt S S 54
The Messiahs S S
Toby, Pa 1 50
Laotto, Ind 1 50
A Friend, Lebanon Spgs, N Y 40 00
Herman Dierks 5 15

Any Good Cause
J Scott 50
J W Forney 5 00
Katharine Paris 10
Mrs J Francis 10
J W Cowgill 5 00
Mrs Annie L Lowry 50
Mrs Rose Alverson 50
Mrs C M Edmunds 1 00
Miss A Whiteley 40
Mrs R Mitchell 15
Mrs S A Webster 15
P S Thorne 15
Theo M Shearer 2 50
M E Lewcock 2 50
Miss A A Richards 2 43
J H Loar 2 00
J M Kampman 1 00
Chas L Chapman 50
Mrs S A Talbot 50
R I Mercer 25
Mrs W A Wagner 15
W B Maxwell 50
S C Duvall 10 50
Mrs Peter Gilsey 50
E B Barker 50
J C Bowman 2 00
Sarah Blanchard 15
H L Shomo 15
Jennie D Drumm 15
Wm Budeker 15
Mrs C F Kessler 15
J C Rogers 15
Mrs S C Brown 15
C N McFarren 15
J H Cole 15
Mrs L Greenough 15
Mrs J Barger 1 00
Mrs G Beckwith 10
E G Essex, N Y 1 90

Home Missions
— Laotto, Ind 1 50
Mrs Rose H Lathrop
Jennie Kirk 50

Ferry McAuley's Mission
A Friend, Rankin, Ill 2 00
Eliz Hunter 1 00

Mayesville Institute
Ellen Collins 30 00

Emilio Olsson's South American Work
H Farnsworth 1 00
I H N, N Y City 1 00
Wm Kraemer 2 00
D W Ross 1 00
W A Ullery 50

Corinna Shattuck's Orphan Work in Oorfa
Mrs Geo E King 15 00
Miss Grace Meairs 15 00

The Girls' Missionary Guild, 1st Church of Ottawa, Ill 30 00
People of Cong'l Ch. Mansfield, Mass 40 00

Edwin M Richards, East Africa
J V Roberts 10 00
Rev C Vahlsing 10 00
—, Rochelle, Ill 150 00

Pundita Ramabai, Poona, India

Mary E Barrett 5 00
Miss Stone Ransom Fund

Edw G Sharp 1 00
Mrs Jane Nelson 2 00
Frieda Wittlig 1 00
I H N, Hennepin, Ill 2 00
A T Moore 1 00

Two Readers, Ma-nown, Pa 2 00
E La Grove 3 50
E P Reichele 15
Susan M Reeder 1 00
Anna Needham 1 00
Friend, Greensboro, N C 1 00

Mrs J P B, Topeka, Kans 2 00
Mrs E O Shipman 1 00
Mrs E Rudolph 50
Harold Hollister 20
Mrs M M Conkling 50
—, Owatonna, Minn. 1 00

A Sympathizer, Boyertown, Pa 1 00
Mrs J W Horn and Mrs Frank Bean 2 00
Mary A Bowles 2 50
Mrs Paul Hansen 40
A O Stewart 1 00
Mrs I V Bryant 1 00
Sarah F Russ 1 00
Mrs C Clark 10 00
Maria Dalton 1 00

For Education of Miss Keskia
E Grunstead 50
J Barlow 25

Erzeroum Earthquake Sufferers
Jr E Society, Hannibal Square, Fla. 1 00
Miss E J Clark 5 10
—, Toronto, Can 1 00

Miss M E Remington, Buffalo, N. Y.
Mr & Mrs A J Clever 15 00

Rev & F Matthews, Kingston, N Y
Jacob Broadhaeker 10
Mrs. Bird (for clothing for a poor boy)
A Mother, Sayville, N Y 2 00

Leper Hospital, Manila, P I
A Reader, New Castle, Pa 1 00
Mrs Reed 50
R C White 2 00

Flower and Fruit Hospital, Wroq St., N. Y.
Jennie K Evans 1 00

Rev K A Jansson Mission
M H Loolovian 1 00
I H N, Weston 30
S B H, N Y City 4 00
Byron Ingalls 1 00

Boer Family Fund
Wm A Wolfe 10 00
Steele Orphanage, Chattanooga, Tenn
A Friend of the Poor East Berne, N Y 5 00

Hull House, Chicago, Ill
A Friend of the Poor East Berne, N Y 5 00
Salvation Army Xmas Fund
Mr & Mrs J L Mulder 1 00
King's Daughters Settlement, Henry St., —, Duncan, Ariz 2 50
Mr & Mrs D L Hartman 2 00
Mrs Thos Dunning 2 50
A Friend of the Poor East Berne, N Y 5 00

Five Points Mission, New York
L Dietrick 1 00
Miss Susan Dietrick 1 00
The White Door, —, Duncan, Ariz 2 50
Mr & Mrs D L Hartman 2 00
Mrs Thos Dunning 2 50
A Friend of the Poor East Berne, N Y 5 00
Porto Rico Sunday School
C E Society, Lincolnville, Ind 5 00

Penny wise and pound foolish,—the women who "economize" by using cheap washing powders. Few cents saved in price; fifty times as much lost in damage to clothes. The chances are that cheap powders are useless or dangerous. Many proved so. None works like PEARLINE, which is more economical,—does more,—saves more,—risks nothing. 658 Pearline—laundry wisdom

Dirt and Disease=Germs

cannot exist where Banner Lye is used. It is not ordinary lye; there is nothing like it.

It is recognized in public institutions, hotels, restaurants, households, offices, etc., as the best cleaner and disinfectant; far superior to costly disinfectants.

Banner Lye

will destroy everything foul and dangerous. In corners of the house, that are hard to keep clean wash with a little Banner Lye. Use it in Sinks, Toilets, Commodes, Slop Jars, and by all means in Cuspidors

In the laundry soak the soiled wash in water to which a little Banner Lye has been added.

In the kitchen use it for cleaning grease and dirt from all utensils—add a little Banner Lye to the dish water.

SOAP Refuse grease from the kitchen can be made into the best hard soap in ten minutes, without odor or boiling. One can of Banner Lye makes ten pounds hard soap or twenty gallons soft soap.

At your druggist's or grocer's. If you can't get it send for book, and tell us who your grocer or druggist is. The Penn Chemical Works, Philadelphia, U.S.A.

On Jellies preserves and pickles, spread a thin coating of PURE REFINED PARAFFINE Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package. Sold everywhere. STANDARD OIL CO.

The IDEAL Steam Cooker Cooks a whole meal over one burner gasoline, oil, gas, or common cooking fuel. REDUCES FUEL BILLS ONE-HALF Makes tough meats tender. vents steam and odors. Holds 12 one-quart jars in canning fruits. White enamel when Cooker needs more water. See less copper bottom and sides. Also make Square Cookers with doors. Send for illustrated catalogue. We pay express. Agents wanted. TOLEDO COOKER CO., Box 16, Toledo, Ohio.

$3.90 KITCHEN CABINET Size 27 x 42, height, 30 inches. Made of select material, nicely finished; has two large movable bins, insect proof, each will hold 50 pounds of meal or flour. Has tight, roomy drawer and large kneading board. Send for large Catalogue House Furniture No. 26, also Refrigerator Catalogue—Factory Prices. E. H. STAFFORD & BRO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS Wanted in every county to sell Good common Transparent Nail. Pocket Knife. From $75 to $300 a month can be made. Write for terms. Novelty Cutlery Co., No. 62 Bar St., Canton, Mass.

RICH'S FAMOUS JULIA MARLOWE SHOES

A New Distinctive 1902

Without Elastic Instep With Elastic Instep

With or Without Elastic Instep

The "Julia Marlowe" stamped on shoes is a recognized guarantee for

Absolutely Correct Ladies' Footwear

It is therefore now applied to all of the various styles of high grade Boots and Oxfords made at this factory, instead of designating the "front gore" shoes only as was done heretofore.

In ordering state whether with or without elastic instep.

Look for bottom stamp and take no substitute.

Lace Boots, flexible machine sewed, $3.00
Lace Boots, hand turned, 3.50
Lace Boots, extension sole $3.50 and 4.00
Oxfords, $2.00; $2.50; $2.75

If "Julia Marlowe" shoes are not sold in your town, we will send, prepaid, on receipt of price and 25 cents.

Write for Illustrated Catalogue

THE RICH SHOE CO.
Dept. E, Milwaukee, Wis.

A New Light in the Dark Continent

THE following letter from Rev. R. Wodehouse, Umtali, Rhodesia, East Africa, will be read with pleasure by many who are interested in the work of evangelizing the Dark Continent:

I am glad to say that our new native church is finished, and regular services are being held in it. The picture sent herewith, shows the building as it now stands, with the congregation sitting outside to have their pictures taken for friends in America. Bishop Hartzell, who was paying a visit to us then, is in the centre, with Mrs. Wodehouse on the need here is great; the poor natives hear little or nothing about Jesus and his love, and they are being ruined by the cheap and poisonous drinks sold them by white men. They come down here in considerable numbers from the heathen kraals in the interior; and a great opportunity is thus offered for us to give them the truth, which they in turn, will carry back with them into the dark places of Africa, where no white men have yet been or will be for years to come. In order to help these, we want to erect—as soon as we have the means—a plain church at Beira, and put an evangelist in charge. Please thank the left, and myself on the right. We have had already a number of conversions, and I believe are on the eve of a gracious work. There are hundreds of kraals among the hills around us, and we are arranging to go out to these and get them opened up to the Gospel. The lady friend, of Augusta, Mich., for the $12, and the friend in Philadelphia, for the $10, sent in answer to a Cry from Africa.

BISHOP HARTZELL AND MR. WODEHOUSE AT THE UMTALI MISSION

What a great blessing THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is to us in this far-off mission field, we have no words to tell!

FARM, GARDEN AND GREENHOUSE

THIS is a busy season with people who are sowing and planting, and words of information and advice about seeds, plants, bulbs, fruits, vegetables and grain are timely. The following can be had, free of charge, by sending a card of request to the publishers:

A. A. Berry Co. Seed Catalogue. This book is put forth by a firm which has made grain and diversified farming a study for years. Pp. 65. A. A. Berry Co., Clarinda, Ia.

Seed and Plant Guide. A great deal of information about good things grown in the flower garden, market-farm and melon patch. Pp. 129. H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

Glenwood Nurseries' Catalogue. Ornamental shade trees, flowering shrubs, hedge plants, evergreens, clambering vines fill this book, and some good things are said about landscape gardening. Pp. 47. Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa.

Stark Fruit Book. Everybody interested in orchards should have this book. It is particularly rich in information about apple trees. Pp. 72. Stark Brothers, Chicago, Ill.

Annual Catalogue. The thirty-second issued by this firm, and a very attractive one, tells about all kinds of seeds, bulbs and plants. Pp. 101. Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia.

Parks' Floral Guide. Brimful of just such information as the flower-grower wants, from one, by reason of long experience, thoroughly competent to give such. Pp. 49. George W. Parks, Libonia, Franklin County, Pa.

Choice Water Lilies. Perhaps the only catalogue of its kind ever given to the public. Everybody will want it. George B. Moulder, Lily Park, Smith's Grove, Ky.

Annual Seed and Plant Co. Here's a tale of hollyhocks, roses, lilies, cannas, asters and other lovely things, with timely words about hanging baskets, window gardens, and rows of flourishing green things grown to eat. Pp. 97. L. Templin & Sons, Calla, O.

George H. Mellin Co. Annual, Springfield, O. From garden-lore gathered at the Innisfallen Greenhouses, this book of excellent information for flower-growers is sent forth by experienced seedsmen.

May's Catalogue of Northern Grown Seeds. A handsome and instructive pamphlet on plants, bulbs and fruits. Every farmer and gardener should see it. Pp. 112. L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Catalogue for 1902 Contains accurate descriptions of standard varieties of fruits best adapted to different sections of the country. Pp. 43. Green's Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Choice Flower Seeds. Here is a catalogue from another woman seed-grower. It is dainty, instructive and a real little treasure for the florist. Pp. 57. Miss Emma V. White, 818 Nicollet avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

New Floral Guide. Forty pages devoted to roses, yet leaves room for valuable data about other garden favorites; and small fruits find a place. Pp. 135. Connard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.

The Jews and Their Christian Neighbors

The differences in the position of Jews and Christians are depicted in the current number of the illustrated quarterly, The People, the Land and the Book. In the current issue, there is an interesting and instructive article by the Rev. Jas. Bennett, D.D., on "The Present Condition of the Jews." Richard M. Smith makes fervent appeal to Christians to hasten the "Incoming of Israel." The Rev. A. H. Gjevre points out the various glaring errors in "Christ in the Talmud." "A Glimpse into the Mystery of Creation," contains some very original ideas derived from Jewish lore. The Rev. Louis Meyer gives a brief description of "The First Jewish Settlements in North America." Added to these are a serial story with characteristic Jewish illustrations; a Hebrew tale, "The Feast of the Elect," "Selections from the Talmud," Jewish and Rabbinical Apothegms, etc. This quarterly is well worth the attention of Bible students and Sunday School Teachers, who could glean much valuable information regarding the Jews from its perusal. Price $1 per year. Address American Tract Society, Room 434, New York, N. Y.

A Plea from Barbadoes

Mrs. S. Antoinette Esterbrook, General Superintendent of the West India and South American Missions, Barbadoes, W. I., has sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD a letter describing the depressed condition of affairs on the island and the hardships encountered by the missionary workers. She writes:

God is blessing the work here spiritually. I have opened a day school (119 children) and am looking to the Father to help me through. The island is in an awful condition financially, and unless help comes from the homeland I fear I will have to give up. Bankrupts and failures every week; five last week. You can see by the papers where we are. Cannot you help us out? You know of my work here for over ten years, and many who read THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are my friends and would help. Please receive any help that comes in and send it to my treasurer, Mrs. Packer, 1805 Seventh avenue, Troy, N. Y. My day school opened January 6 with thirty-six street waifs from the school of evil and sin. Now we have 119 on the roll. Many have joined the Sunday School, and through the children, the parents have been led to the meetings and some of them to Christ. Over fifty have been received into the mission this year."

Any contributions received for Mrs. Esterbrook's missionary work will be duly forwarded.

Mellin's Food

Many a mother has found relief and comfort in the health and happiness of her babe when it was fed with Mellin's Food and fresh milk.

SEND A POSTAL FOR A FREE SAMPLE OF MELLIN'S FOOD.

Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass.

Vapo-Cresolene

AN INHALATION FOR

Whooping Cough,

Croup,

Bronchitis,

Coughs,

Grip,

Hay Fever,

Diphtheria,

Scarlet Fever,

Don't fail to use CRESOLENE for the distressing and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. For more than twenty years we have had the most conclusive assurances that there is nothing better. Ask your physician about it.

An interesting descriptive booklet is sent free, which gives the highest testimonials as to its value.

ALL DRUGGISTS.

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 180 Fulton Street, New York.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC (REGISTERED)
NEW WOOD FINISH

FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK
RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD OR METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED

A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED
MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, PINE, CHERRY, GREEN, OX-BLOOD, BLACK, BROWN, AND NATURAL (CLEAN)
IVORY & YELLOW. COLOR CARD & BOOKLET FREE

SAMPLE CAN (any color) by mail, postpaid, for 10¢

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.
DEPARTMENT C CLEVELAND, O.

QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS.

Kitchen Utensils
HAVING THIS TRADE MARK

AGATE
NICKEL-STEEL WARE

WE MAKE 1500 KINDS
ARE SAFE.

We claim Purity and Safety, and substantiate this claim with Chemists' Certificates

By the Blue Label used only by us (and fully sustained by recent U. S. Circuit Court decision) passed on every piece of genuine Agate Nickel-Steel Ware. Booklet showing facsimile of this label, etc., mailed free to any address.

Agate Nickel-Steel Ware is sold by the leading Department and Housefurnishing Stores.

Lalanc & Grosjean Mfg. Co.,
New York, Boston, Chicago.

The KHOTAL is a gas range for city or country homes, small, compact and powerful; burns without smoke, soot or smell; generates its own gas from ordinary kerosene; economical in first cost and maintenance. Prices from $3.75 upwards. Send for catalogue.

HYDROCARBON BURNER COMPANY
196 Fulton Street, New York City

DON'T SET HENS the same old way when our new plan beats it 10 times.

100 Egg Hatcher Costs Only $2. Over 94,000 in use. Thousands of sets of incubators and 100,000 eggs hatched. Put your work Big profits. Catalog and the Egg Formula FREE! Write today.

Natural Her Incubator Co., B 84, Columbus, N. Y.

A Flying-Machine at Last

Scientific kite-flying within the reach of all. A marvel of simplicity. Any boy or girl can fly it. Tandems delight both young and old.

Special Introductory Size by Mail, 10c., 3 for 25c.

Agents wanted everywhere

Zimmerman Flying-Machine Co.
28 Wood St., Fremont, Ohio.

GO-CARTS DIRECT FROM THE FACTORY

SAVE 1/4 to 1/2 by buying Baby Carriages and Go-Carts direct from the manufacturer. WE SELL DIRECT TO THE CONSUMER AT FACTORY PRICES. This handsome COMFORT SLEEPER, made from imported reed, strong, durable, lasting. SENT UNDER RECENT OF $8.00. Write for Catalogue showing fifty late styles.

E. F. PAHL & CO., 30 ST., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

$15.05 STEEL MILL
For $15.05 we sell the HIGHEST GRADE, STRONGEST, LIGHTEST RUNNING AND BEST PUMPING STEEL WINDMILL $14.30

highest grade and strongest all steel windmill TOWER. Every mill covered by a BINDING GUARANTEE. FOR GREAT-EST WINDMILL OFFER EVER MADE, cut this ad. out and mail to

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

1.50—REDUCED PRICES

To introduce for cash where I have no agent

$5.00 Square Tuba . . . $3.25
Double Wall Tuba . . . $5.75
$12.50 Double Wall Ideal $8.00

IRWIN'S BATH CABINETS

Best and most convenient. Enjoy Turkish Bath in your own home. No medicine or hot water. Known for its excellence, speed and cheapness.

Fine Cabinet on payment of $1.50. Agents Wanted. One sold 1,000 in four months.

R. W. S. IRWIN, 111 Chambers St., New York.

DUPLEX MACHINE

The only successful field fence maker. Ball Bearing. Automatic. Simple. Life-lasting.

A Child Can Operate It.

A level headed boy can take it apart and put it together. It makes most perfect Fence at Cost of Wire.

Machine sent on Trial. Plain and Barbed Wire at Wholesale Prices. Catalogue Free.

KITSELMAN BROTHERS,
Box D 54, Muncie, Indiana.

RUGS BIG MONEY MADE AT HOME

Weaving Rugs and Carpets. NO EXPERIENCE NEEDED

$1 A DAY Easily Made

Particulars & Loan Book 2 for Stamp.

REED MFG. CO., SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Ornates and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Prevents Dandruff & hair falling.

60c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

SHYNEY-SHYNE SILVER POLISH

Polishes to acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful brass. Once used, always used. We want a million orders. By mail, 15c. Ten boxes, 25c. Till June 1st send package of flower seeds free with each box.

THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio Dept. C.

Agent's Outfit Free.—"Success" Nurturing Grater—only perfect grater. Send for large catalog now, seeds, fast growers, free.

RICHARDSON MFG. CO. Dept. 6, Bath, N. Y.

COFFEE TOOK IT.

Robbed the Doctor of His Cunning.

"I was compelled to drink some Java coffee yesterday morning and suffered so much from its effects that I feel like writing you at once. I am 61 years old and for a great many years have been a coffee drinker. My nerves finally got into a terrible condition and for about two years I suffered with sinking spells and was so nervous that it seemed as though I could hardly live. I suffered untold agonies. My heart would stop and my kidneys gave me no end of trouble.

About six months ago I gave up coffee for good and began using Postum. I insisted on knowing that it was properly made by being sufficiently boiled, and I prefer a cup of rich Postum to Java, Mocha, or any other coffee.

My sinking spells have left me, my head gives me no trouble now, the kidneys are greatly improved, and, in fact, I feel a great change in my whole body. It is such a comfort to be well again.

I know a physician in San Antonio who had become so nervous from the use of coffee that his hand trembled so badly that he could not hold a lancet, or even take a splinter out, and could scarcely hold anything in his hand. Finally he quit coffee and began using Postum. Now the doctor's nervousness is all gone and he is in good health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich

Baby's Go=Cart

The Bloch reclining go-cart makes the baby (or older child) more comfortable; makes less work for the mother; is better-looking; is better built; it takes up less room; it is better in every way than any other go-cart or baby-carriage. It is go-cart and baby-carriage put together.

BLOCH is stamped on every Bloch go-cart. Get a Bloch of your dealer if he has it, or of us if he won't get it for you.

You will have the best go-cart and baby-carriage in town, and it won't cost you so much as a baby-carriage alone.

We ship to any part of the United States and we pay the freight. Send for book.

PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY
Eighth and Spring Garden, Philadelphia

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish Steel Wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co. Quincy, Ill.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets, under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Racine than all others together. Write for catalogue. RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box 4, Racine, Wisconsin

$26.50 BUYS A BUGGY

(with top $33.50) of very superior QUALITY, STYLE and DURABILITY. Entire output of two manufacturers for home, sold direct to consumers. We include our full line of Buggies, Carriages, Harness, and other vehicles, shown on approval. WE DON'T COMPLY WITH A SAVED DEALER'S PROFIT.

Money back if not satisfied. Send for CATALOGUE and SPECIAL OFFER. UNION BUGGY COMPANY, 262 Saginaw Street, Pontiac, Mich.

The Life of the Wheel depends upon the make of the wheel.

ELECTRIC WHEELS last almost forever. Fit any wagon, straight or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 186, Quincy, Ill.

$75 Month and Expenses: no experience needed; position permanent; self-seller. PEASE MFG. CO., Station A, Cincinnati, O.

SIGNS of SONSHIP*

How Men May Know Whether They have Been Converted and Become Children of God

ANY person desiring to know if he is saved, need not be long in uncertainty. The New Testament supplies abundant means for testing the spiritual condition. Men who have led a wicked life, but have repented, and have become Christians, are usually not much troubled with doubts as to the genuine nature of their conversion. The contrast between their present disposition and conduct with those of their former life, shows clearly enough that they have passed from death to life. It is different, however, with persons who were reared in Christian homes, and were mercifully preserved from falling into gross sin. In some instances (Would that there were more of them!), parents have so carefully instilled into the child's mind the principles of Christianity, that from the earliest years there has been a purity of life and a love for Christ, that no marked change can be noted by the memory in the years that have since passed. Such persons, hearing others describe the sudden joy and peace that filled their hearts when they gave themselves to the Saviour, are often disturbed by the consciousness that nothing so decisive has occurred in their lives, and they are naturally sceptical about the reality of a conversion which must have been imperceptible.

For the comfort and assurance of such persons there are signs given in many parts of the New Testament by which they may know whether they have indeed become children of God. These relate to present experience and are much more reliable than a past experience, which may not have produced the effect it was supposed to have done. Just as a man on a voyage may be quite sure, from the aspect of the heavens, by the difference in the seasons, and by the appearance of unfamiliar objects that he is in the Southern Hemisphere, though he may have been asleep when the ship on which he sailed crossed the Equator—so the soul may know that it is in the Kingdom of God, though it may not remember the act of entering it. Just as surely may a man who is living in conscious sin be certain that he is not in the Kingdom, though he can recall a time in his past history when agonies of sorrow and penitence for sin and anxiety for salvation gave place to peace and rest in faith.

The signs all relate to being not to doing. Not that good works are ignored. They are accepted and rewarded when they proceed from a changed nature. In fact, we have a right, when we see a barren life, to doubt whether a change of nature has taken place. The change so surely leads to good works, that it could not have occurred without producing them. But good works can never earn an entrance into the Kingdom; they are the outward and visible signs of the inward change which does insure entrance. Paul's grand test is in Romans 8: 14: "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." It involves a spirit in unison with God, and is the spirit of Christ. There is a list in Galatians 5: 22, 23, of the fruits produced by this Spirit. They are not fruits that grow naturally from the soil of the human heart. If they are present in the soul and in the life, we may be sure that there has been a transformation, a new birth, or they would not be there. "Men do not gather grapes of thorns nor figs of thistles." So Christ said, and John states a similar truth when he says (1. John 3: 14), that we may know that we have passed from death to life because we love the brethren. The life and example of Christ become the pattern of the renewed soul, the maxims and principles of the world cease to exert the controlling influence that they formerly had, and the soul is under a new law and a new impulse, which raise it nearer and nearer to the perfect model of Christ. So in spite of imperfections, in spite of failures, a man may know whether or not he is in the Kingdom by the condition of his own soul, which should be permeated with the spirit of Christ.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society for April 20. John 8: 32; 1. John 3: 14; Rom. 8: 1-16.

DEALER

They All Hang TOGETHER

and have a good pull. If you buy a Buggy, Carriage, Harness or Saddle of your local dealer, you have to hold up all of these fellows. the dealer, traveling salesman, jobber, manufacturer and mechanic, as they all get a profit out of you. Seems quite a load to lift, doesn't it? When you look at the buggy it doesn't seem quite fair that you should pay so many profits, does it? If you buy one of our celebrated of us direct, you cut off three profits, as we need only the mechanic to make our goods and sell them at one small profit to ourselves. We have no use for dealer, traveling salesman or jobber. Split Hickory Vehicles are sold only by us direct. Your dealer cannot sell you one at any price nor can he sell one anywhere near as good for the price we ask for them. We know this to be true and want you to know it and that is the reason we send them 30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL anywhere on that you may have ample opportunity to prove our claims. It won't cost you a cent to try Split Hickory, as we pay freight both ways if you return it.

SPLIT HICKORY VEHICLES

This is Our No. 235.

We furnish this popular Top Buggy, with our genuine long distance, dust proof axles, longitudinal center spring, superior quick shifting shaft couplings, best quality split hickory wheels with steel rims and with quarter inch round edge steel tires, full bolted between each spoke; also our open bottom ventilated spring cushion, fine quality double braced, full leather and full iron split hickory shafts, for

$45.50

Write for handsome free catalogue of Split Hickory Buggies, Carriages, Harness and Saddles. It is free.

OHIO CARRIAGE MFG. COMPANY,
Station 54 Cincinnati, O.

MANUFACTURER

CANOPY TOP SURREY, $59.65

Full Fenders, Oil Burning Lamps, Spring Cushions, Full Bolted Wheels, 1 1/4 Steel Axles, End or Brewster Springs, Fine Finish. Every Vehicle Guaranteed Two Years. Our Complete FREE Vehicle and Harness Catalogue gives full descriptions of these and many other styles. Write for it NOW.

SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

$22.35 AT $22.35 TO $54.90

We sell high grade 1902 style buggies, direct from our Michigan and Ohio factories, the equal of buggies sold by other houses at about double our prices.

$37.95 for a handsome city Runabout or a 5-reach Concord Buggy. $45.95 for a Royal Canopy Top Surrey. $29.95 for a strong Two-Seated Two-Seated Surrey. $29.95 for a strong Two-Seated Three-Spring Wagon.

EVERY RIG COVERED BY OUR BINDING GUARANTEE. Everything in Medium and Fine Buggies, Surreys, Carriages and Wagons at proportionately low prices.

DON'T BUY ELSEWHERE until you get our Free Buggy Catalogue, mailed to any address free on application. You will be surprised at the money we can save you and the inducements we can offer. Address,

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

$43.60 Is the Price of This Buggy.

If you do not find it equal to buggies that retail for $65.00 and the best buggy you ever saw for the money and not just as described and satisfactory in every way, return it to us; we will pay freight both ways. WE DO NOT ASK FOR ANY MONEY with order. You pay for it when you get it. If you are perfectly satisfied, we warrant every buggy for two years, guarantee satisfaction, and guarantee safe delivery. WE HAVE NO AGENTS. That's Why We Save You Money.

DESCRIPTION. Wheels and gear all second growth hickory, all forged. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

$22.35

Best Oak Tan Leather.

Single Strap Harness PRICE, $11.10. 225 STYLES. of Harness to select from.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (leather trimmings $1.25 extra); top is lined with all wool top lining, back stays padded. Leather quarter top. We furnish side curtains, storm apron boot and full length Brussels carpet for bottom of body. Full Nickel Mountings if wanted. OUR VEHICLE CATALOGUE illustrates and describes the largest and most complete line of Buggies, Road Wagons, Phaetons, Surreys, Spring Wagons, Carriage, Harness and Saddles. Fly Nets ever shown in one book. IT'S FREE. SEND FOR IT. MARVIN SMITH CO., 61 N. Jefferson St., Chicago.

1000 mile Axles. Bailie Loop. Quick Shift.

No. 564

distance. Any style spring bar. Body 20, 22 or 24 in. wide, 65 in. long. (Coming body if wanted), solid panel back with springs in back cushion and seat cushion; trimmings fine broadcloth or whipcord (le

AN OBEDIENT SERVANT

Lessons in Peter's Mission for Christian Workers

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

PETER was at the disposal of the Lord. In the present day Christian workers are so in the habit of letting themselves be bound by many meetings at certain hours every week, where they are expected to lead or to take part, that if such a call came to Peter when he was yet at Joppa, were addressed to many of God's truest servants to-day, perhaps the most of them would be almost glad to have the excuse of engagements which they could not break. We all need more elasticity, and less of bondage to man, in our work for the Lord. God had in view an honest, conscientious soul, whom he wanted to join with his church. Cornelius was a Gentile and a soldier. Up to his time all the disciples of the Lord were Jews and Samaritans, with the few exceptions of the Ethiopian eunuch, the woman from Cyrene and Sidon, and the centurion of Matt. 8 and Luke 7. But Cornelius, knowing nothing of Christ, had begun to worship the true God; he feared him with all his house, gave much alms to the people, and lived a life of prayer; he "prayed to God always." It is a very real man of God who carries all his household with him.

In the first place, God sent an angel to Cornelius. A really earnest soul, who seeks after God with all his heart, is never left long without an intimation that God has heard him. The angel told him how his prayers and his alms had come up for a memorial before God, and he directed him to send to Joppa to fetch Peter, who should tell him what he should do. And God could count on Peter obeying him. Cornelius had often prayed to God; it was his daily practice, and no doubt he had experienced many answers to prayer; yet God was still unknown to him. But now he had received a message from God directed to him, and without delay he did exactly as he was told.

While God uses his instruments he educates them; if it were otherwise their work could be their ruin. And this is, indeed, the danger of many who do not give God time to speak to them in the midst of their work, and who, when means fail, instead of seeking to learn the lesson God would teach by such an experience, say and write hard things to those against whom they judge to be able to help them. There is deep and precious education in all the special trials which our work for God entails. There was in Peter a narrowness which disabled him from being fully adapted for the service to which God called him. Knowing that the Jews were the chosen people of God, and having as yet no light on the mystery which had been hid from ages and generations (Rom. 15: 25), the church of God in this dispensation, Peter was no fit instrument to tell a Gentile of the race of God. But just as the messengers of Cornelius drew near to Joppa, he who had sent an angel to Cornelius sent a vision to Peter.

Peter did not understand the vision, but waited, willing to learn. The vision was three times presented to him, and just while he was in a much perplexity of mind to know what God meant by it, for he recognized in it that God was speaking to him, the three messengers of Cornelius stood at the door.

God did not leave his willing servant long in a perplexity; the Spirit said unto him, "Be bold, three men seek thee. But arise, and get thee down, and go with them, nothing doubting; for I have sent them." This was enough: however much he might have to learn or to learn, Peter could trust that well-known voice to direct him. What a lesson for all! How ready was this man to throw away the prejudices which had grown up with him, and which were in his blood! How really newness of life, the very life of God, had superadded in him the life of the flesh! He called in the Gentile messengers, and lodged them, and on the morrow accompanied them to Caesarea. On their arrival, a great preparation had been made for Peter. It was not a feast, but a gathering of hungry, seeking souls, the kinsmen and near friends of Cornelius. A messenger from God, such as he had had, and a messenger from God whom he had sent, were not to be slighted. Other souls than his own were in need, and the large-hearted Gentile opened his doors to all whom he could bring together, that they might share with him what his soul thirsted for—a real, personal knowledge of God.

It was a promising field of labor, and Peter, in his willing learning of the lesson taught him by God in the vision, was the laborer now fitted for the task. He was not ashamed to own what he himself had only just learned. A man in whom the life of Christ has full play is not ashamed to own his ignorance. Peter then asked in all frankness the reason for which Cornelius had sent for him. This drew forth the story of his vision, and of the direction he had had from the angel to send for Peter, and he concluded his account by saying, "Now, therefore, we are all here present in the sight of God, to hear all things that have been commanded thee of the Lord."

"I have earned $10.00"

THE Pennsylvania boy whose photograph is shown in this advertisement earned $10.00 in a few weeks selling THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. Hundreds of other boys all over the country are making as much money as this boy—some make more. Any bright boy who reads this notice can do the same. It will not interfere with school hours. You need no capital to start. We will send 10 copies the first week free, which you can sell for 5 cents each. This will provide you with capital to order the next week's supply, which will be furnished at wholesale prices.

$200.00

In Extra Prizes each month to boys who sell 15 copies, or more, each week

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

almost sells itself. You can get your relatives and friends to promise to take it regularly, and all you have to do is to deliver the magazines each week. Write to-day for booklet containing photographs of some of our most successful boys, with letters telling how they work. If you wish to begin at once selling the magazines say so, and we will send the 10 free copies.

Circulation Bureau, THE CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

This is our Famous Catalogue. It can be found in over two million homes of thinking people. Is it in yours?

Why Not Start Now?

Spring is at hand and you will need supplies of all kinds. If you are a progressive, up-to-date buyer, go slow and place your order where you will get biggest returns for your dollar.

HAVE YOU EVER TRIED MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

of Chicago? Perhaps you have long intended to, but never knew how to begin. Why not start now? Our Catalogue No. 70, revised for Spring and Summer, is just out, our building is piled from basement to roof with good things—the very best our active buyer could gather in the best markets; every employee in our big establishment is ready and waiting to serve you to the best of his or her ability—just as though you were shopping over our counters. We've been preparing for this event all winter, and believe that there never was a better opportunity for shrewd, active buyers to start purchasing on our wholesale prices—no middlemen—one profit plan. The Spring and Summer edition of

CATALOGUE NO. 70 IS NOW READY. Over 1000 pages packed with the good things of life—everything you use—gathered by our buyers from the markets of the world. Page after page of high grade merchandise, all illustrated and honestly described.

SEEMS TO US THAT YOU OUGHT TO HAVE A COPY. We want you to have one—so much so that we will furnish the book free and pay one-half the postage if you will pay the rest, fifteen cents. There are so many people in this country bubbling over with curiosity, or trying to get something for nothing, that we are compelled to make this trivial charge. It is only fifteen cents but it assures us that you are acting in good faith and are interested in our business. Why not ask for it today, before you forget it?

Montgomery Ward & Co., • Chicago

$3.98 buys our BREECH LOADING, AUTOMATIC SHELL EJECTING SHOTGUN. The Long Range Winner, one of the strongest shooting and best made 12 gauge shotguns made equal to guns others sell at $7.00 to $10.00.

$3.98

SEND US $3.98 and we will send this gun to you with the understanding if it is not the most wonderful gun bargain you ever heard of, you can return it to us at our expense and we will return your $3.98.
$14.95 buys our HAMMERLESS DOUBLE BARREL BAR
LOCK PISTOL GRIP SHOTGUN. The genuine
COLTON, equal to guns others sell at $25.00 to $30.00. Write for FREE GUN CATALOGUE. Address,
SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

YOU DYE IN 30 MINUTES

Solids and faded clothing of all kinds made to look like new with the celebrated
TONK'S FRENCH DYES
So simple a child can use them, being twice the strength of other dyes, carpets and rugs retain their brightness for years, as the colors are permanent and will not freeze, boil or wash out.
To insure them give your dealer's name and we will send you 6 large packages of TONK'S, or 12 if you like, any color. Say whether for wool or cotton.
Write quick, catalogue and color card free. Agents wanted.
FRENCH DYE CO., Box 426, Vassar, Mich.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

An answer to every movement made by the body is found in the action of President Suspender. All strain is relieved. No other suspender is built on the same principle as

PRESIDENT SUSPENDER

Every pair is guaranteed. Look for "President" on the buckles. Trimmings cannot rust. New model now ready for men of heavy work; also small size for youths. The price is 50c. If the nearest dealer can't supply you, send the price direct to us and receive a pair of new design by mail postpaid.

C. A. EDGARTON MFG. CO., Box 209, Shirley, Mass.

2 BATTERY CALL TELEPHONES for $5.50

Guaranteed good for 600 feet metallic circuit

2 GENERATOR CALL TELEPHONES for $8.50

Good for 3 miles single iron wire, batteries included.
Sent C.O.D. if $1.00 is sent with order for express charges.

Telephones guaranteed satisfactory or money refunded. FARR & FARR, 106 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

IF you are not convinced from my previous advertising that my system of Physiological Exercise will do all that I claim for it, the fault is in the advertising and not in the system itself.

When I tell you that I teach a different kind of exercise, something new, more scientific, more rational, safer and immeasurably superior to anything ever before devised, I am but repeating what thousands of prominent men and women are saying for me who have profited by my instructions. What is so strong as the testimony of others?

Mr. J. Logan Jones, Vice-President and Secretary of Jones Dry Goods Co., of Kansas City, Mo., after years of gradual but certain decline physically and mentally, had a complete collapse. It was impossible for him to sleep without medicine and he went without natural sleep for the period of about ten months. He tried the best physicians to be had, traveled almost constantly, being unable to remain long in one place; took hunting trips in Colorado and a sea-coast trip to Northern Maine, with no appreciable results. He had been constipated for sixteen or seventeen years and had to take physic constantly, never having a natural action. The following is an extract from a recent letter to me: "A little over ten months ago I took my first exercise from you, and under the circumstances consider the transformation a positive miracle. Will say that I am getting to be quite a giant. I weigh more than I have ever weighed in my life, and my muscular development is something wonderful. I sleep soundly, my digestion is good, constipation a matter of ancient history, and do more work than I ever did and enjoy it all the time." What could be more convincing, and do you wonder that he is enthusiastic? I could name hundreds of others who have received similar results but it would not make the system any better. But if you will follow my instructions for a few weeks I promise you such a superb muscular development and such a degree of vigorous health as to forever convince you that intelligent direction of muscular effort is just as essential to success in life as intelligent mental effort. No pupil of mine will need to digest his food with pepsin nor assist nature with a dose of physic. I will give you an appetite and a strong stomach to take care of it; a digestive system that will fill your veins with rich blood; a strong heart that will regulate circulation and improve assimilation; a pair of lungs that will purify your blood; a liver that will work as nature designed it should; a set of nerves that will keep you up to the standard of physical and mental energy. I will increase your nervous force and capacity for mental labor, making your daily work a pleasure. You will sleep as a man ought to sleep. You will start the day as a mental worker capable. I can promise you all of this because it is common sense, rational and just as logical as that study improves the intellect.

I have no book, no chart, no apparatus whatever. My system is for each individual; my instructions for you would be just as personal as if you were my only pupil. It is taught by mail only and with perfect success, requires but a few minutes' time in your own room just before retiring, and it is the only one which does not overtax the heart. I shall be pleased to send you free valuable information and detailed outline of my system, its principles and effects, together with testimonial letters from pupils.

ALOIS P. SWOBODA
355 Western Book Building, Chicago

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1902, BY LOUIS KLOPFER

THE LAME LEADING THE BLIND—A STREET SCENE IN TANGIER

Like many others in Morocco, the blind beggar has had his eyes burned out for stealing. His team-mate, the cripple, hobbles about, leading him with a string. The scene is from a photograph by Missionary Frederick Weiss, taken specially for THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

FREE TOURS TO PALESTINE

Spend Your Christmas in Bethlehem

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is now negotiating with one of the foremost Tourist Agencies in the world, with a view to affording to a limited number of our subscribers the life opportunity of a Free Tour to Palestine, so timed as to include spending Christmas in Bethlehem.

The party is expected to leave New York City early in November, on one of the finest Transatlantic steamers afloat, and will take the southerly course, thus assuring balmy weather, and a delightful passage through the Straits of Gibraltar. It will stop long enough, however, at Gibraltar, to visit the Signal Station, and the celebrated Moorish Tower. Then proceed on the lovely blue Mediterranean, through to Naples, where a day will be spent in this, the most beautiful city of Southern Italy, reserving sightseeing, however, for a more protracted visit on the way home.

Leaving Naples by rail for Brindisi, the party arrives at the famous Hotel International in time for a fine dinner and a good rest before embarking for Alexandria, in Egypt, where we set foot for the first time on the Continent of Africa. Here we see Pompey's Pillar, and the site of Cleopatra's Needle, and visit the Bazaars and the historic monuments; then take an afternoon train for Cairo, where we arrive in the evening. Cairo is a very unique city. Part of it is modernized, with spacious boulevards and palatial hotels; but there still remains the mediæval quarter, the city of Aladdin and the Arabian nights. The Bazaars are exceedingly interesting, especially the Carpet Bazaar, where Turks and Persians, in picturesque costume, exhibit rugs of the largest sizes and finest qualities. Then the Silk Bazaar, with the richest fabrics of the East, with priceless shawls from India, Cashmere and Damascus; and finally, the quaint shops of the Metal Workers and Armorers.

We spend a few days in Cairo, visiting the house in which it is reputed Mary and Joseph and the infant Jesus found refuge after their flight from Herod; also seeing the Citadel, the Mosques, the Obelisk of Heliopolis, the Pyramids, the silent Sphinx, the Tombs of the Caliphs. Thence by rail on to Port Said, by way of Ismailia and the Suez Canal. If the programme be not changed, Sunday, December 21, will be our first Sabbath in Palestine. We will spend that sacred day in Jaffa, where Jonah took ship and Peter had his vision on the roof of the "house of Simon the tanner." A dwelling is still pointed out on one of the principal streets, as the veritable house in which Peter sojourned and the identical well from which he drank. Then on to Jerusalem, which now has a population of 50,000. The city is enclosed by walls thirty-five feet high, having thirty-four doors and eight gates, six of the latter being open and two closed. After visiting Golgotha, or the place of the skull, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the Garden Tomb, said to be the Tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, the site of Solomon's Temple, now occupied by the Mosque of Omar, the Mount of Olives, the house of Caiaphas, the Tombs of the Judges and the Kings, Solomon's Quarries, the Pool of Siloam and Garden of Gethsemane, we travel six miles on Wednesday afternoon by easy coaches and reach Bethlehem, the city of Christ's birth, on the anniversary night of his Nativity. We linger in the Church of the Nativity, built over a cave or grotto in the hillside, which is universally believed to be the actual place of our Lord's birth.

Coming back to Jerusalem after having spent Christmas day in Bethlehem, we go to the village of Bethany, and see the house of Martha and Mary, an old tower called the "Castle of Lazarus," and the traditional Tomb of Lazarus. Vines, figs and olives cluster on the nearer hill slopes, amid luxuriant gardens and grain-fields. Next we visit the Dead Sea and the River Jordan, particularly the Pilgrims' Bathing-Place, bringing away with us as a souvenir of the visit, an hermetically sealed jar of Jordan water for baptismal occasions. But we have not space enough at our disposal to detail the rest of the itinerary, which includes a return to Jaffa, to Port Said and to Cairo,—spending two more days in the latter city,—back to Alexandria, then to Smyrna, where one of the Seven Churches was located, and our arrival at Constantinople and the Golden Horn, four days after leaving Alexandria. After a three days' stay in Constantinople, we sail for Athens, at which famous city we inspect the Acropolis, the Parthenon, Mars Hill, etc., leaving for Brindisi, and calling on the way at Corfu, one of the most charming and beautiful of the Ionian Islands. From Brindisi, back to Naples, where we inspect the Museum containing a marvelous collection of antiquities, bronzes, paintings, etc. We also visit the excavated ruins of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Finally, at the conclusion of this most beautiful and instructive trip in Europe, Asia and Africa, we embark at Naples for home, arriving in New York ten days after the steamer leaves the Italian port.

Would you like to be one of the fortunate persons who are selected to make up this company, to whom this personally conducted tour, with every dollar of expense paid, shall be allotted? If so, read carefully the conditions published below, and then send in your application, so that should we close the transaction with the Tourist Agency, you may be among the first enrolled.

A PARTY OF TOURISTS ASCENDING MOUNT VESUVIUS

The Object We Have in View

Our object is twofold. In the first place, we desire to largely increase the Subscription List of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and next, we wish in this practical manner to testify our gratitude toward those of our friends who will have kindly aided us in accomplishing the work we have in view.

No other paper published—and we say it in all sincerity—has been the means of doing as much good, assuaging as much sorrow, relieving as much distress at home and abroad, affording as much help to those in trouble, raising up as many friends for the friendless, or dispensing as much joy and gladness the world over, as has THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. This paper has in an especial manner been divinely prospered in its multitudinous charities, and in nearly every land under the sun there are multitudes who daily thank God for the help which, through His blessing, they have received from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and its host of readers. And we believe that even better things are in store for us, larger responsibilities to carry, greater burdens to share, more blessings to diffuse, and infinitely richer opportunities to exploit for the advancement of our Redeemer's Cause and Kingdom.

To meet the demands of this broader field, a larger subscription list is necessary, and we are earnestly laboring to have a full round Million drawing inspiration from our pages, and co-operating with us in carrying on more energetically and in a much larger measure the work which is providentially indicated for us to do. If this can be accomplished—and we sincerely believe it can—then darkness will be turned into light in many a benighted section of the globe, want will be banished in thousands of homes, and tens of thousands of unfortunates, whose cry now is, "No man careth for my soul," will have extended to them the uplifting hand that shall rescue and guide them into the paths that lead to life eternal.

Helpers Wanted to Do the Work.

So large an undertaking needs many helpers, who will enthusiastically go forth, determined to do and to win, and to secure these helpers—men, women and children—is the object of this appeal. And we ourselves are willing to do our share, to make every sacrifice within our means, to help with all the vast machinery at our disposal. We are willing to give time, thought, energy and money to the accomplishment of this great object, and it is this spirit that induces us to make the following

Extraordinarily Liberal Offer

To every one sending us ten or more subscriptions, we will pay Five Dollars in cash for every ten such subscriptions, and in this offer we include subscriptions of every character—non-premium, premium and magazine combination subscriptions—Five Dollars in cash for every ten, and, in addition to this, the persons sending us the most subscriptions by October 1st next will receive a free tour to Palestine, as described above, with all expenses paid from New York and return.

The cash commission which we pay you will keep you in funds while you work, and afford you perhaps a greater immediate income than you are now earning, and the free trip to Palestine, in addition to this cash commission, will afford you the opportunity of a life-time, entirely at our expense. Congregations may send their pastors, Sunday Schools their Superintendents, classes their teachers, as the trip is transferable.

This is a glorious opportunity, presented on a wholesale scale to a wholesale audience, and which every one stands at an even chance of winning. No one is limited to any particular territory; the whole country is your field, and your own work may be supplemented by that of your friends, wherever they live. Personal solicitation and correspondence will do the work and win the prize. A congregation may join forces in behalf of a pastor, or a Sunday School in behalf of a Superintendent, or a company of friends in behalf of one of their number.

To facilitate matters, we will accept two-years' subscription as two separate subscriptions, a three-years' subscription as three, a four years' subscription as four, and a five years' subscription as five, all subject to a cash commission of fifty cents on each year, and each year counting one separate subscription toward the prize.

All applications to join this contest must be sent in before May 1 next, and if the number of applicants is sufficient to indicate an active and widespread interest in this proposition, fuller particulars will appear in later issue. Who will be the first to apply?

Please bear in mind:

1. Should the date set prove inconvenient for any winner in the contest, such winner has the option of selecting another of three dates perhaps more convenient.

2. Should a winner in the contest find it inconvenient to make the tour to Palestine, we will pay him a full equivalent in cash. Address all communications to

The Christian Herald Palestine Contest
BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, APRIL 16, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

POPERY AND POVERTY—PALATIAL CHURCH AND PEASANT'S HOME.

PUERTO RICAN CHILDREN UNDER THE STARS AND STRIPES.

SPREADING THE LIGHT IN PUERTO RICO

The Gospel Following the Starry Flag—How the Mission at Barceloneta was Established

IN 1897, on a Sunday night, a simple Gospel service was in progress in our Caracas Mission. A lady and gentleman—evidently strangers—joined the company, and at the close of the service the senior introduced himself as from Puerto Rico, and desired a further interview. He called at our home next day, and here revealed the fact that he was a priest of the Catholic Church, having recently left his island and his Order, and declared for Protestantism in St. Thomas, where he was married. We introduced him to the study of God's Word, selling him the first Bible he had ever seen or read. About six months later he was converted, and labored with us in the Caracas Mission. This happened before the Spanish War. Our brother ex-priest always desired to return to his own people; about a year after the war, he and his wife returned to enjoy the new liberties under American rule. Our own departure soon after for the United States, and absence from our own work for nearly two years, did not allow of any extension of our Venezuelan Mission to the island.

While in the United States, we were deeply impressed by the Providences that had united Puerto Rico with our own country. We also saw that the same divine ruling had brought our Mission in Caracas into intimate touch with the evangelization of Puerto Rico through this brother, who, on his return, supported himself and family by secular employment, always giving a bold testimony for the Gospel, preaching and also living it. Beyond the new liberties and Gospel privileges, and beyond the forming of churches in the island, we saw an opportunity for the evangelization of the northern part at east of the South American continent by these Americanized Christian natives, who may be divinely called and equipped. The vast unoccupied territory of Venezuela needs such a corps of workers, as do her sister republics. We saw a missionary line direct from this island to the Orinoco Indians, by way of Caracas, and reaching out in laterals to the evangelization of the republic. It was a vision, but not more visionary than any revelation that is unfolded to the eye of faith. With renewed life, we have returned to work in these fields.

After stationing our family again on the Caracas Mission, and reinforcing it, we left over two months ago for this end of our field in Puerto Rico. One cannot but be deeply impressed by the effect of this sudden introduction of northern elements into southern society and tropical atmospheres; "Old Glory" waving over the edifices of old Spain, and the inheritance of vice, ignorance, poverty and popery, from which this island cannot be truly emancipated till a mightier power than politics or even education breaks the chain. The Gospel, in this case, is not the pioneer, but follows in the wake of the flag; yet it is, nevertheless, the regenerating force that is transforming the old into the new, and by a reactive moral influence, quickening the religious spirit of the people. Some of the natives even display a renewed devotion to their superstitions, but these the Gospel will yet dissipate and overcome.

some of the financial and other burdens of their work. Many more are waiting to be added.

What a Gospel romance could be woven from the history of these conversions! Drunkards, gamblers, neglectful, quarrelsome parents, infidels, demon-possessed Spiritists, sin-cursed homes—all transformed! Four hundred years of Pope and Spain, and no Gospel ever taught, no Gospel song ever sung. Now children's voices are carrying harmony into the homes where formerly quarrelling was only heard. Many have learned to sing the Gospel hymns by the help of the roller organ which we secured through the kindness of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

For the last two months we have been establishing an itinerary, or circuit, of six or seven towns. It was our privilege to declare the Gospel to these for the first time. Every town and hamlet has its school-house; but every town and village must also have its preaching station and its simple house dedicated exclusively to the worship of God. We know of a dozen localities that should be entered this year.

For the sake of these children (so characteristically portrayed in our photographs), will not your readers help in this work? These pictures tell their own story. That group of boys and girls are already learning to love the flag, and learning the language it represents. They are awaiting the special train bearing Governor Hunt and a large number of officials to a Washington Birthday celebration at Arecibo, singing "Columbia" with all the gusto of American boys and girls.

Fifty dollars to $150 per year will maintain a Gospel station in Puerto Rico, and the supporters can, if they choose, be in intimate touch with their adopted town, furnishing its Gospel hall with accessories, tents, etc. There is rich promise of gathering from among the converts a band of native evangelists, whom we could train in a Spanish Bible School, when provision is made for its establishment. Nothing of the kind has yet been established on this part of the globe. A missionary Bible Training School for Spanish workers for Spanish evangelization along all lines, would require an outlay of three or four thousand dollars, but it would mean untold eternal dividends.

Barceloneta, Puerto Rico.

GERARD A. BAILLY.

THE WRETCHED NATIVE HOMES OF CIALLES, CENTRAL PUERTO RICO

This is the case in Barceloneta, where we have organized our first church and gathered in the first-fruits of brother Ortiz's work in his own town and vicinity, after two years of faithful testimony. He found the people living regardless of any religion. At first he was discarded by all, and received no encouragement for about a year. Presuming that his testimony was rejected, he thought to go elsewhere; but the Lord has "turned drought into showers," for I found an abundant harvest awaiting my arrival. We baptized twenty-eight converts, and they are now an active church, bearing

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

... SERMON BY ...
Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D.D.

EXCUSES

TEXT— Luke 14: 18:

"And they all with one consent began to make excuse"

AFTER the invitations to a levee are sent out the regrets come in. One man apologizes for non-attendance on one ground, another on another ground. The most of the regrets are founded on prior engagements. So in my text a great banquet was spread, the invitations were circulated, and now the regrets come in. The one gives an agricultural reason, the other a stock-dealer's reason, the other a domestic reason. All poor reasons! The fact was, they did not want to go. "And they all with one consent began to make excuse."

So now God spreads a great banquet; it is the Gospel feast, and the table reaches across the hemispheres; and the invitations go out, and multitudes come and sit down and drink out of the chalices of God's love, while other multitudes decline coming—the one giving this apology, and the other giving that apology; "and they all with one consent begin to make excuse." I propose, so far as God may help me, to examine the apologies which men make for not entering the Christian life.

Apology the first: I am not sure there is anything valuable in the Christian religion. It is pleaded that there are so many impositions in this day, so many things that seem to be real are sham. A gilded outside may have a hollow inside; there is so much quackery in physics, in ethics, in politics, that men come to the habit of incredulity, and after a while they allow that incredulity to collide with our holy religion. But, my friends, I think religion has made a pretty good record in the world. How many wounds it has salved, how many pillars of fire it has lifted in the midnight wilderness, how many simoon-struck deserts it hath turned into the gardens of the Lord; how it hath stilled the chopped sea; what rosy light it hath sent streaming through the rift of the storm-cloud, what pools of cool water it hath gathered for thirsty Hagar and Ishmael, what manna whiter than coriander seed it hath dropped all around the camp of hardly-bested pilgrims, what promises it hath sent out like holy watchers to keep the lamps burning around deathbeds, through the darkness that lowers into the sepulchre, what flashes of resurrection morn!

A Beneficent Religion

Besides that, this religion has made so many heroes. It brought Summerfield, the Methodist, across the Atlantic Ocean with his silver trumpet to blow the acceptable year of the Lord, until it seemed as if all our American cities would take the kingdom of heaven by violence. It sent Jehudi Ashman into Africa alone, in a continent of naked barbarians, to lift the standard of civilization and Christianity. It made John Milton among poets, Raphael among painters, Christopher Wren among architects, Thorwaldsen among sculptors, Handel among musicians, Dupont among military commanders; and to give new wings to the imagination and better balance to the judgment and more determination to the will and greater usefulness to the life and grander nobility to the soul, there is nothing in all the earth like our Christian religion. Nothing in religion? Why, then, all those Christians were deceived, when in their dying moment they thought they saw the castles of the blessed; and your child, that with unutterable agony you put away into the grave, you will never see him again, nor hear his sweet voice, nor feel the throb of his young heart. There is nothing in religion? Sickness will come upon you. Roll and turn on your pillow. No relief. The medicine may be bitter, the night may be dark, the pain may be sharp. No relief. Christ never comes to the sick-room. Let the pain stab. Let the fever burn. Curse it and die. There is nothing in religion? After a while death will come. You will hear the pawing of the pale horse on the threshold. The spirit will be breaking away from the body, and it will take flight—whither? whither? There is no God, no ministering angels to conduct, no Christ, no heaven, no home. Nothing in religion? Oh, you are not willing to adopt such a dismal theory!

And yet the world is full of sceptics. And let me say there is no class of people for whom I have a warmer sympathy than for sceptics. We do not know how to treat them. We deride them; we caricature them. We, instead of taking them by the soft hand of Christian love, clutch them with the iron pinchers of ecclesiasticism. Oh, if you knew how those men had fallen away from Christianity and become sceptics, you would not be so rough on them. Some were brought up in homes where religion was overdone. The most wretched day in the week was Sunday. Religion was driven into them with a trip-hammer. They had a surfeit of prayer-meetings. They were stuffed and choked with catechisms. They were told by their parents that they were the worst children that ever lived, because they liked to ride down-hill better than to read Pilgrim's Progress. They never heard their parents talk of religion but with the corners of the mouth drawn down and the eyes rolled up. Others went into scepticism through maltreatment on the part of some who professed religion. There is a man who says: "My partner in business was conspicuous in prayer-meeting and he was officious in all religious circles; but he cheated me out of three thousand dollars and I don't want any of that religion." Then there are others who get into scepticism by a natural persistence in asking questions, why? or how? How can God be one Being in three persons? They cannot understand it. Neither can I. How can God be a complete sovereign, and yet man a free agent? They cannot understand it. Neither can I. They cannot understand why a holy God lets sin come into the world. Neither can I. They say: "Here is a great mystery; here is a disciple of fashion, frivolous and Godless all her days—she lives on to be an octogenarian. Here is a Christian mother, training her children for God and for heaven, self-sacrificing, Christ-like, indispensable, seemingly, to that household—she gets a cancer and dies." The sceptic says: "I can't explain that." Neither can I.

Transformed Sceptics

I can see how men reason themselves into scepticism. With burning feet I have trodden that blistering way. I know what it is to have a hundred nights poured into one hour. There are men in the arid desert of doubt who would give their thousands of dollars if they could get back to the old religion of their fathers. Such men are not to be caricatured, but helped, and not through their heads, but through their hearts. When these men really do come into the kingdom of God, they will be worth far more to the cause of Christ than those who never examined the evidences of Christianity. Thomas Chalmers once a sceptic, Robert Hall once a sceptic, Christmas Evans once a sceptic; but when they did lay hold of the Gospel chariot, how they made it speed ahead! If, therefore, I address men and women who have drifted away into scepticism, I throw out no scoff; I rather plead you by the memory of those good old times when you knelt at your mother's knee and said your evening prayer, and those other days of sickness when she watched all night and gave you the medicines at just the right time, and turned the pillow when it was hot, and, with hand long ago turned to dust, soothed your pains, and with that voice you will never hear again unless you join her in the better country, told you never mind—you would be better by and by; and by that dying couch where she talked so slowly, catching her breath between the words—by all those memories I ask you to come and take the same religion. It was good enough for her—it is good enough for you. Ay, I make a better plea; by the wounds and the death-throe of the Son of God, who approaches you in infinite love with torn brow and lacerated hands and whipped back, crying: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Triumphant Achievement

Other persons apologize for not entering the Christian life because of the incorrigibility of their temperament. Now, we admit it is harder for some people to become Christians than for others; but the grace of God never came to a mountain that it could not climb, or to an abyss that it could not fathom, or to a bondage that it could not break. The wildest horse that ever trod Arabian sands has been broken to bit and trace. The maddest torrent tumbling from mountain shelving has been harnessed to the mill-wheel and the factory-band, setting a thousand shuttles all a-buzz and a-clatter; and the wildest, the haughtiest, the most ungovernable man ever created, by the grace of God may be subdued and sent out on ministry of kindness, as God sends an August thunderstorm to water the wild flowers down in the grass. Peter, with nature tempestuous as the sea that he once tried to walk, at one look from Christ went out and wept bitterly. Rich harvests of grace may grow on the summit of the jagged steep, and flocks of Christian graces may find pasture in fields of bramble and rock. Though your disposition may be all a-bristle with fretfulness, though you have a temper a-gleam with quick lightnings, though your avarice be like that of the horse-leech, crying, "Give!" though damnable impurities have wrapped you in all-consuming fire—God can drive that devil out of your soul, and over the chaos and the darkness he can say: "Let there be light." Converting grace has lifted the drunkard from the ditch, and snatched the knife from the hand of the assassin, and the false keys from the burglar, and in the pestiferous lanes of the city met the daughter of sin under the dim lamplight and scattered her sorrow and her guilt with the words: "Thy sins are forgiven—go, and sin no more." For scarlet sin a scarlet atonement.

Other persons apologize for not entering the Christian life because of the inconsistencies of those who profess religion. There are thousands of poor farmers. They do not know the nature of soils nor the proper rotation of crops. Their corn is shorter in the stalk and smaller in the ear. They have ten less bushels to the acre than their neighbors. But who declines being a farmer because there are so many poor farmers? There are thousands of incompetent merchants. They buy at the wrong time. They get cheated in the sale of their goods. Every bale of goods is to them a bale of disaster. They fail after a while and go out of business. But who declines to be a merchant because there are so many incompetent merchants? There are thousands of poor lawyers. They cannot draw a declaration that will stand the test. They cannot recover just damages. They cannot help a defendant escape from the injustice of his persecutors. They are the worst impediments against any case in which they are retained. But who declines to be a lawyer because there are so many incompetent lawyers? Yet there are tens of thousands of people who decline being religious because there are so many unworthy Christians. Now I say it is illogical. Poor lawyers are nothing against jurisprudence; poor physicians are nothing against medicine; poor farmers are nothing against agriculture; and mean, contemptible professors of religion are nothing against our glorious Christianity.

An Illogical Excuse

Sometimes you have been riding along on a summer night by a swamp, and you have seen lights that kindled over decayed vegetation—lights which are called Jack-o'-lantern or Will-o'-the-wisp. These lights are merely poisonous miasmata. My friends, on your way to heaven you will want a better light than the Will-o'-the-wisps which dance on the rotten character of moribund Christians. Exudations from poisonous trees in our neighbor's garden will make a very poor balm for our wounds.

Sickness will come and we will be pushed out toward the Red Sea which divides this world from the next and not the inconsistency of Christians but the rod of faith will wave back the waters as a commander wheel his host. The judgment will come, with its thunder shod solemnities. Oh, then we will not stop and say "There was a mean Christian; there was a cowardly Christian; there was an impure Christian." In that day as now, "If thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thyself; but if thou scornest, thou alone shall bear it." Why, my brother, the inconsistency of Christians, so far from being an argument to keep you away from God, ought to be an argument to drive you to him. The best place for a skilful doctor is in a neighborhood where they are all poor doctors; the best place for an enterprising merchant to open his store is in a place where the bargain-makers do not understand their business; and the best place for you who want to become the illustrious and complete Christian—the best place for you is to come right down among us who are so incompetent and so inconsistent sometimes. Show us how. Give us an example.

Other persons apologize for not becoming Christian because they lack time. As though religion muddled the brain of the accountant or tripped the pen of the author or thickened the tongue of the orator or weakened the arm of the mechanic or scattered the briefs of the lawyer or interrupted the sales of the merchant. They bolt their store doors against it and fight it back with trowels and with yardsticks, and cry, "Away with your religion from our store, our office, our factory. They do not understand that religion in will help you to do any kind of work you ought to do. I can lay a keel; it can sail a ship; it can buy a cargo; it can work a pulley; it can pave a street; it can fit a wristband; it can write a constitution; it can marshal a host. It is as appropriate to the astronomer as his telescope, to the chemist as his laboratory, to the mason as his plumb-line, to the carpenter as his plane, to the child as his marbles, to grandfather as his staff.

This Workday World

No time to be religious here! You have no time to be religious. You might as well have no clerks in your store, no books in your library, no compass on your ship, no rifle in the battle, no hat for your head, no coat for your back, no shoes for your feet. Better travel on toward eternity bareheaded and barefooted than to go

MRS. WEISS, MRS. CURRALL AND MOORISH WOMEN

A NATIVE WHOSE EYES WERE BURNED OUT

THE NEW GATE LEADING TO THE FEZ ROAD

THE BLIND BEGGARS of TANGIER

See Illustration
on First Page

WE have now been in Tangier five weeks, which have been busily employed in learning the ways and the customs of the people here; also, in studying their language, which is Arabic. While mastering their tongue, we are speaking to the people through interpreters; or we are reaching them as well as we are able, through deeds of kindness. There are abundant opportunities for the last.

In and around Tangier are many helpless beggars. The blind people who have had the misfortune of having their eyes burned out for stealing, have been subjects of our prayers ever since we have come here. So to-day, after cashing the check which Dr. Klopsch kindly sent us, we took our little adopted native boy with us and purchased a lot of bread. The boy carried the basket, and we went to the different corners to help the blind. So this sum sent us is the beginning of what we hope will bring great blessing to the many blind in Tangier; and of what we trust may not stop here, for we purpose, through preaching the Gospel and performing deeds of kindness, to bring light to the spiritually blind throughout Morocco.

The present government of Morocco is corrupt; although the young Sultan seems to be more liberal in his views than his predecessors. Numerous incidents are related to show his readiness for innovations. For instance, when recently presiding at a service where many followers of Mohammed were worshipping, he kept them in an attitude of prayer while an artist took a photograph of the assembly. He himself is an enthusiastic photographer. But the people believe it a sin to have any pictures taken.

From facts we have gathered, we find that no church organization in America has a regularly established branch in Morocco. The North African Mission, with headquarters at London, has had laborers in the field for some twenty-five years. Educational work is not a prominent feature of their methods, which are chiefly evangelistic; missionaries of all denominations work under their direction, and much good has been accomplished. But the field is large; more laborers are needed; and schools are in requisition, if we would cope successfully with Mohammedan institutions and save the young.

The agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society, is among those who assure us that school work is just what the people want here now. We propose to begin such work just as soon as we are able to speak the language of the Moors. We are at present living in rented quarters; and we will stay here until the Lord gives us means to establish a permanent mission home. I send photograph, showing our house on the Fez Road. There are twelve rooms in the building; and two other families share it with myself, Mrs. Weiss and our children; and Mr. and Mrs. Currall and their little ones, who came out as co-laborers with us. Another photograph shows Mr. and Mrs. Currall and two Moorish women, of whom we hope much as our first converts; among the lilies of the garden stand the "little missionaries," as we call our children. The picture of the blind Moor, presents what is a common sight here. He is being led by a lame man. His eyes were burned out as a legal penalty for some offence. An English medical missionary treated them after it was done, to relieve him of suffering. The priest on the minaret, calling the Mohammedans to prayer, is another common sight in this land of ancient forms and ceremonies.

It is now some four months since, in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office in New York, we asked the privilege of sending through that paper good wishes to our friends in all the States, knowing that thus our message would more quickly and surely reach them, as the paper goes into homes everywhere. Again, through its columns, we send greeting, and beg the continued interest of God's people in our labors here.

FRED. WEISS.

Tangier, Morocco, March 14, 1902.

THE MISSIONARIES' HEADQUARTERS ON THE FEZ ROAD

EXCUSES

Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Continued

through life without religion. Did religion make Raleigh any less of a statesman, or Havelock any less of a soldier, or Grinnell any less of a merchant, or West any less of a painter? Why, my friends, religion is the best security in every bargain, it is the sweetest note in every song, it is the brightest gem in every coronet. No time to be religious? Why, you will have to take time to be sick, to be troubled, to die. Our world is only the wharf from which we are to embark for heaven. No time to secure the friendship of Christ? No time to buy a lamp and trim it for that walk through the darkness which otherwise will be illumined only by the whiteness of the tombstones? No time to educate the eye for heavenly splendors, or the hand for choral harps, or the ear for everlasting songs, or the soul for honor, glory, and immortality? One would think we had time for nothing else.

Other persons apologize for not entering the Christian life because it is time enough yet. That is very like those persons who send their regrets and say, "I will come in perhaps at eleven or twelve o'clock; I will not be there at the opening of the banquet, but I will be there at the close." Not yet! Not yet! Now, I do not give any doleful view of this life; there is nothing in my nature, nothing in the grace of God, that tends toward a doleful view of human life. I have not much sympathy with Addison's description of the "Vision of Mirza," where he represents human life as being a bridge of a hundred arches and both ends of the bridge covered with clouds, and the race coming on, the most of them falling down through the first span, and all of them falling down through the last span. It is a very dismal picture. I have not much sympathy with the Spanish proverb which says, "The sky is good and the earth is good—that which is bad is between the earth and the sky." But while we as Christian men are bound to take a cheerful view of life, we must also confess that life is a great uncertainty, and that man who says, "I can't become a Christian because there is time enough yet," is running a risk infinite. You do not perhaps realize the fact that this descending grade of sin gets steeper and steeper, and that you are gathering up a rush and velocity which after a while may not answer to the brakes.

Be not among those who give their whole life to the world and then give their corpse to God. It does not seem fair that while our pulses are in full play of health, that we serve ourselves and serve the world, and then make God at last the present of a coffin. It does not seem right that we run our ship from coast to coast carrying cargoes for ourselves, and then when the ship is crushed in the rocks, give to God the shivered timbers. It is a great thing for a man on his dying pillow to repent—better that than never at all; but how much better, how much more generous, it would have been if he had repented fifty years before! My friends, you will never get over these procrastinations.

Here is a delusion. People think, "I can go on in sin and worldliness, but after awhile I will repent and then it will be as though I had come at the very start." What a mistake! No one ever gets fully over procrastination. If you give your soul to God some other time than this, you will enter heaven with only half the capacity for enjoyment and knowledge you might have had. There will be heights of blessedness you might have attained, that then you will never reach; thrones of glory on which you might have been seated, but which you will never climb. We will never get over procrastination, neither in time nor in eternity.

We have started on a march from which there is no retreat. The shadows of eternity gather on our pathway. How insignificant is time compared with the vast eternity! As I was thinking of this one day while coming down over the Alleghany Mountains at noon, by that wonderful pass which you all have heard described as the Horseshoe—a depression in the side of the mountain where the train almost turns back again upon itself, and you see how appropriate is the name of the "Horseshoe"—and thinking on this very theme and preparing this very sermon, it seemed to me as if the great courser of eternity speeding along had just struck the mountain with one hoof and gone on into illimitable space.

So short is time, so insignificant is earth, compared with the vast eternity! This moment, voices roll down the sky and all the worlds of light are ready to rejoice at your disenthralment. Rush not into the presence of the king ragged with sin, when you may have this robe of righteousness. Dash not your foot to pieces against the throne of a crucified Christ. Throw not your crown of life off the battlements. All the scribes of God are at this hour ready with volumes of living light to record the news of your soul emancipated.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Issue of March 26

What ten American scenes and places should Prince Henry have seen or visited here, in order to receive the most accurate impression of the nation's spirit and character and of our republican institutions?

Answered in Issue of April 9

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

Answered in Present Issue

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 23

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a life in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Question of the Week

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

Woman can exercise a greater influence for good in the home than anywhere else. The home is the unit in all national affairs. If the mother teaches her children not to quarrel with other children on the playground or in the street, she has done a great deal towards universal peace. When all the boys and girls in all the homes of any nation do not quarrel with each other, there will be no civil strife. Woman's influence over children is greater than her influence over men. She can only utilize her influence for the peace of the nations of the next generation. No great reform can be accomplished in the generation in which it is begun. It is difficult to get men to give up habits already formed, but children can be prevented from forming bad habits. Universal peace will only come when the mother's influence on her children creates within them a desire for peace. Then there will be no more wars. Disputes, civil and international, will then be settled by arbitration.

CHARLES F. COOPER.

The influence of woman in favor of peace could, without doubt, be best utilized by securing for her the right of suffrage. Then, even if not elected herself to sit in legislatures, she could at least vote for such men as would legislate in the interest of peace. Meanwhile, mothers can train their children, and teachers, their scholars, to abhor war. They who have the gift of eloquence can speak against it, and they who wield the pen can write against it, and in favor of international arbitration. Those with administrative talent can organize peace societies; they can obtain countless signatures to petitions asking governments to pursue policies of peace. Thus, in varied ways, may women be the world's peace-makers and win eternal benediction.

AMELIA HOYT.

By forming public debating societies, free to all persons, including the youth, where the above question shall be fully discussed; by using their influence in all proper ways to secure election of delegates to conventions, who shall nominate candidates in accord with their sentiments; by their presence in galleries of conventions, cheering and encouraging the leaders; also in galleries of legislatures and halls of Congress; everywhere by protest or approval, by petition or remonstrance. Some of the above effectual measures were employed by the women of Vermont to secure the prohibitory law, and uphold its maintenance.

DENNIS SMITH BRIGHAM.

Woman's strongest power lies in her influence for good, and the best way of utilizing that power in securing peace to the world, is in the training of her children. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," is a truism; our best start in life is that given us at our mother's knee, when we learn that God is a God of love, and that it is his will that "we should do unto others as we would be done by." It has helped many of us to rule the world of evil desires that is inborn into our very souls, and assuredly it will bring us

"women pay the first cost on all human life," as they "have, in all ages, produced, at an enormous price, the primal munition of war, without which no other would exist," they therefore "possess a knowledge on this one point superior to that of man; they know the history of human flesh; they realize its cost, as men never can."

The attitude, therefore, of women toward war—had they an equal opportunity with men in deciding such questions—is assured. The placing of woman beside man in the arrangement of external affairs, may, perhaps, be the quickest and most efficacious method toward bringing about the desired result, still, lacking this means, true-hearted womankind may, the world over, influence husband, brother and son. And if, as Ruskin maintains, women possess over mankind a power "purer than the air of heaven, stronger than the seas of earth," surely by exercising such power, some assured success would result. This much, at least, is within the reach of all women, now; without delaying for doubtful reforms.

MARY S. WILLIAMS.

Universal peace is a dream, not to be realized until the world, purified and regenerated, gets its first glimpses of the millennium. One may well doubt the wisdom of woman essaying the role of the world's peacemaker. From Boadicea to Victoria, her nature has been warlike, at critical times. Did not Eugenie designate as "my war" the strife she stirred up with Prussia, and which ended with Sedan? It may be that the sanguinary days of women like Semiramis, Helen, Cleopatra,

We women may love peace, but we do not love it quite enough to sacrifice our pleasures and vanity for it.

MARIA AYLMER.

Answers have also been received from Lila S. Buckley, Archie Nolan, C. B. Craig, Miss Helen E. Malone, Ida M. Gwynn, Rev. Wm. H. Day, J. G. Osborn, Mrs. P. Marston, Nellie E. Griffin, Herbert S. Hester, F. J. Strayer, W. B. Corder, Miss Zuelia Emerson, Miss Meda Knight, J. J. Monro, M. S. B. Myer, R. E. Hough, Mrs. E. T. Hagley, Mrs. M. E. Robbins, Anna M. Sohn, Mrs. Fred. Bahler, J. Flomerfelt, B. M. Marsh, Walter F. Davies, Rev. Eli Good, W. H. Book, Mrs. J. W. Wilson, Carrie E. Laudernich, Miss Ruby Dyson, E. V. Swann, Mrs. Mary C. Lee, Mary L. Moses, Alvia J. Hunter, F. A. Mosbach, Mrs. Ira F. Smith, Miss Iza Parker, Mrs. Coia V. Strough, W. C. Ellis, Mrs. Anna B. Chambliss, A. G. Eagleson, W. J. Mosier.

Miscellaneous Questions

Charles H. Newark, O. Which have caused the most misery in the world—pride and ambition, or poverty and superstition?

As the causes and results in both cases are totally dissimilar, it is difficult to understand how a comparison can be made.

J. W. S., Buffalo, N. Y. Are we to infer from Scripture that the future is to be forever a life of enforced idleness? If so, would not the monotony of such a condition tend to impair our happiness?

Nowhere does Scripture justify such an assumption. On the contrary, all evidences point to the conclusion that it is to be a life of activity, progress and spiritual development on the highest lines, when we have the assurance that God is himself a ceaseless worker (see John 5: 17). Besides, in Heb. 1: 14, it is clearly intimated that the redeemed will be actively engaged in carrying on the Lord's work, by a ministry to those who need help and consolation. They serve God continually (Rev. 7: 15), and doubtless in a great variety of ways. "There is not the least reason to suppose," writes an able commentator, "that God will abolish this variety (of talent and abilities) in the future world; it will rather continue there, in all its extent. We must suppose that there will be, even in the heavenly world, a diversity of tastes, of labors, and of employments, and that to one person this to another that field, in the boundless kingdom of truth and of useful occupation, will be assigned for his cultivation, according to his peculiar powers, qualifications, and tastes. This is the view now generally accepted by the Christian Church throughout the world."

M. S. G., Vicksburg, Miss. 1. Where was the Protestant Church before Luther's time? 2. 1. What sense could the Bible be said to have been hidden away during the period between the apostolic age and Luther's time?

1. The question is a common taunt used by Roman Catholics in arguing with Protestants: One mode of answering it, adopted by humorous Protestant champion was the counter question: "Where was your face this morning before it was washed?" Luther did not found a new religion; the word we use for his work—Reformation—shows that. Luther revived the doctrines enunciated by Paul and the other apostles, which had been suffered to fall into the background. The church had fallen on evil days. It was afflicted with priestcraft, and there were gross abuses in its work. The priests, the bishops, and even the Popes, were in some instances leading open evil lives and the Gospel in its purity was no being preached. The principle of Luther's work was to lead men back to the Bible and to obedience to its precepts. Later on, we lay had to do a similar work in his day. The Bible cannot be said to have been hidden away, though there were comparatively few copies outside the churches and universities. It was, however, in languages which the common people did not understand, and therefore until it was translated into the language common use it was a sealed book to uneducated men.

T. D. L. According to a tradition, Dismas and Gestas were the two thieves who were crucified with the Saviour. Their names are not mentioned in the Scriptures.

Mr. Jas. B. Neal writes from Chinanfoo, China acknowledging receipt of $100 from THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for the relief of the Yangtze River flood sufferers.

W. H. T., Fayette, Ala. In the absence of the preacher, there can be no objection to a member of the church, who is properly qualified and known, a man of upright life, reading the service and doing what he can to make up for the lack of a regular pastor.

Mrs. F. L., Deep River, Conn. The holding fairs, church suppers and bazars in the church building proper is regarded by many Christians, being contrary to Christ's teachings (see Lu. 19: 45).

Mrs. Julia H., Defiance, Mo. By "idle words" meant light and trifling conversation; not mere innocent "small talk or humor" but talk of a questionable and unprofitable character, vain, irrelevant, loose, and disrespectful, and dealing with topics that are distasteful to the thoughtful mind.

REWARDED

*I TOILED alone in a garden,
I worked in a field all day,
I gathered some tender flowers,
That bloomed along the way.
I carried them to my Master,
And, Lo! to His patient face
Came a look of infinite pleasure,
And a smile of tenderest grace.*

*"Aye, these are my blossoms," He told me,
"And my servant hath chosen well,
And hath brought unto me the most perfect,
That grew in the lonely dell."*

*And He picked the sweetest and fairest
Of all the big bouquet,
And gave it to me to cherish,
And to wear in my heart alway.*

Denison, Tex.

C. W. Patrick.

"Peace," by helping us to live more and more in fellowship one with another.

EMMA F. SHAW.

By teaching their sons, and all boys over whom they have influence, to regard war as the savage, brutal thing it really is. By frowning down the lionizing of military heroes, military parades and displays. The maxim, "Only the brave deserve the fair," is as true to-day as in the so-called age of chivalry, and military heroes have always received a lion's share of smiles and favors from the fair sex, but in this enlightened age, women should show a preference for moral, rather than physical heroism. By using their influence as teachers to have text-books in history which give so much space and prominence to the subject of war, discarded in our public schools, and substituting ones which enlarge on the development of civilization, education, inventions, diplomacy, etc. Women of influence in diplomatic circles, as the wives and daughters of statesmen and diplomats, should use their influence in settling disputes between nations by arbitration.

HILIE WALLACE.

A well-known authoress of the day says, in a recent article, that "war will pass away when their intellectual culture and activity have made possible to women an equal share in the control and governance of modern national life; it will probably not pass away much sooner; its extinction will not be delayed long after."

She bases this belief upon the fact that, as

Catherine of Russia, and the Maries have forever passed, but are there not Amazons still? Even the Boer women fought in the trenches. In our own land, the martial spirit among women still urges men to deeds of daring. What American mother would wish her sons to grow up milksops and cowards? In a single generation, such a race would be overrun, and either enslaved or blotted out. Let every American mother train up her sons to love justice, to regard all men as brothers, and to respect the rights and opinions of others. Let her make them strong and brave for the right, and steered against the wrong. There are wars that are righteous. None of us would hold back husband or son, if our liberties or our independence were at stake. But against all wars of selfish conquest or aggression, against the glory of slaughter, the mad splendor of battle, the pomp of mere military display, woman can set her face, and use her influence, if she will. Yet what woman, with a woman's weakness for a pageant and a fine uniform, can be relied upon to do this? Not one in a thousand! Deep down in our hearts we all hold more or less of the ancient savage love of barbaric spectacle, and our natures are cruel. It would shock us to do as the ladies of Mexico do, when they scream with delight over the finish at a bull fight, and flutter their fans when some poor picador is gored; yet we applaud blood-and-slaughter plays, revel in gory "historical" novels, and love to see the pretty uniforms, to hear the martial music and the boom of the saluting cannon. Can the children of such mothers be lovers of peace? Don't let us deceive ourselves.

LIFE IN A SALOONLESS CITY

How Cambridge, Mass., has Progressed After Stamping out the Liquor Traffic

THE LONGFELLOW HOUSE AT CAMBRIDGE

THE TOWN HALL OF CAMBRIDGE

THE HOME OF JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

THERE are many persons who believe that the saloon is a necessary evil. Sober and law-abiding themselves, they yet hold, with Bishop Potter and Rev. Mr. Rainsford, that it is impracticable to eliminate the saloon, and that, therefore, the curse of intemperance and the shame of public drunkenness must be borne humbly and patiently as an inevitable infliction. It will, no doubt, surprise these tolerant folks to learn that there are communities in this country that have actually cast out the saloon, and that they are living right along, quietly, happily and contentedly, without any perceptible friction over the matter.

To-day, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD presents the wonderfully interesting story of the experience of the saloonless city of Cambridge, Mass., as related by a number of its leading citizens. It is a story which carries its own lesson.

How "No-License" Helped Cambridge

11 DANA STREET, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

TO THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:—I am in receipt of your note of the 26th ult., asking my answer to the following questions:

1. In what respect have the working men of Cambridge, in your opinion, benefited by the local elimination of the saloon?
2. Do they regard its loss as a social deprivation, cutting off their club, so to speak? How do they find their recreation without it?
3. Are the homes of the workers any better or happier, as far as can be judged, since the saloons disappeared, than they were before that time? If so, in what respect are they improved? Are the wives and children better clad and better fed?
4. Are the morals of your city better since the saloons went? Has crime decreased? Have taxes decreased? Have the churches benefited?

The best answers to these questions are facts, not opinions, and these facts I proceed to give, as follows:

1. The State's Prohibitory Law was repealed in 1875.
2. Cambridge had licensed saloons for the next ten years, or until 1886.
3. Cambridge first voted for "No License," under the local option system, in December, 1886, and has voted for No License every year since, without exception.
4. The average annual gain in population for the fifteen years of No License was nearly 100 per cent. greater than for the ten years of License.
5. The average annual gain of new houses for the fifteen years of No License was nearly 100 per cent. greater than for the ten years of License.
6. In 1886, after ten years of licensed saloons, the city valuation had shrunken upwards of three millions of dollars; in 1901, after fifteen years of No License, the city's valuation had increased by upwards of thirty-six millions, being an average annual gain for the fifteen years of No License of about $2,500,000, against an annual average loss for the ten years of License of over $300,000.
7. During the ten years of License, the savings banks deposits gained something over $165,000 a year; during the fifteen years of No License the gain was upwards of $445,000 a year. In 1876, the number of open savings banks accounts was 14,628; in 1886 it was 21,215; in 1901 it was 41,142, showing an annual average gain during the No License years twice that for the License years.

8. Labor on the streets shows the following figures:

| POPULATION | EXPENSES FOR LABOR | NUMBER OF MEN EMPLOYED |
|-----------------------|--------------------|------------------------|
| 1876..... $1,442,000 | $41,284.92 | 120 |
| 1886..... 1,434,730 | 70,595.90 | 158 |
| 1901..... 2,072,587 | 132,075.93 | 325 |

9. The majority for No License began in 1886 with 566 votes, and has increased almost steadily, year by year, until, in 1901, it reached 2,338. In 1901 it was 2,117. It has fluctuated a little.

If, to the foregoing statement of facts, any opinions are to be added, to question No. 1, my answer is: "In all respects, and without exception."

To question No. 2, "The drinkers probably miss the saloon, but are learning, if they have not fully learned, to get along without it. They get their recreation in other ways."

To question No. 3. An unqualified "Yes."

To question No. 4. All things considered, "decidedly, yes."

EDWARD ABBOTT.

A Great Gain to the Working Men

The working men of Cambridge are benefited in many ways by the local elimination of the saloon. They are not now obliged to live and to rear their families in the presence of one of the most degrading and conscience-hardening institutions. The annually increasing No License vote of the citizens proves their appreciation of the absence of the saloon. For social privileges and recreation they are turning their attention toward "clubs" of a higher order, toward working-men's Unions, Y.M.C.A. evening schools, toward home and church. Their homes are increasingly happy; their wives and children better fed, clad and housed, while the savings banks show constantly growing deposits. The good morals of our saloonless city are rising still higher, crime is decreasing, property values advancing, taxes falling and the churches reaping marked benefits from the new order of things.

7 Montello St., Dorchester.

(REV.) J. W. BRIGHAM.

The "Next Step" in Cambridge

The working men of Cambridge have benefited more than any other class of citizens by its fifteen years of freedom from the saloon. It is an established fact that in license cities, saloons are most numerous in districts where the working people dwell, and that the families of working men are most exposed to its temptations. We count it no small gain that Cambridge affords a chance for a man to live and work and educate his children, apart from the contaminating influence of the open saloon. That the working people realize and appreciate this, is shown by the heavy no-license vote that is cast during the noon hour on election day. There is a growing sentiment in Cambridge that now we have banished the open saloon, we must provide some means of furnishing everything which the saloon offers, except the opportunity and the temptation to drink. To a certain extent, this is done by various local institutions, but not to the extent that is demanded. This is our "next step." We believe that every movement in the direction of a social settlement, every effort to provide parks and baths and gymnasiums, every attempt to institute boys' clubs or men's clubs, where instruction will be subordinated to recreation, and to the gratification of the social instinct, is a step which will lessen the craving for the saloon and help to perpetuate the system that has proved so beneficial to our city.

(REV.) A. P. RECORD.

Pastor of Third Congregational Society, Cambridge, Mass.

Richer, Healthier and Happier

The working men of Cambridge have profited in all ways by the prohibition rule. They have more money, more happiness, and better health. They have deposits in the savings banks, and can buy more coal at one time and more groceries.

I do not know that they feel the loss of club rooms, as other places are open to them. It is to be remembered that a drinking man can easily go over the bridge to Boston, which is thick with saloons. The drinking section of Cambridge is, to a great extent, on the river nearest Boston.

The homes are better, the wives and children happier. The children come to school with their hair combed.

The city has undoubtedly improved. There are several causes. We have the church district system, and this—the oldest church—is doing a large work in one of the hardest neighborhoods. We have over ninety workers, one-half of whom are students of Harvard or Radcliffe. Prohibition is an entire success here, but our proximity to Boston helps to make it practicable.

Cambridge, Mass.

(REV.) AUCANON MCKENRIE.

Far Better than in License Days

In general, I should think that, without question, a most favorable answer could be given to all your inquiries. Let one recall East Cambridge in the old license days, and its appearance to-day, and he would need no other object lesson of the great change wrought by the No License law.

Cambridge, Mass.

T. Y. J. CARTER, JR.

Answers in the same vein of enthusiastic praise of the "Cambridge Idea," have also been received from Wm. F. Warren, Rev. Geo. H. Whittemore, and a number of other influential residents of the Saloonless City.

THE TRADITIONAL TOMB OF DANIEL

A RECENT traveler writes that he found in the wastes of Western Persia, in the province of Laristan, a Mohammedan mosque of a peculiar order of architecture. In place of the usual cupola, it has a spire of many facets. He tried to obtain admission but was refused, and he was informed that not even M. de Morgan, the famous explorer, who is allowed to go everywhere and is on excellent terms with the keepers of the sacred places, had been able to gain admission to this mosque. Inquiring why it was held in such veneration, he was informed that it contained the tomb of the prophet Daniel. In view of the contention by modern scholars as to the personality of Daniel, this tradition is of great interest. The Bible says nothing about the death or burial place of the prophet, and even Josephus, who gives many details about him, does not mention his death. He says that late in his illustrious life, Daniel built a beautiful tower, in which the kings of Media and Persia were buried, and that the tower was still in good condition at the time Josephus wrote, but he does not say whether Daniel himself was buried there. The utmost, therefore, that can be said for the tradition of the mosque is, that the building stands on the plain of Susa where Daniel saw his visions, and where it is extremely likely that he would be buried. There is also the probability that the tradition dates from ancient times, and has been handed down from father to son through many generations, and is therefore no new theory.

THE TRADITIONAL TOMB OF THE PROPHET DANIEL

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., Editor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly.
Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the publisher. Registered cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.
Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, and the subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask for a change of your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue.
Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.
Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

Energy in the Pulpit

BISHOP FOWLER did a good thing when, in an address before the New York Methodist Conference, he gave some sensible and timely advice to young preachers. He warned them that unless consecrated common-sense went hand-in-hand with religion, poor and unsatisfactory work in the pulpit would be the result. He gave them a salutary caution against encouraging the sort of religion which he classed as "goody-goody," and which finds its principal expression in sundry exclamations, blackened shoes and clean faces. It is not, of course, to be supposed that the good Bishop objected seriously to worshipers presenting a decent appearance on Sundays, or even to the time-honored emotional exclamations one frequently hears at religious gatherings; but he did object to those who made these things all of their religion. There must be something else, besides the mere outward show. He had a word for another class, too, for whose special benefit he pointed out the difference between "crankification" and "sanctification," the former being the distinctive quality of a religious fault-finder, and the latter the mark of the true Christian, who has a deep, abounding charity for all men.

Then, adroitly training his batteries over the heads of the young ministers whom he was addressing, he drove an unexpected broadside right into the very heart of the ministerial camp. It was all done in good nature; but there was a strong undercurrent of seriousness in his remarks that could not escape observation. "Don't bring into the church a preacher so dry," said he, "that if you bore a gimlet-hole in him, the sawdust will run out." Laziness is a foe against which the minister must vigilantly stand guard. The preacher should put as much energy into his work as the average business man does in his, if he means to succeed. And the bishop was right. Spiritual indolence, intellectual indolence, physical indolence are foes to be dreaded in the ministry. A preacher has no more right to expect that God will bless a carelessly-prepared, unstudied, poorly-delivered sermon, than a merchant has to expect a profit from goods that are of wretched material and badly made. Our best is what the Lord wants in the pulpit, and nothing less; and it is only when that standard has been conscientiously reached and maintained, through toil and prayerful preparation, through labor and research and the putting forth of the highest powers we possess, that we are entitled to ask that it be made a blessing to others.

Let the young ministers give heed to Bishop Fowler's admirable advice, and profit by it. Put energy, careful thought, and thorough preparation into all of your work, both in and out of the pulpit. In these days of multiplied sources of information on all subjects, a dry, uninformed preacher is an anomaly. If you heartily and vigorously put your best into your work, doubt not that saving grace and power will be added, to the full measure of your requirements.

Papal Pessimism

GLOOMY are the views taken by the Pope in the address he has issued to the Roman Catholic bishops throughout the world. They are the more notable, from the fact that he prefaces his address with an expression of his conviction that he is approaching the end of his life, and therefore desires this address to be regarded as his testament to the Church of which he is the head.

"Never," the Pope says, "has humanity found itself in more miserable conditions than at present." There are many among the people who read the Pope's words who would deem it impious to question their truth, but there is surely reason to doubt whether he has been a careful reader of history. If he refers to physical conditions, he is at issue with the statistics of European, as well as American lands. These show that the people are better housed, clothed and fed than they were a century ago, not to speak of earlier times, which were worse in those respects. If he refers to moral conditions, there is reason to believe that the facts are not so bad as he thinks. The people are better educated than in any previous time, and with better education have come higher aims, cleaner pleasures and greater respect for the decencies of life. Misery there is to an appalling degree, but not so dire, nor so extensive as in the days of the Pope's predecessors.

The Pope is concerned also about the wars of the world. "Unjust wars," he says, "are being waged by strong nations against weak and feeble peoples." At the present time there are only two wars in progress, and one of them—that of our campaign in the Philippines, which the Pope doubtless has particularly in mind—can scarcely be dignified by the name of war. The other, that of the British struggle in South Africa, is more serious, but the Pope's description of the Boers as "a weak and feeble people," is not exactly the characterization which the ordinary reader of the newspaper would give of them.

It is, however, with the condition of religion that the Pope is most deeply concerned. The Church is being persecuted, he says, though he does not specify the land in which the persecution is being waged, and "Atheism is invading all departments of the state." This is certainly news. The potentates and statesmen of Europe, with the exception of the Sultan of Turkey, are at least ostensibly Christian; and many of them belong to the Pope's own church. In the United States, as was proved by the symposium published not long ago in this journal, the most influential men in the government, in the legislatures, in the army and the navy and the courts are avowedly Christian, and have the greatest respect for the doctrines and practices of the Christian faith. Besides this, there is reason for encouragement and hope in the religious activities of our time. The younger generation is voluntarily training in the Young People's Societies to an extent never before known for more vigorous religious life; the Word of God is being more widely published and studied than ever, and there are now more than thirteen thousand Protestant missionaries besides those of the Roman Catholic Church, propagating the Gospel in heathen lands. We might challenge the Pope to name any period in the history of the Christian Church when so much was being done at home and abroad to disseminate the great truths of the Christian religion. All this must have an influence on the world at large, which, by God's blessing, will result in a Christianization of all peoples. It is sad to learn that the venerable pontiff's sun is setting in gloom; but we venture to hope, in spite of his authoritative utterance, that the prospects are not so gloomy as he thinks, but that a brighter and a better day is dawning than this old world has ever seen—a day in which it shall not be necessary for anyone to ask "Know ye the Lord?" For all shall know him, from the least even to the greatest.

Raw Material

A SUGGESTIVE spectacle was witnessed in New York harbor a few days ago, when the Batavia, chartered by the North German Lloyds line, arrived with a record-breaking crowd of immigrants. She came from Bremen, and brought 2,692 passengers. Last year the highest record was 2,400. Some of the newcomers were bound for the coal mines, and had already paid their fare to Pennsylvania or Ohio. A large proportion were farmers going to the Northwest, and they, too, had prudently bought their railroad tickets on the other side. Evidently the new immigration law is working well, in leading the steamship companies to weed out the undesirable immigrants, for of the Batavia's cargo not more than one person in a hundred was detained for further inquiry. The average amount of money in their possession was about forty dollars to each person, and they showed by their shrewdness in dealing with the boarding-house runners and other candidates for service grouped outside the immigrant depot, that they did not belong to the class of which the proverb says "A fool and his money are soon parted." They displayed self-possession and business smartness that augurs well for their future prosperity. A very intelligent, sturdy crowd they were, chiefly Germans, with a small sprinkling of Italians, and here and there a Jew.

If among the spectacles that Prince Henry was taken to see during his recent visit, such a crowd of vigorous, useful citizens as those the Batavia brought had been included, we can imagine that he would not have regarded it with complacency. The big, strong boys in the throng must be a loss to the Fatherland. They bore themselves as if in a few years time they would look well in uniform and could do their part in a battle. But they will be better employed here, and will soon be assimilated by that mighty process which for many years has been transforming Germans, Italians, Irishmen and Englishmen into Americans. A moderate German township was on board the good ship, but they make no appreciable addition to our population. They will learn to appreciate the liberty and independence enjoyed by the common people of our land. We may hope, too, that their grand German Protestantism will be strengthened and developed, so that with their civic freedom they may enjoy the liberty with which Christ makes his people free.

The Mormon Wolf at the Door

ALTHOUGH there is no "Mormon Question" under public discussion at the present time, it must not be taken that Mormonism has received its quietus. Propagandists of the faith of Brigham Young and Joseph Smith are ceaselessly spreading their pernicious doctrines in many States and gathering in converts among the more ignorant, whom they dazzle and mislead with specious arguments and alluring promises. Many of their ablest workers are knocking at the doors of Christian churches, and asking a hearing for their religious heresies, trusting to the weakness of human nature to bring them new adherents. Wherever they are admitted, they sow the seeds of dissension and disruption. Many a church has found reason to bitterly regret its mistaken toleration of these insidious enemies, who only seek to destroy. In many towns and villages, their propaganda has resulted in the breaking up of homes, and the abandonment of religious principles for the so-called "Latter Day" religion. Their pretense that Mormonism does not now include polygamy is a shallow deceit, which was effectually exposed in the case of Roberts, their expelled Congressman. The first advances of Mormon advocates should be firmly resisted. There is an old saying that "he that sups with the devil should have a long spoon," and it is the part of wisdom in this case, to avoid the "supping" altogether.

DR. TALMAGE'S CONDITION

While this edition is on the press, news reaches us that Dr. Talmage's condition is very serious. He is unconscious, and his physicians say that unless an early improvement occurs, the worst is to be feared.

Among the Workers

—AT THE SMILEY revival meetings, lately held in Cairo, Mich., 230 persons came forward during the closing week and publicly confessed Christ. Many were heads of families and one was over 80 years old.

—EVANGELIST ALEXANDER SKELLIE, of Cambridge, N. Y., lately conducted a series of meetings in the Union Chapel, West Sandgate, Vt. Much good was accomplished and a number made public confession of Christ.

—MISS ELIZABETH D. MACDOWELL, who has been assisting in revival meetings in different cities in Pennsylvania during the winter, has met with remarkable success. Hundreds have confessed Christ at these services.

—C. C. GEORGESON, a special agent of the Department of Agriculture, lately returned from Alaska, gives a surprising account of the resources of the Territory. He says it can raise enough crops to feed 3,000,000 people, and would afford good homesteads of 320 acres each to 200,000 families.

—MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE, at a recent gathering in New York, said he had frequently as many as forty applications for libraries in a single day. He is not a great believer in fiction, and holds that no work of fiction less than three years old should have a place in a public library. This would effectually weed out all but the best. "The finest furniture of a room," says Mr. Carnegie, "is the books. They are the flowers of human genius, and you are in good company even if you are only looking at their backs."

—A FEW MOMENTS spent entirely with God at the beginning of each day is the best preparation for the toils and cares of business. A brief season of prayer looking up to our heavenly Father for wisdom and strength, and seeking for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, helps us to carry our religion into the business of the day. What joy and happiness it brings within the heart, and as we place all our concerns in our Lord's keeping, faithfully striving to do his will, we have a trust that is joyous, no matter how dark or discouraging events may appear.—FLORENCE MAY VAUSTON.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

The Town of Far-Away

A CONSULAR report issued recently by our Government contains a description of a remarkable city now being built on the shores of Talienwan Bay, in Manchuria. It lies on the eastern side of the Liao-tung Peninsula, between it and Corea. The Russians have named it Dalny, which means Far-away. They are making it the Eastern terminus of the system which connects with the great Siberian Railroad. It appears to have been chosen with excellent judgment, for it possesses one of the finest harbors of the Pacific, free from ice, and admitting at low-tide vessels drawing thirty feet of water. Already a large acreage of streets and substantial brick buildings are to be seen, the administration buildings occupying a large portion of the water front, with the mercantile sections immediately behind. Railroad headquarters, car-construction shops and steamship construction yards are in operation, and hotels, schools and club-houses are in course of erection. Six million dollars have already been expended by the Russian Government in leveling and grading the streets, in putting in electric light plants and other improvements, and twelve million dollars more have been appropriated to complete the work. The

The man replied that they were his brothers, who had just landed from a steamer, and he was taking them to his home. The policeman then addressed the men in Italian, and asked them what they knew of their leader. They replied that they had never seen him before he met them that morning at the Immigrant Pier, and that they were not related to him. His character was revealed when the policeman attempted to arrest him, for he drew a long knife from his pocket, and tried to stab the officer. His ferocity indicated, not so much a man restrained from doing a kindly act, as a plunderer balked of his prey. From a brother of that kind, it was well for the men that they were saved. We may hope that in the land to which they have come they will find brothers of a different kind, who will show their brotherhood in the way God intended.

And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also (I. John 4: 21).

An Elephant Panic

Lovers of a free show were disappointed last week, when the usual procession of the circus through the streets of New York was made without the elephant contingent. It appears that arrangements had been made for the elephants to take the way of escape; but even that fails without the responsive faith of the hearer.

The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it (Heb. 4: 2).

A Doctor Infected

A well-known physician in New York, formerly house-surgeon at the Hudson Street Hospital, and later a consulting physician and specialist in the treatment of consumption, has hurriedly disposed of his practice and property, and has gone to Colorado in the hope of saving his life. He is a man of fine physique, strong and vigorous, and in the prime of life. Recently, he became ill, and, in spite of rest and change of air, grew worse. He consulted another eminent physician, who said that if his friend were not so big and vigorous a man, he would say he was in a consumption. The clue was followed, and the sick man called in specialists, who, after examining him, pronounced his malady consumption. They said that prompt removal to Colorado might check the disease, but were not hopeful. They believe he contracted the disease by attending persons suffering with it in the hospitals and in tenement houses. It is very sad that his successful service to the sufferers should have involved his falling a victim to their malady. But that prin-

States Supreme Court a decision awarding her $50,000. The man was so disgusted by her success that he determined to quit the country. He sold his property for less than half its value and all his interests for what they would bring, and has sailed for England, intending never to return. It may be hoped he will be happier there than here, though even there, suitors are often disappointed by the decisions of the courts. He has certainly acted on his convictions, in promptly and completely severing his connection with this country. In so doing, he has set an example to people who pledge their allegiance to Christ. Sometimes they are reluctant to give up their worldly connections, which are liable to make them unfaithful to their King.

Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you (II. Cor. 6: 17).

BRIEF NOTES

There are now forty branches of the Y. M. C. A. among the Sioux, and a traveling secretary is employed in establishing others.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions calls attention to the fact that, although ten months of the fiscal year have passed, contributions have been received from only 2,172 churches. Reports from mission stations show that the prospects

DALNY (THE TOWN OF FAR-AWAY). RUSSIA'S NEW WONDER-CITY IN THE MANCHURIAN WILDERNESS

new city is six thousand miles from St. Petersburg, with which it will soon be connected by rail. It is possible even now, as was recently proved, to go from one city to the other in twenty-one days, and when the breaks in the road are covered, and the tunnel through the Hsingan mountains is completed, the time will be greatly shortened. There is little doubt that eventually Dalny will become one of the most important ports of the world, receiving the products of eastern Asia on the one hand, and the products of Europe on the other. The possibility of traveling by rail from any part of Europe to the extreme east of Asia will also encourage merchants to establish agencies there. Thus the East and the West are being brought into communication, and the long-expected day foreseen by the prophet is being brought near:

Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased (Daniel 12: 4).

An Unbrotherly Act

Some recently-landed Italians were saved from possible imposition last week by a policeman. He noticed eleven men, evidently just arrived from Italy, being conducted along a New York street by another Italian. Fearing that some trick was being played on the immigrants, a policeman, who speaks Italian, accosted the leader, and asked him in English where he was taking his compatriots.

their usual places in the procession, and some of them were brought out for the purpose. Among them were two baby elephants, who were the first to appear on the street. Just at the moment, the horses attached to a passing vehicle became unmanageable, and in the confusion came into collision with the baby elephants. One of the latter was struck slightly on the side by the pole of the carriage that the horses were drawing. The elephant promptly turned and retraced his steps to the basement of the circus, where the other fifteen elephants were waiting their turn to come out. As he entered, he raised his trunk and uttered a peculiar sound. The note was taken up by the others, and in a minute or two all the elephants were in revolt. So excited were they by the remarks of the baby elephant that it was deemed dangerous to let them participate in the procession. No one can account for the panic, but evidently the baby elephant, who started it, must have uttered some warning that the others understood, though the keepers could not. Clearly the animals have some articulate language in which to some limited extent they can communicate with one another. No words that the keepers could have spoken would have had the effect on the herd that the peculiar cry of the baby elephant had, nor could their words calm the panic. It is so with the human race. It is by the voice of men like ourselves, not by the tongues of angels, that we hear the warnings and ciple seems to be the law of our life in this world. Unhappily the physician's death cannot benefit those for whom he laid down his life, but rather takes from them their friend and helper. It is not so with the Great Physician, whose death brought life to the world.

That he by the grace of God should taste death for every man (Heb. 2: 9).

Renounces Citizenship

One of the very rare cases of a man renouncing American citizenship to become a subject of a European king has just occurred. His ancestor came to this country from England in 1660 and settled here. He and his descendants prospered, and one of them was the founder of a thriving New England city, which is known by his name. The present representative of the family went to Australia some years ago, leaving his wife and two children under his father's protection. During his absence his children died and his wife obtained a divorce from him. His father also died, and when he returned to America in 1895 he was quite alone in the world. He had made a considerable fortune in Australia and in addition he inherited his father's property, which was worth about half a million. His wife, regretting her action in getting a divorce from him, reopened the suit, and after carrying the case from one court to another, finally obtained in the United were never better, so it may be hoped that there will be no need to curtail appropriations.

Rutgers College New Brunswick, N. J., has received a gift of $20,000 from Mr. Ralph Voorhees, of Clinton, N. J., a former graduate. President Scott says that he knows of a will now in existence which, if it is not changed before the death of the testator, bequeaths a quarter of a million to the college.

Dr. Cuthbert Hall, President of Union Theological Seminary, has been elected Haskell lecturer in India and Japan during the coming year. He expects, also, to lecture in China and Korea on this trip. The theme of these lectures will be "Christian Belief Interpreted by Christian Experience."

Gen. Booth, of the Salvation Army, threatens to compile a directory of habitual drunkards for each town in which the Army operates. As there is a stringent law in England punishing a saloon-keeper who supplies liquor to an habitual drunkard, Gen. Booth says that he will have the assistance of the traffic in compiling the books.

Special meetings have been conducted recently at Union City, Pa., by Rev. W. Franklin Rowley, with results so encouraging that the church voted to call to his aid Evangelist Berry, of Michigan. Several persons have already joined the churches and others are intending to join them. Nearly an entire Sunday School class was received in a body.

A Hindu weekly of wide circulation, published in Bombay, the Shree Venkateswar Samachar, which usually opposes Christianity, has this to say: "Whether the Hindu religion is being injured by the missionaries or not, or whether by their work amongst orphans the Christian religion is being advanced or not, we cannot withhold our praise of the missionaries. In the famine of 1900, the missionaries, and especially the Americans, saved the lives of thousands of India's inhabitants. By their money, zeal and toil, vast numbers of orphans are saved forever from the claws of famine and poverty, and are receiving instruction in handicraft."

AN APOSTOLIC CHURCH TRIAL

Gentiles Received
Into the Church..

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 27
ACTS 11: 1-18

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH IN HIM SHALL RECEIVE REMISSION OF SINS." ACTS 10: 43

OUR lesson tells of a church trial, the strangest trial that ever occurred in Church or State. Peter was accused of being too brotherly. Nearly all trials have been due to unbrotherly conduct, as in the case of the first trial, where Cain was called to account by God himself for killing his brother, which he had done for envy. Oftener the low motive of greed prompts one to kill and rob his brother man. These crimes are done not alone with club and gun, but oftener with cruel words and overwork and under-pay.

Even to-day, not all Christians are free from the sins of race and class prejudice. Not all have learned to obey the Bible command, "Honor all men."

Not all can say with Browning:

Earth's every man my friend.

And with Tennyson:

Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood.

And Burns' words are yet prophecy, not history:

Man to man the world o'er
Shall brithers be and a' that.

The Lesson Story

Peter is again brought to trial in Jerusalem, but not before the Sanhedrin. Neither the High Priest nor the elders have any part in this trial, but it is before James, the brother of our Lord, and associated with him are the apostles of Jesus and deacons of the Christian Church at Jerusalem. What charges can they bring against Peter? They have been told how Peter went to the house of Cornelius and preached Jesus to him and to his friends, and how he ate with them. From their point of view that was a great wrong, for they had always been taught that Jesus was only for the Jews, and especially that Jews should not eat with Gentiles in social fellowship. So Peter had been taught and believed, until the Lord himself taught him better by the vision which he gave while Peter was praying on the housetop. There was no thought of bitterness and persecution in those who were conducting this trial, as there had been in that trial before the Sanhedrin. But James, who was really the leader of the Christian Church, was anxious that Peter should give an account of himself. He wanted to hear Peter's reasons for doing as he had done. He probably also wanted to set Peter right. Instead, he was going to be set right himself! It was a serious charge that Peter had to answer: of giving that which was holy to dogs, for to the Jews, all who were not Jews, were as "dogs." We can imagine how even the loving apostle John must have been grieved at heart, and filled with surprise, that Peter could preach to the Gentiles, and especially that he could eat with them and be a guest in their homes. Peter was wise to take with him the six friends who had gone with him from Joppa to the home of Cornelius. They were particularly valuable witnesses for him, because they were themselves Jews.

The charge against Peter was expressed thus: "Thou wentest into men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them." These words were probably spoken by James himself. Then it was that Peter told the whole story about the vision that was given him while he was praying on the roof, and about how he had heard the voice of God telling him what he should do. And he told them, too, about the three men who had come from Cornelius to get him to return with them, because Cornelius had been told by God's angel messenger to send for Peter. And said Peter, "The Spirit bade me go down with them." And then he told how after Jesus had been preached in the house of Cornelius, the Holy Spirit came upon them all as at Pentecost in the upper room. And the six men from Joppa said it all happened just as Peter had said. Their testimony showed without a doubt that Peter's words were true. And Peter said, "We saw that God was in it, and we could say nothing against Jesus belonging to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews." Neither could James, nor John, nor anybody else say anything against what Peter had done, but all together they thanked God that he had sent such blessing to the Gentiles. Never again, after that day, did they think that Jesus belonged only to the Jews. "Whosoever believeth on him shall receive remission of sins." Their hearts were enlarged to take in the whole world. If "the love of God" is really "shed abroad in our hearts," we shall love not one family alone, not one city alone, not one country alone, but the whole world, which is all in the heart of God and must be in the hearts in which he dwells.

Illustration and Application

Brethren in Judea heard that Gentiles had also received the Word of God. Some of these "brethren" were not pleased to have any "brethren" except Jews. They had been taught in childhood that Jews were to have a monopoly of the Messiah. They were neither to eat nor pray with Gentiles. They never learned this out of their Bibles, much less of Jesus, but rather out of their pride and prejudice. It is in the Old Testament, first, that the command was given to love our "neighbor" and the "stranger" (Lev. 19: 18, 33, 34).

The temple was declared to be "a house of prayer for all peoples" (Isa. 56: 7, 60). The prophets, especially Isaiah, abound in missionary passages. But even some of the disciples of Jesus did not rejoice to hear that other races were being saved. Such a blight of caste would seem incredible if it were not so common still among professing Christians. Well nigh half our church members give nothing, or next to nothing, for the conversion of other races. "Brotherhood," to many, means nothing more than "benefits" to those who unite with us in some charity insurance scheme. Curiously enough, as anciently the strongest form of race prejudice was that of the Jews against Gentiles, to-day the strongest form of it is in the prejudice of many, if not most, of the Gentiles against Jews. In Nazareth, for example, when the writer was there, the only Jew is one Joseph, a carpenter, but even with that name and trade the very converts of the Christian mission so boycotted him that he could scarcely make a living. We do not pray enough for deliverance from this spirit of Cain. A bad Jew can be as bad as anybody, but let us not forget that a good Jew realized the highest manhood ever seen on earth, and many more of the Jews, in the goodly fellowship of prophets and apostles, are in the true nobility of history. There would be more friends of Jesus among the Jews if our wicked prejudices had not misrepresented him. Let us, like Peter, overcome our race prejudice and develop the spiritual nobility of those we had despised.

Here is a good story of a Jewish rabbi, who attributes his conversion to the prayer of a little girl. He had been invited to spend the night in the home of an English gentleman. "Why do these people want to crowd in on us?" And a Sunday School superintendent, who had started life in a shanty, but married money, when a primary teacher brought in many children that had no church home, objected rather than rejoiced, the trustees favored opening a mission church near by, that the poor thus gathered might be sent there. This class prejudice is as great a caricature of Christianity as the race prejudice to which it is akin, and of which it is often a part. Many a church has moved away from a down-town location because the neighborhood was "filling up with poor foreigners." When the "heathen at home" move to the church door shall it run away, and then back in a second-class "mission" car. The rich need the poor almost as much as the poor need the rich. "The rich and the poor meet together, the Lord is the maker of them all." This reminder that we have one Father and are brothers, a fact we need to recall over and over again, as the artist keeps high-colored stones before him to keep his eye up to tone, because working in pigments has a tendency to weaken the sense of color. The pure color at hand brings up the eye, as the tuning-fork brings up the ear to the right pitch. Many of us have a weakened sense of brotherhood which such a lesson as this, giving God's own standard, presented in the vision to Peter, will bring up to tone. No man is to be despised, but all beloved. This is Christian doctrine, the best form of true socialism, not dynamic, but divine.

Professor Huxley tells of a Scotch shepherd, who came to him one day when he was examining a common moss cup on the

A Vision of Man's Greatness moor with his pocket lens, and wished to look through it. As he looked his eyes dilated with wonder. "Can this be a moss cup?"

he exclaimed, as he beheld the miniature world of beauty. And then he added, "Oh, sir, I wish you had never shown it to me, because I do tread upon thousands of them every day of my life." It seemed a sacrilege to trample on a thing of such hidden beauty. When in such a vision of God as came to Peter we realize the preciousness of every immortal soul, we shall feel that not one of them, however wicked or ignorant, is to be trampled on or despised. If the sacredness of life in the moss cup when revealed inspires awe, much more should the sacredness of the eternal life hidden in every human soul.

Who was I, that I could withstand God? When God told Peter to carry the Gospel message to one against whom he was prejudiced, he obeyed. How great his sin would have been had he been disobedient to the heavenly vision! We are not less so if we fail to speak to others of Christ, for he says to all of us, "Let him that heareth, say Come." It was reported some time ago that a blacksmith had died in Knoxville, Tenn., who had rediscovered and perfected the lost art of tempering copper and welding it with steel. This art, known to ancient Egypt, had been lost and vainly sought for hundreds of years. At last this blacksmith had fully succeeded in restoring the art, but he never would disclose his secret to any one, and dying suddenly, his valuable secret died with him—a serious loss to the world. How much greater the fault and loss, when one who has found in Christ the fulfillment of his soul's desire has kept the great secret to himself!

God gave unto them the like gift as he did unto us. Salvation is a case of giving on both sides. God loves and gives Exchanging Gifts with God his Son. In return, we give both our money and ourselves to God.

"I will give that to the missionaries," said Billy, and he put his fat hand on a little gold dollar, as he counted the contents of his money-box.

"Why?" Susie asked. "Cause it's gold. Don't you know the wise men brought Jesus gifts of gold? And the missionaries work for Jesus."

There was stillness for a little time; then Susie said: "The gold all belongs to him anyhow. Don't you think it would be better to go right to him and give him what he asks for?" "What's that?" Billy asked.

Susie repeated softly, "My son, give me thine heart."

They held their peace and glorified God. Those who had summoned Peter to blame him learned from him, without a miracle, what he had learned directly from God as to the brotherhood of man and the universality of the church. It was here that the sentence in the creed was forged in fierce controversy, "I believe in the holy catholic church." Every child should know that "catholic" means universal, and is not rightly used as the name of any denomination.

The church at Jerusalem glorified God, and praised instead of blaming Peter for bringing in the Gentiles. That reminds me of the story of a Miss Newton, who was living in South Africa at Jagersfontein, when a battle between the British and the Boers occurred there. She heard groans just outside her window. Bullets were flying, and it was dangerous to venture out, but she followed the groans and found a wounded British soldier of the Seaforth Highlanders. She nursed him bleeding into her beautiful verandah, where she dragged him till the battle was over. Five months later she received a beautiful bracelet watch from the Highland regiment, inscribed, "In admiration of her heroic conduct in assisting their wounded comrade under fire."

"THERE WERE THREE MEN ALREADY COME UNTO THE HOUSE WHERE I WAS"

man. In the room next to his own he heard a child, as the mother was putting her to bed, pray for the Jewish guest, that he might learn about Jesus. He was so impressed by the child's prayer, that he was led to think earnestly and to read the New Testament carefully, and so, ere long, he accepted Jesus as the true Messiah and his personal Saviour, and has been telling others of his love for more than twenty years. If the lips that have sneered at the race to which Jesus belonged had used their lips to tell that race of him, such incidents would not be so rare.

Richelieu is represented by Schiller, if I remember rightly, as saying, "Beyond the map of France my heart can travel not." In this lesson we see men who could send the wireless telegraphy of love no farther than the bounds of Palestine. Now that the world has become one neighborhood, our sympathy should have no boundaries narrower than the world.

What God hath cleansed that call not thou common. We need to go back again and again to this, for we still use that word "common" in speaking contemptuously of the "common people." Trustees say of a pastor, of whom it can be said, as of Christ, "The common people heard him gladly," that "he is filling the church with the rag-tag and bobtail and the scum of the town." A lady in rustling silks said, in such

A Touch of Divine Pity

IN the last chapter of the Book of Jonah, which is, by the way, one of the literary masterpieces of Scripture, there is a very winning touch of divine compassion. The prophet was unreasonably angry because, on the repentance of Nineveh, God had spared the city. One finds little pity native in the human heart. A glance at the daily newspapers, showing how human justice deals with law-breakers, how little room there is in the hearts of human judges and juries, too, for excuse or extenuation or pardon of wrong doing, is evidence enough by contrast of the greater kindness of our God.

There's a wideness in God's mercy
Like the wideness of the sea.
There's a kindness in his justice
That is more than liberty.
There is no place where earth's sorrows
Are more felt than up in Heaven;
There is no place where earth's failings
Have such kindly judgment given.

But turn to the chapter which furnishes our theme for meditation. Jonah was indignant over the swift withering of the gourd, which, in rapid tropical growth, had shot up and made for him a tent-like covering from the intense fierceness of the sun.

"The sun beat upon the head of Jonah that he fainted and requested for himself that he might die, and said, 'It is better for me to die than to live.' And God said to Jonah, 'Dost thou well to be angry or the gourd?' And he said, 'I do well to be angry even unto death.' And the Lord said, 'Thou hast had pity on the gourd, which came up in a night, and perished in a night. And should I not have pity on Nineveh that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle.'"

People have often suffered their pleasure in this little book of Holy Writ to be marred and their profit spoiled by fruitless discussions about a single episode in it, an episode, too, which let modern doubters scoff at it as they may, suggested to our Lord an illustration of his resurrection, and was quoted by him to his disciples. Look now at the touch of tenderness which cannot forget in wicked and worldly Nineveh, the thousands of helpless babies, too young to be anything but extremely dependent, and not responsible for the city's vileness, and the much cattle. "Father," says the Psalmist, "Thou openest thine hand and satisfiest the desire of every living thing." The cattle upon a thousand hills and the wild beasts of the forest alike belong to God, and the round world over, his protecting care guards them all.

Ye winds of night, your force combine.
Without His high behest
Ye shall not, in the mountain pine
Disturb the sparrow's nest.

Nineveh was a superb city in those days of ancient story. Opulent, splendid, luxurious, it was as corrupt as our wealthiest American metropolis in 1902, and was open to God's condemnation. But when a prophetic figure, weird and strange, went up and down its streets, presaging speedy doom, Nineveh, from the king to the lowest toiler, repented, and God forgave it and allowed it another chance of rehabilitation. He had a tender recollection of the helpless babes and the dependent cattle.

Act as an Outfit for Society

Society has come to have a technical and restricted meaning in the daily press, including people of fashionable leisure, whose parties, and journeys, and entertainments, and costumes, are reported with a minuteness which they do not deserve. In a larger sense, we, who are neither fashionable nor much at leisure, are also in society, and any group of men and women, who are neighbors and residents in a community, constitute the society of the place. Now, to get along smoothly in society, one must have self-forgetfulness, comprehension of another's point of view, and a sensitive appreciation of others' rights. Tact means all this.

Cigarettes

An important firm sends out a circular to the effect that it will employ no young man between the ages of

The Good Old Tunes

IN a paper that drifted into my sanctum the other day, there was a bit of verse, a stanza of which lingers in my memory:

'Twas many, many years ago,
But still there comes to me,
The memory sweet of the old hymns
They sang in Genesee.

Perhaps, some of us, in reminiscent moods, love to recall the old hymns and the old tunes of our childhood.

Not long ago I was in a large congregation, where a hymn, most appropriate in its phrasing and thought was given out, set to an unfamiliar melody. The congregation tried to sing, but could not. Thinner and thinner grew the strain, here and there a straggling voice keeping it up. Presently the leader stopped. "Let us sing all together," he said. "Coronation," and "All hail the power of Jesus' name" was lifted high, and went ringing and vibrating in the waves of triumphant harmony to the vaulted roof of the church. A good old tune that everybody knows, is just like a good staunch friend that everybody trusts.

When I am grown to man's estate,
I shall be very proud and great.
And tell the other girls and boys
Not to meddle with my toys.

Robert Louis Stevenson showed a good deal of insight when he wrote that little quatrain. Most lads, looking with scrutinizing childish eyes on the conduct of their elders, or listening with thoughtful ears to their conversation, must be of the opinion that grown people's first care is to warn others from their possessions. "No trespassers," most of us, in one way or another, write over our front gates. Nations, like individuals, are always cautioning others not to meddle with their toys. Hence the armies and navies of the world, bristling and defiant, that peace may be preserved. Hence the jealous vigilance about rights of way and frontiers. Hence the need of forts and fleets.

May there not yet be found a more excellent way? Shall we not bring up our children in the spirit of Christian altruism by example and precept?

Our Dumb Animal Pets

It is not a descent, but a natural step forward from the subject we have been considering, to speak here and now of our dumb pets. "When we go to the country this summer," said a lady, "we shall take our cat with us." "What nonsense!" answered a friend, "Turn the cat out and let him get his own living in warm weather." Of all forlorn, wretched creatures, a cat accustomed to home comforts is the most miserable, when let loose to forage for itself, and sleep where it can in Summer. Vagrant cats make night hideous in July and August in city streets. Lost cats go mewing about, half-starved and frightened, till one's heart aches for them. Prowling cats, thieving and marauding, are the Ishmaelites of creation. If you cannot arrange for Pussy's care and comfort when you are absent, if Puss is old and suffering, or in your way, put her mercifully to sleep with a little chloroform, and carry with you a good conscience. But as soon forsake the baby as the cat, if you have a woman's heart.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S CORNER

—LOUISE. Take the delicate child out of school, and let her run wild in the fields all summer.

—EUGENE. Your father is right about a latch-key. At sixteen, a boy should come home before the house is closed for the night.

—INVALID. Go to a hospital for treatment. You will find it very pleasant, and as you are away from home, you can receive better care in a hospital than in a boarding-house.

FAITHFUL FRIENDS

"LOVE me, love my dog," is a familiar proverb, and one that every owner of a dog understands. No other animal is so much a companion and comrade as a dog. I often wonder what mental processes my favorite among the dogs carries on; how it is revealed to her of what I am thinking, how she knows when to be demonstrative and when to be retiring, and by what subtle sympathy she can accommodate herself to the moods of every member of the family. This particular dog always knows when the Lord's Day comes, and she is forbidden to accompany the household to church. On Monday or on Saturday, she clamors to go on every walk; but never on Sunday. Then she stays resignedly at home. The dogs in the picture are on good terms with their mistress, and are cheering for her a lonely hour. Nobody can be very lonely who owns a clever and loving dog or two.

fifteen and twenty-one who smoke cigarettes. In a case of defalcation by a bank teller reported the other day, mention was made of the fact that the young man smoked a package of mild cigarettes every day. The wastefulness of smoking should appeal to every young man engaged in any business, for nothing else makes a larger drain on a small salary. Apart from this, cigarettes are the hall-mark of the degenerate, and a youth whose custom it is to smoke them incessantly, enervates his physical and undermines his moral strength.

PITTSBURG'S NEW
BIBLE INSTITUTE DEDICATED

TO TRAIN CHRISTIAN WORKERS

THE WORK BEGUN
..AN INDEPENDENT ORGANIZATION

It was the late Dr. Chapell, of Boston, who identified the new movements, which are utilizing the rank and file of the Church in accelerating the triumphant march of the Gospel, with the eleventh hour laborers of Christ's parable; and mentioned the army of recruits that are being graduated from these latter-day schools of the Gospel, the Bible Institutes, as a most important contingent. The multiplication of these schools is hailed as a sign of the times.

The steps leading to the establishment of the Pittsburgh Bible Institute were wonderful tracings of divine providence, and unmistakable evidence of the reality of divine guidance in answer to believing prayer. For some time, what seemed to be a call to establish a Bible School, had been echoing in the hearts of Rev. Charles H. Pridgeon and his wife. They made no mention of it, but waited upon God in fervent prayer. Finally, after a whole night of supplication to God, came a proposition from a friend, who knew nothing of their desire.

It was the offer of a suitable building for such an institution if they would undertake its management. The outcome was the purchase of the unoccupied First Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Wylie avenue, Pittsburgh, which, after being refitted, was dedicated to the cause, together with the adjoining parsonage, on Sunday, December 8th last. Large audiences gathered at the inaugural services, and the next day regular classes were begun. Gospel meetings are being held regularly on Sunday, though no attempt has been made to form a congregation. Beulah Home, over which Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Schultz preside, has been thrown open to non-resident students.

After graduating from Lafayette College and Princeton Theological Seminary, Mr. Pridgeon went abroad, spending a year in post-graduate work in Free Divinity School, and Divinity Hall, Edinburgh, and the following year in Leipzig, under Dr. Delitzsch and other famous

THE NEW BIBLE INSTITUTE AT PITTSBURG, PA.

German theologians. He was then called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church, Canonsburg, Pa., where for twelve years his ministry was crowned with more than ordinary success. He has also been a valued teacher at many representative conferences and summer Bible Schools, and has had large success in evangelistic work. Mrs. Pridgeon brings to the work gifts and experience no less varied, and through her books and her Gospel songs, she has been heard from platforms all over the land.

The Pittsburgh Bible Institute has no connection with any other organization, and will be conducted on faith principles, pure and simple. Those in charge receive no salary. Instruction is absolutely free. The principal text-book will be the Bible. A course of instruction covering two years has been arranged, embracing outlines of Biblical geography, history and customs, systematic study of the Bible by books, and the exegesis and theology of certain books. There will be simple courses in homiletics and Christian evidences; courses in methods and means of Christian work; a missionary course, and instruction in English and in music.

The Institute is situated near the foreign quarter, inhabited by tens of thousands of Jews, Italians and other nationalities, and ample opportunity will be afforded for acquiring experimental knowledge of many forms of Christian service.

Charmed with the Art Portfolio

Mrs. Blanche Read, Superintendent Women's Work, Salvation Army, Toronto, Can., writes: "I have received the premium with the Christmas number of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD and am charmed with the Art Portfolio, and especially value the picture, 'Inspiration, or the Soul's Awakening.' I consider the lovely book, Heaven, Home and Happiness, a most valuable acquisition to any home library."

OUR COMPLETE COURSE IN SHORTHAND

ISAAC PITMAN'S 20th CENTURY REVISION
By Special Arrangement with Isaac
Pitman & Sons, 33 Union Square, N. Y.

LESSON VIII.

71. The STROKE consonant must be used—

(a) When s or z is the only consonant in a word, as saw, sigh, easy. The stroke is also employed in derivatives from such words, as saw-mill, sighing, easiness.

(b) When a word begins with a vowel immediately followed by s or z, as ask, copy, assume, Isaac.

(c) When a word begins with s, followed by a vowel and another s or z, the stroke s is written and then the circle; as case, seizure, society, saucer.

(d) When initial s is followed by two vowels, as Siam, science, sciatica; or when final s is preceded by two vowels in different positions; as joyous, tortuous.

(e) When a word ends with a vowel immediately preceded by s or z, as mercy, racy, busy, lazy.

(f) When a word begins with z, the stroke z is written, thus zero, zeal, zigzag.

72. When the last consonants in a word are s t, with a vowel between them, and when a vowel follows s t, the circle s and the consonant t must be used, and not the loop; thus, rosette, rusty.

Exercise 18

) so, us, see, use (noun), use (verb), whose, which.

Exercise 19

1. Ace, essay, says, espouse, schism, assize, assignee.
2. Dizzy, cosy, rosy, russett, suicide, scissors, easel, zenith.
3. Cecil can now see it is of no use to assail the lessee who is honest, and to whose honesty all of us can testify. 4. If we may say so, he ought to be less zealous to abuse in so fussy a way such an unassuming fellow. 5. To use him thus is to show a sauciness which is wrong. 6. Only a ninny can pursue it in so testy a style.

REVIEW.

1. How is initial sw represented? 2. Write several words in which initial sw occurs. 3. How is ss represented, and how is it distinguished from sw? 4. Illustrate by examples the way in which the vowel is shown in ss. 5. Give examples of each of the classes of words in which stroke s is employed. 6. When is stroke z used? 7. Write deceit, sewer (a drain).

L and R Hooks

73. The liquids l and r are often found following and closely united or blended with other consonants, forming a double consonant or consonantal diphthong; as in the words plow, brow, glare, drink, fly, fry, maker, double, etc. In pronouncing these words, the combination of the l or r with the preceding consonant is uttered by a single effort of the organs of speech. These consonant combinations are represented by adding an initial hook to the simple characters to indicate their union with a following l or r.

Initial Hook adding L and R to Straight Letters

74. A small initial hook written towards the LEFT, adds L to straight consonants; thus,

75. A small initial hook written towards the RIGHT, adds R to straight consonants; thus,

The following mnemonic aid will be useful for remembering the pl and pr series. If the Left hand be held up, with the first finger bent, the outline of tl will be seen; and if the Right hand be held up, in the same way, the outline of tr will be seen. By turning the hand round to the following positions, all the straight double consonants of the pl and pr series will be formed by the first finger:

76. The consonant r is not hooked initially, the characters er and ur being employed for w and y.

77. The double consonants formed by the initial hooks should be considered as syllables, and named accordingly. Thus er should be called per, as heard at the end of the word "paper," and not pee-ar, which would be written per or per.

78. Vowels are read before and after these double consonants as they are before or after single consonants; thus per, ply, apply, reply, replica; eat, cater, Peter, Peterloo.

79. The double consonants in the following exercises should be called by their single names, and they will then be easily recognized; thus, per-eh (pray).

Exercise 20

call, (1), care, dear.

Exercise 21

1. Plow, apple, odor, draw, pebble, feeder, rocker. 2. Pickle, globe, shudder, crumble, mocker, archer, track. 3. Have a care, my dear Parker; if you call on him you may betray all. 4. No, I shall aim to please; he may be bitter but I shall refuse to be angry. 5. But he is no peacemaker, so take care how you address him. 6. He is my debtor, but shall indulge in no vulgar reproaches.

Initial Hook to Curves

80. An initial hook can only be added to curved consonant in one position, namely, inside the curve, thus er. The hook, however, may be made either large or small, as in the examples.

The student is recommended to purchase the Key to the Short Hand Instructor, which forms a Key to all the Exercises appearing in these lessons, as well as to all the Review Questions. It is an indispensable companion for all students mastering the art without a teacher. The price of the Key is 50c., and all orders should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office. Lesson No. IX. will appear in the issue of April 30.

A FIGHT ON

When You Tell the People to Quit Coffee

"At least 75 people among my acquaintances have been helped or relieved by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee in its place," writes a little woman from Independence, Ia. "I will mention one case, Miss Cora. I learned she was suffering from nervousness and constipation and went to call on her. Found her in bed, and she looked like a living skeleton, so wild and agitated that I feared for her reason."

I asked Cora if she was improving any. She said not but was gradually growing worse. The doctor was coming twice a day and giving her a powerful nerve. She said, 'I am miserable that I tell you privately if I don't get better soon I will end it all myself some day.' I told her not to talk that way for I believed it was something she ate or drank that caused the trouble, and she might get well by making a change in her diet. I told her my own experience in leaving off coffee when I was in almost as bad a shape as she, but as soon as I mentioned coffee I had a fight on my hands, for she insisted that coffee helped her and her mother backed her in it saying that it was 'the only thing she did enjoy' and he did not believe coffee hurt anyone."

I talked with them a long time and finally got Cora to agree to let me make a cup of Postum Food Coffee for her supper. She was surprised that it was so good. Said she 'had heard it was terrible wishy-washy stuff.' I told her it was because they did not follow directions in boiling it enough. She promised to use it faithfully for two or three weeks, and she was not better I would admit that I was wrong."

I went to see her again in about ten days, and Cora met me at the door with a smile, and said "Ada, your doctor Postum is the best doctor of them all. I can sleep all night, can eat heartily, and am growing stronger every day. Ma and all the rest of us use Postum Food Coffee now in place of coffee."

The facts are the girl was being actually poisoned to death by coffee. Cora has since married and has a happy home and you may depend upon it no coffee is allowed to enter here." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CORNISH PIANO AND ORGAN MINIATURES

FREE

TO ALL READERS.

We will forward without cost to you anywhere our new 1902 Souvenir Catalogue, with embossed & colored plates, illustrating all styles of Pianos and Organs. It will prove to you that we really sell a better instrument for less money and on more liberal terms than any other reputable firm in the country, also.

FROM $155.00

how we send instruments on ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. With the catalogue we will forward prepaid to any interested person a set of Piano & Organ Miniatures FREE absolutely correct in coloring, to aid them in making a selection best suited to the color or scheme of their home. This unique advertising matter has been prepared by us at great cost and no intending purchaser can afford to be without it.

ALL FOR NOTHING. Write for it to-day and mention this paper. Full particulars of our Co-Partnership Plan are also sent, showing how you can get a PIANO OR ORGAN FREE No matter how much or how little you wish to pay for a musical instrument, we can please you and save you money. Write to-day.

CORNISH CO., Washington, New Jersey. Established 50 Years.

Gems of Song

for the Sunday School.

288 Pages, Full Bound in Cloth.

or 200 Popular Hymn and Tune Writers Represented. $25.00 per 100. Sample Copy, post free, 20 cents.

E. BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

LYMYER BELL

CHURCH BELLS.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Chap. XXIII—A Lucrative Situation

WHAT you need pa, is a good, strong young feller to jes' take a holt right along; ain't that so, Em'line? I tell pa they ain't none of us as young as we wuz once, but the work hes to go on jest the same." Mrs. Scott pushed away her coffee-cup with decision and adjusted her spectacles.

"I guess that's so, pa," assented Emeline, smilingly.

The years had wrought little change in her broad, good-humored face, but her substantial figure had gained in girth as had the fruit trees and maples in the front yard. "Hildy an' me's a-goin' to p'serve cherries to-day, ain't we, Hildy?" she added, irrelevantly.

The slim young woman seated near the window did not lift her eyes from the page she was eagerly reading. All three of the others turned to look at her, a fond smile upon their faces. She was a sufsleddin' for a spell, I says. The land ain't been cultivated to speak of for nigh onto forty year. He looked at me so kind of flabbergasted 'at I like to ha' laughed in his face. I guess I kin git my livin' off it, he says."

"Why don't you ask him to help you out with the hayin', pa?" asked Mrs. Scott; "he's a big, strong-looking chap. Why, it 'ud be a real kindness!" she added; "you could teach him how to farm in no time. I don't s'pose he knows wheat f'om barley!"

Mr. Scott puffed meditatively at his pipe. "I guess I'll go out to the barn," he ejaculated, after a long pause.

An hour later he might have been seen making his way 'cross lots toward the Armitage farm. A blue-shirted figure, rising and falling with some sort of laborious motion, betrayed the whereabouts of the young hermit.

"Well, hang me!" muttered the farmer, "If the young fool ain't a spad in' his four-acre lot!"

"You seem to be tol'able busy this

"YOU SEEM TO BE TOL'ABLE BUSY THIS MORNING"

ficiently pleasing picture in her pale blue dress, the broad light from the unshaded window bringing out marvelous tints of pearl and rose and gold as it rested on her bowed head.

"Hildy's company, Em'line," said Mrs. Scott, indulgently. "I don't guess she wants to stain her hands all up with cherry juice, do you, Hildy?"

"I'll help as soon as I get through with this story," murmured the girl, shrugging her shoulders. "I like to pick cherries." "I guess there's somebody a livin' in ol' Mose Armitage's house," remarked Emeline, gathering up a handful of cups and carrying them across the room. "I saw the door was standin' open yeste'day."

"It's the young feller—I allers forgit his name," explained Mr. Scott, as he busily packed tobacco in his corn-cob pipe. "I seen him as I come from the post-office las' night. What you doin' now a days? I says to him. He ain't no great shakes of a farmer, I reckon, any more 'n ol' Mose was. I'm tryin' to git the farm in some kin' o' shape, he says. Well, I says, you'll find it pretty hard mornin'," he remarked with cheerful decision, as he came to a standstill beside the rail-fence which divided the two farms. "I like to see folks industrious myself," he went on, "but, I mus' say, I hate to see 'em a wastin' time. Why don't ye plough, man? You won't never git no crops here at this rate."

Immanuel looked up, and nodded without speaking. He was fighting a fierce spirit of discontent with the first weapon that had come to hand.

"I've been a thinkin' 'bout your case, young feller," pursued Mr. Scott with dignity; "an' I've talked it over with my wife. I ain't so young as I was once, an' I ain't had much luck with hired men lately. I'm too pertic'lar, Miss Scott says. What do you say now to kinder joinin' forces, you an' me; I to supply the brains, an' you to supply the muscle. You ain't got no stock, I notice, an' prob'ly no money to buy it with; an', of course, ploughin's out of the question without horses. I've got horses, an' I've got ploughs and harrers, an' knowledge; that,

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

A Pair of Hose FREE.

A Pair of Hose FREE.

A New Idea for Women

A new shoe for women and a new plan of selling it, by mail, direct from the factory with all intermediate profits eliminated. No Branch Stores. No dealers. No middleman's profit to increase the cost to you. This means a great saving on every pair of shoes you buy. Instead of buying an unknown shoe from an unknown dealer, you get a superior shoe from well known makers.

Eclectic Shoes

are fashioned after the most beautiful lines of nature. Made only of Mello-Kid—selected because of its softness, durability and permanent lustre—tanned especially for Eclectic Shoes.

The makers' price of Eclectic Shoes is $3.50 by mail postpaid. Oxfords $3.00

With every pair of Eclectic Shoes will be included free a pair of Eclectic, full fashioned, German made Hose, of Egyptian Yarn, Fast Black guaranteed stainless and free from poisonous dyes. Send for the Eclectic Book, showing all styles and giving full directions for self-measurement.

THE CHAMBERSBURG SHOE CO.,
Box 503, Chambersburg, Pa.

"Standard of Highest Merit"

FISCHER PIANOS.

THE NEW SCALE Fischer yields a wonderfully pure quality of Tone, combined with great power and durability; it stamps the Fischer Piano with an individuality that no other Piano possesses.

| | |
|----------|-------------------|
| 61 Years | Over 110,000 Sold |
|----------|-------------------|

BY OUR NEW METHOD of Easy Payments, every home is at once enabled to possess and enjoy a High Grade Piano. Pianos delivered to all parts of the United States. Write for catalogue, terms and all particulars.

J. & C. FISCHER
164 Fifth Ave. New York, N. Y.

Every Woman

knows the "CORLISS" Collar. Distinctive styles and tasteful appearance have earned for these goods the reputation of being the best that it is possible to buy. The new shapes for Spring and Summer are very attractive and latest. Sold at all leading stores for 25c. If unable to find them, send to us. Whether you order or not, write for our valuable book of styles, sent Free.

DEPT. X, TROY, N. Y.

CORLISS, COON & CO.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 337

I take it, is what you're a lackin' wo'st of all."

He paused and looked keenly at the young man's flushed face. "Don't say 'no' till you've thought it over," he added. "I'm an honest man, an' I ain't a-plannin' to take undoo advantage of ye. We'll cultivate the two farms equal, an' divide the crops acre for acre. As fur livin', you c'n eat to our house; there's plenty of room thar, an' plenty of vittles; it don't strike me as bein' sensible fur you to be livin' alone the way you've set out to do. Course you'll be gettin' married arter a spell, but whilst you're a lookin' round fer a likely gal as 'ull cook your vittals tasty, and slick up yer house, you might's well keep up yer sperits with some of ma's cookin'."

"You are very good to have thought of me at all," said Immanuel, with a grateful look into the old farmer's kindly, rugged face. "I—I will think the matter over, and let you know at once."

"Take yer time—take yer time, young man; my crops is pretty well under way. You'll have to put this 'ere lot into turnips, I reckon, and leave the rest in grass till fall. But there ain't any better corn land anywheres 'an the slope of that hill yonder. I tol' yer uncle so more'n once; but the ol' gent'man was kind of cranky 'bout farmin', and bound to have his own way. Wall, guess I'll say good-day; you know whar to fin' me."

Immanuel Rossi stood still and watched the slouched figure of the farmer as it strode away across the fields, his cheerful whistle floating back on the morning breeze. Then he looked down at the patch of roughly dug earth at his feet, and laughed aloud. "I am not much of a man on the back hill-road," he said to himself. Then his thought wandered to a certain lawyer's office, and Mr. Smalley's dry, sarcastic tones sounded in his ears, "Your knowledge of finance, Mr. Rossi, might be increased to your very great advantage." Now, Margaret Livingstone's grey eyes looked at him with sweet, questioning gravity. "Do the buildings make the slums, Mr. Rossi, or the people who live in them?" He had not answered her; he could not.

"I might begin with farming," he thought, "it is well to know something for certain, if it is nothing more than how best to dig a turnip patch."

The next day he visited the city. "Is there anything I can do to further this work?" he asked the architects who were laboring on the plans for his new blocks.

"We should be glad to have your approval of the changes we have indicated," replied these gentlemen.

"Is there anything more?" he asked again, at the expiration of an hour spent in looking over the plans.

"Hum—ah, no. In fact, the work will go on very well without your presence. If you should wish to be absent for a year or more, we think you would find everything to your mind on your return. Our international reputation is at stake in this matter, Mr. Rossi, you may depend upon us implicitly."

He went out after awhile. "The money is working," he thought with some bitterness, "but the man is not wanted."

That evening Mr. Si Scott, smoking his pipe on the front porch of his comfortable farm-house, received a visitor. "Be'n thinkin' it over—eh?" he inquired, with a chuckle. "An' how goes that 'ere turnip patch of yours; got yer seed in yet?"

"I am anxious to work," replied Immanuel, gravely; "I have, therefore, decided to accept your offer for the present."

"That's where you're smart!" ejaculated the old farmer. "You'll do well to stick to it. This 'ere rollin' stone business ain't good fer young folks, an' that's what's the matter! Ain't that so, Hildy? Hildy, here's Mr. — What'd you say yer name was? I've forgot it. Immanuel Rossi—heh? S'pose I make it 'Manuel fer short; that'll come handy in the per-tater field, I reckon."

The young girl bowed coldly in acknowledgment of this curious introduction. She was dressed in a pink muslin gown, and her pale gold hair rose in a fluffy aureole above her white forehead to meet a coquettish bow of pink ribbon. She seated herself at some distance from the two men and fell diligently to work on a strip of intricate lace crocheting.

"I don't s'pose you remember us folks," her grandfather was saying, with the obvious purpose of putting an embarrassed guest at his ease. "Mother an' Em'line was talkin' it over this mornin'; I'd clean forgot it myself. I tell ye, it takes the women-folks to remember! You was a little shaver no higher 'an my knee, ma says; an' Hildy here wa'n't more'n five. She'd run away in the strawb'ry medder yonder, an' Em'line found her a-settin' thar an' eatin' your berries as cool's a cucumber. 'I'm a-goin' to keep him to play with, gran'ma,' she says. Do ye remember that, Hildy? My, if she wa'n't a little skeesicks!"

Immanuel glanced at the girl, who lifted her blue eyes with a little frown of annoyance. "What stories you do tell about me, gran'pa" she said daintily. "I'm sure I don't remember anything of the kind."

"You'd have to have a bigger head 'an you've got to remember a quarter o' your didoes, girl," chuckled Mr. Scott, fixing his eyes expectantly on Immanuel.

"I remember it very well indeed," he said, falling in with the old man's humor, "I had run away, and was making for the top of the big hill there; luckily for me, Miss Hilda succeeded in convincing me there was nothing worth going for. She also furnished up my manners a little; otherwise, I fear I should have failed to say 'yes'm' and 'no'm' at the proper intervals."

The girl regarded him with a shadowy smile. "I think I do remember," she said slowly. "You ran away again, and I cried." A faint color crept into the fair cheeks as she drooped her head over her work.

"Our Hildy's here on a visit," went on the old man, garrulously. "She lives to hum since her pa married agin. She's a great scholar, Hildy is; her pa's give her plenty of schoolin'; more'n enough, I tell him. Readin', writin', an' 'rith'm'tic's a-plenty for women-folks. Let 'em spen' the balance of their time in larnin' how to make the men-folks comf'table, I say!"

Immanuel interrupted this copious flow of opinion by asking to look over the farm. He had already been visited by vague misgivings as to the wisdom of his course; that these misgivings had their rise in the girl's blue eyes, he did not guess. It occurred to him, however, that life was, after all, curiously alike, whether lived in a Newport villa or a back-country farm. Absorbed in these meditations, he scarcely heard his new mentor's exposition on the relative merits of timothy hay and red clover for winter fodder, though he returned affirmative answers whenever an upward inflection seemed to demand.

"You seem to have some book-larnin', I take notice," said the old man crustily; "but book-larnin' ain't everythin'; an' it ain't no airthly good to ye ef you let yer wits go wool-gatherin', I kin' of mistrusted you wa'n't lis'nin'. Wall, young folks will be young folks, an' I guess it's better so; but ef I was you I wouldn't let Hildy's pink cheeks distract yer mind f'om more useful things."

Immanuel assured his employer gravely that he would remember his warning; he also intimated that he understood the hint conveyed in his concluding words.

"Sho!" cried Mr. Scott, with some embarrassment; "I ain't proud, an' don't you think so fer a minute. They ain't no better man on this airth 'an a good, honest farmer, an' I know it! But a man's got to know his biz mighty well to take care of any woman, an' don't you fergit it. An' think's I Hildy wouldn't care no more'n a kitten unwindin' a ball of yarn; but it wouldn't be so 'greeable for you to git the mitten come fall."

The young man made no reply; he was again reflecting on the solidarity of human opinion.

TO BE CONTINUED

On market day remember

Uneeda Biscuit

You can't gainsay their freshness, for there's the In-er-seal on the package.

LEWIS UNION SUITS

Madam Azproz, wife of the Mexican Embassador, says:

"FINEST"

"I consider your goods the finest I have ever examined. Send two suits silk underwear for my husband."

FOR MEN AND WOMEN.

Lace Knit is essentially the underwear of the discriminating, and the fact that this is so generally selected, is ment. Lace Knit is scientifically woven, skin ject. The open weave mits of firm thread, not wear of ordinary weave. Adapts itself to peculiarities of figure and is the great favorite of stout people.

SAMPLES of Lace Knit and our matchless full fashioned underwear fabrics FREE. We will send catalogue and self-measurement blanks to any address and guarantee satisfactory results. If your dealer does not handle the Lewis goods and you prefer to buy of him, send us his name.

LEWIS KNITTING COMPANY, 190 Main St., Janesville, Wis.

ESTABLISHED SEVENTEEN YEARS.

Any Young Man or Woman Can Earn a

BICYCLE FREE

without interfering with present occupation, by riding and selling our HIGH GRADE One Year GUARANTEED

1902

"OAKWOOD" and "ARLINGTON"

In addition to FREE BICYCLE we will give
$1,000.00 in GOLD to those making the LARGEST SALE in April, May and June, 1902.

No catalogues or circulars to distribute.

BICYCLES FROM $8.95 UPWARDS.

All new styles; no second-hand wheels; no old models. Our highest priced 1902 "Oakwood," strong, graceful frame, seamless tubing, G.A.J.

tires, Garford saddle, adjustable handle bar.

Everything guaranteed first-class. Only $18.75

Equal to any wheel sold for $50.00. You can sell it for $25 the day you receive it. Write for particulars concerning FREE BICYCLE and CASH PAYMENT OF $1,000.00. Address

CASH BUYERS' UNION, DEPT. D-18, CHICAGO, ILLS.

REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO.

SIMPLY PRESS THIS

"The Pen That Fills Itself."

FOR A TWO CENT STAMP we will send our interesting and instructive book with valuable suggestions for correcting common errors in handwriting; how to acquire vertical writing, model capitals, etc., fully describing Conklin's Self-Filling Pen.

No dropper, no unscrewing of joints, no pulling of plugs, no soiling of fingers, no taking apart to clean; will not roll off a sloping desk. Costs no more than ordinary fountain pens of equal grade. Regular pen, $3.00; large, $4.00; extra large, $5.00; prepaid anywhere; guaranteed. Use it 30 days; your money back if not perfectly satisfactory.

ORDER DIRECT! WE ARE SURE TO FIT THE MOST PARTICULAR HAND, AS WE CAN MATCH
THE FINENESS AND FLEXIBILITY OF ANY STEEL PEN YOU SEND US.

The old way The Conklin Pen Co.,

636 Madison Street, Toledo, Ohio. The new way

Do you know that there is science in neatness? Be wise and use

SAPOLIO

If You Are Not Aware

Grand Rapids is Famous for Fine Furniture
BISHOP FURNITURE
Will Convince You.

We ship on approval, guaranteeing safe delivery and that we save you money. We allow furniture in your home five days when it may be returned at our expense and your money refunded if you are not perfectly satisfied.

No. 1103, French Leg Dining Chair.

Price, per set of 6, $12.90
Same as sells for $17.

No. 1105, Morris Chair.

Made of quartered oak, finely finished in Golden, Flemish or Weathered.

Price, $9.50

Retail Value, $15.00.

We Prepay Freight

to all points east of Mississippi river and north of Tennessee, and allow freight that far to points beyond.

Large Catalog, showing a great variety of all kinds of Fine Furniture, free upon request.

BISHOP FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Memorial Lights Set Up

More Beacons for the Old Bowery
Mission Gospel Lighthouse

the letters received during the week:

"I am gratified to pledge a dollar a year in memory of a loved one," writes F. H. S., Holland Patent, N. Y., and adds: "May the old Gospel Lighthouse shine on, and may it be the light of many a saved soul in the Kingdom of our God."

"I send this to the dear old Bowery Mission, and every year, if possible, the same amount will be sent, and I pray God some mother's boy may be saved through its instrumentality," is the kindly message of "A Friend," Leger, Okla.

Here is another beautiful memorial gift. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. S., Mars, Neb., write: "This, in support of the Bowery Mission work, we give in memory of our two little boys, who have gone to Jesus. We pledge this yearly if God prospers us sufficiently."

"In memory of my sainted daughter," writes J. W. M., Oswego, N. Y., "and praying that his blessing may accompany this mite and that some poor wandering soul may be brought to the Saviour."

"I shall give my mite as long as I shall have the means to do so, and every year during which my life shall be spared," is the cordial letter of Mrs. A. E. R., Milford, Calif.

Through J. R., Marshall, Superintendent, the Bell Memorial Sabbath School of Whitney, Pa., contributed as an Easter offering to the Bowery Mission's work $7.04.

A touching gift comes from Mrs. Fred B., Cleburne, Tex., who writes: "The dollar enclosed is the savings, in pennies and dimes, of my little five-year-old Hattie, who went to heaven a few months ago."

Jean, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Enclosed find $2 in memory of my dear sister, who is 'lost awhile.' May it rescue a soul."

"In memory of my mother, Isadora M.—S.," writes a subscriber, Biloxi, Mo., in sending her contribution.

Mrs. A. S., Washington, D. C., sends $2 as "an Easter remembrance."

"I propose to give this sum ($1), if not more, every year while I live," writes Mrs. Mary B., Jamaica, Mass.

Mrs. David C., Denham Springs, La. ($5) writes: "While God grants me life (though that may not be long), I bind myself to give every year $5 to keep the 'beacon light' burning, and may its beams draw many to the 'true light.'"

The following contributions were received during the week:

| | | | |
|-------------------------|-------|----------------------------|-------|
| Mrs. M. A. Lake | 1.00 | Mrs. K. A. H. Mt. Hope | 1.00 |
| P. A. Kipstein | 1.00 | Kiss | 1.00 |
| May E. Clatchell | 1.00 | A. Friend, Hacketts- | 1.00 |
| P. M. Smith | 1.00 | town, N. J. | 1.00 |
| Rev. A. S. Willoughby | 1.00 | Geo. Kinsinger | 10.00 |
| China, Me | 1.00 | From a Reader of the | |
| Mrs. G. P. Davis | 1.00 | C. H. San Jose, Cal. | 4.50 |
| Mrs. I. Broward | 1.00 | Mrs. D. Van Horn | 50 |
| A. C. Mass | 2.00 | L. A. H. Moore, Okla. | 1.00 |
| Lady M. Becker | 1.00 | P. J. S. A. White, Equali- | 2.00 |
| Mrs. M. E. Tuttle | 1.00 | ty, Ill. | 5.00 |
| B. W. Hottelmann | 1.00 | Mrs. W. Woodside | 2.00 |
| Gen. T. H. Hubbard | 50.00 | A. Chas. of Young | |
| Miss L. Castree | 10.00 | Men, Sandusky, O. | 2.00 |
| Miss L. Castree | 2.50 | O. W. O. Hardman | 1.00 |
| Cona Butler | 10.00 | Mrs. Louise P. Love | 1.00 |
| Mrs. J. Campbell | 50 | Mrs. B. H. Edmonds | 2.00 |
| F. G. Meiner, Jr. | 5.00 | A Friend of the Poor, | |
| John M. Bender | 4.50 | Woodcock, Pa. | 1.00 |
| Mrs. C. Squires | 5.00 | Mrs. E. M. Simons | 1.00 |
| Friend, Southwick | 1.00 | F. H. S. Holland Pat- | |
| C. Page | 2.00 | ent, N. Y. | 1.00 |
| Mrs. Williams | 50.00 | E. C. Haby | 1.00 |
| E. M. Walker | 1.00 | A. V. H. Romney, On- | |
| D. H. Clayton | 5.00 | tario, Canada | 1.00 |
| Mrs. E. A. Troth | 1.00 | A. Friend, Leger, Okla. | 1.00 |
| Alfred Johnson | 1.00 | William Wickes | 10.00 |
| E. F. M. N. Livermore | 1.00 | Mrs. J. J. Tyler | 3.00 |
| Mrs. W. L. Scales | 1.00 | A. A. Weeks | 25.00 |
| Mrs. K. Chapley | 1.00 | Mrs. C. E. Kimball | 10.00 |
| Mrs. Lydia E. Wheeler | 1.00 | M. L. S. Gushaw, Pa. | 2.00 |
| Carolina Pfeiffer | 1.00 | In Memory of a Dear | |
| Friend, Grand Rapids | 1.00 | One Gone, Charles- | |
| Mrs. H. Youmans | 1.00 | ton, Tenn. | 2.00 |
| W. & M. Wash | 5.00 | C. D. Bradley | 1.00 |
| A Poor Mother's re- | | Mrs. C. D. Bradley | 1.00 |
| quest, Wykoff, Minn. | 5.00 | Mrs. Orta Bailey | 1.00 |
| Mr. & Mrs. J. R. Cub- | | F. K. Hickok | 1.00 |
| bage | 2.00 | Mrs. A. H. Kinyon | 1.00 |
| E. E. Gam | 1.00 | Mrs. E. O. Pimney | 2.00 |
| Mrs. J. T. Bates | 1.00 | Almira E. Switzer | 1.00 |
| Mrs. W. L. Scales | 1.00 | Mr. & Mrs. H. M. Stock- | |
| Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Maider | 1.00 | ing | 1.00 |
| "Pilgrim," Lodgepole, | | Mrs. Mary E. Pulver | 1.00 |
| Neb. | 1.00 | Dr. & Mrs. N. Jos In- | |
| Mrs. C. H. Sawyer | 1.00 | gersoll | 1.00 |
| Anna Gray | 1.00 | Mrs. E. S. Corso | 1.00 |
| Friends of Bowery | | L. A. Mack | 1.00 |
| Mission, Manvel | | Mrs. Anna Hamilton | 1.00 |
| No. Dak. | 1.00 | Geo. E. Parrett | 1.00 |
| S. F. H. Trenton, N. J. | 1.00 | B. E. Brown | 1.00 |
| Mrs. E. W. H. Lyne, Ct. | 1.00 | Mrs. Jennie Miller | 1.00 |
| F. A. S. Doyart, Iowa | 1.00 | Sarah E. Goidy | 1.00 |
| "M. S. R." Brooklyn | 1.00 | Summit, Wis. | 1.00 |
| Mrs. J. C. Polton | 1.00 | Hamilton, Ber- | |
| Mrs. M. Burpee | 1.00 | muda | 1.00 |

WE WOULD GIVE
$50,000 IN CASH

if the people of the United States could in some way be made to realize that the greatest offer that has ever been made in real estate, or probably ever will be made,

This cor. lot at Flatbush & Linden Aves., Brooklyn, is worth $8,000 and is but little over 1/2 mile from our property, Rugby is embodied in our proposition to sell a lot in New York City with all city improvements for $480—because if the situation were actually understood by every person in the country there would not be one single foot of property left twenty-four hours after this knowledge was brought to their attention.

We are selling lots for less than $500 which are intrinsically worth $20,000 if you will take into consideration the three elements which have gone to make up values in New York City outside of fashionable districts:—distance from the center, transportation facilities, rate of fare.

The difference is, the $20,000 lot had transportation to it several years ago, and now is surrounded with houses costing an average of from $10,000 to $40,000 apiece, while our land, which has only now just secured this improvement and transportation, must wait until the people realize that these have been secured, and until the solidly built portions (now so comparatively close to us) have reached and enveloped us, and actually brought the values where they rightfully belong.

Illustrations: Lot on corner 146th Street and Third Avenue, New York City, worth in 1881 $1,500, sold in spring of 1901 for $70,000 to Henry Lewis Morris. His grandfather sold it for $155 in 1853.

Lot on 80th Street, opposite Central Park, sold in 1850 for $500, in 1901 brought a price that showed an increase of $500 for every 60 days from 1850 to 1901. (Authority, Real Estate Editor New York Sun.)

Residences on Linden Ave., between the above Flatbush Ave. corner and the Utica Ave. corner, as below

This increase will be maintained as surely as New York is destined to grow; and as surely as equal transportation makes equal values, so surely will this lot be worth as much relatively as the lot in upper Manhattan.

We can prove it if you come to New York. We will try to prove it if you will send us your name and address. Is it not worth your while? We ask nothing of you except a letter or a postal. If we were sure you were in good earnest we would far rather say, send us your name and we will send you tickets to New York. This you know is obviously impossible, but if you will let us put the matter before you, we will in some way prove that our proposition is a sound one, if we have to bring you to New York to do it.

What we want is to have you know that we are honest, and that every statement we make is incontrovertible truth. Then we are absolutely certain that we can do business together.

We sell a $480 lot for $10 down and $6 per month. This carries a life insurance, a guaranteed increase of 20% in one year, a free round-trip to New York (east of Chicago, or a like distance), all improvements, your money back with 6% interest if not found as represented. What more can we do? Now, will you send us your name?

WOOD, HARMON & CO., Dept. B 8, 257 Broadway, New York

Corner Utica Avenue and Linden Boulevard, Rugby. Every improvement you see has been made within a year.

PAINT YOUR CUTS, ABRASIONS, HANG-NAILS, CHAPPED AND SPLIT LIPS OR FINGERS, BURNS, BLISTERS, ETC., WITH

NEW-SKIN
TRADE MARK
REGISTERED
WATERPROOF
Liquid
Court Plaster.

AND FORGET THEM.

Will not wash off. Heals the wound.

Three sizes 10 cts., 25 cts., 50 cts.

At all up-to-date Drug Stores. Any Druggist can get it for you, but if he will not, don't take a substitute. Send the money to us and we will supply you by return mail.

DOUGLAS MFG. CO., Dept. 32, 107 Fulton St., New York.

$12.98 STEEL RANGE.
For $12.98 without reservoir or shelf; $17.98 with reservoir, high shelf and closet, exactly as illustrated, we sell this big steel range that others advertise and sell at $25.00 to $35.00. We under-sell every one in stoves and ranges. Write for FREE Stove Catalogue. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

BURPEE'S SEEDS

NEVER BEFORE have we introduced such SUPERB NOVELTIES of unusual merit. Six choicest Vegetables and five finest Flowers are shown painted from nature, others illustrated from photographs and all honestly described in BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1902. This "leading American Seed Catalogue" is mailed FREE to all who intend to buy. Write to-day, a postal card will do.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Seed Growers, PHILADELPHIA.

DOCTORS, DENTISTS, TEACHERS and intelligent men in small cities; learn the "Fay System of prescribing glasses" and increase your income. W. G. Fay Mfg. Co., 178 Broadway, N. Y.

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; hairless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars. Dept. E. KARL GIESSENER, 88-4th Avenue, New York.

RUBIFOAM

is the children's favorite dentifrice. Its delicious flavor pleases them. Through its use the permanent teeth come naturally.

25c. at all Druggists.
For free sample vial, address
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

California

morning and evening trains

For busy people who want to make the journey quickly with the conveniences of luxurious travel.

Leave Chicago { 10 a. m.
8:00 p. m.
11:30 p. m.

VIA

CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN UNION PACIFIC AND
SOUTHERN PACIFIC R'YS

The best of Everything.

ALL AGENTS SELL TICKETS BY THIS ROUTE

STANDARD TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS
(INCORPORATED)
119 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Manufacturers and dealers in new and second hand

Standard Typewriters
and
Typewriter Supplies

All makes sold and rented. Our connections and sources of supply are such that we can sell you better goods for less money than any other concern in the U. S. A.

STANDARD TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS
119 La Salle St., Chicago. To avoid delay address Dept. 7.

COLUMBIA YARNS

For knitting and crocheting, the famous Columbia Yarns are unequalled. The well-known brands—German-town, Spanish, Saxony, Shetland Floss and Shetland Wool, are all celebrated for softness, elasticity, and evenness of thread, brilliancy and durability of color. They are sold by dealers everywhere, and each skein is bound with the Columbia Ring Label, without which none are genuine. The third edition of Columbia Book of the Use of Yarns ready April 15. At your dealer's. Price, 15 cents.

SHORTHAND. Students of the Christian Herald Lessons should get the "Shorthand Instructor," upon which the lessons are based. 276 pp., $1.50. IN SCOTT PITHMAN & SONS, 33 Union Sq., New York. Booklet free.

Once a Pauper, Now Mayor

FROM workhouse boy to mayor is a big leap upward in the social ladder; yet this is the stride Mr. William Crooks of Poplar, England has just made. There was great rejoicing when it was announced that he was elected Mayor of his borough of Poplar. William was the oldest of six children, who depended on a widowed mother for support. She was a pious woman. The entire family was sent to the workhouse. After a time, William determined to get out and make a living. He was then nine years old. He made the acquaintance of a blacksmith, at whose shop he was hired to blow the bellows. After a few years as blacksmith, he was apprenticed to a cooper. Before twenty he had saved enough money to marry. Finding work in London somewhat uncertain, he was forced to tramp the country in search of employment. Eighteen months spent in Liverpool were perhaps the hardest in his existence. Without a penny in his pockets, he walked the streets. Yet he never for a moment lost his trust in God. How he prayed and hoped, and hoped and prayed in that long, weary time! But employment came at last, and better times returned. Crooks' generous nature and his championship of his fellow workers won him their confidence and esteem. After years of steady labor at his calling, he was chosen for a seat on the London Asylums Board. Mr. Crooks has also been a member of the London County Council since its inception. At the present time he is chairman of the Council's Industrial Schools Committee.

WILLIAM CROOKS

He is still a poor man. "Our poverty is our only plea," he said in a good humored speech at a London gathering (after his election as Mayor of Poplar) where he was accompanied by his wife. "If we were not poor, could we work so hard for the poor?" Probably for the first time in history, the mayor of a large industrial town is content with a workman's wage, living in a workman's small house, on a workman's street, and in the heart of a crowded district. He will accept no salary. It is safe to say that there is not a more discussed man in London, nor one more popular than William Crooks, the working man Mayor of Poplar.

The Will of Cecil Rhodes

SURPRISE has been excited both in Europe and America by the extraordinary liberality of the bequests in the will of the late Cecil J. Rhodes, the South African magnate, who died lately. The character of the document itself must rank it as one of the most remarkable wills ever recorded in any age or country. After expressing his appreciation of the inestimable value of education, and for the purpose of fostering appreciation of the advantages of uniting the English-speaking races, the testator makes a magnificent endowment for scholarships at Oxford University, in the distribution of which not only Britain and her colonies are included, but also Germany and the United States. He provides two Oxford scholarships for every State and Territory of the United States, fifteen scholarships for German students, twelve for Cape Colony, nine for Rhodesia, three each for Natal, New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Queensland, West Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, Ontario, Quebec, Newfoundland, the Bermudas and Jamaica. Each scholarship provides $1,500 a year for the student for three consecutive years. The conditions are uniform.

The students chosen are not to be mere bookworms. Mr. Rhodes suggests that the qualifications of the ideal student should be in these proportions:

"Four qualifications in the proportions of three-tenths for the first, literary; two-tenths for the second, fondness for sport; three-tenths for the third, the qualities of manhood, and two-tenths for the fourth, exhibition of moral force. If the maximum marks were 200, they would be apportioned, sixty each for the first and third, and forty for the second and fourth qualifications. No student shall be qualified or disqualified for election to a scholarship on account of race or religious opinions. A qualified student who is elected shall take up his residence within six months of his election to the scholarship payable from such residence. I desire that the scholars be distributed among the colleges of Oxford, and not resort in undue numbers to one or more colleges only."

In the codicil, which contains the German bequest, the testator declares that the students are to be nominated by the Kaiser, "for a good understanding between England, Germany, and the United States will secure the peace of the world, and educational relations will form the strongest tie." There are many other important gifts in the will, chiefly connected with the residue of his estates, but the splendid educational endowment overshadows all. It is the absorbing subject of comment here and abroad, and many of the leading journals unite in pronouncing the bequest, and the great scheme to be carried out under it, as an instance of posthumous generosity that has hardly a parallel for broad, elaborate forethought, far-reaching scope and high purpose.

SPRAYING FRUIT TREES

The question of spraying fruit trees to prevent the depredation of insect pests and fungus diseases is no longer an experiment but a necessity.

The readers will do well to write Wm. Stahl, Quincy, Ill., and get his catalogue describing twenty-one styles of Spraying Outfits and full treatise on spraying the different fruit and vegetable crops, which contain much valuable information, and may be had for the asking.

Benjamin Franklin Said—

"Empty your purse into your head, and no man can take it from you."

A little money, and such time as you can spare, will give your brain a training that will increase your earning power, win promotion, qualify for better work. I. C. S. Textbooks make it easy for busy people to learn by mail.

Courses in Engineering, Mechanical Drawing, Architecture, German, French, etc. Write for circular, mentioning subject that interests you.

INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS,
Box 861, Scranton, Pa.

WASHINGTON.

Three-day Personally-Conducted Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The next Pennsylvania Railroad Personally-Conducted Tour to Washington leaves Thursday, April 17. Rate, covering railroad transportation for the round trip, hotel accommodations, and guides, $14.50 from New York, $13.00 from Trenton, and $11.50 from Philadelphia. These rates cover accommodation for two days at the Arlington, Normandia, Riggs, or Ebbitt House. For accommodations at Regent, Metropolitan or National Hotel, $2.50 less. Special side trip to Mt. Vernon.

All tickets good for ten days, with special hotel rates after expiration of hotel coupons. For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents: Tourist Agent, 1106 Broadway, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 780 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

IF YOU LOVE CHOICE FLOWERS

Send 10 cents and I will mail you 15 liberal packets of my choice seed for trial, with catalog, including 50 varieties large fl. Pansies mixed, 42 vars. Japan Pinks; 50 vars. Double Asters; 100 vars. Verbenas; 26 vars. large fl. Phlox; Philippine Fountain Plants; 10 vars. Double Everlastings; 20 vars. Satin Flower, etc. You will not have to use a microscope to find seeds in my packets, and they are sure to grow.

L. W. GOODELL, Seed Grower, Pansy Park, Dwight, Mass.

Mellin's Food nourishes the whole system and provides for a perfect and normal develop- ment.

Send for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass.

Giant Flowering Caladium

Grandest foliage and flowering plant yet introduced. Leaves 3 to 5 feet long by 2 or 2 1/2 feet broad; perfectly immense, and make a plant which for tropical luxuriance has no equal. Added to this wonderful foliage effect are the mammoth lily-like blossoms, 12 to 15 inches long, snow-white, with a rich and exquisite fragrance. Plants bloom perpetually all summer in the garden, or all the year round in pots. Not only is it the grandest garden or lawn plant, but as a pot plant for large windows, verandas, halls, or conservatories, it rivals the choicest palms in foliage, to say nothing of its magnificent flowers. Thrives in any soil or situation, and grows and blooms all the year, and will astonish every one with its magnificence—so novel, effective, free growing and fragrant.

Fine plants, which will soon bloom and reach full perfection, 25c. each; 3 for 60c.; 6 for $1.00 by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition.

OUR GREAT CATALOGUE of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs, Plants and Rare New Fruits; profusely illustrated; Large Colored Plates; 136 pages; FREE to any who expect to order. Many great novelties.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y.

16 D. & C. ROSES
$1.00

We grow annually nearly a million Rose plants, including a thousand varieties. To introduce them we offer our Great Trial Collection, which we will send, postpaid, to any address, satisfaction and safe arrival guaranteed.

16 D. & C. Roses
$1.00

Will bloom profusely this season, all hardy. Strong plants, not slips, on their own roots. FREE with every order for the above, the great new Rose Yellow Maman Cochet as one of the 16 varieties, if you mention where you saw this advertisement. Also free return check good for 25c. on next order.

Our New Guide to Rose Culture 114 pages—tells how to grow and describes our famous roses and all other flowers worth growing—free with every order for the above. Also free on request. Established 1850.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., West Grove, Pa.

A Free Cottage Plan

Will be sent to each new subscriber who also sends the name of a person who will build. AMERICAN HOMES is a beautifully illustrated monthly magazine for those who want to know how to build, pay for and beautify homes. 1 yr. $1. One copy one d. Newsdealers or direct from us.

AMERICAN HOMES - 156 Fifth Avenue - NEW YORK

CHEAP RATES

California, Washington, Oregon, Colorado. We give reduced rates on household goods of intending settlers to the above States. Write for rates. Map of California, free.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL FREIGHT CO.

38 Market Street, Chicago, and 10 West 28th Street, New York

LADIES We will send one ELITE WAIST FORMER FREE, on receipt of your address and one two cent stamp.

"THE ELITE" WATERTOWN, N. Y.

THE "1900" FAMILY WASHER FREE.

Time, Labor and Expense of Washing Cut in Two.
No More Stoopng, Rubbing or Boiling of Clothes.

THE "1900" FAMILY WASHER

SENT FREE without deposit or advance payment of any kind, freight paid, on 30 days' trial. It is unquestionably the greatest labor-saving machine ever invented for family use. Entirely new principle. It is simplicity itself. There are no wheels, paddles, rockers, cranks or complicated machinery. It revolves on bicycle wheels, making it by far the easiest running washer on the market. No strength required, a child can operate it. No more stooping, rubbing, boiling of clothes. Hot water and soap all that are needed. It will wash large quantities of clothes (no matter how soiled) perfectly clean in 6 minutes. Impossible to ruin the most delicate fabrics.

Sparkhill, Rockland Co., N. Y., Oct. 29, 1901.
I have given your washer a fair trial. It is one of the best washers I ever saw. I washed three pairs of my dirty and greasy overalls and shirts in 10 minutes, and washed them clean. My housekeeper says it would have taken her two hours to have washed them the old way. It will wash ten shirts, with collars and cuffs, in 10 minutes. It will wash three washes without hanging the water, only adding soap suds and about two quarts of hot water after the first wash.
I have been a delegate and attended twenty-six conventions held in different parts of the country, and my name is known on nearly every railroad in the United States and Canada. I am an engineer of the New York division of the Erie road, and have run an engine for forty years.
Write at once for catalogue and full particulars to

"1900" WASHER CO.
13W, STATE ST., BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC

(REGISTERED)
NEW WOOD FINISH

FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK
RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD OR METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED.

A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED
MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, HANGAM, CHERRY, GREEN, OR BLACK. BLACK (Gloss) and NATURAL (Gloss).
IVORY, and YELLOW. COLOR CARD & SAMPLE FREE.

SAMPLE CAN by mail, post paid, for 10¢
THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.,
DEPARTMENT C, CLEVELAND, O.

QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS.

Kitchen Utensils

HAVING THIS TRADE MARK

AGATE NICKEL-STEEL WARE

WE MAKE 5200 KINDS

ARE SAFE.

We claim Purity and Safety, and substantiate this claim with Chemists' Certificates

By the Blue Label used only by us (and fully sustained by recent U. S. Circuit Court decision) pasted on every piece of genuine Agate Nickel-Steel Ware. Booklet showing facsimile of this label, etc., mailed free to any address.

Agate Nickel-Steel Ware is sold by the leading Department and Housefurnishing Stores.

Lalanc & Grosjean Mfg. Co.,
New York, Boston, Chicago.

SALESMEN AND AGENTS WANTED

BIG WAGES

on the famous PURITAN WATER STILL, a wonderful invention, not a filter, 22,000 already sold. Demand enormous. Everywhere. Over the kitchen stove it turns impure water, aerated, distilled, and sparkling water, pure, delicious, and healthy. Only method. Distilled Water reduces Dyspepsia, Stomachic, Bowel, Kidney, Bladder and Heart troubles; prevents rheumatism and sickness. Write for Booklet. New Plan, Terms, etc. FREE.

Harrison Mfg. Co.,
143 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

STEAM DOME

REVITALIZED WITH STERILIZED OXYGEN

DISTILLED WATER

WATER

WATER

STEM-WIND WATCH, CHAIN AND CHARM

You get a Stem-Wind, Nickel-Plated Watch, warranted, also Chain and Charm. Selling 19 packages of Buline at 10 each. Send name and address at once and we will send you the Buline and our large Premium List, postpaid. No money required.

BULINE MFG. CO., Box 656, Concord Junction, Mass.

A Life of Good Deeds Ended

A LADY in North Dakota sends this touching letter, in tribute to the memory of a beloved and exemplary Christian mother. With her permission, we print it below, believing that it will interest many readers:

For several years we have been sending THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, as a New Year's

MRS. HELEN MADISON
THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. We thought we would like to have you know what a source of comfort and blessing it was to her. Not only did she read it at home, but she also took it with her to the neighbors, and read it to the children, explaining to them the illustrations. It was her constant companion—some called it her Bible—and so much did it seem a part of her surroundings, that a copy was placed under her hand when she lay in her coffin prepared for the grave. May it long continue a blessing to others as it proved to be to her. Its value cannot be estimated.

Cando, N. D. CARRIE E. MADISON.

Fanny Crosby's Birthday

Fanny Crosby, the aged hymn-writer, whose beautiful life is already familiar to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, on March 24 celebrated her eighty-second birthday. No one, seeing this sprightly little lady, would suppose her to be near that milestone of life. Her mind is alert, her carriage firm, and her usual reply to inquiries "How are you, Fanny?" is the cheery exclamation, "Bright as a dollar!" In accordance with a long standing custom, at the office of her publishers, the Biglow & Main Co., friends gathered to congratulate her. The following effusion, by one who was present, strikes the keynote of the occasion:

What means this gathering of the clans,
This smacking of lips, this joining of hands,
This whispering, this fixing plans
This general howl of 'Hello'?

Why comes this woman to our view,
What with this fuss has she to do,
What brings out all our jolly crew?
Why—Fanny's eighty-two!

A Plea from Missouri

From Mountain, Mo., Mrs. B. E. Beary, Sabbath School Superintendent there for four years, writes that the drought of 1901, which affected the section in which she lives, embracing portions of McDonald and Barry counties, Mo., and Benton, Ark., are suffering from the after effects. She says: "If we could be helped now with feed, flour, some meat, some groceries (also seed corn, oats, millet and potatoes) it might enable us to make a crop this coming season. If we get no help many families will be in desperate circumstances another year. Many horses have died from overwork and underfeeding, and many more must follow unless we have something to feed them."

SING OF JESUS

STRIKE your highest notes, O angels!
Sing of Christ, the Saviour slain!
Slain—but ris'n again—triumphant
Over death and sin and pain.
Healer of earth-woe and strife—
Sing of Jesus, Prince of Life!

Jesus bowed to Death's dominion—
He who held life's yondrous key—
But not long the tomb could hold him,
And he woke in victory.
Prince of Life—the Lord of Love,
Reigneth King of heaven above.

Saviour! my Redeemer-God,
Let me walk the narrow way,
Serving thee with faithfulness,
Till I know eternal day.
Prince of Life, rule in my heart!
Rule, and nevermore depart.

MRS. FRANK A. BRECK.

There are two sorts of lamp chimneys: mine and the rest of them.

MACBETH.

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Pullman Combination Go-Carts

Called "Pullman" because they can be turned into a Baby Carriage. Are a boon to baby and mother alike. Always ready when baby wants to sleep or sit up comfortably; a perfect baby bed at home. Over 50 HANDSOME 1902 STYLES beautiful feed-work, upholstery and paragon of best materials green enameled, special tried gears of Bessemer steel, wheels rubber tired, with latest improvements throughout. Also a complete line of Baby Carriages from $3.75 up. Sent subject to approval, to be returned at our expense and money promptly refunded if not satisfactory. Write for our catalog to-day. FREE.

CASH BUYERS' UNION, (INC.)
154-168 W. Van Buren St., Dept. C-15 Chicago, Ill.

$15.05 STEEL MILL

For $15.05 we sell the HIGHEST GRADE, STRONGEST, LIGHTEST RUNNING AND BEST PUMPING STEEL WINDMILL. $14.30 buys the highest grade and strongest all steel windmill TOWER. Every mill covered by a BINDING GUARANTEE. FOR GREAT-EST WINDMILL OFFER EVER MADE, cut this ad. out and mail to:

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

CAN WE HELP YOU?

We find for Employers on short notice, no matter where located, guaranteed capable, reliable and experienced help, male or female, for any and every position or grade of employment. Cashiers, Bookkeepers, Salesmen, Bookkeepers, Stenographers, Agents, etc., all trades, Railroad, Domestic and Farm help. We also find positions of employment for worthy persons in all walks of life, no matter where you live. Our system is perfect and successful. Write for our plan and application blank stating your wants. Enclose stamp to NATIONAL EMPLOYERS SUPPLY CO., Newark, New York State.

1877 FOR 25 YEARS 1902

We Have Successfully Treated Cancer

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS SANATORIUM

has no rivals. Describe your case, and we will send prepared the most complete treatise on the subject of Cancer and Tumors ever published, and will refer you to persons whom we have successfully treated that were similarly afflicted.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, No. Adams, Mass.

Make Ironing Day Pleasant

for the entire household by using the

THE GEM IRONING MACHINE

Saves worry, confusion and work and a great deal of the time usually required. Cost only $1.00 per month to heat in gas or gasoline. Sent free for itself. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sent FREE—Illustrated booklet, "Modern Methods of Ironing." Write today. Valuable suggestions. DOMESTIC MANGLE CO. Box C, Racine Junction, Wisconsin.

Learn Book-keeping

BY MAIL—AT YOUR OWN HOME.

This is the chance of a lifetime for young men and women and you should not miss it. New method, any one can learn it within 6 to 8 weeks and place you in position to earn good salary at once. Thoroughly practical and remarkably inexpensive; we find positions, too, free of charge. Write to-day for full particulars Michigan Business Institute, 62 Institute Building, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Cash Buyers for Farms

or other real estate may be found through me, no matter where located. Send description and price and learn my successful method for finding buyers. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

"SHYNEY-SHYNE" SILVER POLISH

Contains no acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful lustre. Once used, always used. We want a million orders this season. By mail, 15c. Two boxes, 25c. Till June 1st will send package of lower goods free with each box.

THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dept. C.

Spring House Cleaning

Is the time to substitute things up-to-date for things worn out. Begin at the kitchen, establish a step-saving system by using a

"Hoosier" Cabinet No. 15

It is compact and convenient. Holds at your fingers' ends everything used to prepare a meal. Gives time and strength for reading, sewing, etc. Write for catalog, free. Shows many other cabinets, sewing tables, etc., $5.50 and up.

This trade mark is on every Cabinet. — Don't buy until you see our Catalog or a real Hoosier Cabinet.

The Hoosier Mfg. Co., 26 Adams St., New Castle, Ind.

DENT'S Toothache Gum

A SWELL AFFAIR

Should be carried in the pocket. Stops the pain of an aching tooth instantly. Known and praised everywhere. Avoid useless imitations; get Dent's, the original and only effective. All druggists or by mail, 15c.

C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

GET THE GENUINE

PUNCTUREPROOF

SELF-HEALING PNEUMATIC BICYCLE TIRES. SAVE MONEY AND TROUBLE. NAILS, TACKS AND GLASS WILL NOT LET THE AIR OUT. BE SURE TIRE IS BRANDED WITH AN ALLIGATOR IN RED OTHERS NOT GENUINE. GUARANTEED NO OTHER TIRE LIKE IT. PUNCTUREPROOF.

THIS OFFER IS WITHOUT PARALLEL AND IS LIMITED TO ADVERTISING QUICK, EXPRESS WILL SEND C.O.D. SUBJECT TO EXAMINATION ANYWHERE. NO DEPOSIT REQUIRED. MADE IN ALL SIZES CATALOGUE FREE WITH KEY-TONE ILLUSTRATION. C. MECHANICAL CONSTRUCTION.

THE VIM COMPANY, CHICAGO

STUDY OSTEOPATHY AT HOME

Learn a profession in which success is assured from the start. The mail course of the National School of Osteopathy teaches in a thorough and practical manner the great science of healing without drugs to men and women young and old. This college is chartered by the State of Illinois with power to grant the degree Doctor of Osteopathy. Many of our pupils earn ten times the cost of instruction during their course. Full particulars together with "A Lesson in Osteopathy" free.

Address B. C. TURNER, D. O., Sec'y.

NATIONAL SCHOOL OF OSTEOPATHY, Dept. D. X., 4000 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

is a portable 100 candle power light, costing only 25c per week. Makes and burns its own gas. Brighter than electricity or acetylene, and cheaper than kerosene. No Dirt. No Grease. No Odor. Over 100 styles. Lighted instantly with a match. Every lamp warranted.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

THE BEST LIGHT CO.,
3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio.

CORNS PERMANENTLY RELIEVED FREE

ALLEN'S ANTISEPTIC CORN PLASTER relieves corns permanently. To prove it I will mail free plaster to any one. Send name and address—no money.

GEORGE M. DORRANCE, 221 Fulton St., Dept. G, New York

ITS WATERPROOF No. 61 FINISH

Our booklet "Floor Plan" sent free.

New York PRATT & LAMBERT Chicago

HELD HIGH

in the estimation of all persons who have ever used them.

Old Hickory Chairs

best for all around use. Please everyone. They are stylish, durable and unique in the natural bark finish of hickory. Nothing like them for style and comfort. Elegant for that cozy corner, den, sitting room, veranda and lawn. Our chairs improve with wear and last for generations.

Chair in illustration is our most popular style, Andrew "Jackson." It is light, comfortable, durable and especially adapted to hard service. These patterns are exact duplicates of the original chairs which Andrew Jackson used—hence the name. Seat 17 inches wide, 15 inches deep, height over all 36 inches. Price $2.75 or two for $5. Freight paid east of Mississippi River.

SENT FREE. Finely illustrated catalogue with prices. Jives good hint of the home. Ask for it.

THE OLD HICKORY CHAIR CO.,
461 Cherry St., Martinsville, Ind.

Don't Scrub!

A woman's work is lessened if the floors are easy to keep clean.

The Heath & Milligan Creolite
For Floor Painting

made in 10 Desirable Shades will not only give beautiful floors, but lessen the labor on cleaning day. It comes ready for use and easily applied.

Ask for booklet, "Household Hints in Floor Painting," also our handsome folder showing combination of colors for centers and borders.

HEATH & MILLIGAN
MFG COMPANY,
Makers of best Prepared Paint and Railway White Lead
Dept. C 172 Randolph St.
CHICAGO, ILL.
Established 1861.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets, under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Kinkadee than all others together. Write for catalogue, KINKADEE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box J, Racine, Wisconsin.

CLASS PINS this style, with any letters or figures and one or two colors of enamel, sterling silver, 25¢ each; 50¢ a dozen. Silver plated, 10¢ each; 10¢ a dozen.

Special designs in pins or rings made for any class or society at reasonable prices; send design for estimates. Catalogue free. Bastian Bros., Rochester, 87 N.Y.

YOU CERTAINLY WILL—If you order fence from us, once you are certain to do it again.

THE ADVANCE FENCE is sold direct from the factory to the farmer at wholesale prices. You get the best price. Entirely new woven. No loose ends. Many heights. Write for free circular and special prices.

ADVANCE FENCE CO., 139 N. St., Peoria, Ill.

FENCE! STRONGEST MADE. Built strong. Chicken-tight. Sold to the Farmer at Wholesale Prices. Fully Warranted. Catalogue Free.

COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box 47, Winchester, Indiana, U. S. A.

THE CALL OF THE PROPHET*

Qualifications that Samuel had for the Work he was Commissioned to do

HEREDITY has no place in the qualifications for the prophetic office. Moses, Joshua, David, Isaiah and the others who were made the bearers of God's message to the people were, none of them, the sons of prophets. God chooses his messengers by the sole test of character. Seldom has it happened that our great modern teachers have been the sons of teachers of eminence. It seems from this incident, too, that the qualification of ability or education is not essential. Samuel became a great and wise man, but when he was called to his office he was but a child, and, moreover, a child who "did not yet know the Lord." It is true that he was employed about the Lord's house, but there are many who are familiar with the place of worship who do not know God, and Samuel was one of these. But he had qualifications which were suited to the work that he was called to do. He was attentive to his duties. Supposing that the voice he heard was the voice of Eli, he was prompt to respond. Thrice he left his bed, and went to the old man's couch to learn what he was wanted for. It is not every boy who would have done so. His duties were as humble as those of an office boy, but he did them faithfully, and when God wanted a messenger he chose a boy who was doing his duty.

The boy was humble and obedient. Those are very important qualifications for the service of God. Ignorant as he was of God's ways, he submitted to guidance. Sometimes the ambitious servant of God is too great in his own eyes to do this. God passed over the high priest, and over his sons, and spoke to the child, but the child did not presume on the fact. He answered precisely in the words that Eli taught him. It is well when the simplicity and docility of the child characterize the servant of God. To be quite still, and to hear the commission without intruding the hearer's personality is a difficult matter. Eli, though blind to his own duties as a father and a ruler, had sufficient penetration to understand why God had chosen the boy as the recipient of a revelation. He knew that the attentive ear was the main requisite in dealing with God, and, therefore, instructed the child to declare himself ready to receive the communication whatsoever it might be. In our day, the same qualification is needed. When God speaks, as he still does, by his word and by the voice of conscience, it becomes us to be silent and hear what he says. The communication may not be pleasant; it may involve a painful duty; but the proper answer is, "Thy servant heareth." It is too much the custom to close the ears in such cases.

Then, too, there was readiness to act. No learning, no eloquence was required. A child could repeat the words that were spoken. Having received his commission, he had nothing to do but to utter the message as it had been given to him. God's messengers still need to remember that fact. The time may come in our land when there is a crisis, in which the words of God need to be spoken in no uncertain voice. If, at that time, the recognized religious teachers are, like Eli's sons, occupied with their own interests and their own pleasures, concerned about the results that the fork brings out of the pot (I. Samuel 2: 14)—then God may commission some one now a child among us to declare his will. The words of God have not all been spoken yet, and there may be occasions in our future when, if there is no new word, some old word already spoken will need to be reiterated as the word for that time. Such a crisis came when Luther, the son of a poor miner, was called to the duty, and again later, when John Wesley aroused the Church to a sense of its negligence. Should such times come again, it will be well for the Church and the world if there is some man who in his youth said: "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," and having heard, has the courage and the devotion to deliver the message.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society Epworth League, and Baptist Young People's Union for April 27. I. Samuel 3: 1-21.

The Marvel Camera of the Age Snappa marks a mighty stride in the art of picture making. Learn more about it at the dealers, or write for FREE booklet.

ROCHESTER OPTICAL AND CAMERA CO.
125 South Street, Rochester, New York.

Have a Box of CANDY? It is FREE

CHILDREN, ask your mother to write us how many children she has, send name and address of her grocer, and state where she saw this advertisement—enclose five cents to pay postage. She will receive free of charge a sample box of

SANITAS FOOD CANDY

The New Delicious Health Confection

May be freely eaten without the least injury to teeth or health. Is an aid to digestion. Specially good for puny children and thin people. Put up in the form of caramels, with or without nuts. 4 lbs per pound, with 16¢ added if by mail. 4 lbs delivered east of Mississippi river for $1.60.

SANITAS NUT FOOD CO., Ltd.,
153 Washington Ave., North, Battle Creek, Mich.

$2 Fine Bath Cabinet $2

Placed in Your Home for

Write to-day for our special 10 day offer. State Agents wanted. Position worth $1200 to $1500 per year and expenses. Send for particulars and new book, free.

Robinson Thermal Bath Co., 901-917 Jefferson St., Toledo, O.

CALIFORNIA RED WOOD

Twelve ounce cold rolled copper tanks; hydro-safety lamps; climax safety heater; corrugated wafer-regulator, and the best system of heating and ventilation is what makes the Sure Hatch Incubators hatch sure. Common Sense Brooder takes good care of little chicks. Our free catalogue contains hundreds of actual photographs of the Sure Hatch at work and is full of honest poultry information. You ought to have it. Let us send it to you. Write at once, addressing nearest house, Sure Hatch Incubator Co., Clay Center, Neb., or Columbus, O.

INCUBATORS AND BROODERS

BEST HOT WATER PIPE SYSTEM. Simple, durable, economical and safe. Hatch-eggs stronger and more chickens from 100 eggs than any other. Prices reasonable. 96-page illustrated catalog of Incubators, Brooders, fancy poultry and poultry supplies free.

C. C. SHOEBAKER, Box 111, Freeport, Ill.

RUNS ITSELF! As simple in operation as a gentle summer shower. You strike a light and the Petaluma Incubator does the rest. No worry. No loss. Hatches every fertile egg. 4 sizes. Catalog free.

PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO.,
Box 64, Petaluma, Cal. or Box 64, Indianapolis, Ind.

DON'T SET HENS the same old way when our new plan beats it 10 times.

100 Egg Hatcher Costs Only $2. Over 90¢ in use. 10 days. 100 eggs hatch. No worry. No loss. Hatches every fertile egg. 4 sizes. Catalog free.

Natural Hen Incubator Co., 84, Columbus, Neb.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy, gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

$8.95

EIGHT DOLLARS AND NINETY-FIVE CENTS

buys the celebrated, high grade new 1902 Model EGGEMERE BICYCLE, 28-inch wheel, any height frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT. ANY COLOR KRAVEL. STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

$10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle.
$12.75 for the celebrated 1902 Elgin King or Elgin Queen.
$15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MOREAN & WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC TIRES. A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL on any bicycle ordered. For the most wonderful bicycle offer ever heard of, WRITE FOR OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address, SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Moller's Oil is different from other cod liver oils, as it is never sold in bulk. It is bottled when manufactured, thus passing direct to the consumer without the possibility of adulteration. Each bottle of bears on the label, in perforated letters, the date of manufacture, so that the purchaser may always insist on having oil of the latest season's production, and know that he is getting it.

Peter Moller's Cod Liver Oil

Moller's Cod Liver Oil is put up only in flat, oval bottles, and bears our name as sole agents.

Schiffelin & Co., New York

PETS LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY OF ALL KINDS

ABSOLUTELY STOCK PEDIGREED AND REGISTERED. POULTRY SCORED

FREE

all bred and raised at the where the Agricultural Epitomist is edited and printed amid the activities of real farm life, in which results of experiments made at this Station are given from month to month together with other information of inestimable value to every farmer, garden and household generally, with any size farm down to the smallest garden plot. We breed nothing but the best and purest strains of all kinds of Stock and Poultry including Angora Goats, Scotch Collie Dogs, Belgian Hares, Etc., and all the best strains of Poultry. It is our aim to aid every one whose stock and poultry is not absolutely pure to start in right. A postal card with your name and address and calling attention to this advertisement, will get you full particulars together with descriptions and illustrations of our Pets, Stock and Poultry which we give absolutely free. Address

EPITOMIST EXPERIMENT STATION, Spencer, Ind.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Result of 76 years' experience.

STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo., Dansville, N.Y.

General Offices and Mail Order Shipping
Department at Racine, Wis.

An Unusual Opportunity ==for Safe Investment==

Offered by

RACINE KNITTING COMPANY, RACINE, WIS.

Manufacturers of the Widely Advertised
Racine Feet, Racine Underwear and Hosiery

CAPITAL STOCK $250,000.00

Secured by Over $250,000.00 of Assets. No
Bonded Indebtedness. No Preferred
Stock or Interests of Any Nature

RACINE KNITTING COMPANY, Racine, Wis., offers for sale 10,000 shares of its treasury stock at the par value of $10.00 per share, full paid and non-assessable. Over one-half of the amount offered has been purchased by investors in all parts of the United States. This stock may be purchased in any amount from one share up.

Factory at Racine, Wis.

DIVIDENDS PAYABLE SEMI-ANNUALLY

Earning Capacity 15 per cent. Guaranteed Dividends 6 per cent.

THE earning power of Racine Knitting Company with its present equipment, coupled with its constantly increasing business, is 15 per cent. on its capital stock. In order that new stockholders may be assured a certain fixed minimum dividend, the officers of the company, who are thoroughly responsible, personally, aside from their holdings in Racine Knitting Company, guarantee dividends of 6 per cent. per annum. See fac-simile of Guaranty Clause, which is attached to each stock certificate issued. The entire stock of the company is common stock and all stock shares equally in dividends. It is and will continue to be the policy of the Directors to treat all stockholders equally and fairly. All earnings are and will be divided pro rata over all stock issued. The management is in the hands of conservative people, representing two generations devoted to the textile business in active charge. Salaries paid are merely commensurate with services rendered.

Stevens Point Factory

OUR OBJECT

is to gain the influence of stockholders throughout the country. Hosiery and underwear are used in every household, and the interest in and the goodwill manifested for our products by stockholders will do more to promote the sale of our goods than any other advertising we could do. Every stockholder is thus working in a quiet way for the interests of his investment. No other form of business has as strong a reason for a general distribution of its stock, dealing as we are, direct with consuming public, in a line of goods used by everyone. There are not many forms of investment in which you can assist your interests. You cannot aid a mine to produce or do much to strengthen the price of real estate, but with it every stockholder can and is doing a great deal to add to his own and every other stockholder's interests.

WE INVITE THE MOST CRITICAL INVESTIGATION

The accompanying letters express the opinion of the Cashiers of two of Racine's largest Banks. We refer to any Bank, Commercial Agency or Express Company. Better still, come and see us. Every detail of our business is open for your inspection and if you detect a mis-statement we will be glad to refund all expense incident to your visit. Several of our stockholders have investigated our business in person and in every instance have increased their intended subscription. Our space in this publication is too limited to set forth all the information which we wish you to have.

Application with remittance may be forwarded direct to Herbert S. Blake, Treasurer.

We offer profitable employment to salesman in every locality soliciting orders for our hosiery and underwear

RACINE KNITTING COMPANY, Racine, Wis.

AN INVESTMENT—NOT A SPECULATION

Every dollar invested in the stock of Racine Knitting Company represents more than one dollar of live, active, manufacturing assets. We are not asking you to risk your money in a proposition that is experimental, but to invest in a business operating on a proven policy, and on a foundation built by years of experience. We have no patent rights or processes for sale, but are offering actual property, yielding actual dividends to-day.

STOCK READILY REALIZED UPON

If at any time, for any reason, you desire to convert your stock into ready money, we will sell it for you. We receive orders daily for stock, and are in a position to sell all or any part of your holdings that you may desire to realize on.

OUR BUSINESS

We manufacture a full line of Hosiery, Underwear and general Knit-goods, and sell our product direct to the wearer through local salesmen or by mail orders. By this sales system, we save the profits of the middlemen, and give the consumers better qualities. We make as serviceable a grade of goods as can be produced. The cuts shown are from photographs of our offices and factories. We are at present planning the

First National Bank

RACINE, WIS., Oct. 22, 1901.
RACINE KNITTING CO., Racine, Wis.
GENTLEMEN:—In my opinion, your prospectus sets forth your business accurately, and I can endorse your action in the present increase of your capital stock to accomplish a still further extension. My business relations with the active members of your company cover a period of many years, and I thoroughly appreciate their business integrity. An investment in the stock of your Company will, I believe, prove satisfactory both as to dividends and probable future.
Yours very truly,
G. N. FRATT.

Commercial and Savings Bank

RACINE, WIS., Oct. 18, 1901.
RACINE KNITTING CO., Racine, Wis.
GENTLEMEN:—The writer has given careful consideration to the subject matter of the within prospectus as submitted in proof and can heartily vouch for its integrity and endorse the proposition as made. I have been in intimate social and business relations with the officers and directors of your Company for many years and am pleased to attest their reliability as business men.
Your business certainly warrants this present issue of stock and I can recommend it highly as an investment.
Yours very truly,
C. R. CARPENTER.

erection of another factory for the production of underwear, for which we already have a large demand. Our factories are equipped throughout with the most improved makes of automatic machinery, producing goods of the finest grade at a minimum of cost. We have advertised our products under the brand name "RACINE" for the past four years, and in that time RACINE FEET have become known in nearly every household.

Guaranty Clause

RACINE, WISCONSIN, 190

FOR VALUE RECEIVED, the undersigned guarantee to the holder of the attached Certificate No. of the Capital Stock of RACINE KNITTING COMPANY, a corporation organized and existing under, and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin, that it, said corporation, will duly declare, and pay in good and lawful money of the United States of America, to the holder of said certificate, his representatives or assigns, an annual dividend hereafter of at least six (6) per cent., per annum, payable in semi-annual installments of at least three (3) per cent. each on the par value of said stock, on the first days of January and July of each year.

Witness our hands and seals,

A. J. BLAKE [Seal]

B. B. BLAKE [Seal]

H. S. BLAKE [Seal]

OUR EXHAUSTIVE PROSPECTUS

Gives a full description of the details of our business, and investment proposition. It contains cuts made from photographs of interesting parts of our plants. In it are fac-simile copies of letters of endorsement from the best authorities in the country as to every feature of our business. We shall be pleased to send it to you postage paid on receipt of your request.

PLEASE KEEP THESE POINTS IN MIND

1. Capital stock $250,000.00.
2. Assets in excess of $250,000.00.
3. No bonded indebtedness or preferred stock or interests.
4. Earning power 15 per cent.
5. Guaranteed dividends 6 per cent. and all earnings divided pro rata on all stock.
6. Price of stock $10.00 per share, full paid and non-assessable, and can be purchased in any amount from one share up.
7. Stock readily realized upon.
8. Small stockholders' interests protected as fully as the large.
9. Stock bears dividends from the date we receive your remittance.

SUBSCRIPTION,
$1.50 PER ANNUM

NEW YORK, APRIL 23, 1902

VOL. 25—NO. 17. PRICE 5 CENTS
Offices: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PREACHER

THE LATE REV. T. DEWITT TALMAGE, D.D.

COPYRIGHT, 1902, LOUIS KLOPSCH
PASSED FROM EARTH
APRIL 12, 1902

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Issue of March 26

What ten American scenes and places should Prince Henry have seen or visited here, in order to receive the most accurate impression of the nation's spirit and character and of our republican institutions?

Answered in Issue of April 9

Is the widespread diffusion of advanced education an unqualified blessing, or is it true, as has been charged, that it tends to produce a large class who are averse to productive industry as a life-occupation, and who ultimately become a burden upon the community at large?

Answered in Issue of April 16

In what way may women best utilize their influence in securing the peace of the world?

Answered in Present Issue

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a life in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

To be Answered in the Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

Question of the Week

What are we to infer from Scripture as to the future state? Do the statements in Revelation imply that it is a life in a magnificent city or a state of moral and intellectual progress? Will it be a disembodied condition? What is the modern Christian idea concerning it?

We shall have Ethereal Bodies

We may be assured that heaven is a place of intellectual and moral progress and perfection. So far as material splendors may contribute to happiness, we may be sure they shall not be wanting. As to whether the spirit will be disembodied, we have no direct assurance; but I take it that Paul's hint of being "clothed upon," means that the spirit will be clothed in a refined ethereal body, suitable for the new heavenly conditions. Details probably could not be given in such a way that we could intelligently comprehend them. Jesus had many things to say to his disciples which they were not ready to hear.

JOSEPH HAMILTON.

We Shall Grow in Beauty and Purity

In the future world we must still continue to grow in the beauty and purity of unfolding spiritual life. The city, the "new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven," spoken of in Revelation, refers to the spiritual state, the new eternal life of the saved. It will be a disembodied condition, in the sense that we will not have material bodies. We shall have spiritual bodies. The Bible says: "We have a building not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." W. L. BUNDY.

We May Be Angels and Messengers

Our future state is in heaven, a place of perfection where God is and all his children shall be. We shall behold the infinite works of creation—and comprehend eternal truths that are incomprehensible here. The mysteries of Providence on earth shall be revealed, manifesting the wisdom and goodness of God. We shall know each other and have communion with the Triune-Jehovah, with saints and angels. Our capacity to love shall be enlarged, resulting in a fuller and higher bliss. With God we shall enjoy perfect purity, wisdom and love. At the resurrection our souls and bodies shall be reunited. Our bodies shall be raised spiritual bodies, made like unto Christ's glorious body. We shall be as the angels, and possibly may be engaged as messengers to other worlds. A glorious light emanating from our bodies may be our covering, like Christ's when he was transfigured.

S. F. C.

The Full Development of this Life

The Scripture teaches that the future state is a continuation and development of the present life. We are sowing the seeds here of the life that shall be. It will not be a disembodied state; for at the resurrection we growth. As here, the soul expresses itself through the body or senses, so it is probable it will hereafter, only the body will be adapted to the higher life, and will not be material.

SARAH A. FALL.

Our Bodies will be "Glorified" Bodies

The body is the earthly home of the spirit. II. Cor. 5: 1-10; II. Peter 1: 13. Death does not affect the spirit. John 5: 24; John 11: 21-27. At the resurrection we will receive our glorified body. I. Cor. 15: 35. I take no material view of heavenly things. The figures of Revelation will be made plain to me when I leave this tabernacle. This is the ancient, and ought, at least, to be the modern Christian idea.

WM. H. KNOTTS.

Material Bodies and a Material Heaven

The Word of God, interpreted in its obvious, literal sense, teaches a material future existence in a material locality. If we do not accept the statements in Revelation as describing a literal city, they may mean anything our imagination may dictate. Likewise, if God's Word is true, there will be a material resurrection. Expressions, such as "Quicken our mortal bodies," "Fashion anew the body of our humiliation," "We shall be changed," indicate that the material body will be raised. "It is sown in corruption; it (the same body), is raised in incorruption." This idea of a visible body after his resurrection? Not mortal, not to be confined by our earthly houses, but still a body. Were not Moses and Elias seen by the disciples? Assuredly, yes. All of the visions of people from heaven which are recorded in the Bible are of bodies. They are seen and heard, and sometimes touched, as in the case of Jacob's angel visitor, the messengers to Lot and others. Is there any happiness in thinking of ourselves as disembodied?

MRS. WM. CRAWFORD.

We Shall Know Each Other There

From what the Scriptures teach, we infer that the future life is a continuation of this. The souls of the saved will evidently be clothed with spiritual bodies, like their earthly bodies, so that there will be mutual recognition. When Christ appeared to his followers, he was thus known to them. His body had not had time to decay, but in the cases of those whose earthly bodies have passed back to the elements of the earth, we must believe that the "resurrection" of their bodies means a reclothing of the spirit, with a body made of the same elements, but made indestructible and immortal. L. T. RIGHTSELL.

A Hebrew View of the Future State

The Talmud devotes considerable space to the speculation of solving the problem of the future life. The modern Jew, while he considers such polemics a waste of time, yet is fully convinced that the state of life beyond the grave must be purely spiritual, as befitting the spirit soul, which is part and parcel of God himself. The ethical Jewish sages solve this question differently. Thus, Rabbi Jacob said: "This world is like a vestibule before the world to come; prepare thyself in the vestibule, that thou mayest enter into the hall. Better is one hour of repentance and good deeds in this world than the whole life of the world to come; and better is one hour of blissfulness of spirit in the world to come than the whole life of this world." (Ethics iv., 21-22.) No rational religious Jew would interpret the revelations of Ezekiel and Zechariah literally. It is safe to infer that the future state of reward and punishment will be a spiritual one exclusively. A. BENJAMIN.

We Shall Have Bodies Like Christ's Resurrection Body

The Scriptures teach that the future state is, first of all, a disembodied condition. From death to resurrection, the Christian is absent from the body and at home with the Lord. He is at rest in Paradise with other spirits of just men made perfect, who still wait for the redemption of the body. At Christ's coming, the holy dead will be raised, and the living will be changed. Both classes will receive bodies conformed to the body of his glory, and so will ever be with the Lord. Now, a body has relation to locality, and therefore Christ has gone to prepare a place for us. It is a state of spotless purity, adoring worship, unceasing service, beatific vision, and perpetual progress. The modern Christian idea frequently errs by expecting it at death, rather than at the resurrection of the just.

WM. B. STEWART.

Heaven is "the Whole Universe"

The future state will be one in which our personal identity will be preserved. We will have what may be called resurrection bodies, not greatly unlike that of our Saviour after his resurrection. The book of Revelation being prophetic and highly figurative, is to be interpreted accordingly. As the resurrection body will be spiritual, so will the abode of these bodies be spiritual—a state of indefinite development of our highest powers, chiefly the moral, intellectual and spiritual. It will not be a disembodied state, for the qualities seen in the spiritual bodies of those who have reappeared on earth (such as Moses, Elijah and Jesus himself) are, very likely, but properties superior to those we now possess. Read and compare Job 19: 25-27; Ps. 17: 15; I. Cor. 13: 12; I. Cor. 15: 44, and entire chapter, and I. Thess. 4: 17; etc. Many believe that the earth will be refitted, for the abode of the righteous in this exalted state. To others, it appears that then all the universe will form the theatre of that existence, as we shall have powers of locomotion commensurate with all our other conditions.

J. A. TROSTLE.

Answers have also been received from M. R. D. Dingwall, F. L. Sawyer, Aaron Vreder, Mrs. Mary C. Lee, Mrs. Eleanor Taylor, C. W. Sargent, F. B. Squires, J. Flomerfelt, J. G. Osborn, C. A. Ober, Elsie Lewis, Anna M. Sohn, Mrs. A. B. Chambliss, Mrs. A. A. Chism, Elizabeth Buck Smith, C. M. Baker, Rev. C. F. Atkinson, S. Munton, Amelia Hoyt, Ida M. Gwynn, Rev. Lounsbury, A. G. Eagleson, E. A. Eggers, Edwin L. Scott, F. A. Mosbach, Mary Elizabeth Blose, M. S. B. Myer, L. D. Mead.

KINDERGARTEN WORK AMONG INDIAN CHILDREN

Teaching Indian children, while they are yet under the average school age, has been of much benefit in advancing them rapidly, and the social entertainment of the girls and boys has been equally beneficial. Kindergarten teachers on the Indian reservation of the Southwest are paying attention to this feature of Indian training. The Indian educators find that much can be accomplished in giving little parties, parlor musicales and the like to their pupils, especially those between ten and eighteen years. Formerly, on the reservations, the school children were given their lessons and sent home, or the boys were penned up in one side of the building, the girls in the other. Such was the custom in the seminaries at Tahlequah, I. T., where some two thousand Cherokee and Delaware Indians attended. To-day, however, there are set days for the young people to entertain their school friends. This teaches the social duties needed in later life. The Cherokees are becoming fairly cultured in their social relations. It does them good in other ways, too, for the new social features keep them away from their own savage fetes, which the "fullbloods" are so fond of giving. This plan of teaching the young redskins parlor manners is the newest thing in Indian education, and it promises well.

Wichita, Kan.

W. E. DRAPER.

shall receive glorified bodies, which will be the immaterial perfection of our bodies on earth, which are material; as the spirits will be the perfection of the spiritual life begun on earth. In the flesh, our highest aspirations are crippled by our limitations and sins; but in the New Jerusalem we shall have perfect conditions for the truest development.

A. W. LEWIS.

Glorified Bodies and a World Renewed

Christ had a body of flesh and bones; he ate and drank with his disciples after his resurrection. And our bodies will be fashioned like unto his most glorious body, "with the earth made new for our abode." (See II. Peter 3: 11-13.)

N. R. ORCUTT.

A State of Continual Progress

One would judge from Revelation, if the language is taken literally, that it was life in a magnificent place; but that is figurative language, doubtless. It is doubtless a state of spiritual and intellectual progress, because there can be no mental state that is fixed. Immortality does not mean stagnation, but material resurrection is condemned as gross and sensual, but wholly without reason. The body will be like Christ's glorious body (I. John 3: 2), which he expressly stated to be flesh and bones (Luke 24: 39). Yet, like his, it will be truly a spiritual body, unrestrained by the limitations of matter in its present state. God's redemption extends as far as the destructive work of Satan; it embraces the whole man—body, soul and spirit. God will not leave Satan a vestige of his victory at Eden. It is his plan to bring spiritual life into the dead body, rather than to snatch away the spirit from the general wreck.

WILBUR L. CASWELL.

The Heavenly City a Reality

We cannot believe John's vision of a glorious city to be only a symbol. We believe it was a real city, although "not made with hands." And we also believe that its inhabitants enjoy the privilege of exploring the mighty works of the great Creator of the universe, thereby adding to their knowledge, and moral as well as intellectual stature. Why should the intermediate or any future state be a disembodied condition? Had not our Lord

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, APRIL 23, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

"THEY PATTED THE BABY"

ELLEN M. STONE

MME. TSILKA

LIFE IN CAPTIVITY

MISS STONE TELLS HER STORY OF CAPTIVITY

The Rescued Missionary Welcomed Home After Her Perilous Experience Among the Bulgarian Brigands

WHEN Miss Ellen M. Stone, the missionary who was held as a prisoner for nearly half a year by brigands on the Bulgarian border, reached New York on the steamer Deutschland, on April 10, a large gathering awaited her, and she was greeted with a cordiality which showed how deep an interest the American people have taken in her case. It was evident at a glance that the terrible experience she had endured had left its impress, for the face, though bright and smiling, still bore traces of care and lines of suffering.

In an interview, she told the story of her life among the brigands:

"When they captured us," she said, "they told us, 'we took you for money. We will release you when the ransom is paid.' We would have been treated badly if it had not been for the little baby, born in the mountains during our captivity and whose presence seemed to spread a veil of safety over us. A few days before we were ransomed, the leader of the brigands said: 'There's a bullet for you and one for Mme. Tsilka and the baby, if the ransom is not paid within a certain date.' But God delivered us out of the hands of the enemy. What was done with the ransom money I don't know. Whether it was used for political purposes in Macedonia, I can't state. All I know is that the brigands got it."

"Our capture was totally unexpected. Our party of ten was traveling through the country, in broad day-light. We had taken every precaution, although we had no guards. Suddenly, men seemed to spring up from behind the trees and rocks. They shouted, 'Dour!' which means 'Halt!' We stopped, and were taken captive. The brigands asked if there was a married woman in our party. It was not their original intention to capture Mme. Tsilka. They had planned to take Mme. Oosheva and myself. Mme. Oosheva is a Bulgarian lady, a widow, well on in years. But she was quite ill on our journey, and when the brigands saw her feeble condition they abandoned the idea of making her a prisoner. That is contrary to their way of doing business, to burden themselves with captives who are ill and may die on their hands. They try to keep their prisoners in as good condition as possible, so as to return them safe and in good health when their ransoms are paid. They took Mme. Tsilka, and we were carried off into the mountains. They treated us kindly for a time. We were served with meals regularly, and sometimes had a better quality of bread than the brigands themselves. I caught a very bad cold, and this seemed to displease them very much. I also fell in a cave, and wrenched my knee. As they were eager for the money, and it was necessary to return me in good condition, they took these incidents very much to heart."

"Mme. Tsilka and I often wondered if the outside world knew anything about us, and what was being done to have us liberated. The brigands occasionally hinted of the rumors about us being dead, but further than that we knew nothing. We were kept in secret places and always traveled at night. When I wrote my letter, seeking ransom, I wrote because they forced me to do so, threatening me with a loaded rifle.

"When baby Helen was born, the event caused a sensation in the brigand camp. The men would come and look at the baby. They would pat its fingers. When the baby was only three days old I carried her on a board over the mountains."

"On the last day of our captivity, we started as usual spoke Greek and others Albanian. Several of them dressed like Turks, looked like Turks, talked like Turks, and I have no doubt they were Turks. As to their names, if they ever called each other by their right names, we would not know it."

"I mean to write the full story of our capture and release, and I shall also lecture; but in the four years I have lived and labored in Salonica, I have come to think of it as the real field for my work, and I am going back there. I do not fear that my experience will ever be repeated. For a time I shall go to my home in Chelsea, Mass., where my mother, now ninety-three years old, is waiting to welcome me."

There was considerable mystery concerning the negotiations with the bandits, while Miss Stone was yet a prisoner, but this has been dispelled by Mr. William E. Curtis, an American in Constantinople, who took a leading part in the negotiations. Mr. Curtis explains the matter in a letter, in which he says that when Mr. Leishman, United States Minister at Constantinople, took charge of the negotiations, after the recall of Consul-General Dickinson from Bulgaria, he opened communication directly with the brigands. He chose the Rev. W. W. Peet, Treasurer of the American Bible Society at Constantinople, the Rev. John H. House of Ohio, in charge of the American Missions in Macedonia, and Chief Dragoman Garguilo, interpreter of the American Legation at Constantinople, as a committee, and despatched them to the scene of Miss Stone's capture. Dr. Peet carried the ransom money, $65,000, and the brigands knew it. Dr. House was soon in communication with Miss Stone, who was then at a village called Razlag. She wrote him, advising him to pay the ransom. Her captors, she said, insisted that it be paid before they set her free. Minister Leishman knew, from the history of similar cases, that such a demand was customary, and he believed firmly that the brigands would keep their pledged word. Dr. House too, advised compliance. The brigands themselves indicated how and where the money should be delivered, and their wishes were carried out. They released the captives immediately.

Mr. Curtis, in his letter, says the abductors are actually known, and that the plot was carried out by agents of the local committee of Macedonian revolutionists in Samakov, Bulgaria. The object, primarily, was believed to be to obtain funds to carry on the revolutionary movement against Turkey, and secondarily to punish the missionaries for remaining neutral and refusing to contribute to the Macedonian cause. There is no evidence to implicate the present Macedonian party leaders at Sofia. He believes, however, that the plot was submitted to and approved by the predecessors of these leaders, and that Boris Saraoff, ex-President of the Macedonian National Committee, was privy to the conspiracy. He adds that the opinion prevails in Constantinople, that the United States will demand indemnity and reparation from Bulgaria.

ARRIVAL IN NEW YORK OF ELLEN M. STONE
The Missionary who was Captured by Bulgarian Brigands to travel by night. We traveled about an hour, when there was a commotion in the band. We stopped in the dark road, but in a few minutes we heard the command to proceed. I heard the order given to go back with the horses, but even then I did not realize that the brigands had turned us loose, until they were out of sight and beyond hearing. We looked around, and found that there were only two men left with us. Then they led us to a little town, and we were told that our ransom had been paid and we were free. We lifted our hearts to God in thankful prayer.

"Some of the brigands wore Turkish costumes; some

THE AMERICAN PULPIT

A FILIAL TRIBUTE: A Sermon by REV. FRANK DEWITT TALMAGE of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago

TEXT: I. KINGS 19: 20 — "Let me, I pray thee, Kiss my father"

AFFECTION'S most sacred form of salutation is a kiss. We bow to an acquaintance; we shake hands with a friend; but we press the lip against the lip of one whom we love. This statement is especially true when applied to Elisha, the son of Shaphat, who was about to leave home, and go forth into the great wide world. Elisha was summoned to carry on the work of Elijah. Already the horses were being harnessed to the chariot of fire for the old prophet's famous journey from earthly struggle to heavenly triumph. His successor, starting out on his arduous task, desires first to imprint on his father's face the kiss of farewell.

The salutation of the kiss is even more sacred when used by one who is standing by the open casket of a father whose eloquent tongue has so often spoken the golden words of the Gospel to countless throngs—who, with a pen guided by a spirit sprinkled with the blood of the Lamb, has every week proclaimed the divine message to millions upon millions of readers who were wearied with sin and heavy with trouble. My father's work for nearly twenty years has been the pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, to guide great multitudes through the dark wilderness of earth toward the brightness of the Promised Land.

Many pens are writing eulogies upon the lifework of Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage. Perhaps a few words may be welcome from his son. I speak as one having authority. For over twenty years I was his constant companion. When he was at home, I rarely left his study until after the midnight hour. Twice with him I visited the European cities. Once we circled the globe. Together we sailed forth from the Golden Gate of the Pacific. Side by side we have seen the light at the entrance of New York Harbor beckon us into the Narrows, welcome to us as was the Star of Bethlehem to the three astrologers wandering over the sea of sand. But no more shall we have sweet companionship. The world becomes instantly changed to the son who is compelled to let his parent sleep among the flowers, and who hears a summons to more strenuous service. Before I start forth anew for my life's work, I would, with filial emotion, ask a moment for a tribute of personal affection, as Elisha did of Elijah. "Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father . . . then I will follow thee."

A Unique Personality

My father was the most original and yet the most natural man I ever knew. Original, in the sense that he always did everything in a way different from any one else. He wrote differently; he lectured differently; he preached differently. If two persons stood before him at the nuptial altar his marriage ceremony was unique. It was impossible to compare him to any one else. The mould used for the formation of his character was a special one. There has never been made another like unto it since he lay in his humble cradle in the Boundbrook farmhouse.

Yet my father was natural in the sense that he never strove to be original and different from every one else. It was in his personality that he was different. He was the same in the home as in the pulpit. On the street as upon the lecture platform. He was the same original and yet natural character when writing to one of his children as he was when penning an article for the press. He uttered the message which was given to him as naturally and yet with the dissimilarity that characterizes the notes of the birds of the forest. As the brown-winged thrush lifts his treble note when he is awakened by the rising sun; as a goldfinch chirrup when hopping between the garden rows; as a Baltimore oriole sings when he swings backward and forward upon the tree branch which overhangs the brook, each bird is melodious in its own way, yet each singing a different song. He was so natural that he could not recognize his peculiar traits. One day he turned to me and said: "Frank, people say I am different from other ministers; that I am different even in giving out my notices and the reading of Scripture. Show me how I am different." When I attempted to show him the difference, he innocently remarked, "Why, I do not see anything peculiar about that." He was so different from other men that for many years the American pulpit could not understand him. Under the scrutinizing eye of the theological critic there could be found no heretical flaw in his sermons. When he arose to preach, a solemn stillness, like the expectant hush of the coming Judgment Day silenced his auditors. Every eye was focussed upon that tall, straight form, and broad, massive brow. Each ear was alert to catch the first word which fell from those wonderful lips. But though the buildings in which he preached in our own and other lands were always crowded to hear him, though great multitudes were brought to decision for Christ under his preaching in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, where he passed the most active years of his life's ministry, yet for years he was a misunderstood man.

With one wave of his hand he swept away all the cobwebs which had accumulated around the traditional methods of sermonic oratory. With his mighty original personality he broke the shackles of ecclesiastical slavery. He proved to the world that the ministers of the twentieth century could plead with sinners to come to Christ with the energy and enthusiasm and intensity with which the lawyer could plead for the life of a defendant falsely charged with murder. He proved to the religious world that it was not so important what kind of a white linen operating gown the Gospel surgeon wore, as it was that the nerve of the operator be firm and the hand steady that held the keen, sacred blade with which he cut out the cancer of sin. He dispensed with the ministerial gown and hurled from the church the old fashioned pulpit, but he still clung to the old truths. He spoke the Gospel message in its simplicity. Because the story was so simply told it was told with originality.

Whole-Souled Consecration

My father was a Gospel minister who completely consecrated himself, body and mind and soul, to his work. For thirty-five years his pulpit was the sole business of his life. He lived and breathed and ate and slept and walked and nursed his strength only for that. He had the most tremendous capacity for work of any man I ever knew, and even after he was turned seventy, his form was as straight as a mountain pine, his eye as clear as the eagle's, and his mental force unabated. On that last Gospel journey upon which he set out on Feb. 12, he preached in rapid succession to great audiences at Macon, Charleston, Richmond and New Orleans, with his wonted eloquence and power, and it was not until the deadly Mexican climate had sapped his strength that he succumbed. Never from the first day of his ministry till the day of his death did he put off the harness of the Lord's service. When he went on lecturing tours it was not to make money or to take pleasure, but to get away from his home tasks so that he could come back refreshed to do more valiant service for Christ. Every family physician who entered our home declared that the rest of railroad travel had been his physical salvation. It forced him to the repose that he would not otherwise allow to himself. He was a genius, but he developed every one of his ten talents by the hardest kind of mental and physical application. No labor for him was too full of drudgery. Morning, noon and night found him in his study. He took physical exercise, not for pleasure, but to fit himself for the pulpit. He lived not to eat, but he ate so that he could live. He placed his standard very high, and into every sermon he put his best thought. He used to say to me, "Frank, do not make the mistake of many literary men. They say to themselves, I will save that thought, and put it into another speech or article. Give to the world the best you have. Crowd everything in that strengthens an argument, but always strive for quality and not for quantity." When a theological student, I wanted to occupy for some weeks the pulpit of a small country church, he uttered his protest, saying "You ought to spend at least three months upon your first sermon, writing upon it from six to ten hours a day." What a testimony is this to his own careful work, coming from the cold lips which are now closed in the casket. What a homiletic lecture it is for the young ministers, for the young lawyers and budding statesmen who maintain that the oratorical art is a divine gift which has no need for struggling upon the rough mountain-side of drudgery. What a clarion note it is, summoning all men and women to do their best under all conditions. The lesson is as powerful for the merchant of ten talents as for the clerk of two talents. To him that hath shall be given. From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

A Martyr to Over-Work

There is, however, a warning that comes from my father's intense application to work, which deserves the attention of all those who are bending their physical, mental and spiritual energies to accomplish something in life's struggle. My father had one of the most robust physical frames ever given to man. He had a wonderful mind; he had a wonderful body; he could speak out of doors for two long hours and address ten thousand auditors—yet the last sentence would be heard as distinctly as the first. He could do a ten-mile tramp more easily than some men could walk around a city square. His chest was broad and deep. His heart went on with the steady regularity of a pumping engine. He thought he was taking care of himself, but he was not. About twenty-five years ago, the first danger signal was lifted when insomnia, like a hideous spectre, sat at the foot of his bed and refused to let him sleep. Night after night he would be up four and five times walking the floor. After a while the children became used to it. We would greet him at breakfast, saying, "Father, how did you sleep?" and when he answered, "Not very well," he would look so fresh and vigorous that we, too, were deceived and we would hope that he had slept better than he thought he did. But he could not be induced to spare himself. He over-estimated his reserve of strength. My father ought to have lived with that magnificent body at least fifteen years longer. Had he economized his strength, the best years of his life might have been those last fifteen years. He died from overwork.

A Herald of Cheerfulness

Ye brain workers, listen to this warning! Ye literary men, who are full of great thoughts, which you are eager to utter, beware of overdriving the brain! Remember that you cannot take your workshop to bed with you and work in the dark without undermining your mental strength. Heed to-day the message which comes to all. Stop before it is too late. God did not intend my father to go on as he was doing, wrecking his magnificent physical frame.

My father was a Gospel minister of unbounded cheerfulness. He believed that there was as much true religion in the smile seen at the wedding of Cana, of Galilee, as in the sob heard in a house of mourning. He was an optimistic Christian whose mind was free from gloomy presentiments. In his youth, he grasped the great truth that God is love. Because God was love, he felt that God approved of his being strong and well and happy. He always expected good things to come to him from the Divine Father, as a little child naturally expects good things to come to him from an earthly parent. A falling tear may, ere it drops, lodge in the wrinkles of a smile. A rainbow can climb over the dark clouds of storm. If a member of the family was dangerously sick he was not dismayed, but always felt that she would get well. If financial trouble threatened the home, he never was apprehensive, having unwavering faith that the God, who cares for the birds of the air and clothes the lily of the field, would feed and clothe him and those he loved. He was willing to undertake big things, because he was walking hand-in-hand with his Heavenly Father, accompanied by the sweet-faced angel of Hope. The result was that when trouble did come, he was the stronger to meet and bear it. And when greater opportunities of usefulness came than even he expected, he was also able to grasp them, and compel them to carry him upon their broad shoulders up the towering heights of conspicuous service.

Unwavering Faith

What spirit but one buoyed by cheerfulness could ever have overcome the obstacles he conquered? He was tried by fire literally as well as figuratively. He had to fight the elements, as well as the human champions of sin. Read the history of the first Brooklyn Tabernacle. The little handful of seventeen members who originally called him to Brooklyn grew to thousands. During a time of national financial panic succeeding the Civil War, at great expense the noble walls of the first Tabernacle arose. The building was dedicated amid congratulations and the well wishes of the city and State. In a few months that building was destroyed. The whole structure was tumbled into ruins so quickly that nothing was saved from the huge edifice except an immense mortgage. Homeless and in debt, the outlook for the congregation was very dark. Undaunted, however, the stalwart leader called his faithful followers about him. Many were discouraged, but not this modern Nehemiah. The second Brooklyn Tabernacle, built upon the ruins, was grander and more majestic than the first. This was the structure where the crowds became so great that it seemed as if no man who visited New York felt that he had made the best of his sojourn in the great city until he had heard my father preach. But there seems sometimes a terrible sequence in calamities. As certain diseases have a penchant for destroying certain families, so this fire demon came to find new prey in the place where he had once held high carnival. The second Brooklyn Tabernacle was destroyed. The third building went the same way as did the first and second.

Domestic bereavement fell upon him, and people who saw only his outward cheerfulness, had no conception how deeply the iron had entered his soul. When my father was dying he continually talked about the boy who had been his pride, his eldest son, who is now sleeping by his side as he once sat at his feet. He was a noble lad. A brilliant young lawyer. We carried him out one cold winter day and laid him away to rest under a soft quilt of snow. My father went back to his work. He said, "I dare not lay it down even for an hour, lest the effort to take it up again should be too great for me." He took up his cross in the same cheerful, hopeful spirit as before, though the wound in his heart never healed. He always carried a scar which was cut by the grave-digger's spade. Yes, he had his troubles; but he always maintained a brave heart, and made the most out of life by being cheerful. (Cont'd p. 349)

The Making of Unleavened Bread

THIS IS PASSOVER WEEK

How the Feast is Kept in Hebrew Homes

SEARCHING FOR THE LEAVEN

A JEWISH FAMILY IN NEW YORK CELEBRATING THE PASSOVER FEAST

IN A MATZO FACTORY

IN no festival of the Jewish calendar do Hebrews the world over take part with keener interest than in that of Pesach, otherwise known as "Passover and Feast of Unleavened Bread." Passover week began at sunset, April 21, and ends at sunset, April 29.

Matzoth (frequently called matzos), or unleavened bread, are especially made for this occasion. Matzoth are tasteless wafers, made both square and round, measuring eight inches across; about one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch in thickness, and perforated at half-inch intervals. In the hands of a Jewish housewife, matzoth are put to many and varied uses. They not only serve as substitutes for all other kinds of bread, but after being ground into a powder, take the place of flour (the use of which is prohibited during Passover week), in making pastry and delicacies of all kinds. About 60,000,000 pounds of matzoth are consumed by the whole Jewish nation during the eight days of the festival. The amount supplied to the Hebrews of New York is 1,250,000 pounds, or 31,250,000 single cakes. Two methods are used in making unleavened bread, that made by machinery being preferred by the American Jew, while matzoth made by hand are eaten by the orthodox and foreign Jew. There are several bakeries in New York where unleavened bread is made the whole year round; some people calling for matzoth at all seasons, because they like them.

The oven in which the matzoth are baked is a brick shaft fifteen feet square and thirty feet high, in the centre of which is a revolving steel skeleton wheel, resembling the famous Ferris Wheel of the World's Fair, but instead of swinging cars, are pans of sheet iron or steel, upon which is placed a layer of matzoth: one complete revolution of the wheel is sufficient for their baking. They are taken from the pans when baked, and thrown down a chute, which terminates in the store-room; and are then tied into packages weighing five and ten pounds each, and put away, ready for the consumer. Each matzo bakery is under the supervision of a Rabbi, who appoints a watcher, called a Shomer or Mashkiach, to see that all laws are observed in making the unleavened bread.

Twenty-four hours before the beginning of Pesach, it is the duty of the head of a Jewish family to search for chumitz, or leaven. With candle or thin wax-taper in one hand, and a feather and large wooden spoon in the other, he goes to every corner of the room, and from cupboard to cupboard, sweeping into the spoon all the leaven that lies in his way. When every discoverable crumb has been swept into the spoon, he places the feather on top, and ties the two together; this is burnt up the following morning. While binding up the leaven he chants the following in Hebrew:

"All manner of leaven which is in my possession, and which I have not seen, nor removed, shall be null, and accounted dust of the earth."

The ceremony for breaking the unleavened bread occurs at the Saider (the first night of Pesach), and is very impressive. After Kiddish (benediction over the wine), some parsley, dipped into vinegar or salt water, is distributed to every one at the table, and eaten. The master of the house then breaks the second of three matzoth which have been placed in a dish before him, leaving half of it there, and reserving the other half till after supper. Part of the history relating to Pesach is read from the Hagada, or prayer-book. Then, taking the two whole, and the one broken matzo in his hand, he breaks the uppermost, and distributes it, all present chanting the following benediction: "Blessed art thou, O Lord, our God! King of the universe, who has sanctified us with thy commandments, and commanded us to eat unleavened bread." ISADORE BERNSTEIN.

A FILIAL TRIBUTE

Sermon by Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage

Continued

My father's best sermon was the daily life which he lived in his own home. I bear my testimony to the fact that from my boyhood until the time that I entered my own parsonage and was ordained by him for my own pulpit, I had before me the example and upon me the sweet influence of a Christian home. There never was in America a happier or more prayerful home than that of which he was the head. The children idolized him. The example he set before them was that of a consecrated Christian gentleman, always anxious to do what Christ would have him do. There was no bitterness in the nursery. From him we learned how to forget as well as to forgive. Among all the men I have known in various walks of life, I never knew a human being who was like him in the characteristic that he could never bear a grudge against any one. An enemy might do everything in his power to destroy him, but my father never struck back. If he could, he would not only forgive, but he would go any distance to serve and help an enemy. Among the many homes I have visited as a pastor, I never entered one where the parent has so earnestly sought to inculcate gentleness of rule as he did in my old home. My father never lifted a hand to strike a blow. Yet he ruled his children with a rod stronger than one made out of iron. It was the rod of love. My sisters and myself had but one fear in reference to his life. We were afraid to do anything wrong for fear of seeing a wounded look pass over the kind face, which to us always reflected the light which shone from the divine face of Christ. Family prayers were not to us a meaningless formality. We felt that our dear father was taking us to the throne of Grace, as Joseph the Good brought his brethren into the throne room of the Egyptian king.

Reputation is what the world thinks about a man. Character is what he really is. Reputation may be wrong. Character is an actual fact. Man looketh upon the outward appearance; God looketh upon the heart. But I have sometimes felt that God has made it possible for other eyes, as well as his own all-seeing eye, to look into a man's heart. The child has the opportunity and the privilege of looking into the parent's heart. When a boy lives for years by the side of a father, he knows what are the ruling principles of his life, its strongest motives and fundamental beliefs. When I lived at home or traveled by my father's side, continually with him for weeks or months at a time, I formed the conviction that he was as good a man as ever lived. I loved to hear him preach, because I knew and could testify that his spoken words were the echo of a sweet, gentle, loving Christian life—A life which was being lived for God.

My father was a Christian minister assuredly inspired for his work by the Holy Spirit. For a quarter of a century his critics have been trying by analyzing his character and his sermons to discover how he came to attain worldwide success. Some attribute his power to word-painting. He was an unequalled master in the art of portraying before an audience ancient and modern scenes and events, and opening up to the entranced gaze of his hearers the palaces of dead kings and queens. He could, with a few words, transport an audience into the hanging gardens of Babylon, or make them hear the harvests sigh or the nightingale sing. Some have attributed his power to invective. No rapier was sharper than the stiletto of his tongue when he wanted to exorcise sin. Some again have ascribed his popularity to his loving personality. But the critics who only go as far as these do but touch the outer garment of his power. These traits were all present, but the source of my father's power was not in what he himself could do. As he often averred, with the sincerity of profound conviction, in and of himself he could do nothing. With the power of the Holy Spirit he could accomplish anything.

It was because my father's sermons were the products of a Spirit-filled life that the millions were able to find comfort in them. Whenever he would take a lecture trip the people would crowd about him by the thousands, uttering such greetings as, "I read your sermon on 'Tears' by my baby's casket and I have found Christ." "I read your sermon upon 'Recognition of Friends in Heaven' to my mother when she was dying." "I read this or that when I was in a certain trouble and the sermon brought light to my soul." Let no hearer or reader of this sermon think for one instant that my father's work was a man-made work. My father's work was a divinely inspired work. He was called as certainly to do his work as Paul or Peter or John were called to do theirs. He was inspired by prayer and communion with God, and just as certainly may we in our work be inspired if we plead for the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Would you go with me into the death chamber? His passing away was as he himself would have had it if his own wish had been consulted. He practically died in the harness. One Sunday he was preaching in Mexico, the next on his deathbed. For five long weeks he lingered, but God mercifully benumbed the worn out and tired brain. He suffered not at all. He awoke long enough to recognize and at times call for his wife and children. But conversation was an impossibility between him and the members of his family during the weary days and nights he was sick. We were all there, all except those of the family who had preceded him to the other side and who were waiting to give him a welcome. We repeated the old verse so often spoken by his own lips:

When round my dying bed assemble those I love.

A dear old family friend uttered a sweet prayer. That was all. We watched and waited until his mortal life was lifted into the heavenly life. There were a few tears. A few callings of good-by. He slipped away so quietly, we could not tell when he was gone. He was asleep. The tired heart ceased to beat. The old sweet restless look came back to the loving face. We laid him away for a little while in the family plot in beautiful Greenwood. As I lifted my hand over the open grave to pronounce the benediction, I said to myself: "So may we all live and labor, that when our work is done, we may go to our rest in the full conviction that when we awake it will be like this glorified spirit in the likeness of his Lord."

T. DE WITT TALMAGE AT 25

IN HIS 45TH YEAR

AS REGIMENTAL CHAPLAIN, AT 56

DR. TALMAGE IN HIS 60TH YEAR

TAKEN IN HIS 65TH YEAR

ONE OF HIS LATEST PORTRAITS, AT 70

Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch

His Glorious Life-Work Ended

Dr. Talmage Passes Away at His Washington Home After a Painful Illness—The Record of a Noble Christian Life

AFTER a painful illness, lasting several weeks, America's best beloved preacher, the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, passed from earth to the life above, on April 12, 1902. Ever since his return from Mexico City, where he was prostrated by a sudden attack which rapidly assumed the form of cerebral congestion, he had lain in the sick chamber of his Washington home, surrounded by his family and cared for by the most skilful physicians. Each day brought its alternate hopes and fears. Much of the time was passed in unconsciousness; but there were intervals when, even amid his sufferings, he could speak to and recognize those around him. No murmur or complaint came from his lips; he bore his suffering bravely, sustained by a Higher Power. The message had come which sooner or later comes to all, and the aged servant of God was ready to go; he had been ready all his life.

Occasional rallies took place, raising hopes which were quickly abandoned. From April 5 to 12, these rallies occurred at frequent intervals, always followed by a condition of increased depression, more or less augmented fever and partial unconsciousness. On Saturday, April 12, a great change became apparent. On the previous evening there had been a slight improvement, and the doctors, at the morning consultation, were gratified to note that this had continued, although they declined to encourage expectations of recovery.

The Last Scene

The change came Saturday forenoon. For many hours the patient had been unconscious. As the day wore on, it became evident that he could not live through another night. All of Dr. Talmage's family, his wife, his son, the Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, of Chicago; Mrs. Warren G. Smith and Mrs. Daniel Mangam, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Allen E. Donnan, of Richmond; and Mrs. Clarence Wycoff and Miss Talmage, were gathered in the chamber of death. Dr. G. L. Magruder, the principal physician, was also in attendance at the last. The loved ones gathered around the bed on which the great preacher lay, and soothed his last moments with kind ministrations. It was a scene too sacred to be described. At 9.25 o'clock P.M., the soul took flight from the inanimate clay and the spirit of the world's greatest preacher was released.

The career of usefulness, unparalleled in its extent in this or any former time, which to the sorrow of millions in all lands is thus closed forever, began seventy years ago in a small farmhouse in the New Jersey village of Boundbrook. Eleven children, five girls and six boys, had already been born to the godly farmer, David Talmage and his wife Catharine, when on Jan. 7, 1832 their twelfth and youngest child, to whom they gave the name of Thomas DeWitt, first saw the light. From his earliest years he was familiar with the spectacle in the life of his parents of high principle and sterling piety, combined with industry, frugality and self-sacrifice. It was a large family to be reared on the small farm, and the struggle became harder from year to year for the conscientious father and mother, as their sons developed talents which called for a college education. Their distinguished son, being the youngest, witnessed the heroic fortitude with which they toiled and denied themselves that one of his brothers after another might be fitted for an honorable career, and he bore filial testimony in after years to their devotion and parental solicitude. Grief mingled with their joy when John, their eldest born, gave himself to missionary work in China, and bade them farewell to go out in the service of the Master to whom they had consecrated him in his infancy. They were past mid-life when their youngest son was ready for college, but they did not shrink from taking up the burden again, for his sake. He chose the profession of the law, and after graduating from the University of the city of New York, he spent a year in perfecting his legal training. But his parents had never ceased to pray that he might become a minister of the Gospel, and at length their prayers were answered. In 1853, at the age of twenty-one, he entered the College of New Brunswick to prepare for his ministerial career.

empty parsonage, that he had been too poor to furnish, carpeted and upholstered and filled with every convenience for a minister's abode. The generosity of his people who had done this as a mark of their appreciation and esteem, made a deep impression on him. They soon learned, however, that a continuance of their relations could not be hoped for. Other churches affording larger spheres of labor were importuning him to become their pastor. At the close of his third year at Belleville a call of exceptional urgency was made to him from Syracuse, N. Y., which he felt it his duty to accept, and his beloved church reluctantly gave him up to a wider usefulness. But the Syracuse church speedily found that it must yield too, to the same irresistible force of attraction which had won the services of the brilliant young preacher. Philadelphia beckoned him with the offer of a city pulpit.

He settled there in 1862, and from the beginning won the ear of the populace. The church was crowded by delighted throngs, to whom the freshness of his thought, the wealth of his vocabulary and the pertinence and force of his illustration were a revelation. For nearly seven years he labored in the Quaker City, with continually increasing popularity and success.

Called to Brooklyn

It is, however, with the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., that Dr. Talmage's name is chiefly associated. The receipt of three calls, almost simultaneously, near the close of his seventh year in Philadelphia, seemed to him an indication of a Providential summons to a new scene of labor. They came from San Francisco, Chicago and Brooklyn. It was characteristic of the man that he chose the church which needed him most. The call from Brooklyn bore only seventeen signatures, but it was unanimous, for there were no more members in the church roll. The church building was large; it stood among a teeming population, but its influence had dwindled to nothing. In March, 1869, Dr. Talmage preached his first sermon there.

The transformation that followed seemed magical. Every service was crowded. Within a year, it was decided to erect a new edifice capable of seating three thousand. Dr. Talmage's first sermon was from the text, "Come ye to me," but it seemed an inaptitude, for the people came in such numbers that many were compelled to stay out. Two years afterward, on a Sunday morning in December, 1872, Dr. Talmage looked from the window of his house and saw his beloved church "put ting on red wings of fire," a lurid mass of conflagration.

A Greater Tabernacle

Undismayed by the destruction of their church, the congregation soon began to build a still larger structure which would seat five thousand. Although the completed edifice was the largest church-building of its denomination in America, it was never large enough to hold the crowds who came to listen to the now-famous preacher. The regular hearers alone were nearly sufficient to fill the building, and their number was augmented by hundreds from New York, by many from other States, and even by transatlantic visitors, who had read his sermons printed in their home journals. For fully fifteen years the church had uninterrupted

DR. TALMAGE AT HIS EDITORIAL DESK IN THE BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

The reports of his tutors were not encouraging. There was no question as to his orthodoxy; there was no doubt about his oratorical power; but he set the recognized laws of sermonic science at defiance, and with bold originality said the thing that was in him in current phraseology and in his own way. "You must change your style," one of his teachers said to him, "otherwise no pulpit will ever be open to you." But a change was not possible to the budding genius, and to the end of his life he was a law to himself and his utterances were unlike those of any other preacher. The truths were the same, but their presentation was picturesque, daring and peculiarly his own.

His First Pastoral Charge

At the close of his college course he accepted an invitation from a church at Belleville, N. J., to which he ministered with mutual satisfaction for three years. He used to relate with grateful recognition the kindness of the people to their young minister, and often described his surprise and delight when, after a brief vacation that they had suggested to him, he returned to find the prosperity, which was rudely broken on October 13, 1889, by the complete destruction of the second Tabernacle by fire. A third Tabernacle was built, still larger than its predecessors. It was finished in 1891, and its dedication was a great public occasion. Large delegations, drawn from every section of the Union, came, bringing congratulations.

It was a grand and beautiful temple of worship, rich in ornamentation, vast in seating capacity and perfect in acoustics. "I never could sing a note or raise a tune," Dr. Talmage would often say; yet the music, the strains of the great, deep-toned $30,000 organ mingling with the mighty swell of voices, led by Peter Ali's silver cornet, was the finest imaginable. Three years later, when a series of meetings were held to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his pastorate in Brooklyn, the State, the city and the clergy of the neighborhood united in recognition of the eminence Dr. Talmage had achieved. He was overwhelmed with verbal congratulations and good wishes, and telegrams, letters and cable dispatches came from illustrious personages here and beyond the seas. It was, however, the closing scene in his long succession of Brooklyn triumphs, for on the following Sunday, May 13, 1894, a fire broke out in the church at the close of the morning service, and the fine building in a few hours became a pile of smoking ruins.

The Third Conflagration

"It is one of those mysteries that will never be revealed this side of eternity. Our beloved church is gone; but we will trust in God." These were the words uttered by Dr. Talmage, sitting in his home in Brooklyn, bowed down by the burden of his great and sudden disaster. His Tabernacle, the pride of the city, and the largest Protestant church in America, lay in ashes, and he, with hundreds of others, had barely escaped with his life. That beautiful temple of worship, upon which all the loving care, the art and the sacrifices of a great congregation had been lavished, had been wiped out as though it had never existed. Cause for deep gratitude, however, remained in the fact that not a life had been lost. Dr. Talmage, himself, was almost the last to leave the flaming building. At the last moment he turned and, apparently dazed by the confusion and the roar of the conflagration, would have gone back to the platform, but friends conveyed him, safe and unhurt, to the outer air, where he was greeted as one snatched from the very jaws of death. There were many other narrow escapes.

Bowed down under the weight of this new affliction, Dr. Talmage, at the urgent suggestion of his friends, went abroad for a time. Before leaving for the West, he wrote the following communication to his flock and to the friends of his ministry everywhere:

"This church has again been halted by a sword of flame. The destruction of the first Brooklyn Tabernacle was a mystery. The destruction of the second a greater profound. This third calamity we adjourn to the Judgment Day for explanation. The home of a vast multitude of souls, it has become a heap of ashes. Whether it will ever rise again is a prophecy we will not undertake. God rules and reigns and makes no mistake. He has his way with churches as with individuals. One thing is certain: the pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle will continue to preach as long as life and health last. We have no anxieties about a place to preach in. But woe is unto us if we preach not the Gospel! We ask for the prayers of all good people for the pastor and people of Brooklyn Tabernacle."

A Tour Around the Globe

He visited Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand, India and Great Britain, and preached to large audiences in many cities. During his absence, a series of interesting letters of travel from his pen appeared in the pages of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and on his return to the United States he published an account of his journeyings in a volume entitled, The Earth Girdled, which was very widely circulated. He now devoted himself almost exclusively to his editorial duties on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, to which he had been a regular weekly contributor since 1878, becoming editor-in-chief in 1890. For twenty-four years, his weekly sermons have appeared in these pages with unflinching regularity. Dr. Louis Klopsch, the proprietor of this journal, was his most intimate friend and associate for many years. He had syndicated Dr. Talmage's sermons since 1885, furnishing them regularly every week to over 3,000 newspapers. It is estimated that the total number of weekly readers reached by the syndicate and through other channels, was not less than twenty million souls, an audience far more vast than has ever been addressed by any other writer or preacher in the world, ancient or modern. Eternity alone can reveal the remarkable spiritual results of this ministry of the press. In twenty years or more, thousands of letters have been received by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, in which the writers declared that the sermons, often read in remote places, far from the point of preaching, have brought them to the "parting of the ways," and led to a spiritual transformation in their lives. In many lonely, out-of-the-way localities, where Gospel privileges are few and far between, the sermon by Dr. Talmage in this journal has come like a heaven-sent blessing, brightening and glorifying the entire week. It has been read, in lieu of a service, in hundreds of rural cottage homes, in schoolhouses, barns, and sheds; in pastorless chapels and in out-door gatherings under the trees, and has been divinely blessed as a means of bringing many out of darkness into the light; in military camp, in barracks and in the trenches; on shipboard; in the hospitals and in the rooms of invalids and shut-ins all over the globe. It was in very truth, a world-wide ministry, with its auditors numbered by the millions.

Visiting the Czar

During the two years following the burning of the third Brooklyn Tabernacle, Dr. Talmage varied his literary work by frequent preaching and lecture tours, and an occasional visit abroad. He had a big, warm heart

Copyright, 1892, Louis Klopsch

DAVID TALMAGE

CATHARINE TALMAGE

The father and mother of the great preacher and generous impulses, and he was interested in various philanthropic movements, some of them of wide scope. His love of such work was fostered by his experience in 1892, when he visited Russia with Dr. Klopsch on "a mission of bread," first sending on ahead the steamship Leo, laden with 50,000 sacks of flour, the gift of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD readers to the starving Russian peasants. While in St. Petersburg, the Americans were summoned to Peterhof, the imperial summer residence, where they were presented to the Czar Alexander, the Empress, Czarevitch Nicolas (the present Emperor), and other royalties, and received, in behalf of the American people, the imperial expression of Russia's gratitude for the aid bestowed. Dr. Talmage often referred, with kindling eye, to this Russian welcome, and he spoke many a kindly word for the young Czar. In later years, with voice and pen, he greatly helped the cause of Armenian, Cuban and Puerto Rican relief, and the India famine work, and, a few years ago, the Chinese relief work. He was a member and active worker in a number of charitable organizations, but in these, as in all others of the same character, he invariably kept in the background. He is one of the incorporators of the Bowerly Mission of New York, the pioneer of American rescue missions.

Copyright, 1892, Louis Klopsch

THE THIRD TABERNACLE, BURNED 1894

His Washington Pastorate

In 1895 Dr. Talmage accepted for a time a pastoral call from the First Presbyterian Church in Washington, which is known as "The Church of the Presidents," many incumbents of the White House having worshipped there in former years. His church was crowded to the doors; but urgent calls from other quarters were multiplying, and he finally decided, though not without reluctance, to give up local pastoral work, and devote himself exclusively to wider evangelization. The passing years served to increase his fame, and the announcement of his preaching was always sufficient to attract a vast audience. His personal mail was probably the largest of any man in America outside of public office. There were thousands who wrote to him, asking advice in spiritual things, and laying their hearts bare to one whom they regarded as bearing a divine mission, and "speaking with authority."

Few men in literary life retained their intellectual vigor so long. Even those who knew him best could detect no diminution in the force of his eloquence, and no dimming of the lustre of his splendid periods, though he had turned seventy. His last sermons were every whit as brilliant as those he composed when in his prime. His eye was as clear, his voice as flexible and resonant, and his step as elastic as though he were not nearing that border-land "where burdens are laid down." Those last few golden years were, in some respects, the happiest of his life. Though they were busy years, they still left him some leisure. In the summer, which he usually passed at his beautiful country home at Easthampton, Long Island, he did an immense amount of literary work. He was a most agreeable host, and could recall with photographic fidelity scenes and events long passed, delighting his guests with such reminiscences. He was the personal friend of many leading Americans of the preceding half century, and his recollections of Presidents, statesmen, authors and other eminent people were full of interest.

Dr. Talmage's Doctrine

Dr. Talmage's doctrine was of the old-fashioned, orthodox type, but it fell with new attractions from his eloquent lips. He believed in a Bible "inspired from lid to lid," and many times during his career, he came to the front as a defender of the integrity of the Book of Books. He repudiated the "higher criticism," as a menace to the old religion, and denounced as impious the doubts concerning miracles and inspiration. His famous attack on Ingersoll created a continental sensation twenty years ago. He scored the brilliant infidel in a series of sermons full of vigorous philippics. Often he chose as a target for his oratorical batteries the foibles and besetting sins of society, and he never spared his ammunition. He poured out broadsides on Wall Street, the saloons, gamblers, low politicians, and all who came within the range of his criticism. His forceful denunciation of popular vices was equalled only by his ability to move his audience to tears of sympathy, when he chose to appeal to the emotions. No preacher in a century could describe in such moving language the charms of home, the mother's love for a wayward child, the delights of rural life, or the simple faith of the believer in Christ and heaven. He was unquestionably, within a certain wide range, the most vivid and picturesque speaker the American pulpit has ever known, and his sermons and writings alike were Turneresque in literary color and expression. He was always in his best vein when facing a sympathetic assemblage in the great cities. He has frequently spoken before 10,000 persons, and his great audiences at the Academy of Music, New York, in the Chicago Auditorium, and in London, Liverpool and Glasgow, have rarely been equalled in point of numbers. He delighted, too, in an audience of farmers. Such gatherings never failed to comprehend his homely doctrines. He used to say that he had long since "lived down" the frills and non-essentials of religion. "At twenty," he would explain, "I believed several hundred things; at fifty, I believed about a score, but now, with clearer vision, as I grow older and come nearer the close of the journey, I hold only to three things as vital—that God our Father loves us far better than we know; that Jesus Christ, his Son, is our Redeemer and Saviour, and that I am a sinner, enriched by his grace, though all unworthy."

The Power of His Mighty Pen

All his life he was inordinately fond of religious literature. Even in childhood, he would read Scott's Commentaries—a bulky volume—when he was too small to sit upon a chair, and had to use a stool instead. If he could have mastered even a single foreign language, he would probably have become a missionary like his brothers; but he had no knack of acquiring strange tongues, so he stuck to the plain Anglo-Saxon, and to such purpose that his sturdy utterances have been translated into nearly a score of foreign languages. When he visited Athens in 1890, he was presented to Queen Olga, who told him that she "had the pleasure of reading his sermons in her native Greek, in her own capital, in the columns of a weekly publication." Through such means he doubtless reached much vaster audiences in foreign lands than any missionary could ever hope to reach. When he was making his round-the-world trip, he found his sermons read in so many places that he afterwards used to say: "I felt on that trip as though I was making a round of pastoral calls."

As an editorial writer, Dr. Talmage was versatile and prolific, and his weekly contributions on an immense variety of topics would fill many volumes. His writing was as entertaining and pungent as his preaching, and full of brilliant eccentricities—"Talmagisms" as they were called. He coined new words, and invented new phrases. If the topic was to his liking, the pen raced to keep time with the thought. It was the same with his sermons. Once conceived in the busy brain, the committing to paper was swift and exciting. Still, with all this haste, nothing could exceed the scrupulous care he took with his finished manuscript. He once wired from Cincinnati to his publisher in New York, instructions to change a comma in his current sermon to a semicolon. He had detected the error while reading proof on the train.

His phenomenal memory was never at a loss. He had spoken or written on thousands of topics, and he remembered almost everything he had ever preached. In preparing his twenty-volume series of sermons, he used only 500, or less than half the total number he had preached. In addition to at least 1,000 sermons, of 4,000 words each—each sermon different from the other (this vast pulpit repertoire aggregating probably 4,000,000 words)—he was the author of a number of lectures, the most popular being: "The New Life of the

Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch

REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE

Nation," "Grumblers," "Our New Home," "Big Blunders" and "The Bright Side of Things." In his literary work, he scorned to borrow, though his own unique phrases and ideas were the prey of many petty plagiarists. Although his fame will rest chiefly upon his sermon writings, his treatment of lighter topics was brilliant and clever. But his finest work was not among the shallows; his pen could go deeply into the secrets of the heart and soul, and such was his rare gift that with a single sentence he could move a multitude. Among the periodicals to which he contributed at various times were The New York Weekly, Hearth and Home, The Independent and The Christian at Work. About thirty volumes of his sermons have been published, twenty volumes appearing in a single series in 1900. His other works, besides those already mentioned, include Crumbs Swept Up, Around the Tea Table, Sparks From My Anvil, A Thousand Gems, From Manger to Throne, Sports that Kill, The Wedding Ring, Night Sides of City Life, The Poetry of Life, Old Wells Dug Out, Abominations of Modern Society and The Earth Girdled. Many of these are familiar to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD.

A Pen Picture of Dr. Talmage

Here is a pen-picture of Dr. Talmage by one who knew him intimately, and had studied him closely:

"Dr. Talmage is above the medium height, and well-proportioned. His frame is large, but he is naturally rather spare in flesh. His head is of the average size, with marked evidence of intellectual power. He has light eyes and a sandy complexion. Looking into his face, you are struck with its amiability and cheerfulness. In conversation, it is always bright with animation, and at all times is a perfect mirror of his emotions. His eyes are clear, tender and observing, while his tone and manners are gentle and warm in the extreme. An invariable self-reliance and calmness and judgment in all his proceedings give him dignity and self-possession, but in these particulars there is nothing affected or studied. He is plain and unostentatious in his appearance and bearing, and mingles freely with his fellow-men. His warmth of manners and his genial flow of conversation place even the stranger at once on most agreeable terms with him; in truth, his conversational powers are little less than fascinating. He is full of noble sentiment, poetry and humor; he looks at life with his "eyes and ears wide open," and he discusses both men and topics with comprehensiveness and originality. He is never ashamed to show his feelings, never afraid to declare his opinions. Independent, out-spoken, and yet generous, tender and sympathetic, he presents in his own disposition the most manly and at the same time the most beautiful traits that adorn human character.

Bold and Original Preaching

As a preacher, he has even more striking peculiarities. He is an original, terse, bold, and eloquent writer, and a fluent, impassioned speaker. He has the most complete command of language, which takes forms of expression which are not less new than graphic and impressive. His thoughts take a wide range on every subject, and they are sudden in their changes, from the solemn and sublime to the humorous and odd. At one time he will indulge in a strain of the most touching pathos, and then suddenly introduce some humorous and grotesque illustration. His language is chaste and beautiful in the expression of the more sentimental passages, and it is most pungent and overwhelming in criticism and denunciation. He has sarcasm, irony and ridicule at his tongue's end, not less than words of exquisite poetic beauty and tenderness. All of this so mingled together, and so altered in surprises, that his audience find themselves spell-bound by the novelty of style as well as the eloquence of the orator. His voice is powerful and flexible. He can in an instant change it from tones that ring out to the capacity of the largest building, to the accent that float in soft whispers to the ear. His gesticulation is somewhat marvelous. There is not a sentence that he has not some gesture of the hand, the arms, the head, or the body to illustrate or enforce, and still it is all done with such appropriateness and gracefulness that it adds immensely to the effectiveness of his oratory. His face, too, has great mobility, and the changing expressions of eye, mouth and brow are a vivid accompaniment to his fervent words.

Many persons find it difficult to form a favorable opinion in regard to Mr. Talmage's merits as a preacher. To be sure, he puts language into unusual forms; but no preacher of the day can give a keener dissection of human motives, or make a more masterly or eloquent Christian appeal. A half hour of his earnest, original discussion will give you suggestions which will not leave you for many a day thereafter. As a man, he is somewhat of an oddity; but as a preacher, he is full of the spirit of God, and every talent and every purpose is devoted to the work for the regeneration of fallen man. If he makes you smile and weep in a breath, if he has simple sayings and whimsical ways, he is also a ripe scholar, a clear-headed philosopher, and a Christian orator. He has qualifications which enable him to reach and control the great popular heart, and his ministry is consequently one of the most marked success."

The Social Side of the Man

In social life he is all vivacity, all goodness, and all himself. Whether it be eccentricity, or whether it be simply a larger share of rich, exuberant animal spirits than most ministers possess, certain it is that the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is more real and true to genuine human nature, in social life, than most of his contemporaries. He seems to go down into his own heart for a gushing, abundant spring of fellowship and love, which washes out channels to every other heart. He follows no conventional rules, he is guided by no example; but, as we have stated, he is himself. This is not because he is indifferent to the force of these rules and examples, but because he acts from a quick, impulsive, and original nature of his own. When, in the glee and enthusiasm of the moment, at a church festival, he exclaimed that he felt "like the morning star," it was not that his taste induced him to take his illustration from negro minstrelsy; but, acting on the impulse of the moment, he humorously seized upon a popular saying to express the state of his own feelings. Men of stiff propriety and starched dignity would not do or say many things that he does every day. With him, however, a free, honest, cheerful heart, is much more cultivated, and impulsive and erratic as it often is, it is given full influence and control over his actions and sentiments.

Universal Solicitude

While Dr. Talmage lay dying in his Washington home, many hundreds of telegrams of earnest inquiry were received from all parts of the Union, and some from foreign lands. Among those who made personal inquiry at the Talmage home, concerning the sufferer's condition, were the following:

Senator Fairbanks, The Bishop of Washington, Judge B. Howery, Rev. Thomas Chalmers Easton,

Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch

THE HOUSE IN WHICH DR. TALMAGE DIED

The death-chamber is indicated by a cross

D.D., Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, Senator Fry, Rev. S. J. Nicolls, D.D., St. Louis; Mrs. Stanley Matthews, Rev. Donald C. McLeod, Rev. Asa S. Fiske, Rev. Joseph G. Kelly, Justice Brewer, Rev. Teunis Hamlin, Mr. Charles V. Herdlika, The Mexican Ambassador, Gen. J. C. Breckenridge, Rev. W. H. Milburn, D.D.; Mr. Wm. Aldin Smith, Judge Shepard, Dr. Herrick Johnson, Judge Andrew Bradley, Senator Cullom, Rev. John E. Stuchell, Rev. T. A. Nelson, Rev. G. W. Luccock, Mr. A. J. Halford, Japanese Minister and Mrs. Yakahira, Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt, Mr. John W. Foster, Senator Foraker, General Miles, Mr. S. H. Kauffmann, Senator Burrows, Admiral Watson, Mr. Henderson, Rev. Dr. Mackay-Smith, Bishop Hurst, General Corbin, Mr. Corea.

Two days before Dr. Talmage died, the Revision Committee of the General Presbyterian Assembly

Copyright, 1902, Louis Klopsch

MRS. TALMAGE

forwarded to Mrs. Talmage the following resolution of sympathy:

The Revision Committee of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, in session in Washington, April 10, 1902, having been informed that Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is seriously ill, on motion of Dr. Dickey, unanimously resolved that the Moderator of the Assembly, and the Chairman of the Committee, Rev. Dr. Henry C. Minton, in the name of the Committee, should convey to Dr. Talmage and his family the sympathy and best wishes of all the members of the Committee, and an expression of their hope that the Master will spare Dr. Talmage for continued service.

Washington, D.C.,
April 10, 1902.

HENRY COLLIN MINTON,
Moderator, and Chairman of Committee.

Amid the multitude of eulogies from the press and pulpit of two continents, which followed upon the announcement of Dr. Talmage's death, it would be difficult to select any which more aptly expresses the international estimate of his influence than that which appeared in the world's greatest newspaper, the London Times, which remarked: "If Wesley could feel that the world was his parish, Talmage could have said with equal truth that the world was his congregation." He had for an audience practically the whole civilized globe.

The Funeral Arrangements

The funeral was arranged to take place from the Church of The Covenant, in Washington, on Tuesday April 15, at 5 P. M., the officiating ministers being the Revs. Teunis S. Hamlin, Howard Suydam, James Demarest, Edward Terhune and Thomas Chalmers Easton. The pall-bearers chosen were: U. S. Senator Cullom, Dolliver and Burroughs; Supreme Court Justice Harlan and Brewer; Congressman Alden Smith, Mr. Warner, Louis Klopsch, and Messrs. Branch and Lawrence, of Brooklyn. After the Washington obsequies, the remains were to be taken to Brooklyn, for final interment in the family vault in Greenwood cemetery. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD offices were closed during the services here and in Washington.

THE ONLY AUTHENTIC LIFE OF T. DEWITT TALMAGE

Auto-Biographical Edition
With Introduction by his son

REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.
Profusely Illustrated

is now in press. It contains a complete life-story of Dr. Talmage, the world's greatest pulpit orator, and for many years Editor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; also a large number of high tributes paid by most eminent persons of two hemispheres.

Over 400 large pages, profusely illustrated, and bound in rich cloth with emblematic design.

The Only Authentic Life of Dr. Talmage
Published by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD
[Bible House, New York City.]

First Missionary Church Inaugurated • ...The Church at Antioch in Syria

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 4
ACTS 11: 19-30

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "THE HAND OF THE LORD WAS WITH THEM; AND A GREAT NUMBER BELIEVED AND TURNED TO THE LORD." ACTS 11: 21

BY gradual stages, God drew the Jewish Christians into missionary work: first into city missions, in Jerusalem, to Christianize Jews; then into home missions in Samaria, whose people were half Jews; then, Peter brings into the church a Jewish proselyte, Cornelius, and by that experience broadens his own view, and is enabled to broaden those of his associates. But in the present lesson, we find Christians for the first time preaching to Gentiles in a Gentile city and founding a church of Gentiles, in fulfillment of the prophecies in Isaiah 62.

The Lesson Story

Our lesson is of Antioch. Let us learn its history from the Mountain that stands, sage and grim, like a sentinel above the city. His voice is hoarse and deep, and he begins his tale by saying: "Before Antioch was, I was. Even before man ever thought of it, I said, 'What a grand place for a city is this beautiful plain that lies between me and the sea yonder!' At last, one day, I saw a strange sight, a boat with more than a hundred oars, being rowed up the gleaming river which flows to the sea. I could easily guess it was a royal barge. Presently there stepped on shore a man so regal in appearance I knew that he must be either a king or the son of a king. He had with him many companions. I listened in wonder to their words, and soon discovered that the grand-looking man was a prince. His companions called him Prince Seleucia Nicator, and I learned from their conversation that the prince had come to build a city as a monument to his father, King Antiochus. My eyes had grown dim with age, but they grew young again as I watched that marvellous city grow up at my very feet. The almost constant arrival of ships laden with stones of dazzling whiteness, and others of brilliant colors, which they used in the buildings, were a marvel in my eyes. And then shiploads of people began to come to live in the strong and beautiful houses. We mountains get used to counting the stars over our heads, and I used to think I could see as many people in the city below as I saw stars in the sky. But their ways were not altogether pleasing to me. From the time of my youth my voice had been lifted in praise to the Lord who had created me, and the little hills all about me had joined in the chorus of praise to his name. But I saw that the people in the city below did not praise the God of the mountains, but made for themselves, of one of their whitest stones, a figure of a young man, and called it their god, Apollo. They built groves of cypress and laurel around the statue, in which they met to worship their 'god.' I looked down once to see how they worshiped him, but, ah me! the sight was so vile, I always kept my eyes turned away afterward.

"Not a day passed but I saw strange ships land, with all sorts of precious things. My sister hills remarked how strangely bright my eyes had grown. I knew it was because I had so many new things to look at. And when I turned my eyes to look backward, in almost every direction I saw trains of camels coming, laden with precious things. If I were not afraid of making my story too long, I could tell you of many times when I thought I should lose the beautiful city, and go back to my days of loneliness, for fire, and earthquake, and war came in turn, but each time I rejoiced to see strong and brave men build again the houses that had been broken down or burned. I could but wish that some of my everlasting strength had been put into their building.

"After a while, I noticed that a new kind of people had come to make their homes in my city. I saw that they did not go to the groves of Daphne to worship Apollo, but gathered together in each other's houses, and I heard them praising my God, the true God, in heaven above. I heard them talk about why they had come to Antioch. They said it was because they were persecuted in Palestine for acknowledging Jesus Christ as the Son of God. They made it their business to go about from house to house, and talk about the true God, and his son Jesus Christ, until at length, would you believe it, I saw many of the people who had worshiped Apollo leave the groves, never to go back again. I clapped my hands in joy. One day I felt a hot breath come up into my face, and my eyes were nearly blinded with smoke. I saw the groves of Daphne burning, and I heard the image of Apollo fall to the ground with a crash. The followers of the true God kept on increasing, until at least half the people in the city were called 'Christians,' a name given to the friends of Jesus by those who still worshiped Apollo.

"One day I saw a strange man come into the city, with a face so kind and beautiful, it seemed to me that he must look like God himself. They called him Barnabas. He hardly took time to eat and sleep, so busy was he in telling the people all he knew about Jesus. One day I saw him go away. I was afraid I would see him no more, but I was soon rejoiced to see him come back, bringing with him a younger man, whom he called Paul. At first I noticed that the Jewish people did not take to Paul; indeed, they seemed rather afraid of him. I never could find out why that was, but perhaps you can tell me. Afterwards they seemed to think even more of him, than they did of Barnabas. I soon discovered why Barnabas had brought Paul to Antioch: he needed somebody to help him preach about Jesus. I grew to know Paul well, for he, together with Barnabas, stayed in my city a whole year."

Illustration and Application

Now they that were scattered upon the persecution traveled, preaching unto the Jews only. As the storm scatters seed, so persecution scatters truth, making the wrath of man serve the cause of God. But these early Christian victims of bigotry were not themselves free of the same fault; in this respect, like the Puritans, persecuted for nonconformity to the English state church, who, in turn, condemned Baptists and Quakers for nonconformity to themselves. Those persecuted Christians of the church at Jerusalem thought the Gentiles not worth saving, and so preached "to Jews only." So to-day, as one has suggested, there are those who would have their preacher an apostle to the Gentiles only.

Some of them told the good tidings unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus. These who first broke away from the unbrotherly Jewish prejudices were not ministers, but plain laymen, so full of zeal that they could not but tell the Gentiles of the Lord Jesus. Ecclesiastical authorities seldom lead in new departures. It is the plain people, often laymen and women, that start the "forward movements." It was the shoemaker Carey who inaugurated modern British Missions. And the founders of the Y. M. C. A. and W. C. T. U., Williams and Willard, held no ecclesiastical commissions. The same is true of Dr. Benjamin Rush, inaugurator of the modern temperance movement, and of Wilberforce, leader of the emancipation crusade. When such a movement is started by a preacher, it is usually not by order of any ecclesiastical assembly. If churches will ponder these facts, they may be aroused to greater readiness to keep step with God in the new fields to which he summons, not a few skirmishers, but the whole grand army of his church.

Laymen Inaugurating Foreign Missions

THE CITY OF ANTIOCH, THE SITE OF THE FIRST GENTILE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

There seems to be perpetual need to show Christians that God's love belongs not to one nation or denomination, but to all his children the world over. A child thinks the sun shines only for those in its own horizon, and sings to it in the morning kindergarten.

I saw you go to sleep last night
Before I ceased my I lay.

But the teacher sings in reply, for the sun:

I never go to sleep, dear child,
I just go round to see
The little children of the East,
Who rise and look for me.

As universal as the light and heat of the sun, that shines for all, is the truth and love of God, given to Christians to give to all.

Note that those lay missionaries in Antioch preached "the Lord Jesus," not alone "Jesus" as Saviour, but also Christ as "Lord." The "good tidings," that is, the Gospel, includes not only pardon through Jesus, the Saviour, but also direction and protection through Christ the Lord, who is Lord not alone of individual, but also of all associated human life, of business and politics and pleasure. The individual is saved by the Cross of Christ, but the community is saved by his crown, that is, by the application of his law to all our associated life. We proclaim but a half Gospel when we do not proclaim both love and law. On these two hang all the law and the prophets.

A great number believed and turned. Here are the two parts that the human will plays in conversion. Whatever God does for us and in us in the atonement and in regeneration, the imperative commands to our wills are: "Have faith in God," "Turn unto the Lord." Faith is a bridge of four arches: the belief of the intellect, the submission of the will, the trust of the heart, the faithfulness of the life. Turning is the visible part of repentance, which means to turn. Sorrow may be great or little—enough if it constrains us to turn about when we are going away from God. It is said that half of Antioch's two hundred thousand people so turned, through the zeal of those early Christians. On the very day this lesson is written the newspapers furnish an illustration of the zeal with which we should seek to turn endangered human souls from their perilous path. On the Baltimore and Ohio Railway, a train-despatcher, forgetting he had given a fast freight twenty miles away the track intervening, gave it to another freight train in his own station. The train was under way before he discovered his awful mistake. There would be a head-on collision near the next station, ten miles away, unless he could overtake the train that had just left before it reached that place. He rushed to the engine-house, demanded an engine, put on all steam, pulled out the throttle, and, at a mad speed, flew down the track. Fortunately, the train he pursued was heavy, and he was able to overtake it just in time to get it on the siding of the next station. There was only a minute to spare, but he had saved both engines and others from the head-on collision to which they were swiftly moving. Alas, that physical and mortal life seems so much more to us than eternal life, and that we move so reluctantly when it is the soul and not alone the body that is in danger.

If we would but consider the awful consequences of sin, even in this world, we should run to urge many a young man, speeding on a perilous way, to turn aside and escape from impending wreck.

Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus to seek Saul. Here are two new apostles, who were to be the first foreign missionaries. Barnabas had come from Jerusalem to superintend the organization of the first Gentile church at Antioch, out of converts made by lay-workers, and feeling the need of a counselor and associate in leadership had gone to Tarsus for Saul, who had now returned from his theological course in the solitude of Arabia. The very life of Barnabas (ver. 24) had won men to Christ. In any reading-room it may be seen that many who will not read unillustrated books and papers are attracted to those which contain pictures. So, many who will not read the Bible, are attracted by good illustrations of it in the lives of Christians—repelled also by "frustrations" of it in unfaithful lives that belie the Christian name. In German, the word for Christians is the plural of Christ. Are we "Christi" to those who see our lives, repeating his life in our own.

The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. Does some one say, "What a pity we do not know a word of all the sermons Barnabas and Saul preached in that whole fruitful year they remained in Antioch? We do know that the chief word and essence of it all was Christ, from the fact that the disciples were called by his name—"Christians," not Barnabites or Paulites. What a pity any body of Christians was ever called by any other name! In some missionary countries, all Christians are spoken of as of the "Jesus way." Barnabas and Saul made a like impression. It is now their honor that they made men forget themselves and behold Jesus only.

Christ means the anointed one, and refers to his Kingship, which we should consider as much as his Saviourship. In these days, when the errors and imperfections of kings are receiving much attention, let us behold the King in whom there is no fault.

The disciples determined to send relief. Here is the philanthropic side of Christianity, the first of the many famine relief projects, with which CHRISTIAN HERALD subscribers are so honorably familiar. A Gentile church sends financial help to the Jewish mother church at Jerusalem, in spontaneous recognition of human brotherhood! Christianity proves how great a force it is by its millions given to relief and education and other general benefits in which the giver has no selfish interest. "God so loved that he gave." Love will ever work that way. And love itself is the best gift.

When we see what bigotry lingered in the early Christians, it should make us more patient with the faults of the Church to-day. (1) God's part in revivals. "The hand of the Lord was with them"; (2) the workers' part, "preaching the Lord Jesus"; (3) the converts' part, "they believed, and turned unto the Lord."

The disciples were Christians before they were called so. Let us beware lest we be called Christians before we are so. The story is worth repeating how Alexander the Great said to one who had been named after him, but was unworthy: "Either change your character or your name." In heathen lands every white man is called a Christian, though his only prayer is an oath. Let us beware of that guilty hypocrisy that accepts the name, but refuses to accept the nature of Christ.

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly.
Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance.
Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Registered post-offices.

Foreign Postage. Letters sent to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.
Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you wish to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York.
Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-Class Matter.

TILL THEN—FAREWELL!

FAREWELL, thou valiant Soldier of the Cross. Many a gallant blow hast thou struck at its enemies; yet never was there a more honorable warrior, nor a more generous victor.

Farewell, thou staunch defender of the old Book of Books, which, in its integrity, from lid to lid, thou didst resolutely uphold.

Farewell, thou whose voice was as the voice of a heavenly messenger, bringing to the world the Gospel of mercy and pardon and peace, and whose splendid gift of eloquence was consecrated to the highest service.

Farewell, thou whose magic pen could move us to smiles or tears, to laughter or sadness; and could cause us to throb with sympathy for human suffering, or to burn with a just indignation at the enemies of the Cross.

Farewell, counselor, comrade, chief; thou strong leader in all godly enterprise, thou friend of kindest humor and most genial fellowship.

Farewell, thou stainless knight, whose keen lance was unsparingly set against the infidel, the intemperate, the profane, the impure, the debasers of the souls of men, and the enemies of the Christian home.

Farewell, thou faithful pastor and evangelist, whose voice has been lifted up in many lands to tell of Christ. Long wilt thou be held in loving remembrance by the multitudes who have been led to the Cross by thy strong and tender pleadings. Thy heart melted toward the afflicted and the down-trodden and the despised of every race.

The record of thy life and work is written upon the hearts of men and women throughout the world. Throngs of the redeemed—won through thy ministry—will meet and greet thee at the heavenly portals. Still other throngs will seek thee there hereafter. May we, when our sojourn here is over, there renew the sweet companionship now so rudely severed.

Till then—farewell!

INTO PEACE!

THE editorial chair is vacant. The most famous preacher of the world, who stood at the cradle of the twentieth century, is dead. The cedar of Lebanon has fallen. A great Christian warrior has gathered about his physical frame the heavy shroud and lain down to sleep. Reverend T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D., has written his last word; stood before his last audience, and sat with his colleagues at the editorial table for the last time. He was a peer of earth's greatest sons. With the humblest he was a brother in Christ.

He did not belong to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD alone. He was a world's factor. He cannot be monopolized by the present generation. His influence shall go down through the coming ages. Those who knew him personally have been encouraged by his smile, strengthened by the warm grasp of his hand. He will be missed in the editorial rooms. Another can never take his place in his children's hearts. The wife whose companionship mellowed the twilight of his wonderful earthly career will no longer have his strong arm to lean upon. But to-day there are millions of sorrowing hearts mourning in foreign lands as well as those in his own home. The waves of his influence, like the fathomless depths of the mighty deep, touched every shore of Christendom.

Yet we should not mourn for our departed loved one as those who have no hope. Doctor Talmage did a matchless work. His sermons reached the hearts of millions. He preached to the thousands wherever he appeared. But God is not to be confounded by the death of any one man. The messenger who hovered over the Washington home Saturday night, April the 12th, 1902, was not a black-winged but a white-robed angel. He was a courier sent from the throne of heaven and not a demon from the haunting depths of despair. God shall raise up another Joshua to carry on the work of this fallen Moses.

Gone! Yes, he is gone from trouble into peace. He had many a weary day, many a sleepless night. Gone! Yes, gone to mingle with the multitudes who have preceded him; who first learned to love Christ from his printed or spoken word. Gone! Yes, gone so we unitedly can take up his work and do as he would have us do. Gone! Yes, he is gone to be with the Saviour who sent him forth into the highways and the hedges to compel the halt, the hungry, and the blind to come into the banquet hall of the Lamb. Gone! Yes, gone to hear that same Saviour say unto his redeemed Spirit: "Well done, good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful in a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." Our Editor-in-Chief is not dead. He is translated. He is enthroned. He is redeemed. He is glorified. He is washed in the blood of the Lamb. He is gone to be with God.

Heaven is Home

THAT is not a word that finds echo in the hearts of unbelievers or of half-believers, hearts pressed full to overflowing with earthly desires and pleasures. "Out upon thee," cried poor Charles Lamb, as he thought of death approaching; "out upon thee, thou ugly, foul phantom. I detest, abhor and execrate thee, to be shunned as a miserable viper! I am in love with this green earth, the face of town and country, the unspeakable rural solitudes, and the sweet security of the streets. I would set up my tabernacle here. A new state of being staggers me."

But there was another man of letters, who was something more, and he said, "To die is gain," for he knew and rejoiced to know, that heaven was his home, and death was but the way home.

There is in Switzerland a hill known as the Heimweh Fluh, or "The Home-sick Mount." It is so called because it is usually the last spot visited by the traveler when leaving that part of the country, at a time when his thoughts are turned homeward. It commands a glorious view of the whole valley of Interlaken, with its fields and pastures, its villages and lakes, with a background of snow-capped mountains. It is a fair scene, but the heart of the traveler is not there. His thoughts are with his friends and loved ones at home. He looks from the Home-sick Mount and seems to murmur, with the patriarch Jacob, "Send me away that I may go into mine own place and to my country."

There are many such home-sick mountains to remind us of the home "beyond the smiling and the weeping" and if we have learned to think of our life here as a pilgrimage, we shall often stand, as it were, upon some Heimweh Fluh, and, whilst we gaze on the beauties of this world, we shall feel, "This is not my home; I am a stranger and a sojourner, as all my fathers were"; and we shall press on through the night of doubt and sorrow, straining our eyes to catch sight of the lights of home.

"He Is Beside Himself"

THERE is nothing that men of low aims are so utterly bewildered to understand, and which so completely passes all their powers of calculation, as lofty self-renunciation.

It is told of a brave young servant of the Lord, that when he decided to leave all his fine prospects in his native land to face the struggles of a missionary life, a very prominent man, who was also a professing Christian, expressed his intense astonishment that a man so well situated, such a "rising man," should sacrifice all ease and all ambition to go forth to hardship and poverty.

"I suppose," said the friend to whom the expression of surprise was addressed, "I suppose, that—

He sees a hand you cannot see
Which beckons him away;
He hears a voice you cannot hear
Which will not let him stay.

"Ah," said the other, wholly unconscious of the covert thrust, "I suppose that must be it."

That a young man marked for what the world calls promotion and success, should actually resign this for a position of no ease and no dignity, was to him an inexplicable enigma.

And so it ever is with low-aimed people. It is the mark of the man who dwells with God—would that it could be called the mark of every converted soul—that all the people whose portion is in this life with one consent say, "He is beside himself."

The Disgrace of Brigandage

THERE are few more thrilling chapters in the annals of missionary experience than that which relates the story of Miss Ellen M. Stone's life among the Bulgarian brigands, which we publish elsewhere in this issue of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Coming fresh from her own lips, it sets vividly before us the perils and hardships which she and her companion endured so bravely and uncomplainingly. Confined in caves, hurried in the darkness of night across precipitous mountain paths, lame and sick and prostrated with fatigue, threatened with death, and kept in ignorance of all that was going on in the outside world, the missionary's faith in God never wavered. She knew that all over the Christian world prayers were ascending in her behalf, and that the prayer-answering God would not be deaf to the petitions of his people. "It was only the prayers of the people all over the world which delivered me from their hands," she said, and this simple confidence in God's protecting power alone kept her alive during the terrible ordeal.

In some quarters, the opinion prevails that Miss Stone should not return to the scene of her labors, and that the Bulgarian border will no longer be safe for any missionary. It is reasonably certain, however, that Bulgaria—assuming that government to be responsible for her deprivation of liberty—will be compelled not only to make satisfactory reparation, but to effectually root out brigandage along its frontier and make such outrages impossible in the future. Turkey, too, can be forced to greater activity for the protection of Christian missions. Thus Miss Stone's experience would have a salutary influence upon all the missions in European Turkey and Asia Minor, as well as those in Macedonia.

Our Government has now the right to take the initiative in a movement looking to joint action by Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria and the United States, to induce Turkey, Bulgaria, Italy and Greece to adopt effective measures for the suppression of brigandage within their territories. That travelers should be imperiled by outlaw bands in those countries is no longer to be tolerated. The case of Miss Stone furnishes ample justification for such a movement for the extinction of a condition of affairs that is a disgrace to civilization.

Among the Workers

—MISS ELIZABETH D. MACDOWELL, who has been assisting in revival meetings in different cities in Pennsylvania during the winter, has met with remarkable success. Hundreds have confessed Christ at these services.

—MAJOR COLE has been holding revival meetings in the Baptist Church at Ottawa, Kan. Between 500 and 600 have made profession of religion. All the denominations are working together.

—FROM Manila come enthusiastic reports of the Evangelical Union's Gospel Tent services, just closed. The farewell address to the leader, Mr. Geil, was delivered by Major E. W. Halford, U. S. A., who voiced popular appreciation of the work done. "Scores and scores of men have been brought to Christ," he said.

—REV. W. D. CUNNINGHAM, who reached Japan last October, finds outside of his pulpit, many opportunities to preach and teach Christ. As instructor in the largest English school in the Empire, he has one class numbering 500, and other 450 members. He has started a paper, the Tokyo Christian, which gives the missionary news in Japan.

A Talmage Memorial Meeting

Arrangements have been perfected for a great Talmage Memorial Meeting, to be held in the Central Presbyterian Church, corner of Marcy and Jefferson avenues, Brooklyn on Sunday, April 27, at 4 P. M. Rev. Dr. Carson, the pastor and a number of other prominent clergymen, will deliver addresses on the life work of the late Dr. Talmage. Professor Henry Eyre Browne will preside at the organ, and Professor Peter Ali, for many years Dr. Talmage's cornetist in the Tabernacle, will lead the congregational singing. A fine programme is promised. Dr. Talmage's friends are cordially invited.

Regular Price, $30—Our Price, Only $15

Unprecedented
Unparalleled...

Only One Dollar Down

Almost Incredible...
Yet Absolutely True

SECURES THE TWELVE LARGE VOLUMES (NEARLY 10,000 PAGES) CONSTITUTING THE WONDERFUL World-Wide Encyclopedia

What It Is

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA is regular stock, not old nor antiquated, but brought right up to date with the story of the Spanish-American War, the Annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, together with elaborate articles on Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, the Gold Fields of Alaska and the Klondike. The World-Wide Encyclopedia is a Universal Educator, treating of every subject, great or small, within the range of human knowledge. It is a great compendium of Geography, History, Science, Biography, Art and Literature, and is specifically designed to supply in readily accessible shape all the valuable information contained in the cyclopedic literature of the age.

The Scholar, the Student, the Professional Man, the Business Man, the mechanic, the mother, the wife, the housekeeper, will all find it a ready storehouse of world-wide knowledge, a treasury of facts, a mine of information.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia answers every question however difficult or abstruse. A digest of all knowledge from the earliest times is contained within its 10,000 pages, and no person, however untutored, provided he can read, need lack for full information on any subject within the scope of human knowledge when once he is the possessor of this great work of universal interest.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia contains 96 accurate and artistically colored Maps showing every Country in the World, with a separate Map for every State in the Union, revised to date.

We are glad of this renewed opportunity which enables us to offer a boon like this to the millions of commendably ambitious men and women, who are literally hungering and thirsting for knowledge, to whom we may now open up this treasure-house of useful and accurate information, and bid them revel in its riches to their heart's content.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia is very handsomely and durably bound in modern silk-finished cloth with genuine gold stamp. The twelve large octavo volumes, aggregating nearly 10,000 large pages, make an imposing array, attractive enough to ornament the largest and costliest library in the world. No other encyclopedia can make a better exhibit on the book shelves, and the ownership of this great work, a complete library in itself, ranks its possessor among the intellectually progressive men of the day.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia has "The Christian Herald" Imprint, which is a guaranty of the excellence and reliability of the work. We know it thoroughly and recommend it unhesitatingly. It is regarded as standard in "The Christian Herald" Editorial rooms.

The publication of this great work is a response to the universal silent prayer of young men for some means of educating themselves. Such an opportunity has never before been offered, and the eagerness with which it is being seized shows both the great need and the great appreciation.

A Home Business College

Without commerce, agriculture and manufacturing would be like a body without arms and legs. Commerce is the connecting-link between nations and between men. It is the instinct of barter and sale that has built the roads, railways and ships which make communication possible between all parts of the world. The man who enters trade must not be content to study price-lists, but must widen his grasp of affairs by a comprehensive study of all the machinery of business. He cannot gain a personal experience of it all—life would be too short for that—but he can study its principles in books; and nowhere but in the World-Wide Encyclopedia will he find them all brought together, convenient to his hand.

In any branch of business the man who, by persistent self-culture, has gained a general knowledge, perseverance, resolution, and an accurate realization of his own powers and his own limitations, will be able to far outstrip his competitor who has neglected self-culture. Let the merchant or the young man just starting in a business career study the World-Wide Encyclopedia's article on "Commerce," and follow it up by a study on the other subjects in the following list:

General Commercial Studies

| | |
|---------------------------------|-----------------------|
| Acceptance, | International Law, |
| Account, | Interstate Commerce |
| Address, Forms of, | Laws, |
| Adjustment, | Labor, |
| Advertising, | Labor Laws, |
| Arithmetic, | Law, |
| Assets, | Mensuration, |
| Average, | Mercantile Agency, |
| Banking, | Mining, |
| Bankruptcy, | Mint, |
| Banks, | Money, |
| Bills, | Monopoly, |
| Bookkeeping, | Mortgages, |
| Broker, | Musimatics, |
| Building and Loan Associations, | Panics, |
| Bullion, | Partnership, |
| Business Colleges, | Patents, |
| Calendar, | Political Economy, |
| Carriers, | Post Office, |
| Chambers of Commerce, | Protection, |
| Check, | Railways, |
| Clearing-house, | Real Estate, |
| Coinage, | Safe Deposit |
| Coinage Laws, | Companies, |
| Coins of the U. S., | Sales, |
| Commerce, | Salvage, |
| Company, | Savings Banks, |
| Contract, | Shipping, |
| Cooperation, | Silver, |
| Copyright, | Single Tax, |
| Corporation, | Stock Exchange, |
| Credit, | Tariff, |
| Debt, | Taxation, |
| Decimal Coinage, | Telegraph, |
| Dollar, | Telephone, |
| Exchange, | Textiles, |
| Exchange, | Tonnage, |
| Excise, | Trade, |
| Fairs, | Trade, Balance of, |
| Federal Government, | Trade, Boards of, | | Finance, | Trades Unions, |
| Free Trade, | Trusts, |
| Gold, | Value, |
| Government, | Wages, |
| Insurance, | Warehousing, |
| Interest, | Wealth, |
| | Weights and Measures. |

Healthful Recreations

THERE are scores of healthy amusements which, when indulged in to a rational extent, are of actual benefit to the worker by relaxing his mind and strengthening his body. When one's occupation is sedentary, as that of a student, a professional man, or many artisans, active exercise is needed daily to keep the body in trim for its work. The World-Wide Encyclopedia is as complete in this direction as in all others, and gives descriptions of many sports which can be indulged in to advantage by the student. Following is a partial list:

Games, Sports and Pastimes

| | | |
|--------------------|--------------|---------------|
| Angling, | Chess, | Magic, White, |
| Archery, | Cricket, | Quilts, |
| Athletics, | Croquet, | Rowing, |
| Athletic Training, | Draughts, | Shooting, |
| Backgammon, | Football, | Skating, |
| Baseball, | Games, | Swimming, |
| Bicycling, | Golf, | Tennis, |
| Bowls, | Gymnastics, | Wrestling, |
| Calisthenics, | Legerdemain, | Yachting. |
| Canoe, | Lacrosse, | |

Self-made Men

Some of the most successful leaders in every profession and every industry have been what are called "self-made men," because they had no advantages of early training and no one to give them a start in life. Henry Wilson, who became vice-president of the United States, was a poor boy whose parents apprenticed him to a farmer when he was ten years old. And yet, in spite of the hard work of the farm, Henry Wilson found time before he was twenty-one to read a thousand books and lay the foundation of the ripe learning that gave him power and prominence in public affairs.

The young man who decides to purchase the World-Wide Encyclopedia need not fear that after years of study he must shun comparison with the graduates of schools and universities, with those whose means and leisure may have enabled them to employ expensive tutors. He who possesses a copy of that great work, and utilizes it for careful and intelligent study, need fear no comparison with the product of expensive university training. He will have levied tribute on the brightest minds of the age and of all ages. The concentrated learning of the centuries will be placed at his disposal—the ripest thoughts of all philosophers, the tenets of all theologies, the principles of every science, the rules of every profession, and the practical details of every industry. The world will be his curriculum, and its brightest and best thinkers will be his instructors. The rise and fall of nations, the triumphs of statecraft and diplomacy, the influence on action and thought of great discoveries in science, will all be laid bare to his delighted view. The growth of the arts, the latest improvements in handicrafts, the principles of law, of medicine, of commerce, and of agriculture will be unfolded in their due and proper order before him. The wealth of the world will be his, from which to pluck the jewels he admires the most to set in his own crown of knowledge.

Think of it!—an up-to-date Encyclopedia for only $15—on monthly instalments of only one dollar each. Had we not purchased 5,000 sets for members of "The Christian Herald" family in sheets and then had them beautifully and substantially bound, saving all middlemen's profits, nothing short of double this figure could have secured a set.

This Home University

is open, and all are welcome. There is no bar of age, sex or condition. Man is never too young nor too old to learn. Dr. Priestly was 40 years old when his attention was directed to the peculiar action of gases escaping from a beer vat, and he began the studies which resulted in his important discoveries in chemistry. Socrates learned to play musical instruments in his old age, and Cato was eighty when he studied the Greek language. Izaak Walton was ninety when he wrote his immortal work, The Complete Angler, and thousands of other men have done their best work late in life. Genius sometimes blossoms late in life, and no man should let his years discourage him from learning.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints in the sands of time."

Longfellow's familiar stanza may well recur to the student who peruses the life histories of renowned persons contained in the World-Wide Encyclopedia or any considerable number of them. Very few of them had any exceptional advantages to start with. What marked them as men set apart from their fellows, the millions who have gone to their graves leaving no monuments of great achievements behind them, was chiefly their fixedness of purpose and the untiring energy with which they carried it out; in other words, their willingness and capacity for work. "Genius is infinite capacity for taking pains," according to one definition; and if the reader can learn from these biographies the lesson of perseverance and also of patience, he will be well on the high road to success. He, too, may leave behind him footprints in the sands of time.

The World-Wide Encyclopedia is a Standard Work of 12 Massive Volumes, Containing nearly 10,000 large pages—Numerous Illustrations—96 Accurately Colored Maps, all brought down to date, including the Spanish-American War, and is elsewhere sold at $30. Our price is just half—$15 on monthly instalments of One Dollar Each, or 10 per cent. discount for cash.

Readers of the gentler sex need not be told that some of the most noted names in history have been those of women, who, as artists, authors or rulers, have by force of genius attracted and held the world's attention. In the World-Wide Encyclopedia will be found the biographies of a galaxy of noted women who have won renown by their intellect, or reverence and love by softer, diviner qualities.

A Liberal Education Now Placed Within Easy Reach

Twelve Large Volumes in Rich Silk-Finished Cloth with Gold Stamp
NINETY-SIX COLORED MAPS

Unprecedented
Unparalleled...

Only One

Secure the Twelve Extra Large Volumes

World-Wide

Enlarged and Revised to Date,

Including the Spanish-American

Regular Price $30 — Cut in two

Thousands of commendably ambitious men and women now literally hungrily devour the pages of this great work. Institutions of learning, will hail with delight this exceptionally liberal proposition. The House of Knowledge, and henceforth eat and drink to their hearts' content. The

The World-Wide Encyclopedia treats of every subject, great and small. The Statesman, the Scholar, the Student, the Professional and Business Man, the Farmer

The Rich Store-House of World-Wide Knowledge has, with infinite labor, created
A Wonderful Offer! Never before has it been our fortune to make

We place special emphasis on this note concerning
The World-Wide Encyclopedia brings the history of Science, Literature, and the progress of the Race practically down to date. All the Recent Discoveries and the

The World-Wide Encyclopedia answers Every Question, however obscure. No person, however untutored, provided he can read, need lack for full information.

A Guide for any Course of Systematic Reading

These Twelve Extra Large Octavo Volumes, aggregating nearly 10,000 pages, are the best and costliest library in the world. No Two Hundred Dollar Encyclopedia work, a Complete Library in itself, will rank its possessor among the intellectual

"What Man Has Done Man Can Do"

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Abraham Lincoln at twenty-two simply knew how to read, write and

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, NEVER ATTENDED

SCHOOL. His wife was his only teacher. She taught him how to

Hiram Sibley, formerly President of the Western Union Telegraph

his father's farm at fifteen to learn a trade. After having given away of dollars during his life time he died worth many millions more a few years ago

Peter Cooper, whose name will ever be cherished in the hearts of the of young men and young women who graduated, free of expense, from the school of Cooper Institute, himself never had more than one year's schooling

Now these men, under such unfavorable circumstances, succeeded in achieving fame and fortune by dint of industrious application to study and work, why not all of the tens of thousands of young people, who have in them the making of great men and women, despair of their ambition with such an opportunity as this, placing within their easy reach everything necessary for a liberal education?

Address: Christian Herald Book

Even the Poorest, with 10 Per Cent. Discount for Cash

ollar Down

Almost Incredible...
Yet Absolutely True

(68 Pages) Constituting the Wonderful

Encyclopedia

The Greatest Compendium of History, Geography, Science, Biography, Art and Literature Ever Offered to the American Public.

at a Net Saving to You of $15

...ing for knowledge, but prevented by circumstances from attending the higher
... the payment of Only One Dollar down, they may secure this Treasure-... opportunity will surely prove the turning-point in the life of many who read this offer.
... range of human knowledge. It contains all the information required for the ... manufacturer, the Mother, the Wife and the Housekeeper.

...ly overhauled; its treasury of facts conserved; its wealth of material utilized.
...fter as this, and unless you snap it up quickly others will get ahead of you.
...oler to impress upon the reader the urgent need of promptest action on his part.
...tic, Commerce, Geography and Discovery, and the Mental and Moral Develop-
...ovh of Commerce and Manufacture, are Intelligently and Faithfully Recorded.

...Dest of all Knowledge, from the Earliest Time is contained within its pages, and
...subject within the scope of human knowledge, once he possesses this great work.

...ompanies the World-Wide Encyclopedia Free!

...ad Pages, make a most imposing array, Attractive enough to Ornament
...an make a better exhibit on the book-shelf, and the ownership of this great
...rosive men of the day.

How To Get The World-Wide Encyclopedia!

Send us One Dollar, and your full name, with full shipping instructions, and immediately we will send
... Whole TWELVE VOLUMES of THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA, neatly
...ed freight charges payable at your end. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

At that, send us One Dollar a month for fourteen months.

No simpler plan was ever devised. You cannot go astray. The terms of easy payment, which ... have adopted, will place within the reach of every man and woman, young and old, who is
... rping enough to act quickly, the most serviceable Encyclopedia for everyday use which
... vol has ever produced. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

Remember, it is only ONE DOLLAR DOWN to get the books, and then One Dollar a
... thor Fourteen Months. These Payments are so easy that you will never miss them, and
... you are paying for the books, you are enjoying all the advantages which the possession of ... the work confers. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

THE WORLD-WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA has the Imprint and Endorsement of THE
... ISIAN HERALD as a guarantee of its superior excellence and complete reliability.

ment, Bible House, New York

9,689 Pages. 19,378 Columns. Over Fifteen
Million Words. Weight 40 Pounds
The Set Measures—26 in. long, 9 in. High

The World-Wide Encyclopedia

Twelve Large Volumes Bound in Rich Silk-finished Cloth and Gold, aggregating nearly Ten Thousand Large Pages, Containing 19,378 Columns of Concentrated, Up-to-date information and Ninety-six Colored Maps

Regular Price, $30—Our Price, $15

On Instalments: One Dollar Down and One Dollar a Month for 14 Months, or 10% Discount for Spot Cash

Sound Advice to Artisans

FARMING is the keystone of civilization and manufacturing is the corner-stone. Without the artisan there would be no comforts in life, no luxuries, and not even what we have grown to look upon as necessities. Mankind would still be wearing skins of animals and sleeping in caves. The artisan, the man who works with his hands to fashion or help fashion the endless products of the inventive skill of the ages, occupies a position of importance and dignity. He is a producer in the literal sense of the word. He can take to his heart the words of Daniel Webster: "Labor is one of the great elements of society, the great substantial interest on which we all stand."

A good artisan, a skilled mechanic, has something to be proud of; and the more skill he has, the greater success he will achieve, the greater advancement. What the artisan should carefully avoid is the danger of plodding in a single groove, of becoming a mere machine. Study of the principles on which his work is based and of the tools and forces with which he is operating and the materials he is using will enable the mechanic to become more than a mere machine. Intelligent study and self-culture, joined to the practical knowledge which comes from his actual labor, will increase his earning capacity as well as his satisfaction in his work. Such study will enable him to develop into the foreman, the inventor, the contractor, the employer, the manufacturer. He may emulate or surpass the Whitneys, the Stephensons, the Franklins, Watts, McCormicks, Edisons, Bessemer, and their like, who were not satisfied with the repetition of a daily task, but were constantly striving to improve old machines or invent new methods.

The artisan will also find that a study of the lives of inventors and mechanicians will stimulate his ambition, and that his knowledge cannot be too wide or too minute to aid his ambition. Self-culture will be to him a stepping-stone to success.

In aiding the artisan, ambitious of self-culture, there is nothing to approach the World-Wide Encyclopedia which will furnish him with information on every conceivable subject connected with his trade. The dyer, cooper, foundryman, printer, miner, carpenter, mason, can all find plentiful stores of knowledge in its magic pages. We have room here only for the lists of studies that have been arranged for workers in wood and workers in metals.

For Workers in Wood

Apartment-houses,
Arch,
Architecture,
Arithmetic,
Atmosphere,
Barrel-making,
Beech,
Bookbinding,
Botany,
Bricks,
Bridge,
Building,
Canoe,
Carpentry,

Carriage,
Carving,
Cooperage,
Cork,
Dockyard,
Drawing,
Dyeing,
Enamel,
Encaustic Tiles,
Fire,
Forests,
Fuel,
Furniture,
Glass,

Hammer,
Hand Tools,
Heat,
India-rubber,
Ivory,
Lamp,
Lathe,
Lifts (Elevators),
Lighting,
Machine Tools,
Mahogany,
Measurement,
Mensuration,
Nail,

Oak,
Partition,
Patents,
Pine,
Railways,
Roof,
Saws,
Screw,
Shipbuilding,
Teak,
Tile,
Veneering,
Wood-carving,
Yacht-building.

For Workers in Metals

Acoustics,
Agate,
Air Compressors,
Alloys,
Aluminum,
Arch,
Arithmetic,
Arms and Armor,
Arsenal,
Artillery,
Asbestos,
Asphalt,
Assaying,
Bank Vaults,
Barometer,
Bell,
Bellows,
Bicycle Manufacture,
Bismuth,
Boiler,
Brass,
Bronze,
Calculating Machines,
Can Manufacture,
Carbon,

Calico-printing,
Case-hardening,
Carving and Gilding,
Clocks,
Coal,
Copper,
Crane,
Cutlery,
Dynamics,
Die-sinking,
Dynamo,
Elasticity,
Electricity,
Electrolysis,
Embossing,
Energy,
Engraving,
Forge,
Furnace,
Geometry,
Gold,
Gold-beating,
Gravitation,
Gunmaking,
Hammer,

Iron,
Japanning,
Lacquer,
Lathe,
Laundry Machinery,
Lead,
Leather,
Locks,
Machine Tools,
Malachite,
Mensuration,
Metallurgy,
Metal Work,
Mineralogy,
Mines,
Nails,
Perpetual Motion,
Pipe-making,
Pipe Tools,
Plate,
Plated Ware,
Platinum,
Pneumatics,
Pontoons,
Potassium,

Presses,
Printing-press,
Projection,
Pump,
Safes,
Sawing Machines,
Screws,
Sewing Machines,
Soldier,
Steam-engine,
Steel,
Sugar-making Machinery,
Tack-making,
Tempering Metals,
Tin,
Tin Plate,
Tool-making,
Tricycle,
Typesetting Machinery,
Typewriting Machines,
Valve,
Welding,
Wire,
Wire Rope.

Bear in mind that the first payment of only One Dollar secures the shipment to you of the Entire Twelve Volumes. Hence, while you are paying for it at the rate of less than 4 cents a day you are enjoying the full benefit of the work.

Many of the hundreds of biographies contained in the World-Wide Encyclopedia are character studies of the strongest kind which no young man can read without being deeply impressed by their lessons. A good character is as valuable a possession as great learning.

Valuable Suggestions

The World-Wide Encyclopedia is an inexhaustible mine of wealth to the earnest student. Into which he may delve at will for the bright nuggets of the gold of wisdom. It is an endless orchard in which he may wander, plucking from every variety of the tree of knowledge the ripe fruit nourished by the work and thought of all the sages of the world.

A continued course of reading in the World-Wide Encyclopedia will strengthen the student, be he young or old, for the battle of life which is yearly growing more difficult because of the increase of competition in every field of endeavor. He will realize to the full the truth of the saying that "Learning is wealth to the poor, an honor to the rich, an aid to the young, and a support and comfort to the aged."

The great advantage of the World-Wide Encyclopedia is the prodigality and thoroughness of its resources. The student of law or medicine, the embryo architect, artist, botanist, farmer, mechanic or merchant, can not only find here the principles that will fit him for the prosecution of his chosen line of endeavor, but can acquire the broad culture given by general knowledge that will sharpen his faculties and increase his strength in his special field.

Are you discouraged because you have not yet achieved success? Take courage and read in the World-Wide Encyclopedia the life of Robert Bruce, who, after years of failure to free Scotland from English rule, being hunted for his life, lay in hiding in a cave, where he saw a spider trying to clamber up the bare wall. Six times the spider renewed the task, each time falling back to the ground, but the seventh time it succeeded. Bruce, who had in despair determined to flee from his country, took the lesson to heart, made one more effort, and won.

Formed on the best examples, ripened on the best learning, the possessor of the World-Wide Encyclopedia will have a magnificent outfit for his life-work. Facility will come with labor, and the principles he has learned will become more thoroughly his own when he is putting them in practice. Let him not forget, either, that the Encyclopedia never graduates its students. Its curriculum is as long as life itself, for there is always more to learn: and the home will always remain the ideal place for learning.

Self-culture is not a meaningless phrase, but a living, breathing reality. It enlarges the ideals, elevates the thoughts and ennobles the labor of its possessor, no matter how commonplace or humble that labor may be. It gives a zest to life, a joy to the daily round of labor, which nothing can give so well as the constant intercourse with the great minds of the past and the great thoughts and intellectual movements of the present. Be he poor in all else, the possessor of self-culture can count himself rich in the best of all riches.

The Key to the Study of the World-Wide Encyclopedia which accompanies every set Free, will help you to pursue any particular course of reading.

A Word to Farmers

All wealth comes originally from the soil. The farmer bears the weight of the world upon his shoulders. He is the keystone of civilization. To be successful he must be something of a naturalist and something of a chemist; he must know what soils are suited to the production of different crops, and what fertilizers are best adapted to aid in the cultivation of each crop. When the farmer is intelligent and knows how to produce the best results without exhaustive labor, farm life is the healthiest and most invigorating in the world. The time has passed when farming can be successfully conducted without keen intelligence and a thorough scientific knowledge, and the World-Wide Encyclopedia is rich in information which will enable a man to become a scientific farmer. Brains and ability are fully as necessary in farming as in any other pursuit.

The following list of subjects are all considered exhaustively in the World-Wide Encyclopedia and should be diligently studied:

| | |
|-----------------------------------|----------------------|
| Abattoirs, | Hops, |
| Agrarian Law, | Horse, |
| Agriculture, | Hunting, |
| Agricultural Colleges, | Hybridism, |
| Agricultural Experiment Stations, | Inheritance, |
| Ancestry of Plants, | Insects, |
| Animals, | Insurance, |
| Ants, | Irrigation, |
| Arboriculture, | Jute, |
| Atmosphere, | Labor Laws, |
| Banking, | Land, |
| Barometer, | Land Laws, |
| Bean, | Landlord, |
| Bee, | Landscape Gardening, |
| Beet-sugar, | Law, |
| Birds, | Lease, |
| Botany, | Maize, |
| Bread, | Manure, |
| Breeds, | Mensuration, |
| Building, | Murrain, |
| Butter, | Oats, |
| Canning, | Oils, |
| Cattle, | Parasites, |
| Cheese, | Pleuro-pneumonia, |
| Clover, | Potatoes, |
| Coal, | Poultry, |
| Commerce, | Pumpkin, |
| Cuckoo, | Preserved Food, |
| Dairy, | Rent, |
| Distillation, | Salts, |
| Dog, | Seed Farms, |
| Education, | Sequoia, |
| Emigration, | Sewage, |
| Ensilage, | Sheep, |
| Farmers' Institutes, | Silo, |
| Fish Culture, | Sugar, |
| Flax, | Swan, |
| Floriculture, | Swine, |
| Forests, | Threshing Machinery, |
| Free Trade, | Tobacco, |
| Fruit, | Transplanting, |
| Fungicides, | Veterinary Science, |
| Gooseberry, | Vegetable Kingdom, |
| Grasses, | Vine, |
| Granges, | Wages, |
| Guano, | Walnut, |
| Harvesting Machinery, | Warping, |
| Heating, | Wheat, |
| Honey, | Wool, |
| | Zoology. |

From the hour when a boy can read his mother-tongue he has it absolutely in his power, without classes, teachers or school buildings, to master all the learning of the world.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Capture of a Slave Ship

BELIEF that the international agreement for the suppression of the slave trade had effectually abolished the traffic, has been rudely shaken by the recent news from Suakin. A discovery has been accidentally made, which leads to the suspicion that the abominable practice of slave-stealing is still flourishing. The discovery was made by the captain of an English cruiser which had been sent down the Red Sea to find and punish a pirate who has been robbing vessels voyaging on that sea. Some weeks ago the pirate, growing bold with success, attacked an Egyptian vessel which was carrying Government money to a police station on the African side of the sea. He stripped the vessel of all the money and everything of value on board, and killed several members of the crew. The cruiser was immediately dispatched, without warning, to find the piratical craft and put an end to its depredations. The captain of the cruiser overhauled several vessels, but none of them proved to be the pirate. Among them were two, which had no regular papers such as every vessel on the Red Sea is required to carry. Each had on board about fifty men, women and children, belonging to various tribes. Some were from far in the interior of Africa, while others were Soudanese. The cruiser took possession of both vessels, and took them to Suakin. There it was found that the negroes had been stolen from their homes in Africa, and were being taken to the Asiatic side of the sea, to be sold to the Arabs. The Anglo-Egyptian Government will now keep a cruiser to patrol the sea, and has already organized a camel corps to intercept the slave stealers on their way from the interior to the coast. It is hoped that this double precaution may put an end to the traffic. Would that some such precautions could be adopted to prevent that more terrible slavery which is going on all over the world, the victims of which go into voluntary bondage to the eternal ruin of body and soul.

That they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will (II. Tim. 2: 26).

An Opportunity to be a Peeress

A New York newspaper publishes an advertisement inserted by an English nobleman. He invites ladies who would like to witness the approaching coronation of King Edward, to put themselves in communication with him. From among the ladies who answer, he proposes to select the most eligible. In becoming his wife, she will have the title of marchioness, and will have in such capacity a prominent place at the coming ceremony. When asked what qualities went to make a lady eligible, he replied, putting wealth in the first rank. He explained that he would like to have also in the lady he proposes to make his wife, beauty, birth and breeding. These, however, he is prepared to waive if the one indispensable condition of riches is fulfilled. If a lady has the money, which the marquis expects, and is prepared to endow him with it, he will prefer her to those who are not able to furnish the money though they may be younger and more beautiful. Probably many men have the same principles in choosing a wife, but it is seldom they are avowed with such brutal frankness. It is surprising that an American girl should be willing, as doubtless some will be, to buy a husband and a title in such a sordid way. How comparatively few there are who are willing to accept the infinitely higher honor that is offered to them without money and without price.

Thy maker is thy husband; the Lord of Hosts is his name; the God of the whole earth shall he be called (Isa. 54: 5).

Returned With Interest

Kindly interest taken in the misfortunes of a young Dane twelve years ago has received abundant reward. He was living in 1890 at Morristown, N. J., and, owing to illness and changes in his trade, was in extremely low circumstances. His condiits reward and been forgotten, will be recalled to memory by Him, who sees in his people his representatives in the world.

Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me (Matt. 25: 40).

Missed His Ship

Among the vessels that left New York last week for a transatlantic voyage, was the Kronprinz Wilhelm. She has on her passenger list the name of a distinguished member of New York society, but at the end of the week he was still in his home in the city while the vessel was speeding across the Atlantic. He fully intended to sail on her, and on the evening before the day set for the vessel's departure, he entertained a party of friends in his home at a farewell dinner. The ship was to sail early the next morning, and a large number of his acquaintances went to the dock only a few persons. In her youth she was exceedingly beautiful, and was the acknowledged belle of the city. She had many suitors for her hand, but they were all rejected for the sake of a boy lover, who had plighted troth to her when she was a girl at school. The years passed, and both grew to maturity, but they did not marry. The youth became absorbed in his profession of the law, and became prominent in politics. The wedding was postponed from time to time, and then trouble came, and the miseries of the war. Finally, the lover's health broke down, and he again postponed his marriage until he should recover. At last, when the obstacles were removed, and the marriage was again considered, they decided that they were too old to marry, and though they continued friends, and often saw one another, the wedding never took place. Some years ago the lover died, and the lady, then a white-haired woman, was so overcome with grief that fears were entertained for her life. She recovered, however, but her cheerfulness was gone, and, to the end of her life, she was a sad, sorrowful woman; she had evidently loved passionately and devotedly, but had never had the joy of union with the man of her choice, to whom she had consecrated her life. There are many who miss the happiness of union with Christ, but never in the same way. He is always ready to welcome them as his own, and none who love him in sincerity and truth can ever be separated from him.

Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us (Rom. 8: 35, 37).

BRIEF NOTES

The International Christian Endeavor Convention of 1903, will be held at Denver, Colo.

The Marquis of Salisbury has under consideration a petition supported by the Archbishop of Canterbury and other eminent men, urging him to suppress the traffic in opium between India and China. Last year India's revenue from the drug amounted to nearly twelve million dollars.

The Congregationalist points out that while the general population of Canada increased eighty-three per cent. in the last ten years, the membership of the churches increased 168 per cent.

In the public schools of Winnipeg, Manitoba, the children speak twenty-two different languages, but they all are learning the English, which is to be the common tongue of Western Canada as it is of the United States.

Bishop Candler of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in pleading for gifts to equip the denomination's mission at Havana, for which $50,000 is needed, says that American brewers already have invested $4,000,000 in and about Havana.

The beginning of reform in the marriage customs of India is announced. The young Gulkwar of Baroda, who was educated in England, is the first native ruler in India to legalize the remarriage of widows by specific enactment. There are more than 23,000,000 widows in India, many of them children under ten years of age.

A celebration is to be held on April 23, at the old McAuley Mission, at 316 Water street, New York, to which our readers are cordially invited. Mr. S. H. Hadley will that evening, celebrate the twentieth anniversary of his conversion, and would be glad to have as many of his friends as possible meet with him to rejoice together.

Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., has undertaken the temporary charge of Christ Church, London. He will begin his ministry there in the fall and continue through the winter, after which it is hoped Rev. F. B. Meyer will be able to resume the duties of the pastorate. This arrangement has been made to induce Dr. Meyer to withdraw his resignation, and he has consented to do so.

A SLAVE-STEALERS' SHIP, CAPTURED IN THE RED SEA, BEING TAKEN TO SUAKIN

tion became known to his brother in Copenhagen, who succeeded in procuring employment for him in the Danish capital. The young man was urged to return immediately and enter upon his duties. He had not the funds to pay his passage, so he drew up a document setting forth the difficulty of the situation and asking for assistance. As he was popular, and was known to be an industrious, honorable man, his friends promptly responded and he was soon in possession of the necessary money. He sailed for Europe, and nothing more was heard of him. Last week he returned, and his friends noticed that he was well-dressed and appeared to be prosperous. He said that on reaching Copenhagen he had entered the service of an enterprising firm, had risen to be manager of the business and finally a partner in the firm. He called on each of the persons who had contributed to the fund raised twelve years ago for him, and paid twice the amount given as principal and interest. Some of them had forgotten all about their gift, and were surprised when the money was paid them. So it will be in the day of final reckoning. Many a good deed which seemed to have missed to wish him a prosperous voyage. Others sent flowers or baskets of fruit as tokens of remembrance. Telegrams came, too, from friends in other cities. No passenger on the vessel had so many farewell messages or so many tributes of esteem. But the man himself was not there. While his friends were watching for him, expecting his arrival at any moment, he was peacefully sleeping in his bed at home, in blissful unconsciousness of the flight of time. Either he had placed a foolish reliance on his own awakening or had trusted someone who had forgotten the duty of awakening him. The vessel, therefore, sailed without him, greatly to his chagrin. As he is wealthy, he will be able to take passage on another vessel without experiencing much inconvenience. Not so is it with those who are asleep in sin, and so miss the opportunity of journeying to the eternal mansions.

A wake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light (Eph. 5: 14).

A Romance Disclosed

The death of an elderly lady at Atlanta, Ga., brings to light a romance known to

A SPRING DAY ***

*Pussy-willow, violet, sweet anemone,
Grass upon the hill-side, leaf upon the tree,
Blossom on the orchard bough, all the winds at play,
Is there anything so lovely, as a bright Spring day?*

MARGARET E. SANGSTER

*All the wonder of the world, all the joy and life
Every zephyr as it flies is 'with fragrance rife,
April with its shine and shower, rushing on to May,
Is there anything so lovely as a glad, Spring day?*

*He whose never-ceasing care guards His happy world,
In its season, sends the Spring, with her flags unfurled,
'Tis our Father sends the hours on their lightsome way,
Weaving this most beautiful, radiant Spring day.*

AELSIE GRIER

Time to Play

GRANDMOTHER'S comment on the very large amount of home-work now exacted from children at school, is that they have too little time to play. How this is to be remedied, puzzled mothers do not see. If they do not allow the children to spend sufficient time over their studies in the afternoon or the evening, the children will fall behind their classes, and miss promotion, a thing few present-day mothers can endure. Meanwhile, the curriculum grows continually wider, more work must be done, and the manner of its doing is ever more complex. When the grandmother's children went to school, every task was simpler and every school-day easier, than are tasks and school-days now. There is certainly too much high pressure, and there is not enough time to play.

If a child breaks down, or is threatened with nervous trouble of any sort, the physician's first order is that school be given up for a while. A doctor said lately in counselling a patient: "Beware of excessive mental exertion. Secure rest and relaxation." If parents were willing to lengthen the period of school attendance; if competitive examinations could be abolished for children under sixteen; and if, occasionally, a tired girl or boy were allowed to drop out for a week or ten days, even in the middle of a term, there would be an immense gain for the later life. Time to play is what our children need; time to play is very needful for children of an older growth.

Bringing up Children

There is a great difference in the methods of bringing up boys and girls? Near me are two households. In one, the boys predominate; in the other, the girls are in the ascendant. In one particular, that of dress, it is much easier to look after boys than girls, since they may be wholly fitted out at a tailor's from top to toe, without much effort and at small cost. A boy does not need expensive clothing; good strong and serviceable suits, which will endure rough wear, are quite enough for him. He can get along with fewer changes than his sister, and his garments, on the whole, last longer than hers, for they are not subject to the process of the laundry. Girls' clothing, except underwear, is very expensive, and must, by most people, be made up at home. The semi-annual visitation of the dressmaker or seamstress in a family of girls is a serious matter, from every point of view. In the first place, materials must be bought, and this means three or four journeys to the shops, something being omitted or forgotten on the original expedition. Next, every engagement, every recreation must be put aside, and the mother must sit down with needle and thread to help the dressmaker. At the close of the week, there is a goodly pile of new frocks and waists to show for the exertion, and also there is a very wearied house-mistress, who is so tired that she can enjoy little for several days. Boys are certainly time-savers. But who would forego the delight of girls? AUNT MARJORIE.

Club Breakfasts

At this season, the several women's clubs have their annual breakfasts and luncheons, functions which are of great brilliancy, and afford a field for a remarkable display of wit, cleverness and humor. The ladies are of every age, from white-haired matrons to slim and lissome girls. They are wonderfully ready of speech, and in this they contrast in a marked manner with their predecessors of a generation ago. In the club work of the twelve months, women learn parliamentary methods, and they do a great deal of very creditable and conscientious study. The woman's club is in reality a sort of school for many mothers and sisters, to whom it affords an opportunity and an incentive for keeping up their acquaintance with books. They do not rust out, as they once did, because their tools were laid away unused, nor grow domestic, nor age so fast as women do whose lives are narrow and self-centred. A woman should beware of the club-fever, of having two or three clubs to claim her; but one club, or society, patriotic or literary, or merely friendly, is a means of diversion which does her much good.

The Coming Joy

Nobody in the world should wear so blithe a face as she to whom is coming the consummate flower of womanly dignity, maternity. A little child in the home, "to work for and to play with," as a backwoodsman puts it in one of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's beautiful stories, is the sweetest thing God sends to human hearts. For

THE SLEEPING SHEPHERD BOY

T IRED on his couch the sleeper lies,
With limbs relaxed and fast-shut eyes.
And close beside him, wait the sheep,
Their silent, patient watch to keep.
Poor, wearied lad, make haste and wake,
Your turn at watching you must take.

the sake of the little coming prince or princess, the mother-to-be must keep tranquil and composed, must have a song in her soul, must regard herself with a new reverence. A baby should never be unwelcome in any hour of its pre-natal existence. Who knows what argosies of blessedness will float in with its fragile barque, to go sailing forever down the current of the ages?

A PRAYER

King of glory, Saviour dear,
Grant us grace to persevere,
Leader of the hosts of God,
May we tread where thou hast trod,
Bearing calmly for our Lord,
Thoughtless jest or bitter word,
Curbing angry speech and tear,
Strong in thee to persevere.

The Steadfast Character

STEADFASTNESS as a feature of character is foundational. Everything else is built on that rock. So many people are like Reuben, unstable as water that when we meet one who is firm, who has conviction, and lives up to them, our involuntary confidence and respect are given to that man or woman. Here, we say, is one to tie to, using the homely country phrase one in whom we may trust, and on whom we may depend. The steadfast person is not given to bluster, nor to sounding a trumpet before her, she goes quietly on her way, doing her duty in the station to which it has pleased God to call her; she attends to the daily business, and is not diverted from it in a dozen different directions by every new attraction. As a type of steadfastness, no one in the Bible gallery exceeds Caleb, that good man of old, whose biography occupies but little space, though every word tells, or that still more ancient saint Enoch, who "walked with God."

How may we cultivate steadfastness in ourselves and in our children. Perhaps best in our own experience by a constant, careful watch keeping in prayer, by recurrent reading of the Bible, by determining narrowing of effort to those things we can do well, while we refuse to undertake too much.

With children we may early begin accustoming them to thoroughness, to the finishing what ever they undertake, and by impressing them with their responsibility to God. Too often God is left out of the child's thought, and the teacher or the parent acts as if he were the only court of appeal. In this time and country, where material success is apt to be over-estimated, there is a great need of a return to that steadfastness in morals, in religion, in all that belongs to character, which has distinguished the noblest men of every age.

That New Bonnet

Cynthia the elder, has reached the place where her skin has lost its youthful freshness and shows the lines of time. Cynthia the younger, is like a rose in bloom. Now for the matron to buy and wear a bonnet, no matter how elegant, which accentuates her age by its youthfulness, is the height of folly. Your face must be the youngest thing about you, is the rule for women as they grow old.

If you have white hair do not put white roses next it. You require a contrast. If you have a sallow complexion, beware of pink or yellow flowers in your hat. The other day I met a woman whose bright and abundant hair is a rich, coppery red—beautiful hair—but as she has always had a fancy for wearing delft blues, it has never been an ornament. Green of the right shade, or white, would always have suited her; but she clung to the eternal and most unbecoming blue, which simply killed her beauty. However, she was in mourning, and the dull lustreless black of her gown and hat set her off, and made her really splendid.

Don't let the daughters persuade you, who are a mother past middle age, to dress in too youthful a way if you still wish to have youthful looks.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S CORNER

—EVELYN. Tell your husband the truth. Say that you are not able to do the work without some assistance.

—MAMIE. Wait a little. Don't fear that you will be in doubt when I really awake in your heart.

—JOHN. The only presents you can give a young woman to whom you are not engaged, are books, flowers and candy. Never jewelry or articles of dress.

—MOURNER. Any time within twelve months is time enough to answer letters of condolence. Your card with "Thanks for sympathy" is sufficient, but if you content yourself with this, send it within a month.

HOW THEY MANAGE.

Doctors' Wives Trained to Arrange Things.

Sometimes the wife of a doctor can bring her husband around when he don't know exactly how to help himself. The wife of a certain well known physician in Washington, D. C., concluded that coffee was the cause of the doctor's sleepless nights. She says, "He would retire and lie for hours unable to sleep. I thought perhaps he was nervous from the coffee which he drank at his meals and suggested that he try Postum. To my surprise he objected most decidedly. I said nothing but the next morning made Postum coffee instead of the regular coffee and gave it to the doctor. I made it according to directions and it had a beautiful coffee color and flavor. He drank his cup and remarked that the coffee was unusually good that morning and asked for more.

From that time I served him Postum at every meal, and in the course of a week or so he showed such remarkable signs of improvement in health and strength that I told him he had been drinking Postum from the time he had begun to get better.

You never saw such a surprised man. He said, 'Well, if the good coffee I have had is Postum, and leaving off regular coffee has made such a change in my health, I never want any other kind in my house.' Since then he regularly prescribes Postum to many of his patients and with good results." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CORNISH PIANO AND ORGAN MINIATURES

FREE TO ALL READERS.

We will forward without cost to you anywhere our new 1902 Souvenir Catalogue, with embossed & colored plates, illustrating our styles of Pianos and Organs. It will prove to you that we really sell a better instrument for less money and on more liberal terms than any other reputable firm in the country, also.

FROM $155.00

how we send instruments on ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. With this catalogue we will forward prepaid to any interested person a set of Piano & Organ Miniatures FREE absolutely correct in coloring, toward them in making a selection best suited to the color scheme of their home. This unique advertising matter has been prepared by us at great cost and no intending purchaser can afford to be without it.

ALL FOR NOTHING. Write for it today and mention this paper. Full particulars of our Go Partnership Plan are also sent, showing how you can get a PIANO OR ORGAN FREE no matter how much or how little you wish to pay for a musical instrument, we can please you and save you money. Write today.

CORNISH CO., Washington, New Jersey. Established 50 Years.

You Can Play It Without Learning

ZOBO BAND

ZOBO The Musical Wonder Sample 25c. Made of solid brass. Delivered free.

ENTERTAINS EVERYBODY EVERYWHERE

Church, Sunday School or Home Services. Free illustrated catalogue sent on application.

ZOBO Manufacturing Co., 112 W 14 St., Dept. 19, New York

$30,000

Church Hymns and Gospel Songs,

have been sold. The leading hymn book or Prayer Meetings, Young People's Societies, Sunday Even- Services, Sabbath Schools, etc. 307 choice standard ones; best Sacred Songs, favorite Gospel Hymns, firmly bound, $25 per 100. Sample, postpaid, 20 cts.

F. BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago, publishers of the Moody and Sankey "Gospel Hymns."

$75 Month and Expenses: no experience needed; position permanent; self-seller; PEASE MFG. Co., Station A, Cincinnati, O.

Famous Bible Readers

The Remarkable Records of Some who Peruse the Scriptures Daily

AN AGED BIBLE READER

JESSE S. HARNISS

W. G. HAMILTON

T. W. QUINTIN

FOR many weeks past THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has received letters from all parts of the Union, giving the most extraordinary records of Bible reading. In every case, without exception, these records show rich blessings to have resulted from the diligent searching of the Scriptures. It becomes clear to all that the faithful men and women who make the Book of books their daily companion and counselor, grow steadily in all the gracious qualities that mark the true Christian; they have a fuller and a sweeter life; their hearts are burning with a sense of security and a feeling of gratitude, and they have the great inward joy and peace that means so much to them, but which the world has not yet learned to appreciate. They learn to live by faith and to claim the promises, and in following humbly in the Saviour's footsteps, their own lives become a blessing and a benefaction to all around them.

To-day we give space to the history of a little group of these godly men and women, not for the purpose of praising what they have done, but rather that their example may encourage and stimulate others to read God's Word with greater regularity. We shall let them tell the story themselves:

"I was raised under Biblical influence," writes Mrs. Floyd Smith of Christiansburg, Va., "and in a religious home atmosphere. From a child I was taught to accept Jesus as a present and personal Saviour. I read my Testament carefully and prayerfully; but I never fully realized its worth until the hand of the Lord was laid upon me. In the twenty-two years of my afflicted life it has been the Book of books to me. The very many precious promises have been a strong tower of strength. I have read the Bible through, since January 4, 1899, seven times, the New Testament seventy-one times. I have been a reader of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for years, and love it next to my Bible."

Mr. W. G. Hamilton, Kansas City, Kan., writes: "I am paralyzed, and spend the day in an invalid chair and the night in an invalid bed. Before I was paralyzed, I was not a Christian. I have only been able to read the Bible during the last fourteen years. I have read it straight through at least sixty times—as often as eleven times in one year. I have just finished reading it through fifteen times in six hundred days—an average of once in forty days. This is my only pleasure and my only comfort in my affliction. I believe the Bible to be the very Word of God, from centre to circumference and from lid to lid. I read it continuously by book and page."

"My aunt, who died, aged ninety-seven, a few years since, gave me a small pocket Bible when I was about fifteen," writes Mr. T. Washington Quintin, of Ariel, Pa. "I read it through forty-one times, one or more times every year. I have read Oxford and Cambridge and revised version, in all ninety-nine times, and am now on the hundredth. I love to read it, to study it, and ponder and reflect on what I read. It is ever new. I am seventy-seven years old."

"I have read the Bible through twenty-seven times," writes Alice R. Bishop, of Lake Bluff, Ill., "and am still continuing the reading. This does not include reading the New Testament many times."

Mr. W. D. Shipway, Quincy, Mich., writes: "Mrs. Angeline Whitley, of Algonsee township, Branch county, Mich., finished reading her Bible a few days ago for the hundred and twentieth time, at the age of seventy-seven years. She began at the age of twenty-seven, and at the age of fifty-eight had read it by course fifty-nine times. During the last nineteen years, she has read it sixty-one times. She has worn out four Bibles. This statement is from her own lips, for the benefit of your readers."

"I don't know how many times I have read the Bible through, but I have committed to memory all the New Testament, and in the Old Testament, the Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Ecclesiastes, Isaiah and Jeremiah," writes the Rev. Nelson Edwards, of Rye, N. Y. "I can still quote chapter after chapter, and can say with the Psalmist,

Thy word have I hid in my heart
That I might not sin against thee."

Martha J. Van Voorhis, Monongahela, Pa., writes: "I have a sister living in Kansas. In writing to me, she says she has read her Bible through seventy-seven times."

Miss Louie M. Alley, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "My grandmother, Mrs. Clarissa Hefner, was born in Corveta county, Ga., May 1, 1810. She was taught, when a child, to read a portion of Scripture daily. About eight years ago, she began keeping an account of the number of times she read it. She read it almost one hundred and thirteen times in the last eight years. She read almost every moment of the day. Some one asked her a short while before her death how many times in all she had read the Bible through. She replied: 'I have no idea. I've read it all my life.'"

"Though born of Christian parents, while attending college I became sceptical," writes H. Ackers, of Shelby, O. "At forty, I was converted. Then I knew the Bible to be the Word of God. At every new reading, the Holy Spirit gives me additional light on the blessed Word. I am now in my sixty-ninth year, and in my twenty-sixth year of evangelistic ministry. Have read the Bible through seventy-three times, and am now on my seventy-fourth reading, and expect to continue the remainder of my natural life."

A LEDGER FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

A BOON to housewives, and something which will be widely appreciated, is Earl's Housekeeper's Ledger, just issued. It is a distinct novelty, and will be prized by all who love thrift, orderliness and a well-regulated household. This Ledger, which is intended to be kept by the housekeeper as an account book, will serve to show her at a glance the condition of the family finances. It is arranged on a plan so simple that even the most inexperienced can comprehend it, and it should prove, to all who test it, a real time and labor-saver, and an effective preventative of confusion and worry. Mr. John C. Earl, the compiler, is the chief accountant of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and has devoted considerable attention to the study of Domestic Accounting and Household Economy. The Housekeeper's Ledger, which is published at $1 per copy, contains an Alphabetical Index which is followed by a concise explanation of the nature of the accounts to be opened, with full instructions for making entries under the various headings. It is the very simplest form of bookkeeping yet devised. The Ledger is strongly bound in black cloth, leather-backed, and measures, closed, 10 1/4 x 8 1/4 inches, contains 250 pages, each page properly ruled and with printed headings, and the whole calculated to cover a period of twelve months. We bespeak for The Housekeeper's Ledger a widespread popularity among housewives, as its merits deserve. Published by THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 92 Bible House, New York. Send one dollar to J. C. Earl, Bible House, for a copy of the invaluable Housekeeper's Assistant. By using it in the household, you save its price the very first week.

O'Neill's

6th Ave., 20th to 21st St., N. Y.

A SPECIAL OFFER

that we believe will interest every mother of a little girl whose age ranges from 6 to 14 years. Here it is:

For a limited time we will sell

CHILDREN'S WHITE LAWN DRESSES, like above cut, handsomely trimmed with two ruffles, Skirt edged with lace, Yoke of embroidery, Ruffles over Shoulders 3.98

Also a STYLISH BOX REEFER FOR CHILDREN, of Red or Blue Cheviot, Spring weight; also of Tan Covert Cloth at the same attractive price 3.98

Mention The Christian Herald.

A SHAKESPEAREAN CLASSIC FREE

If you do not own a complete Shakespeare, or if you own a complete set and the Notes are not sufficiently full and clear, if there are no satisfactory Glossaries, no Critical Comments, or no Helps to the study of the plays, send us your name and address and six cents in stamps to pay postage, and we will forward to you an elegantly printed copy of

"Shakespeare, the Man"

by Walter Bagehot. This brilliant and unique essay is sold by other publishers at 50c. a copy. With it we will send a fine photogravure plate of Shakespeare and a colored chromatic plate representing a scene from one of the plays, and hints regarding the study of the plays. We make this offer to enable us to give you some information regarding the best Shakespeare ever published, and it is made only to reliable men and women. Send name and address and 6c. in stamps to pay postage. Mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD when writing.

THE UNIVERSITY SOCIETY (Dept. E)
78 Fifth Avenue, - - - New York

Children's Day

"SONGS OF REJOICING"
Music dignified and singable—written by the best writers. THOMAS, HOWARD, FINEST, etc.

"REJOICE EVERMORE"
An excellent collection of bright carols.

"ONWARD GO"
A beautiful service with a truly religious theme. WORD EDITOR of the above services.

Samples of all three services to students.
MacCALLA & CO. (Inc.), 255 Dock St., Philadelphia.

LEARN PROOFREADING.
If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a genteel and untroubled profession earning $10 to $25 weekly? Situations always obtainable. Write to the original instructors by mail.
HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

Chapter XXIII.—Continued

DURING the night following his decision to go to farm work, Immanuel wrestled long with the veiled angel of his future career. Before he slept he had settled certain matters with himself once and for all. "I will earn my living as a man among men," he said, "The money which killed my mother shall bind up as many wounds as may be."

The little farm, he remembered, was his honestly. It would serve as a halting-place for the nonce while he was deciding on the day's march. This month and the next he would study farming; after that—well, there was the law, medicine, theology. He strove to imagine himself in any one of these callings, but without success. He determined at last to let the slow current of the days bring him to some haven of decision. To the yellow-haired girl who had once wept childish tears over his absence, he gave not a single thought.

days away, roused John Wilde to a vague indignation. He was aware that the sight stirred his choler to the depths; he did not care to investigate the cause of his emotion too closely. It might prove disrespectful to the memory of the dear departed. Being a man of action, he contented himself with commanding the girl to make ready at once for a visit to the country. But paper-bound romances travel cheaply, and the shaded porch on the back hill-road was a delightful place to read.

With a fancy thus educated, it was little wonder that Hilda Wilde should find Immanuel Rossi's dark face, and tall, athletic figure, an object of interest. "He looks exactly like that lovely Sir Reginald Minton in The Revenge of the Duchess," she said to herself. "And I am sure he does not speak like a common farmer."

She regarded her reflection in the glass with pleasurable interest; an oval face delicately colored, red lips, parting to re-

"THE DEMURE LITTLE MAID FILLED HIS GLASS FROM THE OLD JUG"

Hilda Wilde, on the contrary, had already spent several very agreeable hours in weaving a harmless web of fancy about the stranger. This young person had passed the twenty years of her life amid the more or less humdrum surroundings of her native town. To her step-mother she owed the doubtful habit of irradiating the dull round of village duties and amusements with the transient lustre of romance.

"I'm a great reader," the second Mrs. Wilde was in the habit of affirming complacently. "Give me a good book, an apple and a rocking chair, and I don't care whether school keeps or not!"

This lady lived strictly up to her convictions; she rocked in a cushioned chair and devoured apples and cheaply-bound novels, over which she laughed and cried through the greater part of ten years. At the end of this period she passed through an experience of her own which laid her beside her predecessor. Her step-daughter, Hilda, now graduated from the village high school, found herself practically her own mistress, and heir to a vast collection of story-books, a taste for which she very speedily acquired. The sight of his pretty young daughter in tears over a yellow-backed novel, in the very chair wherein his late wife had rocked and read her veal a row of small, white teeth, a fluff of yellow wavy hair, blue eyes darkly shaded. These charms, she decided, compared very well indeed with those of her favorite heroine's. Of the sleeping woman's soul that lay behind all this shifting, dazzling play of color she was as profoundly ignorant as is a playful tigress cub of the meaning of the shining talons, lengthening day by day within its soft, baby paws.

An instinct which she neither questioned nor resisted presided over her morning toilet, and brought her to the breakfast table at dawn with a face like Hebe's.

"Law, Hildy, whatever brought you out of your bed this early?" demanded her grandmother. "You ain't used to eatin' at sun-up."

"I like to get up early sometimes," replied Hilda. She looked around the room with an inquiring expression, which presently gave way to a decided pout.

"We're a-goin' to begin operations on the ten-acre lot this mornin'," her grandfather was saying. "Say, ma, it's goin' to be hot to-day, an' that young feller, 'Manuel, ain't used to workin' as I'll put him through; guess you'd better send down a jug o' molasses water long 'bout ten o'clock. Em'line can fetch it."

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

We Will Start any bright boy in business

ANY ambitious boy can begin at once to establish a business that will pay well by selling

The Saturday Evening Post

No money required. We will mail absolutely FREE to copies the first week. These can be sold for five cents each, and will provide the capital for the next supply. The work is easy. Can be done on Friday afternoon after school hours, and on Saturday.

$200.00 In Extra Cash Prizes will be distributed next month to boys selling fifteen, or more, copies weekly

Our free booklet gives the photographs of some of the most successful of our 3000 boy agents, and describes their methods. Send for it. State if you wish to begin selling papers at once, and we will send the first week's free supply.

The Curtis Publishing Co
Phila. Pa.

A GRAND GOOD BARGAIN

37 SETS SLIGHTLY
SHELFWORN
of the
New National Encyclopædia

DR. JOHN CLARKE RIDPATH, Editor

ONE of the very best quick-reference Cyclopedias published. Over 200,000 sets have been sold at $30.00 per set. We offer these slightly shelf-worn sets (as good as new) while they last at $9.50. 50 cents with order and $1.00 per month. Half Russia binding. No such offer has ever been made for so excellent a work, and we have only a few sets, so act quickly. Satisfaction guaranteed. No better work is published anywhere.

ONLY FIFTY CENTS REQUIRED

The associate editors are among the foremost writers and educators of the United States, and the work has attained a reputation and popularity not equalled by any similar work.

YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY

to secure a set. You will make no mistake in doing so.

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO., Publishers, 150 Fifth Ave., New York

Sign this application or write for further particulars.

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO., 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Gentlemen: I desire to take advantage of your special offer on the National Encyclopædia (shelf-worn) to readers of THE HERALD, and inclose 50 cents as initial payment. Send full particulars and if found satisfactory, I will order the set; otherwise the money to be returned to me.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 362

"I've got to churn this mornin', pa," objected Emmeline, mildly. She glanced doubtfully at Hilda as she spoke. To her surprise, that young person offered her services with alacrity.

"You'll fetch the molasses-jug, eh?" cried Mr. Scott, with a wink at his wife. "Jest hear that, ma! An' wa'n't it on'y las' week 'at you couldn't feed the pigs to save yer life."

Hilda thrust out a saucy lip at her grandfather. "Feeding pigs is different," she said.

"Now, Hildy, don't you be a-settin' your cap at that young feller," said the old man, wagging his forefinger oracularly. "I've warned him agin you."

"You've done what?" cried the girl, blushing angrily.

"Why, pa," ejaculated Mrs. Scott reprovingly, "I wonder at ye!"

"Wall," grumbled Mr. Scott, "he's as poor as a church mouse fer one thing, an' don't know nothin' 'bout farmin' fer another. I want Hildy should leave him be, that's all."

"I declare, pa, you've got about as much sense as mos' men-folks," murmured Mrs. Scott in an indignant undertone, as the girl left the room. "An' that ain't 'nough to put on the pint of a cambric needle! You've jes' gone an' put the notion into her head now. I remember once when we was all children, pa and ma was goin' to spen' the day at the county fair. It was, 'don't do this, an' 'don't do that,' an' 'be sure you remember the other,' till I was mos' crazy. I was the oldest. The las' thing, jes' as they was drivin' out the yard, ma, she turns 'round an' hollers out, 'Myrry, Myrry, don't let the children put beans up their noses!' They was all standin' there an' listenin'. Had n't one of 'em ever 'maged such a thing. But I declare to goodness if both the boys did n't try it that very afternoon whilst I was feedin' the chickens! We had the doctor a'workin' over 'em most o' the next day. It was a lesson to me, I remember. Ideas is like seed; if you don't want 'em to grow, don't plant 'em."

"Oh, bother!" quoth Mr. Scott disrespectfully, "I guess I'll go out to the barn."

Chap. XXIV.—Under the Hickories

It seemed to Immanuel Rossi that he had never tasted a more delicious draught than the mixture of molasses, vinegar and spring water which a very demure little maid poured for him out of the old stone jug. She looked the picture of coolness herself, as she stood in the shadow of the hickories. Her blue and white dress took to itself translucent shadows against the background of green grass; her face, in all its delicious tints of pearl and rose, glowed, flower-like, under the broad, white hat.

If one has learned to be a lover of fresh young blossoms; of white, drifting clouds; of dancing depths of blue water; of slim, graceful shapes of young tree bodies; of the evanescent, innocent beauty of kittens, lambs and children, one can hardly look upon a fascinating embodiment of these varied charms without some pleasurable emotion. And if that practiced observer of nature's lovely ways be a man—and young, his heart is likely to give an extra beat or two when he beholds such a specimen of nature's handiwork in the shade of the hickories enfolded.

Hilda's brown, curling lashes made the prettiest shadowy half-moon on her flushed cheek that can be imagined; her little peary ears peeped out from an ambush of shining airy rings of the most exquisite hitting color. Immanuel Rossi's brown eyes took in these details with the same pleasure he would have experienced had he girl been four instead of twenty. At last he would have said so if questioned on the subject.

"This is the strawberry meadow where found you that day," said Hilda, dimpling. "It was down by the brook yonder."

She had put her Aunt Emmeline through an exhaustive examination on the subject the evening before; and it had struck her as being as delightfully romantic as the first meeting of Lady Mary Fitzwilliam and Lord Derwent in The Gipsy's Warning, which she was at present perusing.

"It was over by that big stone," she continued. "I saw you sitting there, and waded right through the brook with my new shoes."

"I was looking at the valley," said Immanuel, "and listening to the meadow-larks; I remember thinking that your voice sounded like a bird's when you asked me for my berries."

"I fear I was very selfish," cooed Hilda sweetly; "for I ate them all." She raised her blue eyes to his as she said this, with such an amazing depth of soul looking out from under the long, curving lashes, that Immanuel Rossi was surely not to blame for instantly concluding that the dread sin of selfishness had never clouded this white life.

It is somehow exceeding difficult for the average man to discern the true excellence and worth so often hidden beneath an ugly exterior. Had Hilda Wilde been possessed of small, squinting orbs of vision, shaded by scant, stubbed lashes, those eyes might have mirrored forth never so heroic a soul, and it is safe to say that neither Immanuel Rossi nor any other man would have discovered it.

"You were surely not so selfish as I," he said, gravely; "I had run away without a thought of the misery I was causing."

"You are thinking of poor Mrs. Winch," murmured the girl. "Aunt Emmeline says she will never forget her face the day she stopped at the farm. She had found your hat by the road, and thought you were dead." Hilda repented the last words as she saw the cloud which swept over her listener's face. The tall, stooped form of her grandfather was coming toward them across the field. "Grandmother told me to ask you to be sure to come to dinner to-day," she said hastily. This remark drew the brown eyes once more to her face.

"I am going to make the cherry pudding myself. I can make such delicious ones." Her dimpling face betrayed such a pretty girlish pride in the womanly accomplishment, the pink deepened so bewitchingly in the soft cheeks, like the unfolding of a mysterious rose of life, that Immanuel found himself smiling down at the pretty cup-bearer.

"I shall certainly come," he said, and turned rather shamefacedly to meet the quizzical look of the old farmer.

"Gettin' cooled off?" inquired Mr. Scott. Then without waiting for a reply, "I'll take a cup of your hayin' drink, Hildy, then you can run along an' help yer gran'ma."

A slim, blue and white figure passing through patches of shade and sunshine and disappearing at last behind a clump of blossoming locusts, could have had no possible connection with the "long, long thoughts" which Immanuel Rossi was indulging in the hay-field. It certainly occurred to him as he laid the long, fragrant swathes beneath the July sun, that there was no reason why he should not find happiness as other men did. He remembered with satisfaction that Hilda's blue eyes had seen in him only the owner of a few barren acres on the back hill-road. To work as a man, to love as a man, to live as a man, and not as that monstrosity called a millionaire, appeared to this very singular young person as supremely desirable.

It was perhaps because of these thoughts that the plain dinner, served in the farm kitchen, had so exquisite a savor.

"Hildy made the puddin' gran'pa," said Mrs. Scott, beaming with hospitable satisfaction, as she cut her guest a generous slice.

"My—my! Hildy must have stopped her readin' for quite a spell this mornin'," chuckled the old man. "What with fetchin' the jug to the medder an' all."

TO BE CONTINUED

Pure Cow's Milk

made sterile and guarded against contamination, from beginning to baby's bottle, is the perfection of substitute feeding for infants. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk has stood first among infant foods for more than forty years.

Not what is said of it, but what it does, has made the fame of the

Elgin Watch

and made 10,000,000 Elgins necessary to the world's work. Sold by every jeweler in the land; guaranteed by the greatest watch works.

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH CO.

ELGIN, ILLINOIS.

Wearing Points

are the best

"SELLING POINTS"

On its wearing points
ALONE
the

Remington TYPEWRITER

outsells every other writing machine

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT
(Remington Typewriter Company)
327 Broadway New York

DEPOSITS OF $50 OR MORE EARN 5 PER CENT. PER ANNUM

SAFETY FIRST: We loan money to home builders. Repayment begins immediately. Every monthly installment strengthening our security. Regular examination by the State Banking Department and other expert accountants, guarantees the correctness of our records and statements.

PROFIT: All interest and a portion of the principal on each loan being payable monthly, and immediately reinvested, our earnings are larger than the usual profits on real estate loans. We can and do pay 5 percent, per annum from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. In nine years we have accumulated surplus and undivided profits of $12,000. Money deposited is not tied up, may be withdrawn at need.

TESTIMONIALS: We shall be pleased to forward to you, upon request, the testimony of expert accountants, of depositors, clergy men, business men, and others, and our latest statements of our condition at the end of the year 1901.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

Music Learning at Home

Piano, Organ, Guitar, Violin, Banjo and Mandolin. Harmony and Composition. Our booklet tells how to learn to play any of the above instruments without going to a teacher or having a teacher call at your home. Send your name and receive the booklet free. Fifth year of greatest success.

Address: U. S. CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF MUSIC,
Dept. 9. 19 Union Square, New York, N. Y.

Thorough, scientific course by mail, adapted to individual needs. Long-established. Responsible. Successful. Practical. Instructors experienced and competent. Editors of 5 popular publications. Students' contributions given preference at literary and pleasure rates. Descriptive catalogue free. Address: SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM, No. 149 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

I Can Sell Your Farm

or other real estate for cash, no matter where located. Send description and selling price and learn my wonderfully successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Parker's Hair Balsam

Cleanses and beautifies the hair and promotes its growth. Best remedy for scalp diseases and hair falling. 50 cents and $1.00 at druggists.

Vapo-Cresolene

AN INHALATION FOR

Whooping Cough,
Croup,
Bronchitis,
Coughs,
Grip,
Hay Fever,
Diphtheria,
Scarlet Fever,

Don't fail to use CRESOLENE for the distressing and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. For more than twenty years we have had the most conclusive assurances that there is nothing better. Ask your physician about it.

An interesting descriptive booklet is sent free, which gives the highest testimonials as to its value.

ALL DRUGGISTS.

VAPOR-CRESOLENE CO., 180 Fulton Street, New York.

Dr. Lyon's

PERFECT

Tooth Powder

Used by people of refinement
for over a quarter of a century.

ORNAMENTAL LAWN FENCE
Many designs. Cheap as wood. Catalogue free.
COILED SPRING FENCE CO., Box D, Winchester, Indiana.

FOR SALE

I CAN SELL YOUR REAL ESTATE OR BUSINESS. The value of a "For Sale" sign is limited to those who pass that way. My business is unlimited. I have customers in London, San Francisco, St. Paul, New York and in cities, towns and country places all over. Send lowest cash price and description. My terms are reasonable. Any owner who goes with me will find I am responsible. FRANK P. CLEVELAND, 1650 Adams Express Bldg., CHICAGO.

BACKWARD CHILDREN

A school for the education of nervous and backward children, and for the correction of all kinds of speech defects. Individual instruction, beautiful home surroundings, Christian influences. Write for illustrated booklet containing all the details. Address Reed School, 388 Hubbard Av. Detroit.

FREE TO AGENTS

CLEAN CUT CAKE TIN. Flat thin knife cuts loose a perfect cake. $2 Outfit free Exp. prepaid. Dept. T. HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, Chicago, Ill., or Buffalo, N. Y.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Result of 76 years' experience. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Danville, N. Y.

KNOX'S GELATINE

PLEASE YOUR PALATE

with my gelatine, and don't spoil your digestion with heavy desserts. It is transparent. It is pure. It is granulated. It sets in a half hour, and makes from a pint to a quart more jelly than any other package of equal size.

You get FREE my Book

of seventy "Dainty Desserts for Dainty People" for your grocer's name. Or instead send a two-cent stamp. For 5c. in stamps, the book and full pint sample. For 15c. the book and full two-quart package (two for 25c.). Pink color for fancy desserts in every large package. A package of Knox's Gelatine makes two quarts—half gallon—of jelly.

Chas. B. Knox, 55 Knox Ave. Johnstown, N.Y.

WOOLEN

FROM LOOM TO WEARER—EXPRESS PREPAID

If you have always bought cloth at a store, TRY THE MILL, where it is made, and have a revelation. No middlemen—only our mill profit to pay. We make cloth for all other apparel purposes, for men, women and children.

Write for free samples and booklet "Good Cloth" stating what garment you wish to make. PASSAIC WOOLEN COMPANY, Mills: 15 South St., Passaic, N. J.

CLOTHS

We Carpet Your Floor for $3

To introduce our new, serviceable and healthful

BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS
Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to outwear higher-priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any point east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual colors sent free.

Sanitary Mfg. Company 54 Rouse Building Philadelphia, Pa.

$3.90 KITCHEN CABINET

Size 27 x 42, height, 30 inches. Made of select material, nicely finished; has two large movable bins, insect proof, each will hold 50 pounds of meal or flour. Has tight, roomy drawer and large kneading board. Send for large Catalog House Furniture No. 26, also Refrigerator Catalog—Factory Prices.

E. H. STAFFORD & BRO., Chicago, Ill.

Money Easily Made

Selling our Transparent Handled Knives. Your own photo, name and address in bundle. Hand forged, perfectly tempered blades. Warranty with each knife. We originated the

MCKINLEY MEMORIAL KNIFE "Made in Canton."

Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00 Agents Wanted in Every County.

Send today for terms. (No. 263, two-thirds size.) The CANTON CUTLERY CO., 1413 E. Second St., Canton, O.

Now We Have It!

A Perfect Square Steam Cooker

With doors. Large meal cooked over one burner. Wonderful saving of fuel and labor. Boats steam tight. No burnt fingers. No lifting top dishes out to get at the lower ones. Water gauge on outside. Special rate for ten days. Agents wanted, salary and commission. Send for printed matter.

OHIO STEAM COOKER CO., 27 Ontario Bldg., TOLEDO, O.

HARTSHORN SHADE ROLLERS

are perfect in action. Over 40 years' experience guides the manufacture. Get the improved. No tacks required. To avoid imitations, notice script name of Stewart Hartshorn on label.

Agent's Outfit Free.—Has a thin knife, Cuts cake from pan. A money maker for agents. Large Catalog new goods, fast sellers, free. RICHARDSON MFG. CO. Dept. 6, Bath, N.Y.

The Moonshiner Vanquished

Gospel Experiences Related on a Notable Night at Water St. Mission

THERE have been many notable gatherings in the Old McAuley Water Street Mission from time to time, but probably none have been more notable than the gathering at the old Mission room, on March 18.

S. H. HADLEY

This was an anniversary that meant much to the converts of Water street, and to the friends who have stood by the Mission through many years.

It was the third anniversary of the funeral of Ira B. Snyder, alias "Bowery Ike," who was brought to Christ there many years ago. Snyder—a thief and drunkard, and a dangerous man—was led into the Mission, and saved through the precious blood of Christ. He began to work for the reclamation of his old companions in crime, and was blessed in bringing many of them to the Saviour. Through the assistance of one of the trustees, Mr. Walter M. Smith, the Mission sent Ike to the Moody Institute, in Chicago. His remarkable career of usefulness at that place, while he was studying and fitting himself to be assistant at the Mission in Water street, has already been told in these pages. He was stricken with heart disease and died just as he had finished his education, and he was brought home and buried in the old home where he found his Saviour.

Trustee Smith—a successful merchant in New York—had become acquainted with Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Asheville, N. C., and being interested in his missionary work among the mountaineers in that part of the State, he felt led to devote the money which he would have used for Snyder to assist Dr. Campbell in founding a school and chapel among the mountains of North Carolina. March 18 was made an occasion of thanksgiving for the wonderful way God has led us and had magnified his name in the life of one who had been so low.

There were on and around the platform Mr. Thomas B. Campbell, a merchant of St. Joe, Mo.; Mr. Ralph L. Cutter, Mr. Walter M. Smith, the Trustee; Mr. Tietjen and Mr. McDowell, bankers; Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman and wife, Mr. W. M. Kay, Mrs. Grace MacMillan, a number of ladies, and Rev. Thomas P. Smith, of Fines Creek, N. C., the chaplain and teacher of the Snyder school and chapel. Mr. Walter M. Smith opened the service by reading the Scriptures. Then Rev. Thomas P. Smith spoke, telling what had been done at the Snyder Memorial School and Chapel. The school was full, the church services were largely attended, and souls were being brought to God continually. He explained that illicit distilleries ("moonshining") had long been carried on there, the people thinking they committed no crime in evading the exactions of the government. About three-quarters of a mile from the Snyder school and chapel, smoke was discerned ascending over the tree-tops, which marked the location of a distillery. Some of the neighbors gathered and held a consultation; then they went to the spot and spoke to the "moonshiner." They told him how God had raised up a school and chapel, where the children were being educated and taught the Word. They urged that the distillery ought not to be carried on, and asked the man to abandon a work that was destroying the morals of the people. "The man moved away out of the country," said Mr. Smith. "The influence of the Snyder school and chapel drove the moonshine plants entirely out of the neighborhood."

At the close of Mr. Smith's address, Superintendent Hadley asked the audience if they did not want a part in the school and chapel work, and $51.00 were collected and given to Mr. Smith for that purpose.

Then came a scene which probably can never be witnessed anywhere else than in Water street. Mr. Hadley asked all who had been saved from drunkenness—the redeemed drunkards—who had found Christ in the Mission, and were faithfully serving him, to rise. Nearly one hundred men and women stood up. On the countenances of a majority there was not the slightest trace of their former lives. They were well-dressed, fine-looking men and women. Then the testimony meeting began. The first man who spoke had been for twelve years a helpless victim to morphine and whiskey. He told how Jesus had set him free, and how the dreadful appetite had vanished. Thirty or forty similar testimonies followed. Each one spoke of the transforming power of Christ to change and efface the old life, with all its scars and horrors. At the close, twenty-three drunkards came forward and knelt at the mercy seat for prayer.

S. H. HADLEY, Sup't.

A Complete Bible

The Red Letter Bible, premium with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, was received on the 4th of February. It is complete from beginning to end. The synopsis of the books of the Bible we find a great help and convenience in locating different subjects. We also find the Bible reader's aids excellent, giving much valuable information; the forty questions answered; the calendar for reading the Bible through in one year; the harmony of the Gospels, are a very great help to Bible students. Above all, we find the word book or concordance the best we have seen in all our experience, attached to any Bible. We are glad and thankful God has enabled men to compile so much good knowledge for business men, who do not have the time and opportunity to get so much valuable information in so small space. But, after it is compiled, we find it very beneficial. We are at a loss to know how THE CHRISTIAN HERALD can afford to publish such a book at this price. Would say, we think every household should possess one of these, especially Sunday School and Christian workers.

Philadelphia, Pa.

J. S. WRIGHT.

A GREAT TEMPERANCE TRIUMPH

ON Feb. 1, Congress passed the Gillett-Lodge bill, introduced by Congressman F. H. Gillett, and Senator H. C. Lodge, both of Massachusetts, at the request of the Reform Bureau, which has worked daily for two years, with many allies, to secure this enactment. By this measure, the sale of intoxicants, opium and firearms is forbidden, not alone in the New Hebrides, but in all Pacific Islands that are not under the government of some civilized power.

This legislation will rejoice the friends of Rev. Dr. John G. Paton, the foremost figure in the missionary world, who has twice toured this country, and spoken to great audiences in nearly all our chief cities, pleading for the removal of the chief obstacles to his missionary work, the intoxicants and firearms sold in the New Hebrides by an American trader. Of the thirty islands in the group, twenty-two have been very fully Christianized. On these islands there are 18,000 Christian natives, and there is scarcely a home where there is not daily family prayer. But while missionaries are winning converts, American rum-sellers have been making corpses and perverts, killing body and soul. Dr. Paton's own son was only saved by a Christian chief, who interposed to catch the bullet, and died in his stead. Even the children playing in the trees of the mission orphanage, have been "shot like monkeys" by cannibals armed with American guns and maddened with American rum.

REV. JOHN G. PATON D.D.

The only liquor selling complained of at present is by American traders. If French or German traders should attempt to take up the traffic, Dr. Paton has assurance that those Governments will follow the example of Great Britain and the United States in enacting a special law to prohibit it. But to make the protection, even of the New Hebrides, permanent, much more, to afford like protection to all mission fields, it will be necessary to secure the universal treaty, already initiated by Secretary Hay in behalf of President Roosevelt, at the suggestion of the "Native Races Deputation," which The Reform Bureau has organized as a federation of temperance and missionary societies to aid in the completion of this great crusade. This missionary and temperance movement involves prohibition for more than half of the human race.

The American people have endorsed the movement in 461 petitions from thirty-six States, delivered to Secretary Hay. Seventeen nations, in two treaties to protect Africa against distilled liquors, are committed to the policy except as to vinous and malt liquors. The only doubtful point as to the treaty is whether we can keep the treaty on the high ground taken that "intoxicants" of all kinds are to be kept from all "aboriginal" tribes.

Surely there is no other thing so great that can be done so quickly as to protect the child races against intoxicants.

W. F. C.

Washington, D. C.

Mellin's Food

furnishes the phosphatic salts necessary to build up the teeth.

Send for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Co., Boston, Mass.

NEW, PRACTICAL SANOLEUM WASHABLE WALL COVERING
WATERPROOF germ and insect proof. ornamental and sanitary. made in attractive signs for all rooms of the modern house. SANOLEUM is not paper, but is as readily hung wall paper can be washed at pleasure. is inexpensive and everlasting. Every roll is warranted using SANOLEUM the walls are kept sweet, clean and in highest condition. Send two cent stamp samples and full information.

THE SANOLEUM COMPANY,
421 E. MILL ST., AKRON, O.

Monarch Malleable Iron and Steel Range
Where we have no dealer, sold direct at wholesale price.
Malleable iron will not crack, warp or break. Polished steel requires no paint enamel. Malleable frames make joints tight as steam boiler. Any equipment desired. Freight paid 400 miles, with allowance when further.
SPECIAL FREE TRIAL: We will ship anywhere a Monarch Range selected, freight prepaid, without a cent advance. Give it 30 days' test. Then send the money return range at our cost. Postal will bring you catalogue, particulars, and prices.
TOY MONARCH FREE.—Not a picture, but a perfect reproduction of range. Send two-cent stamps for postage and packing.
MALLEABLE IRON RANGE CO.,
107 Lake Street, Beaver Dam, WISCONSIN
Recently at St. Louis, Mo.

Kitchen Utensils
HAVING THIS TRADE MARK
AGATE
MFG. & CO.
NICKEL-STEEL WARE
WE MAKE 1520 KINDS
ARE SAFE.

We claim Purity & Safety, and substantiate this claim. Chemists' Certificate. By the Blue Label only by us (and sustained by recent S. Circuit Court decision) passed on every piece of genuine Agate Nickel-Steel Ware. Booklet showing simile of this label etc., mailed free any address.
Agate Nickel-Steel Ware sold by the leading Department and Housefurnishing Stores.
Lalanc & Grosjean Mfg. Co., New York, Boston, Chicago.

The IDEAL SQUARE CO.
With Doors. Cooks a whole meal over on gasolene, oil, gas, or common cooking fuel.
Reduces Fuel Bills One half.
Has water gauge and replenishing tube on side. Makes tough meats tender. 12 one-quart jars in canning fruits. make the world-renowned round loaf with whistles. We pay express. The cooper's Friend. Agents Bonanza. Illustrated catalogue. Agents wanted.
TOLEDO COOKER CO., Box 16 Toledo, O.

Sharpen your lawn mower easily and cheaply by our Acme Lawn Mower Sharper.
Thousands in practical use. 50c. by mail.
A. E. FABER, JR., 355 Mulberry St., Newark, N.J.

Improvements at Mont-Lawn

OUR WORK FOR TENEMENT CHILDREN GROWS

THE NEW LODGE AT MONT-LAWN

From Architect's Drawing

WITH every spring comes the pleasant privilege of recording enlargement of our Fresh-Air work for little children of the tenements at Mont-Lawn, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, on the Hudson. That side of Hook Mountain, where Mont-Lawn nestles, is fast becoming a little woodland village in itself—a veritable "City Beautiful," or "City of the children." Every now and then a new cottage rises on the green hillside, and in find place a great number of downy cots. The news goes abroad; and there is great rejoicing in the tenements. Some small people who failed of outings in the summer, because room could not possibly be made for them in the Home, see special providence in each addition.

Last spring, it will be remembered, Hope Cottage was erected as a memorial to Miss Jane Hope, a philanthropic lady, who, during her life, had been a thoughtful and generous friend to our waifs. This spring, ground has been broken for another memorial building, to be known as the Tibbals Cottage. In connection with works of mercy, this name is not new to our readers. Mr. L. P. Tibbals, who died in 1895, helped many worthy causes, and the Bowery Mission among them. He was very fond of children, and was never happier than when surrounded by little folks. It is his sister, Miss Sarah J. Tibbals, who is raising to his memory this most fitting monument—a house where little children of the poor shall find shelter and loving care.

The old Lodge, worn and weather-beaten, is being replaced by a new one, which will be at once picturesque and commodious, giving dormitory space for a large number of cots, and furnishing a covered entrance to the grounds. The chapel, like the old Lodge, showing marks of long and honorable service, is to have the thorough renovation it deserves and needs. The Proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD particularly desires to make the little folks' place of worship as pretty and attractive as possible. The habit of going to church and Sunday School has been acquired by many children of the slums, who had been attendants on neither before visits to Mont-Lawn.

Larger population at the Home this summer implies heavy additional expense. Any co-operation which our readers wish to render in helping us to feed and clothe the hundreds of little folks who will be our guests next summer will be welcomed; $3 pays for one waif's outing, covering cost of transportation back and forth between New York and the Home; medical and caretakers' attention, food, shelter, etc.; $6 sends two; $9, three; $12, four; $15, five; for only $36, twelve little children of the poor can be made happy for ten, long joyous days at beautiful Mont-Lawn. The summer is near; the crowded tenements are like Gehenna when hot days come; and little ones die then by the thousands. Help us to save them.

THE NEW TIBBALS' MEMORIAL BUILDING

From Architect's Drawing

A Remarkable Range Success

All Styles and Sizes, With or Without Reservoirs or Water Fronts, for City, Town or Country Use.

This is CLAPP'S IDEAL STEEL RANGE advertised in these columns the past year with such wonderful success

Mrs. Hollister's Letter, similar to hundreds of others I have, tells the story:

"After giving the Ideal Steel Range a thorough test I find that everything just as you have represented. The range is easy to manage, economical in fuel, and true in its response quickly. Not one awkward thing about it. It is certainly a most remarkable range. I notice a great saving in fuel. The Ideal Range does all the work one could put it to do. The Ideal Range is a little time and does perfect work."
(Signed)
MRS. H. B. HOLLISTER
Cincinnati, N. Y.

Sold for Cash or on Monthly Payments.

CLAPP'S IDEAL STEEL RANGE

means to every housekeeper a great saving in fuel and labor and as a baker it is absolute perfection. My superior location in the best manufacturing section of the U. S. where Iron, Steel, Coal and Skilled Labor are cheapest and best enables me to furnish the "top notch" in a Steel Range at a positive saving of $10 to $20. Your money refunded any time within six months if my range is not entirely satisfactory. It costs you nothing to have my full proposition, so write to-day for FREE Catalogues and Photographs.

CHESTER D. CLAPP Practical Stove and Range Man 620 Summit St., Toledo, O.

EDISON WIZARD FOUNTAIN PEN and a Box of WIZARD INK ONLY 50 CTS.

Thos. A. Edison, Jr., has invented a fountain pen that is superior to the ordinary pen as the electric light is superior to the candle. Made on correct scientific principle, with special machinery we are enabled to sell these pens at 50 cts. each, and will present each purchaser a box of Mr. Edison's famous WIZARD INK TABLETS, which by dissolving in water make ONE PINT of the best writing fluid ever produced. Non-corrosive and chemicals cannot eradicate it. This remarkably low price is made to induce every body to try our ink, knowing where once used no other can take its place. Agents wanted everywhere. Address: The THOS. A. EDISON, JR. CHEMICAL CO., Dept. B, 31 Stone St., New York.

2 BATTERY CALL TELEPHONES for $5.50

Guaranteed good for 600 feet metallic circuit.

2 GENERATOR CALL TELEPHONES for $8.50

Good for 3 miles single iron wire, batteries included. Sent C.O.D. if $1.00 is sent with order for express charges.

Telephones guaranteed satisfactory or money refunded. FARR & FARR, 106 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.

WHY CAN WE SAVE YOU MONEY ON A VEHICLE, HARNESS OR A FLY NET?

Because We Have No Agents.

Can we really do it? We say yes. Can we prove it without cost to you? We can. How? We will ship you a harness, saddle or vehicle, without your sending a single cent, and let you look it over at your freight house, and if you don't find we have given you the biggest bargain you ever saw or heard of, return the goods to us at our expense. We give with each vehicle a 2 year iron-clad guarantee, protecting you from poor material and workmanship. Our vehicle catalog describes the largest line of buggies, road wagons, phaetons, surreys, spring wagons and carts, harness and fly nets ever shown in one book. It's Free. Send for it.

MARVIN SMITH CO., 65 N. Jefferson St., Chicago, Ill.

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way—by a thin coating of Pure Refined Paraffine. Has no taste or odor. Is air tight and acid proof. Easily applied. Useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions with each cake.

Sold everywhere. Made by STANDARD OIL CO.

$8.95
EIGHT DOLLARS AND NINETY-FIVE CENTS
buys the celebrated, high grade new 1902 Model EDGEMERE BICYCLE, 28-inch wheels, any height frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT, ANY COLOR ENAMEL. STRONGEST GUARANTEE.
$10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle.
$12.75 for the celebrated 1902 High King or High Queen.
$15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MORGAN & WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC TIRES, A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE.
10 DAYS FREE TRIAL For the most wonderful bicycle offer ever heard of, WRITE FOR OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address: SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

DIAMONDS on credit

We Make it Easy to Own a Diamond

ANY HONEST PERSON CAN
OWN A GENUINE DIAMOND AT ONCE

We will send for your inspection any diamond ring, brooch, locket, ear-rings, scarf pin, cuff buttons or other article which you may select from our half million dollar stock and you may wear it at once on payment of a small portion of its value. The balance you may pay in small amounts monthly just as you would put a part of your earnings in a savings bank each month. Diamonds are a good investment particularly just now. Your local jeweler, if he is posted, will tell you that there is every indication that diamond values will largely increase within a year.

Honesty is the only qualification for credit—we do not ask for any security or guarantee, but simply want to know that you are honest and will act in good faith. Dealings with us are strictly personal and confidential, and you may depend upon receiving fair, courteous and liberal treatment.

We make liberal exchanges, and any diamond bought of us may be exchanged for other goods or a larger diamond any time. In dealing with us your interests are safe-guarded at every point. Our goods are all guaranteed, and our guarantee is good; you can satisfy yourself absolutely on this point if you will step into your local bank and ask how we stand in the business world. They will refer to their Dun or Bradstreet book of commercial ratings, and tell you that we stand very high, and that you may have perfect confidence in dealing with us.

If you prefer to buy for cash we will allow you the regular trade discount of eight per cent., and give you a bill of sale, with the option of returning the diamond at any time within one year and getting spot cash for full amount paid.—less ten per cent., the reasonable cost of doing business. For example, you can wear a fifty dollar diamond for one year for five dollars, which is less than ten cents per week.

Remember that it costs you nothing to have diamonds sent for your inspection as you all charges whether you buy or not. You cannot tell much about diamonds from catalogue illustrations, you must see them and handle them to fully appreciate their beauty and quality.

Write to-day for CATALOGUE "D," which explains everything, and shows prices, terms and full illustrations. We send to all inquirers our Souvenir Pocket Piece and Calendar.

LOFTIS BROS. & CO.,

Diamond Importers and Manufacturers,
101-103-105 and 107 State St., Chicago, U. S. A.
Opposite Marshall Field & Co.

GO-CARTS DIRECT FROM THE FACTORY

SAVE 1/4 to 1/2 by buying Baby Carriages and Go-Carts direct from the manufacturer. WE SELL DIRECT TO THE CONSUMER AT FACTORY PRICES. This handsome COMFORT SLEEPER, made from imported steel, strong, durable, lasting; SENT UPON RECEIPT OF $6.00. Write for Catalogue showing fifty latest styles.

E. F. PAHL & CO., 3d St., Milwaukee, Wis.

$26.50 BUYS A BUGGY

(with top $33.50) of very superior QUALITY, STYLE and DURABILITY

Entire output of two enormous factories, sold direct to consumer. We manufacture the best line Buggies, Carriages, Harness, guarantee all work, ship on approval. WE DEFY COMPETITION & SAVE DEALERS' PROFIT.

Money back if not satisfied. Send for CATALOGUE and SPECIAL OFFER UNION BUGGY COMPANY, 262 Saginaw Street, Pontiac, Mich.

SENT ON TRIAL

A Fence Machine that will make over 100 Styles of Fence and from 50 to 70 rods a day

AT ACTUAL COST OF WIRE

Horse-high, Bull-strong, Pig and Chicken-tight. Wire at Wholesale Prices. Catalogue Free. Kitzelman Bros., Box 154, Muncie, Ind.

"SHYNEY-SHYNE" SILVER POLISH

Contains no acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful lustre. Once used, always used. We want a million orders this season. By mail, 15c. Two boxes, 25c. Till June 1st will send package of flower seeds free with each box. THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dept. C.

DON'T SET HENS

the same old way when our new plan beats it 10 times. 100 Egg Hatcher Costs Only $2. Over 94,000 in use 10,000 sets. 5000 more wanted for 1902 either sex. Pleasant work. Big profits. Catalogue and 10c Egg Formula FREE if you write today. Natural Hen Incubator Co., B 84, Columbus, Neb.

PRAYER A NECESSITY*

The Only Sure and Efficacious
Resource in the Trials of Life...

OUR Lord's recourse to prayer in the supreme hour of his agony in the Garden, is a lesson to all his followers. If in his distress he gave himself to prayer, how much more need is there for ordinary men in the crises of life to seek strength from the same source. Probably that argument was the reason for associating with the Topic: "Prayer a Necessity," the passage describing that hallowed and pathetic scene. The connection between the two is otherwise not very clear. We must conclude from the fact of Christ resorting to prayer at such a time that he, who knew all sources of help, must have esteemed prayer as the surest and the best. The cause of his suffering is a deep mystery, but the fact of his suffering is undeniable. It has been suggested that it was caused by the shrinking from the death that he saw approaching. It has been often noticed that finely organized temperaments do suffer more from pain and from the agony of dissolution than do men of coarser fibre. But there have been many of Christ's followers who have gone cheerfully to a death as painful, and have never quailed at its coming, and we cannot conceive of one so courageous, being so overcome by the prospect of physical suffering as to agonize as Christ did in the Garden. Besides which, he had given many intimations that he had for a long time foreseen that an ignominious death was at hand, and was prepared for it. He was not under the delusion that his disciples cherished and had no expectation of earthly glory. There could have been no disappointment, no surprise for him in the approaching ordeal. But still he suffered, and suffered acutely.

How bitter that hour was, whatsoever the cause may have been, we may learn by his craving for human companionship and sympathy. He was hurt by finding that the chosen three could sleep, while he was passing through his trouble. He was alone in his sorrow and pain. How many there have been who, in their lighter trials, have experienced similar disappointment at the lack of human sympathy! Sometimes the trial is so peculiarly personal that it is impossible for any one to help in the bearing of it, but, more frequently, the loneliness is the result of friends voluntarily holding aloof. The winepress is generally trodden alone. Then what must the lonely sufferer do? Christ shows the way. In his great horror and darkness he turned to his Father. There he was sure of comfort and help. The trouble was not lifted, the cup did not pass from him, but his own soul was strengthened to bear it. That is often God's way with his people. There are sorrows that are incurable; deeds done long ago bear their bitter fruit in remorse, and there is no undoing them. Bereavement comes, and all our future lives must be passed without the dear presence that has gone out of them. It seems impossible to bear the agonizing, desolating sorrow. What help can avail, when no power can restore the loved one? Amusement, diversion, travel, occupation are tried, but the blank still remains; the burden seems too great to bear. Miserable, indeed, is then the fate of the man who knows nothing of prayer. To bend the knee in God's presence, to tell him all the woe and the sorrow, is in itself a relief. But in a little while comes the help that it seemed vain to ask. There is no visible angel strengthening the sufferer, as in Christ's case, but the strength comes just as really. The burden has been given over to the divine Burden-bearer, and he takes it upon himself. Out of the darkness comes the voice: "My grace is sufficient for thee," and so it proves to be.

The mistake in so many instances is that we seek to escape an ordeal by other means than prayer. In the Pilgrim's Progress, both pilgrims fell into the Slough, but while the one was anxious only to get out, and took the way nearest to his own house, the other was anxious to make progress in his journey, though it might be the longer way he must take. Prayer becomes a necessity for that very reason. Only through its means can we learn the purpose of a particular trial. When we realize that it has not come through caprice, when we know that in some way it is intended to be remedial, the sting of it is taken away, and this knowledge we can get only through prayer. Paul, like his master, prayed three times for the removal of his trial; but in his case, too, the petition was not granted. Yet the prayer itself was answered in the best way. It is in this sense that the consolation often comes. Christ said "Not my will but thine be done." When the Christian can say that out of his heart, the victory is won.

The Bowery Mission

Several readers have responded to the appeal for cast-off clothing for the benefit of the unemployed, who are numerous besieging the Bowery Mission with calls for assistance, during the present month. The need is so great, however, that any further contributions of men's clothing from other readers will be cordially welcomed. Send them, express prepaid, to the Superintendent, Bowery Mission, 55 Bowery, N. Y.

A WHOLE FORTUNE

Good Food and Good Health

This food tale from a trained nurse is worth reading.

"I want to tell you of the curative properties of the good food Grape-Nuts, and will say they are a whole fortune to anyone suffering as I did for years with a stomach so rebellious as to be almost useless to me.

For years and years I was tortured with flatulency, heart burn, bloating, tenderness of the stomach, and many a time I cried bitterly because of my great distress.

One never to be forgotten day Sister came up from Columbus to visit me. She brought a package of Grape-Nuts to see if the food would agree with me. I found the new food very delicious with cream, and it caused me no pain or disturbance whatever.

To make a long story short I have been using Grape-Nuts ever since. Have gained 20 pounds in five months and my health is perfect. It is a pleasure to be plump and healthy and feel well again. I am a professional nurse and naturally appreciate this change in my health." Lucy N. Richardson, Box 164, Logan, Ohio.

Sara De Faye's Woman's Mail Order Merchandise House

The
only mail order house conducted by a woman exclusively for women

No. 1000—The "De Faye Gibson"—The very latest idea in shirt waists; very popular, neat and stylish. Made in white pique only. Price $2.00.

Made to special measurement. Don't wear factory waists.

In ordering, send bust measure only. Send for catalogue of the world renowned

De Faye's Famous Hats

also merchandise catalogue and FREE premium list. SARA DE FAYE, 138 Wabash Av., Chicago

REDUCED RATES TO LOS ANGELES

Via Pennsylvania Railroad, on account of Convention of Federation of Women's Clubs

On account of the Convention of Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held at Los Angeles, Cal., May 1 to 8, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell special excursion tickets from all stations on its line, to Los Angeles and return, at reduced rates.

Tickets will be sold from April 19 to 26, inclusive, and will be good to return until June 25 when properly validated.

For specific rates, routes, and conditions of tickets apply to ticket agents.

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Write for particulars. Dept. E. KARL GERSTNER, 83-4th Avenue, New York.

Don't hand out money for things that are not "the best." Many washing-

powders that seem to work well are unfit to use. PEARLINE costs only a trifle more than the poor and dangerous. The absolute safety of PEARLINE has been thoroughly tested and proved. Make sure nothing is used to save work at expense of your clothes. 659

Pearline—Safe and Saving

There's Money
in it!

"The breed that lays
Is the breed that pays"

SINGLE COMB WHITE LEGHORNS

There is money in them and pleasure as well. The suburbanite can make his money go a long way toward keeping his family. The young man or woman desiring a clean, healthy and money-making business, will find it in this occupation. We teach how to start right and furnish a complete outfit. A postal card will bring full particulars. Have you a few hens now? Perhaps you want to introduce new blood into your flock. Our strain of Single Comb white Leghorns is the finest in the country. Their show records prove it. Eggs for hatching from heavy laying matings $2.00 per 15; $8.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Prices on stock and eggs for hatching from prize-winning matings given on application.

The White Leghorn Poultry Yards, Box C, Waterville, N.Y.

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels

only
$21.95
Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish steel wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co., Quincy, Ill.

Built for Long Service FROM THREE FACTORIES

We ship direct to the consumer. We make the most reliable line of vehicles, harness, etc., to be found anywhere and sell at the lowest wholesale prices.

We Handle No Low-Grade Work.

Strong, durable material and good honest workmanship in our vehicles and harness outfit two of the ordinary kind.

Write at Once for our guaranteed freight charges to your station on any vehicle. Carts from $11.00 to $18.75; Road Wagons from $28.90 to $105.00; Buggies from $32.45; Surreys from $52.20 to $120.12; Spring Wagons from $37.50 to $112.50; Farm Wagons from $31.55 to $65.65; Harness from $4.80 to $20.20; Farm harness from $12.50 to $35.00. The largest illustrated Vehicle and Harness Catalogue ever issued. Send for CASH BUYERS' UNION, Dept. E-18, CHICAGO

A REMINDER.

Time to buy that carriage or buggy. We make a full line and sell direct on 30 Days' Free Trial.

We save you dealer and jobber profits. Enough said. Write for 2nd annual catalog. Mailed free.

Kalamazoo Carriage & Harness Mfg. Co., Station 5, Kalamazoo, Mich. Pioneers of the Free Trial Plan.

The Life of the Wheel depends upon the make of the wheel.

ELECTRIC WHEEL

lasts almost forever. Fit any wagon, stage or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free.

ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 186, Quincy, Ill.

EARLY CHRISTIAN LIFE

A Church Organized from Among Gentile Converts in Syria

By MRS. M. BAXTER

PERSECUTION was favorable for the spread of the Gospel. The scattered disciples, driven out of Jerusalem, immediately after the death of Stephen, having preached in Judea, Samaria and Galilee, "traveled [north] as far as Phoenicia, and Cyprus, and Antioch." They preached "the word Jesus," a person, not a doctrine; their message telling of the good news was to bring them in contact with the Lord himself, as a present, living, risen Saviour; who gave to them a present, real salvation from sin, and present power to do the will of God in Christ. And the hand of the Lord was with them; and a great number that believed turned unto the Lord (Acts 11: 19-21). Very often in the present day the hand of the authorities in Church and State, or the hand of the minister is not with the most earnest preachers of the Gospel. But the great point is this: Is the hand of the Lord with us? Is "the Lord working with [us] and confirming the Word with signs following?" (Mark 16: 20). Are any turning to the Lord? If not, either we are not in the place where God would have us, or else we are not really in the hand of the Lord for his service.

God wills "that all men should be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth" (1 Tim. 2: 4); therefore we know that he wills the salvation of those to whom he sends us. He sends us "to open their eyes, to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith, which is in Christ" (Acts 26: 18). He knows that of ourselves we can do nothing, but he expects us to trust him to work with us, as we work with an instrument which we take in hand. We really count on him; we do not see the difficulties in the way; we see his will and his mighty power to carry it out, and in our hearts we stand still to see the salvation of God. We speak, but only as a voice; we pray, but only as the instrument of God's Holy Spirit; and God does his own work.

"Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the Church which was in Jerusalem, and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch" (Acts 11: 22). Here we see that not only the apostles, Peter and John, but others also of the Church in Jerusalem, became overseers of the little bands of converts, the infant Church, which resulted on the earnest labors of the scattered disciples. Barnabas, "when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, was glad." Barnabas did not find the same work to do as Peter had found at Samaria, Lydda and Joppa: he was God at work and was glad: grace, "the Gospel of the grace of God" (Acts 20: 24), was being preached, and his grace in bearing witness to it was to be seen; and the warm heart of the "son of consolation" (Acts 4: 36) grew warmer still as "he exhorted them all that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord" (or, R. V. margin, that "they would cleave unto the purpose of their heart in the Lord"). There is a lesson to learn here. The promise to the Hebrews is full of warnings of the danger which Christians are in of slipping back or drifting away. The writer warns against drifting away or letting slip the things that were heard (Heb. 2: 1); he urges us to hold fast our boldness and the glorying of our hope, and "the beginning of our confidence" "firm unto the end" (3: 6, 14). He warns against the danger of coming short (1: 1), and of falling, after the example of the others into disobedience (ver. 11), and again urges us to "hold fast" (ver. 14). He warns against the danger of being "sluggish" (5: 12); the Gospel is indeed a Gospel of grace, unreserved mercy; but all the more are we responsible to meet our God in his grace by a continual and persevering response of praise and obedience.

A word is said here of the character of Barnabas: "He was a good man, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost; and much people was added unto the Lord." He must have thrown himself into the work alongside of those who were preaching and dealing with individual souls. The very same description was given to Stephen (Acts 6: 5), but although through him and the other deacons the number of disciples were greatly multiplied in Jerusalem, yet Stephen had the ministry of fearless testimony before the Sanhedrin, and the ministry of martyrdom, while Barnabas became a special teaching father in the Church. Yet he was the same faith and the same Holy Spirit were helpful for both. Barnabas was the same man who had befriended Saul of Tarsus when, after his conversion, came to Jerusalem, and sought to join himself to the disciples, who, knowing of his reputation as a cruel persecutor, "were afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple" (Acts 9: 26).

Barnabas had believed in God's work which he saw in Saul, and he had taken him by the hand, brought him to the apostles, and told a story for him, so that their fears were allayed, and he was accepted as a brother.

This is our Famous Catalogue. It can be found in over two million homes of thinking people. Is it in yours?

Why Not Start Now?

Spring is at hand and you will need supplies of all kinds. If you are a progressive, up-to-date buyer, go slow and place your order where you will get biggest returns for your dollar.

HAVE YOU EVER TRIED MONTGOMERY WARD & CO. of Chicago? Perhaps you have long intended to, but never knew how to begin. Why not start now? Our Catalogue No. 70, revised for Spring and Summer, is just out, our building is piled from basement to roof with good things—the very best our active buyer could gather in the best markets; every employee in our big establishment is ready and waiting to serve you to the best of his or her ability—just as though you were shopping over our counters. We've been preparing for this event all winter, and believe that there never was a better opportunity for shrewd, active buyers to start purchasing on our wholesale prices—no middlemen—one profit plan. The Spring and Summer edition of

CATALOGUE NO. 70 IS NOW READY. Over 1000 pages packed with the good things of life—everything you use—gathered by our buyers from the markets of the world. Page after page of high grade merchandise, all illustrated and honestly described.

SEEMS TO US THAT YOU OUGHT TO HAVE A COPY. We want you to have one—so much so that we will furnish the book free and pay one-half the postage if you will pay the rest, fifteen cents. There are so many people in this country bubbling over with curiosity, or trying to get something for nothing, that we are compelled to make this trivial charge. It is only fifteen cents but it assures us that you are acting in good faith and are interested in our business. Why not ask for it today, before you forget it?

Montgomery Ward & Co., • Chicago

To All Who Suffer from SPINAL DEFORMITIES

85 per cent cheaper than the old methods. 100 per cent better. Weighs ounces where others weigh pounds. For Men, Women and Children; none too young, none too old to be relieved. We offer the only Scientific Appliance ever invented for the relief and cure of this unsightly condition; cured the inventor, Mr. P. B. Sheldon, of curvature of the spine of THIRTY YEARS' standing.

Throw Away the Cumbersome and Costly Plaster-of-Paris and Sole-Leather Jackets

Our appliance is light in weight, durable, and conforms to the body as not to evidence that a support is worn. It is constructed on strictly scientific anatomical principles, and is truly a godsend to all sufferers from spinal troubles, male or female. We also make Scientific Appliances for protruding abdomen, weak back, stooping shoulders. Send for free booklet and letters from physicians, physical instructors, and those who know from experience of our wonderful appliances. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Write to-day for measurement blank. Don't wait.

After having worn the plaster-of-Paris jacket, I can truthfully say your appliance is far more comfortable to wear. It corrects curvature quite as well, and fits the body so perfectly that no one would suspect I was wearing one. You have my lifelong gratitude and I well wish. Yours truly, IDA BLOOD.

The plaster-of-Paris jacket above mentioned weighed 81-4 lbs. The Philo Last Appliance put on in its place weighed 17 ounces—a difference of over 7 lbs. PHILLO BURT MFG. CO., 30-4th Street, Jamestown, N. Y.

SIMPLE LIGHT
COOL CLEAN DURABLE

The PERFECT BODY-BRACE

NO UNDERSTRAPS NO SHOULDERSTRAPS
ONLY COMFORTABLE BODY-BRACE EVER DEvised

that permanently relieves adjustments of women and men, caused by crowded or displaced internal organs, even after all else has failed.

Don't Give Up Till You Have Tried It—No Cost to Try

Will make you healthy, strong and give you a good figure by improving nerve force and bodily vigor. Worn over undervest without need of corset. Made of nickel silver.

Is a safe and sure remedy for all cases of backache, and a great sufferer due to a weak back. After wearing your Perfect Body-Brace, I feel like a new woman. I am stronger and able to do all my work. I cannot thank you enough for what you have done for me and take great pleasure in recommending your brace.

Made by 1902. MRS. WM. NELSON, Altoona, Pa. Induct.

FREE TRIAL OFFER for 30 days to prove its benefitting you. Money refunded if not satisfied. Ask for free illustrated booklet (sent in plain sealed envelope). Tell your trouble and our "Guide to Health Dept." will give good practical medical advice without charge. Correspondence confidential. Write now. PERFECT BODY-BRACE COMPANY, Box 1208, Salina, Kansas.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC

(REGISTERED)

NEW WOOD FINISH

FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK

RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD AND METAL THAT HAVE DETEIORATED.

A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED

MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, PINE, CHERRY, GREEN, RED, BROWN, BLACK, BRASS, COPPER, ALUMINUM, IRON, STEEL, BRONZE, SILVER, GOLD, PLATINUM, AND ALL OTHER METALS.

SAMPLE CAN 10¢

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO., CLEVELAND, O.

QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS.

SEWS ANYTHING

from silk to coarsest fabrics. The celebrated

BALL-BEARING ARLINGTON

(equal of any $40 to $65 machine.)

Combines highest grade mechanical finish with beautiful appearance. Finest and most complete attachment. BALL BEARING, hence easy running. Guaranteed for 20 years. $25.000 gold.

Testimonials from every State.

Write for Free Catalogue showing all styles and samples of work. Arlington guaranteed machine from $11.95 up.

Our Automatic Cabinet at $17.75 is a wonder.

CASH BUYERS UNION, Dept. A-18, CHICAGO, ILL.

REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO

Do You Need a Steel Range or Steel Cook Stove?

If so, we will sell you a

KALAMAZOO

direct from our factory at factory prices on

30 Days' Free Trial.

All of our stoves and ranges are equipped with this, our patent oven thermometer and all other latest improvements. Our entire manufacture is in our own factory, sold only direct to users, freight prepaid. A word to the wise. If you want a good article and want to test it the right price, write for our free literature. Address

KALAMAZOO STOVE CO., Mfrs., Kalamazoo, Mich.

$25,000 PROFIT ON 1/2 ACRE was made by a Missouri man in one year growing Ginseng easily cultivated in small gardens as well as on the farm; hardy everywhere in U. S. Demand now very large and increasing. Most profitable crop known. Complete book telling all about this wonderful Ginseng, 10 cents. Circulars free. Address Dept. C

CHINESE-AMERICAN GINSENG CO., Joplin, Mo.

PROFITS Large profits and permanent income by selling our identification outfits, Key Tag and Pocket Book with Special $1,000.00 Accident and Health Insurance Policy.

COMMERCIAL REGISTRY CO., St. Louis, Mo.

The KHOTAL

is a gas range for city or country homes, small, compact and powerful; burns without smoke, soot or smell; generates its own gas from ordinary kerosene; economical in first cost and maintenance. Prices from $3.75 upwards. Send for catalogue.

HYDROCARBON BURNER COMPANY

196 Fulton Street, New York City

STUDY OSTEOPATHY AT HOME

Learn a profession in which success is assured from the start.

The mail course of the National School of Osteopathy teaches in a thorough and practical manner the great science of healing without drugs to men and women, young and old. This college is chartered by the State of Illinois with power to grant the degree Doctor of Osteopathy. Many of our pupils earn ten times the cost of instruction during their course. Full particulars together with "A Lesson in Osteopathy" free.

Address R. C. TURNER, D. O., Sec'y.

NATIONAL SCHOOL OF OSTEOPATHY, Dept. D. X., 1000 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill.

RIDER AGENTS WANTED

One in each town to ride and exhibit a sample 1902 Bicycle.

1902 Models, $9 to $15

'01 & '00 Models, high grade, $7 to $11

500 Second-hand Wheels

all makes and models, good as new, $3 to $8. Great Factory Clearing Sale at half factory cost. We ship to anyone on approval and ten days trial without a cent in advance.

EARN A BICYCLE distributing 1000 catalogues for us. Write at once for bargain list and our wonderful special offer to agents. Tires, equipment, sundries, all kinds, half regular prices.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. B, K. CHICAGO, ILL.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets, under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Racine than all others together. Write for catalogue.

RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box J, Racine, Wisconsin

YOU DYE IN 30 MINUTES

Sold and labeled in all kinds made to look like new, with the celebrated

TONK'S FRENCH DYES

8 simple and easy to use, home twice the strength of other dyes, carpets and rugs retain their brilliancy for years, the colors are permanent and will not fade, boil or wash out.

To introduce them give your dealer a sample and we will send you 6 large packages for 40¢, or 1 for 10¢, any order. See whether for a 10¢ trial.

Write quick, catalogue and color card free. Agents wanted.

FRENCH DYE CO., Box 426, Vassar, Mich.

Do you suppose we would send a free sample of A-CORN SALVE if we weren't sure it would remove your corns? Your address on postcard gets it. 15 cents. From druggists, or by mail, Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphia.

From Start to Finish of the Great World's Fair!

EACH week since the start of the building of the great $30,000,000 World's Fair, to be held in St. Louis, 1903, THE WINNER MAGAZINE has had skilled photographers securing views from life of the work as it progresses. These views are engraved on copper and reproduced in each issue of THE WINNER MAGAZINE in superb engravings, 12 x 19 inches in size. A year's issues will form the most beautiful and instructive Art Album of the building of the greatest and most wonderful magic city ever constructed by man.

The Wonders of Art, Commerce and Manufacture of the whole world are being gathered in this one spot.

The Winner Magazine

NOW HAS THE LARGEST NUMBER OF SUBSCRIBERS OF ANY PUBLICATION IN THE WORLD, BEING IN EXCESS OF

850,000 Paid Subscribers

Each issue contains Splendid Stories of Romance, Adventure and Travel in Foreign Lands, and

The NEWS of the WHOLE WORLD BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED

In the next issue, Special Illustrated Articles on Life in the Philippine Islands. The Life of Cecil Rhodes in Africa. Articles on Fancy Work and Floriculture will appear. Each issue is a whole library in itself. The Brightest, Best Illustrated, Best Edited, Cleanest and Best Printed Magazine for the Whole Family, Published in the World.

A Whole Year's Subscription for 10 cts

As a special offer to the readers of The Christian Herald, the publishers will send THE WINNER MAGAZINE every month for one whole year, including the Great World's Fair Pictures, on receipt of 10 Cents for a Year's Subscription. Address,

THE WINNER MAGAZINE, 172 Winner Building, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Take advantage of this offer At Once, as it Will Not Appear Again

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1902. LOUIS KLOPSCH

Our Correspondent Begins his Journey in Israel's Footsteps Across the Desert

Children nourished on ESKAY'S FOOD thrive marvelously during their second summer, cutting their teeth without illness. ESKAY'S FOOD babies are unusually free from cholera infantum and other hot weather diseases. Our book, "How to Care for the Baby," a great help to the mother who is anxious that her child should be strong and well, sent free with a generous sample of ESKAY'S FOOD.

AND TWO OF ITS LIVING ADVERTISEMENTS

IN a letter L. G. Harpel, the father of the boys whose picture we show above, a druggist of Lebanon, Pa., writes:

"When only several days old we were compelled to put our older boy on artificial diet, and used a popular infant food for ten days, the child losing flesh and strength constantly. I then asked the nurse to try Eskay's Food. Improvement was immediate, the food being at once retained, which was not the case before. In spite of the intense heat of last summer he had no colic or any of the usual infant's complaints. The second boy was put on Eskay's Food at once and has always been strong and well. Samuel, four years old, weighs 36 pounds; Donald, two years, weighs 32 pounds, and you could not find two healthier, hardier boys."

SMITH, KLINE & FRENCH CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

IT NOURISHES FROM INFANCY TO OLD AGE

Spring Beauties The delightful freshness of Spring awakens in all the love for nature. A clear, velvety and perfectly healthy complexion is as beautiful as the apple blossoms. Intelligent care is needed to keep the skin beautiful, and to make it so.

Woodbury's Facial Soap

the only soap made especially for the face, is a valuable tonic. It cleanses thoroughly, but does not injure the most sensitive skin. Soothing, it leaves a delightful sense of freshness and cleanliness. A toilet, bath and nursery soap.

Sold by dealers everywhere. 25c

Special Offer Our booklet, telling how to improve one's looks, and trial size package of Woodbury's Facial Soap and Facial Cream sent for 5 cts. (stamps or coin) to pay postage. Address Dept. 62.

THE ANDREW JERGENS CO., Sole Agents, Cincinnati, O.

NEW SPOON FOR AN OLD NEED

The Cereta

SPOON FOR EATING CEREALS

NOT SOLD

The CERETA Spoon is a new and useful time for every purpose, but especially for eating cereals. The point, depth, width, and size, balance of the CERETA Spoon are exactly right, and unlike every other spoon. Pictures can't really do justice to the CERETA Spoon. A famous silversmith designed it, and noted manufacturers send with each CERETA Spoon their printed guarantee for 20 years of family use.

The CERETA embodies the highest silver art, treated in the new French Gray effect. It is heavier than the heaviest triple plate. A printed offer goes with every spoon: your money back if it is not equal to description, and fully satisfactory.

Not used as advertisements not a mark of advertising on them.

Easy to get CERETA Spoons by saving the coupons which you will find in every package of

Quaker Oats or Pettijohn's Breakfast Food

Read this coupon: read it now; tear it off—tear it off now; you'll find you are already on your way toward getting your first CERETA Spoon.

Tear off this Coupon

Send it, with 3 CERETA coupons taken from packages of Quaker Oats or Pettijohn's Breakfast Food, and twenty cents in coin, and get one of our beautiful CERETA Spoons sent post paid to any address.

THE AMERICAN CEREAL COMPANY, 1363 Monachnock Building, Chicago, Ill.

BUT YOU CAN GET IT VERY EASILY

It is one thing to be head-long—Another thing to be long-headed

To take every new cereal or laboratory food whose description catches your fancy, and experiment with new "effects" in breakfast foods, is head-long. To keep to the food that has been proved by long experience to suit digestion and to keep you in good condition without any medical effect—to hold to Quaker Oats, the food that you know about—that is long-headed. Quaker Oats is the best oats grown, and it is milled in a way that brings out the full health-giving quality of the grain. No other cereal food is milled in this way, or gives so much health as Quaker Oats gives. So don't change about from one breakfast food to another, you'll be disappointed.

Be long-headed. Stick to

Quaker Oats

Yours for certainty, THE LONG-HEADED MAN

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, APRIL 30, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Copyright, 1902, by Louis Klopsch

THE SCENE AT THE TALMAGE PLOT IN GREENWOOD JUST BEFORE THE INTERMENT

Talmage Sleeps in Greenwood

THE LAST SAD OFFICES AT THE GRAVE --- IMPOSING OBSEQUIES
IN TWO CITIES --- ELOQUENT MEMORIAL ADDRESSES

BENEATH a little flower-covered knoll in Greenwood now lies all that is mortal of Dr. Talmage.

It was fitting that that quiet spot, amid waving foliage and the scented breezes of April, should have been chosen as the last resting-place of the great divine, after the close of his long seventy years of ceaseless, consecrated activity. Mourning thousands had gathered around his bier at the nation's capital—for the obsequies were held in two cities—and tears of sorrow had fallen from weeping eyes, throughout the sad journey from Washington to Brooklyn. Never was preacher so deeply or widely honored. He was in truth, the pastor of a nation. Cabinet officers and their families, and high officials in all departments of the public service, united with humble workmen and their wives in tokens of sincere appreciation and genuine grief.

On April 15, the funeral services took place in Washington. Seldom has a more distinguished throng ever assembled than that which attended the obsequies of the great preacher, whose eloquent voice was never more to be heard in Gospel proclamation. In the Church of the Covenant, where the services were held, one could not gaze upon the sad faces of the multitude that crowded the spacious edifice, without being impressed with the feeling that they were men and women who had loved and esteemed the teacher, whose eye would never more kindle in greeting, and whose lips would no longer utter those words of power they had so often thronged to hear. Thousands on the sidewalk attempted in vain to gain entrance to the already crowded church, and long before 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the hour set for the service, the street was well-nigh impassable.

As the funeral procession, led by the Rev. Teunis S. Hamlin, entered the church, to the slow and solemn strains of the "Dead March," the audience sat with heads bowed reverently. The honorary pall bearers who followed the casket were: Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brewer, Senator Dolliver, Senator Burrows, Senator Cullom, ex-Secretary John W. Foster, Mr. B. H. Warner, Rev. Dr. Bittinger, Dr. G. L. Magruder, Rev. Dr. Fiske, Mr. E. M. Branch, Mr. F. M. Lawrence, and Dr. Louis Klopsch, of New York City. The casket was followed by the Talmage family. Mrs. Talmage, leaning upon the arm of Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Wyckoff; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Mangam, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Allen E. Donnan, Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Smith, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Talmage of Washington.

There was a great wealth of beautiful flowers heaped up in fragrant profusion on and about the chancel rail, many of them being large pieces of exquisite design. President and Mrs. Roosevelt sent a great wreath of lilies. A cushion of English violets studded the lid of the casket.

There was no funeral sermon, the services consisting of music and addresses. Rev. Dr. Hamlin officiated, assisted by the Rev. Thomas Chalmers Easton, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, Washington, life-

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

FRIENDS LEAVING THE TALMAGE HOUSE

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

REMOVING THE BURIAL CASKET FROM THE HEARSE

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

REV. DR. HAMLIN ARRIVES AT THE CHURCH

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

TAKING THE VIOLET-COVERED CASKET INTO THE CHURCH

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

FRIENDS OF THE FAMILY ENTERING THE CHURCH

long friend of Dr. Talmage; Rev. J. S. T. Niccols, of St. Louis; Rev. Dr. Howard Suydam, of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, of Princeton, N. J.; Rev. James Demerest, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Rev. D. E. P. Terhune.

When the casket was opened, and the family and the pall-bearers were seated, the choir sang, "Lead, Kindly Light," and the Rev. Dr. Hamlin read the Presbyterian funeral service. On concluding, he paid a noble tribute to the character and work of Dr. Talmage. He said: "For the past thirty years, Dr. Talmage has been known everywhere in the world that English is read, as the greatest preacher of his time. Beecher and Spurgeon stand out as great preachers of the last century, but the sermons of Dr. Talmage were read more widely than either of these. He was a genius and poet in imagination, having a wonderful ability to paint his magnificent thoughts for both the reader and the listener. His human kindness and feeling, his knowledge of human hearts, made him able to touch whoever read his sermons or listened to him speak."

He characterized him as one of the greatest factors for good the world had ever known, and one who had accomplished a mighty work among men for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom.

The Rev. James Demerest, of Brooklyn, followed Dr. Hamlin. He spoke feelingly of Dr. Talmage as of a dear friend and schoolmate. "Has his heart really ceased to beat?" he asked. "Has his expressive face really become immobile? Have those strong fingers become lax and lifeless? It seems impossible, yet it is true. When this enormous fact dawns on the mind, it causes a great surging of thought, which is followed by intense sorrow; a sorrow deep and heartfelt for the great void which has been created. Think how wide is that void! Think how deep is that void! Think, that the wonderful sermons, which used to go into every home, to bring comfort and happiness and relief to the aching and sorrowing hearts, will never be known again; but remember, that although Dr. Talmage is gone, his influence remains. Still we have the memory of him, and the knowledge that he once lived, and these are thoughts which will never perish."

"In years past it has given me the greatest pleasure to defend Dr. Talmage from certain aspersions which were cast upon him. I knew him intimately, and feel that I understood his character as perhaps few people did. From his earliest life I positively know that he worked with one aim, one controlling influence before him. That influence was his sincerity in preaching the Gospel as he believed God intended it should be preached. Any criticisms which may have been heaped upon him were unjust, because throughout his life he was sincere and honest in his convictions. He served God as he believed God intended he should serve."

The Rev. Dr. Van Dyke followed in a striking eulogy. He said in part:

"The world-wide reputation of Dr. Talmage will no longer have its expression in present achievements, but his memory will still live. He has sometimes in his aim was to advance the kingdom of God. A great man has fallen. We mourn for him. Who will take his place? Yet death has gained a barren victory over this magnificent minister of God. We thought he had many years before him, but, alas, he was stricken before the slightest signs of decay were manifested in his wonderful powers. But he has gone to a nobler and greater life—a life which he ever held up as a prize in valuable before the eyes of men. For him to die was Christ. A crown of great glory has been placed upon his brow."

An impressive and eloquent address was that of the Rev. Thomas Chalmers Easton, D. D. of Washington, who told simply of the great man of God, as he had seen and known him during a close acquaintance of many years. He said:

"Can we compress the ocean into a dewdrop? No more is it possible to condense into one brief hour what is due to the memory of our beloved and illustrious friend. Thousands, yet tens of thousands in this great Republic, and in Empires across the Atlantic have said it in tearful whispers, 'We shall not soon see his like again. What an exceptional career! What a glorious man! While the stars shine we prize them not. When the sun glows in his bright effulgence, we stop not to eulogize his worth. But let the nights be darkness, as when Paul was tossed about on the Adriatic, or when Egypt was enshrouded in the gloom of the plague, and then are the stars and sun missed. While great men are with us to fight our battles, to lead in great affairs of State, or voice appeals in behalf of righteousness, too often is it, that having the blessings of their presence and their mighty pens, we are unmindful of the men themselves. Honors bud upon the living, they seldom blossom except above the dead. Death clears our vision, wipes away our prejudices, hushes the tumult of critical rivalry, and reduces the vastness of supposed faults! How sudden and shocking was the voice that whispered through the land, and over Europe, last Sabbath morning, 'Talmage is dead! We only knew he was sick—then hopeless, then—dead! We were accustomed to think of him as some tall, wide-spreading oak, hardened in storms, blessed by genius, baptized in showers of peace! It did not occur to us that Talmage could die. His unsurpassed preparation for every great task; his weird ubiquity, like Elijah in the olden time, lifting up his voice in churches and halls, here at the nation's capital to-day, then t

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

PALLBEARERS COMING FROM THE TALMAGE RESIDENCE, WASHINGTON

career been criticised because he was sensational. But he had to be sensational to hold the attention to the word of God of thousands of people who would otherwise not have listened to it. His later life was merely the unfolding of the sterling qualities he had so often shown in his younger days. He was never spoiled by the great reputation he had won. He was a man thoroughly consecrated to his work. His one great aim was to serve the God whose word he preached. His Death clears our vision, wipes away our prejudices, hushes the tumult of critical rivalry, and reduces the vastness of supposed faults! How sudden and shocking was the voice that whispered through the land, and over Europe, last Sabbath morning, 'Talmage is dead! We only knew he was sick—then hopeless, then—dead! We were accustomed to think of him as some tall, wide-spreading oak, hardened in storms, blessed by genius, baptized in showers of peace! It did not occur to us that Talmage could die. His unsurpassed preparation for every great task; his weird ubiquity, like Elijah in the olden time, lifting up his voice in churches and halls, here at the nation's capital to-day, then t

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

REMOVING THE CASKET FROM THE TALMAGE HOME

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH OF THE COVENANT

Copyright, 1902, by Abby G. Baker

FUNERAL CORTAGE ARRIVING AT THE CHURCH

THE LAST SAD TRIBUTE OF RESPECT—THE GATHERING AROUND THE GRAVE OF DR. TALMAGE IN GREENWOOD

Copyright, 1902, by Louis Klopsch

morning appearing in some distant city, then in a week across oceans; and his never failing power of inspiring millions who heard him, and the dash and push by which, like Henry of Navarre, his plume seemed ever waving in the forefront of the battle line for righteousness—this precluded from the public mind the very thought that Dr. Talmage would so soon join the hosts of America's illustrious dead!

"If, as his personal friend for over twenty years, I could attempt to open the treasures of his real greatness, where shall we find more of those sterling virtues that poets have sung, artists portrayed, and historians commended? He was truly a great man, because he was a man of God! A vigorous intellect,—brilliant imagination lighting up the path of an indomitable will, and formulating itself in splendid efficiency! His moral courage was only equalled by his giant frame and physical strength. He was made of the very stuff that martyrs are made of, one of the most remarkable individualities of the nineteenth century! A man with no negative qualities, aggressive and positive, his whole soul was full of convictions of right and duty. A firm friend, a man of ready recognition, a human magnet in his focalizing power! He was true to every deed and thought of his life, and never needed a veil to be drawn, and calling for no nice circumlocution of words on the part of his friends to alter a doubtful eulogy!

"Truthfulness, sincerity, frankness, courage, persistency, generosity, honor, manliness, a stern will to fight social wrongs, and a tender heart for peace, and an ocean-tide of sympathy for oppressed humanity, and ever all swayed by the conviction that 'the right with the might and truth should be.' His inmost acts could be examined with honor! The brightest Pharaoh on the headlands of time is to-day extinguished, and that brilliant life which guided thousands upon thousands to glorious, immortal destiny has gone out! No man has lived such an apostolic life since the days of Paul, and no name appears on the page of history so sweetly illumined with divine influence as that of Dr. Talmage! His sermons and lectures have been read by all classes, from crowned emperors in palaces to toilers in miners' camps; by sailors on shipboard and soldiers in the battle field; in hospitals, in prisons, in asylums, in all parts of the habitable globe, souls have been nourished, comforted, cheered, inspired by his matchless genius and notified talents! All who knew this lost friend will carry forever the memory of one whose learning, will-power, and love power, were in full action and in perfect harmony; no three strings in a harp were ever in their accord. He lived to make the world brighter, happier and holier. His Gospel was full of the sweetest optimism and spiritual cheerfulness. No dirge or wail of despair was ever sounded in speech or sermon, and his home was the ideal of what he taught, a perfect realm of pure love and beautiful sunshine. He was great in his lofty magnanimity. During the whole period of his ecclesiastical trial in Brooklyn, and as I was with him day and night, he never once uttered a word of unkindness at his traducers, or to one whose malice had been evoked by professional jealousy! Only once did I see him aroused to a white heat of anger and indignation, and then he belched forth as Vesuvius when convulsed with internal fires—it was when a vile sheet of the Metropolis persistently assailed him for weeks by deliberate, malicious falsehoods, and by cartoons and charges that only a Satanic brain could hatch!"

"He was great in his spirit of philanthropy. When a heathen nation suffered for want of bread, his powerful appeals through that mighty agency—the greatest weekly paper of the century, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD—enabled a response to be given that saved millions on millions of human lives! India, part of England's empire, will never forget America's philanthropic Talmage! Russia acknowledged its everlasting debt to him also for aid in a crucial period, and in the palace of the Czar he was welcomed as a brother beloved. Greece, by its royal sovereign, paid homage to his greatness, and in the throne chamber of the Queen received her expressed admiration of his genius, fervor and power as the greatest living preacher of the age!

"I said he was great in his generous philanthropy—but he gave silently. When he made his recent subscription of $1,000 for the ransom of Miss Stone, the missionary, he said to me: 'Easton, this means far more than can be imagined. For every incoming mail will bring appeals for money for all manner of objects from numerous societies, and for all kinds of sensational purposes.' He gave, to my knowledge, large sums, but silently.

"In the long sweep of three-score and ten years there were to be a few days of illness—few of weakness, leaving almost the seventy summers to come in a divine beauty. It took this man nearly seventy years to live his eventful life; it took him only a few hours to die—a long, long sunshine of untarnished fame, and only a little cloud. And could he have spoken to the last he would have told us that even the cloud of death was silvered with the radiance of immortality! The last look of recognition was given to his beloved wife, and the last words that fell from his lips when far down the valley were these 'Eleanor! Eleanor!'

"It was said once by an eminent writer, that when Abraham Lincoln, the forest-born liberator, entered heaven, he threw down at God's throne three million yokes as the trophies of his act of emancipation; but great as that was, I think that it was small indeed to the tens of thousands of souls Talmage redeemed from the yokes of sin and shame by the glorious old Gospel, preached with such heavenly fervor and power of the Holy Ghost! What a mighty army stood ready to greet him at the gates of the heavenly city, as the warrior passed in to be crowned by his King.

"The three greatest preachers of the nineteenth century were Beecher, Spurgeon and Talmage—but the prince of the pulpit was Talmage! Beecher was ornate, philosophic, and admired for his classic productions, and brilliant effusions as an orator. Spurgeon was doctrinal, and rigid in stern orthodoxy, and drew immense audiences by his fervor; but Talmage won all classes. He was practical, poetic and powerful, moving his audiences at will, either to tears or smiles, yet proclaiming a gospel of free and full salvation, and with a soul aflame with desires to win them to the Cross! The scarlet thread of the atonement ran through all his sermons. He had all the brilliancy of Beecher, and doctrinal accuracy of Spurgeon, and power—more power than both of them—to reach and hold the multitudes for Christ! Like the Master, 'the common people heard him gladly. He was a Presbyterian, but truly catholic in spirit, loving all who loved his Master. Why lingered he so long this side of heaven ere he entered in?

"To me it appeared in vision as I bowed at his death-bed, that while heaven had seen some great days, the home-coming of this mighty warrior in the army militant was to be one of its greatest days, for he was to receive a welcome worthy of his conflict here, and all heaven was mustering hosts upon hosts to greet him at the gates of pearl! I beheld the promised 'abundant entrance' as the hero cast aside his cross, and on either side of Talmage were glittering armies led on by Moody, and flanked by Beecher and Spurgeon, and reaching the throne of the Redeemer and Sovereign of that empire of eternal beauty, one word was our brother's greeting—WELCOME! Welcome thou valiant conqueror and heroic champion of a pure Gospel! Welcome thou wise winner of souls, behold these white-robed multitudes are thy glorious harvest! Welcome, thrice welcome, thou healer of broken hearts and wounded spirits, for these are to be stars in thine eternal crown! Come in! Come in to thy rest and reward! Then I saw the harpers on the sea of glass, one vast

CONTINUED ON
PAGE 375

ARRIVAL OF THE CASKET AT THE GREENWOOD PLOT

By permission Brooklyn Eagle

THE FLORAL TRIBUTES ON THE GRAVE

By permission Brooklyn Eagle

The American Pulpit

... A Sermon by ...

REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago

GOSPEL OF HELPFULNESS

TEXT — Galatians 6: 2:

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ"

PAUL was the noblest Christian martyr who ever lived. He could well quote himself as an example for all his contemporaries. From the very moment when his blinded eyes were opened by the good Ananias, on the Damascus street called "Straight," he never ceased to sacrifice himself for his fellow-men. But so important is the lesson of vicarious burden-bearing, Paul would not have his friends look to any human guide. He seems to come to the members of the Galatian church in the same way that a staff officer of the commander of a great army delivers his orders to the colonel of a regiment, as the representatives of General Grant delivered theirs when they rode through the Federal lines, telling Sheridan and Meade and Humphreys and Ord and Warren and Wright and Hartranft to cease firing, because the two national leaders, Grant and Lee, were meeting under a flag of truce at Appomattox.

Paul seems to say, "The duty of bearing one another's burdens is not my own command, nor is it given to us by the command of Peter or John or Apollos, but by the command of the Great Divine Chieftain himself."

To bear one another's burdens will often inspire one who is hopeless and helpless and purposeless, until, after awhile, he gathers strength enough to take care of himself. Most people are honest. Most people want to do right. Most people are willing to work if they could only get the chance to work. But the fact is, that trouble is very apt to submerge men and women in an avalanche. We are expected to go forth as soldiers to battle, with iron chains fastened in convict fashion to our heels. We are like the poor travelers caught in the quicksands. The more we struggle the deeper down we sink, and the more helpless we become, and so we give up in despair. Now the object of bearing one another's burdens is not to make a strong man helpless. It is the power which is given to one to help a brother, so that after awhile that person who is in trouble may learn how to help himself. When a team is halted, because the heavy laden wagon is stuck in the ruts, that team does not need any help along the broad, smooth highway. But it does need help until the wagon wheel is pulled out of the rut. When a train of cars is stalled upon the up-grade, that engine does not need another to help pull the train along the level. It does, however, need an extra engine to help the train over the up-grade. We do not carry our brother's burdens so that our brother shall do nothing. But we help him for a little while along the highway of life, so that he can carry his own burden the rest of the way. We help him so that he may be able to help some overloaded traveler whom he may meet on his way, carry theirs.

A Lumberman's Obligation

Many years ago a young man was sitting upon the banks of the Delaware River, utterly discouraged. He was a lumberman. A spring drought had come on. The river had prematurely subsided. The raft of logs which this young man had cut was stranded. Bankruptcy was staring him in the face. As he sat thus, along the road came a country gentleman. He reined in his horse and said, "Well, stranger, what is the matter? you look blue." "Yes," said the young man, "I am blue. I put all my money into this winter's work. We cut the logs, and everything was ready for the saw-mills, but the drought is on. Now my logs are stranded. I cannot do anything until next year. My men have demanded their pay immediately. My wife and babies must be turned out of our home." The gentleman turned and said, "Well, stranger, I do not know who you are. I do know that you are in hard luck. You look honest, and are evidently industrious. I will take my chances. Come down to my village bank and I will lend you money enough to tide you over." "But," answered the young man, "I have no security." "Well, I do not care; come on anyway." Some years later that lumberman, now himself well-to-do, was dying. He called his son to his bedside and told him this incident. He said: "My son, I would have been ruined, and would have, perhaps, committed suicide, had it not been for that help. The man who helped me was Simon Cameron. I want you to promise that if there ever comes a time when you can help Simon Cameron, you will do it for your father's sake. A short time after Mr. Cameron was a candidate for the United States Senate. The son of the lumberman was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature. The son was a Democrat, but he cast the deciding vote for his father's benefactor, and Mr. Cameron was returned to the national capitol. Cannot every one of us help some brother in the same way as Senator Cameron inspired that young lumberman to help himself.

The text is especially suggestive when applied to church members dealing with those who are members of the household of faith. Practical religion of the Lord Jesus Christ cannot be hemmed in by the four walls of a religious edifice. Every shipwrecked mariner has a claim upon every stout keel floating the wide seas. The parable of the good Samaritan teaches that we should love our neighbor as ourselves. Our neighbor is not alone the friend who lives next door. He is also the stranger of foreign birth, who has fallen among the thieves on the road to Jericho. Any traveler who is naked, ahungered, athirst; any wayfarer who is lost upon the mountains far away from home, whose guide we can be, is our neighbor. We, as Christians, have a duty to foreign missions as well as to home missions; to the savage living in the jungles of Africa as well as to the heathen in the back alley, half a block away from our kitchen door; to the waif of the street who has fallen asleep upon our doorstep.

Fraternal Duties

But Paul was addressing the members of the Christian churches. Those churches were situated in Galatia. The members—sturdy, warm-hearted, but hot-headed mountaineers—had internal dissensions. In the course of his letter, he lays down the broad statement that each member must bear with the faults and frailties of other members. They should especially do this because they were brethren and members of a church family, of which God was the Father, and Jesus Christ the Elder Brother. The bond of a belief in a common Saviour certainly ought to help the members of a church family to bear with each other's weaknesses. Worldly societies help their unfortunate members. I am told that the Masons not only bury their dead, but they care for living Masons who need help. They have certain signs and hand-clasps.

During the bitterness of the American Civil War the Masons in gray remembered that they were the brothers of the Masons in blue. Many a life was saved on account of their Masonic oaths. A Mason in good and regular standing can find friends in any city of Europe to which he may journey—friends, who will not only greet him with a smile, but friends, Masonic friends, who will do all they can to help him in his travels. Many other Orders pledge their members to the same brotherly regard for one another. We have respect, too, for national ties. A traveler in foreign lands always speaks to and greets a fellow-countryman. The farther away from home, the warmer is his salutation. We have family ties. When brother or sister goes wrong, if we are sincere in our affections, we try in every way to bring the wanderer home to our earthly father's house.

Shall we not have respect for spiritual ties? Sad is the fact that many church members are apt to feel that the household of faith is the place for perfect and not for imperfect men and women. When the minister does wrong, we are apt to cry, "Out with him from the church, away with him, away! away!" When the member of the Session does wrong, he is immediately expelled from the church fellowship. That is not Paul's way, that is not Christ's. The spiritual condition of a truly religious church member can be judged by the way he treats those who have gone astray. He is more apt to condemn himself than he is to accuse his unfortunate brother. When a Sunday School pupil goes astray, the truly good Sunday School teacher says: "Ah, that is too bad! I wonder if I did my full duty? Perhaps, if I only had called on the lad and invited him to my home, and had seen where he spent his evenings, this awful sin would not have happened. I must not be too hard upon the boy. Yes, I, too, am to blame."

Christ's Example

When a minister goes astray, the truly good elder does not upbraid him. Ah, no! He knows too much about the weakness of human nature to do that. The old member of session will sit by the fire, with tears streaming down his furrowed cheeks, reproaching himself when he says, "Here I have been a professed follower of the Lord for forty years. I ought to have looked after the young man. I ought to have been his guide and protector." When Peter played the coward and denied his connection with Christ, the Saviour did not call a meeting of the apostles for a heresy trial, and make Peter demit the ministry. By his treatment of Peter's sinful act, Christ taught the lesson of forgiveness and mercy for the penitent wrong-doer. He reordained Peter to go forth and feed his lambs. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ," is especially an appropriate lesson for Christians to learn who take no interest in the welfare of fellow-Christians, who are the members of the household of faith.

It isn't the thing you do, friend,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of heartache,
At the setting of the sun,
The tender word forgotten,
The letter you didn't write,
The flower you might have sent, friend,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The text is trenchant because each person is stronger in some one way than his next-door neighbor.

Special Talents

This is an age for the specialization of talents. Instead of one man making a shoe, as in olden times a single cobbler did, it now takes fifty men to make the same shoe. Instead of one woman spinning her own thread and weaving her own cotton and sewing her own garments, each woman concentrates her power of mind upon one distinct part of an industry. Civilization has developed its cotton mills, its cutters, its sewers, its fitters and its importers and exporters, and the combination tends to the general advantage. We buy where we can buy the cheapest, and we sell where we can sell the dearest. All these results come from the specialization of talent. The realization must come that some men can do things better than we. We, in turn, in another line of business, ought to do some things better than those who are not proficient in our trades. A good gunsmith does not always make a crack marksman. An expert yacht-builder cannot always be turned into a trustworthy sea captain.

What is true in reference to the mental or manual abilities is also true in reference to the spiritual abilities, and every man whether he will or no is his brother's keeper. We are responsible for the poor wayfarer who has fallen among the thieves on the road to Jericho. We are responsible for those whose spiritual life in many senses have been committed to our care.

A Blind Woman's Gratitude

Yet, wonderful to relate, when a man does try to help his brother bear his burdens, he makes his own back stronger by which he can bear his own. A few years ago a dear friend of mine was threatened with the loss of one of his eyes. He became very much depressed. The surgeons said the eye must be cut out. For some time he stayed at home and brooded over his nearing misfortune. He was rebellious against God and would not be comforted. But one day he started down Broadway. Ahead of him he saw an old blind colored woman standing upon the street corner waiting to pass over. She dare not without help. This old colored woman had a long stick in her hand by which she would find her way along. Upon her arm she carried a market basket. The gentleman went up and accosted her with the words: "Well, Auntie, can I help you over the street?" The colored woman's face was wreathed in smiles as she answered: "Thank you, Massa; thank you, suh!" On the way across the street the colored woman said: "Massa, some people say I am old and blind, and no account to any one. But, Massa, life is very sweet to me. I find the goodness of God every where. He has taken away my two eyes, but the people are always kinder to me than to any one else—I am blind. And then, sir, I have still my hearing. My children love me, and I can never cease to praise God for the mercies with which he has surrounded my life. My friend stopped her brooding then and there. "Surely," said he, "if God can make a poor old blind colored woman happy, he does love and care for me." When a man tries to help carry his brother's burdens he finds that his own become lighter to bear.

But my text clearly means, also, that every one should try, in manful, womanly, Christian fashion to bear his own burdens. We are very apt to think that our own troubles are heavier to bear than any other person's troubles. But if we were allowed, as in the old legend, to go to the Plain of Affliction and deposit there our own sorrows, and were compelled, instead, to take up the sorrows of some one else, in all probability we would carry away from the Mountain of Difficult the burden pack which our backs have been accustomed to carry. Now we cannot help our brother to bear his burdens by trying to pile upon his stalwart shoulders our own burdens in addition.

No man ever becomes a healthy man, mentally or spiritually, who is a mendicant by choice, crawling from door to door, begging and whining. Yet there are some burdens that are absolutely impossible for us to bear in our own strength. Some of us have had so much trouble—such an awful, awful lot of trouble! We have suffered again and again. We have had to go to the family plot, as I went two weeks ago, and to leave there a loved one. The grave did look so big and the black hole was dug so deep. But there is a way we can all carry our own burdens. That way is to cast them upon the Lord, and he will sustain us. He has promised, and he will do it. If we will only cast our burdens upon Him, our own hands will be free? Then we can go forth, like athletes stripped for the fray. We can go forth to help our brothers and sisters, our parents and children, and all our friends, carry their burdens.

Beautiful is the legend about how the site of the Jerusalem temple was selected. Many centuries ago two brothers owned farms among the Judean hills. The one brother had a large family; the other was childless. One night during the harvest time, when the grain had been cut up and the sheaves piled up in the fields, the brother, who was childless, came to his wife and said: "Mary, there is my brother. He has a large family of children. He must have had hard work to make ends meet. I think I shall try to cheer him up by taking some of my sheaves and piling them upon his sheaves and not let him know anything about it." That same night, the other brother talked to his wife. He said: "Martha, there is my brother. He has not a child in his home. Poor man, no baby kiss, no little one to love. Besides that, he is having hard times to make both ends meet. God has been very good to us. I think I will take some of my sheaves and place them upon his pile, and say nothing about it." That night the two brothers, upon their errands of love, staggered through the darkness. They met just half way between the two farms. They met to find out how great love a human heart may have for another human heart. There the temple of Jerusalem was built. Would that we could become like unto those two brothers. Would that we could all go back to the good old times in the country, when every one, by force of circumstances, was compelled to help bear each other's burdens. Some people talk about the advantages of living in this advanced civilization. Living in a large city. I have never been able to find those advantages.

If I could I would always live in the country. There every one is willing to help every one else. When the barn is to be raised, all the neighbors gather to lend a helping hand. In those good old times in the country every one was ready to halve a friend's sorrows as well as double a friend's joys. When the wedding bells began to ring, the young girls, the friends of the bride, used to come from the village and decorate the church altar with the wild flowers which they had picked. Friends would sew the wedding garments. Friends would serve the wedding cake. Friends would help the young people furnish the new home. Friends would bear the burdens, the happy burdens of joy. Then, when trouble came, the same friends would come in and help the invalid. They would pour out the medicine. They would close the eyelids in the last sleep. They would sit up all night long with the dead. They would sew the shroud and carry the casket and dig the grave. The same friends would throw into the grave the sods which would fall upon the coffin lid. The same friends would raise the headstone. Friends, the same friends who once plucked the orange blossoms, would plant the cypress.

Let us be to each other friends of that kind. Together let us help one another over whatever difficulties may beset.

Reach out your strong hand of helpfulness, and with a stout grip, give a mighty heave, and the added burden will seem light in your grasp. Do it, and the sunshine of heaven will irradiate many a darkened home. Do it, and countless multitudes will be led into the Kingdom. Do it, and the angels will rejoice; the celestial portals will open to your vision, and the Saviour's smile will encourage the work, that shall hasten the millennium and usher in more speedily the day of His coming.

Planting a "Revival Memorial" Tree

A NOVEL way of commemorating a great revival was taken recently in Augusta, Ga. St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church South united with the First Presbyterian Church in inviting Dr. L. W. Munhall to visit the city and hold meetings. The other evangelical churches cordially co-operated in the movement and aided the work with helpers and accommodation. From the very beginning there were signs of the Holy Spirit's influence, and as the meetings continued, the numbers attending increased, and large numbers made a confession of their faith. The whole city was deeply stirred, the religious life of professing Christians was deepened and quickened, and many elderly people, as well as a still larger number of young people, who had previously manifested little interest in religion, were brought to a decision for Christ.

At the close of the services, Dr. Munhall held a counsel meeting, to give parting advice to those who had just begun a new life in Christ. The Evangelist always attaches great importance to those meetings, realizing that the early days of the Christian life are critical, because the assaults of temptation are likely to be severe, and the new convert is sure to have to meet the opposition of his former worldly associates. It was at this meeting that the suggestion of a visible memorial of the services was carried into effect. The meeting adjourned from the church to the old broad church-yard, in the rear of the building. There the Evangelist planted a young cedar in the presence of the great congregation. A few words were spoken, emphasizing the significance of the ceremony, and a hymn having been sung, the closing prayer was offered. The scene was a very impressive one, and is little likely to be ever forgotten by any who were there. It may be hoped that the tree will grow and flourish, and that it may serve, like the stones that Joshua set up, as a reminder to all who have pledged themselves to fidelity and devotion to the Lord, that they are no longer their own, but are consecrated to his service.

CROWDS WITNESSING THE PLANTING OF A REVIVAL MEMORIAL TREE AT AUGUSTA, GA.

Talmage Sleeps in Greenwood

Continued from page 373

orchestra, and the music from their harps of gold melted into one song of victorship.

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last!

Rev. J. S. T. Niccols also spoke of the labors of Dr. Talmage in the cause of Christianity.

After the services at the church, the bereaved family returned to their home. An opportunity was then afforded the great gathering to view the remains. Hour after hour, in an unbroken line, the thousands passed reverently before the open casket for a last parting look at the face of the great preacher. The features, though worn by his long sickness, were natural and composed, like those of one who had fallen peacefully asleep. Many of those in the church were affected to tears.

On the morning of Wednesday, April 16, the remains, which had lain in the church all night, were taken to the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, and placed on board a special car to be conveyed to Brooklyn. The car was the same that was used as a funeral car to convey the body of the late President McKinley to Canton. The train reached Jersey City at 6:35 A. M. Accompanying the remains were the members of the Talmage household and their immediate relatives; Mr. T. McCutcheon, a relative; the Rev. Howard Suydam, of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; Dr. Louis Klopsch; F. M. Lawrence, and E. H. Branch, members of the old board of directors of Dr. Talmage's Brooklyn Tabernacle; the Rev. James Demorest, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas Chalmers Easton.

Long before 9 A. M., the hour set for the interment in Greenwood Cemetery, people began to flock in at the various cemetery gates, and there was a large gathering at the Talmage family plot. It was a very simple and unpretentious home which was to be the last resting-place of the world's greatest preacher. Almost in the centre of the enclosure was the newly-opened grave. All around the grave were great mounds of flowers in various designs. The President's offering had been brought on from Washington, and was conspicuous by its beauty. Dr. Talmage's associates on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD had sent a great cross of white roses and autumn leaves, and a fine stand of lilies and roses was sent by the readers and scholars of the Brooklyn Tabernacle Sunday School. Among the large assemblage present were many who had been hearers of Dr. Talmage during his Brooklyn ministry. There were hundreds who came from considerable distances, drawn thither by the love they bore the dead pastor. A number of former deacons and trustees of the Brooklyn Tabernacle were also present among them being Merwin F. W. Lawrence, E. H. Branch, Leonard Moody, A. H. Wadhams, George C. Gill, J. H. Ferguson. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD was represented by its proprietor, the entire editorial staff, and a large number of employees, and there was also a delegation from the Bowery Mission.

When the funeral party had arrived, the casket was carried into the enclosure. It bore on a silver plate the simple inscription:

THOMAS DEWITT TALMAGE
January 7, 1832. April 12, 1902.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Suydam, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., a friend and former classmate of the dead pastor, delivered a brief address. In the course of his remarks he said:

"We have gathered here to-day to take leave of all that is mortal of this man and to place in the earth his body. To-day the whole Christian world mourns his departure. Throughout Christendom all the nations of the earth are in mourning. The world is feeling lonely, and there is a great vacancy. As viewed from a human standpoint, it is difficult to see how his place can be supplied, when we think of what he was. When we think of what we have lost, we realize that a man of world-wide faith, of gigantic intellect and high and noble precepts has been removed from this earth. By voice and pen, he did more than any other man since the beginning of the world for the uplifting of mankind. Twenty million copies of his sermons were circulated and read every week, and all of these were for the uplifting of human character. So, well may we mourn his departure. He has gone home to his rest, to his reward, and when we die we shall meet him again. He has gone to that place where Christ went after he had prepared the souls of men. It is to that place he has taken his flight. His immortal personality shall survive, and men shall see him face to face in the future.

"He has gone, but he has gone home. The words spoken by him whose trumpet is now silenced and penned by him whose hand is now palsied, will live on. Everywhere are his converts. His field was the world. More than any man of his generation, more than any man of his lifetime, the thoughts of his great brain reached the multitudes. We miss him, but they greet him in that mansion and heavenly home prepared for God's children. We shall see him again face to face. If he were here now, his wish would be not that we shed our tears, but that we should sing of the triumph to come. This is our hope, this is our expectation. This also is the hope of her who is widowed, and of them who are orphaned.

"Brooklyn, indeed, has cause to mourn his departure. Brooklyn will always cherish with pride the influence he exerted for the Christian good."

At the conclusion of his address, Dr. Suydam read the Episcopal burial service, the violet-covered casket being lowered into the grave as he slowly and solemnly pronounced the words "earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust." With bowed and uncovered heads the spectators listened reverently. Many of them waited until the last sod was replaced, and then, as they turned sadly away, expressions of sorrow could be heard on every hand.

ROCK-FIRM GOD-TRUST " PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 11
ACTS 12: 1-17

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT: "THE ANGEL OF THE LORD ENCAMPETH ROUND ABOUT THEM THAT FEAR HIM AND DELIVERETH THEM. PSA. 34: 7"

OUR lesson is the scene of a battle royal. "Principalities and powers" are arrayed against angels and Christians, and God himself. King Herod of this lesson, more infamous than famous, was the grandson of Herod the Great. His greatest distinction thus far had been his execution of James the apostle, brother of John, whom he beheaded with the sword in order that he might "please the Jews." He was more foolish than the man who built his house upon the sand, for popular favor, unjustly won, is as quicksand. To increase his popularity with the Jews, he arrested Peter, for another beheading.

LED BY THE ANGEL

It was an easy matter for Herod to make the arrest, for Peter was daily in the Temple court, and in the streets, boldly proclaiming the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Peter was imprisoned in the Castle Antonia, adjacent to the Temple, and his guard consisted of sixteen soldiers, four on guard at a time. Peter's ankles were chained to the arms of two of the soldiers, and two others stood guard, one by the inner door of the prison, and the other at the outer gate. A relief corps was organized, with headquarters in the home of Mary, the mother of John Mark. Their activity assumed the form of unceasing prayer day and night. Their eyes were holden, or they would have seen, as did Elisha:

Chariots of fire by fiery horses drawn,
The squadrons of the sky around the seer
Encamping. —BICKERSTETH:
Yesterday, To-day and Forever.

These re-enforcements are always within calling distance of the Church. God never wastes his forces, and so did not send legions of angels in the present case, where one angel could accomplish his purpose. In response to the prayers of the relief corps, one of heaven's warriors was sent to deliver Peter. The angel descended into the prison. The way had been prepared before him by the deep sleep which God had caused to come upon the four soldiers on guard. Peter slept too. Perhaps that was why his guard had allowed themselves to sleep also. No hand of God or angel was raised to strike the sleeping foes, but they were allowed to sleep while the angel gently roused Peter and led him out of the prison; his chains fell noiselessly away, and the bolts as noiselessly drawn back by an unseen hand. So quickly was it all done, that Peter was scarcely awake when he found himself free and outside of the prison. Only a little way, past one street, did the angel stay with him as his guard. When left alone, Peter quickly made his way to the house of Mary, where he supposed his friends would be met together to pray for him. He found the relief corps still on duty, for the Lord had planned it that he for whom they were praying should be the one to bring them the good news of what had been wrought through their prayers.

Did they receive Peter with open arms? No, they declared the girl, who had responded to Peter's knock at the door, "mad," insane, when she told them that Peter had come. She had seen Peter through the door-window, and had been so surprised, that she ran in to tell the news before unbolting the door. When they saw that the girl was in her right mind, they thought Peter must be dead, and that the girl had seen his ghost, "his angel." Meanwhile, the knocking continued, and when they themselves went to the door, they were "astonished" to see that it was really Peter. They had not realized the strength of the army of heaven, with which they had allied themselves. But the fruit of victory was sweet, and they brought Peter into the house and heard him tell briefly the story of his deliverance. Peter only tarried further to tell them to go and tell the good news to other friends who were praying in other places.

The soldiers in the prison awoke to find their prisoner gone, and when word was brought to the king that his prisoner had escaped, he ordered the soldiers to be put to death for neglecting their duty. To sleep while on guard was sure death to a Roman soldier. But what a foolish king he was not to know he had been conquered through the prayers of Christians and the help of God!

Illustration and Application

Because he saw it pleased the Jews. There is a curious variety of ways in which people are "pleased," but surely no way is more amazing than the one here recorded, where the Jewish Church was pleased to have a bad king behead a good apostle. They were so "pleased" to have James murdered, that Herod took steps to add to his political popularity by killing Peter also. The "odium theologicum" often grows to the hatred that Christ declared to be murder, and which, in the past, has often proved itself such in deed. If we can not agree with a brother man on anything else, let us agree to differ, and to respect the right to differ. It was said of "Bloody Mary," "Unable to convince by reason, she argued by blood." He who uses blood, or even abuse, in place of argument, confesses his lack of brains. It is not only our right but our duty to think for ourselves on the great problems of religion. We shall not go far wrong if, like Peter, we are in the school of Christ, and accept the conclusions of his perfect reason on whatever he speaks, using our imperfect reason only on the matters which he has left open.

Then were the days of unleavened bread. Peter's execution was delayed till after Lent, as a public pleasure more fitting to the Easter holidays. Men who had no compunction about having an innocent man murdered by an infamous king, were very scrupulous about their "unleavened bread." They were less afraid of blood than of yeast, that would raise a muss in their ecclesiasticism. Church history is full of such cases, where men who would strain out a gnat in theology would swallow a camel in immoralities. Even to-day, morals are by some church people less considered than emotion, and doctrine and ritual is more thought of than right by many more.

The same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains. Here is a miracle indeed: The once timid Peter sleeping, with a chain on each hand, a soldier at each side, three prison gates between him and liberty; his death sentence signed and sealed by Herod, and in the hands of officers with orders that he shall be brought forth and beheaded on the morrow. Simon Peter sleeping in such circumstances, when his friends cannot sleep for anxiety, but in upon his sleep of innocence and trust. Then awed, and doubtless conscience-stricken, "bordering on distraction," he rushed out to tell what he had seen.

Yet another wonderful story of the sleep of rock-firm God trust amid peril, is the one that gives us the children's prayer: "Now I lay me down to sleep." King David had been suddenly compelled to flee from his palace by the unexpected rebellion led by his own son Absalom, whom he "loved not wisely, but too well." That night, with a few faithful friends he encamped by the Jordan at Mahanaim. A fugitive king, a father in peril of defeat and death from his own son on the morrow, surely this night of all others he cannot sleep! But he took his harp that very night and sang his lay me down to sleep as trustfully as a child in his mother's arms: "I will lay me down in peace and sleep, for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety" (Ps. 4: 8). You say, Perhaps he thought he would, but couldn't. Nay, but he did, for turn to his morning prayer: "I laid me down and slept. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about" (Ps. 3).

But Peter's trustful sleep was more wonderful than that of these two heroes, for he had been a great coward, so afraid of his life, that he ran away in Gethsemane, after one wild blow with his sword, and when he had recovered courage enough to follow Christ to his trial, surrendered to so mean a weapon as a servant's sneering finger. And at an earlier time, when he essayed to walk the waves, his courage vanished at the first dash of the waves on his feet, and he cried, "I perish." Such a character would naturally spend the night before execution struggling with his chain, pleading with his keepers, offering to recant everything rather than be hurt.

In those earlier days, when Christ called Simon by the other name, Peter meaning a rock, his name was an ideal to which he was to grow. If he was then a rock in any sense, he was like the rocks that boys loose on the hillside to see them go tumbling to the valley below. Now he had become like the rocky cliff on which the waves of ocean beat in vain, or like Mount Zion, that cannot be moved but abideth forever. Like some tall cliff that rears its awful form above the vale, and midway leaves the storm, though round its breast the raging clouds are spread, Eternal sunshine settles on his head.

Here it is pertinent to quote Emerson: "Repose and cheerfulness are the badge of the gentleman—repose in energy. The Greek battle pieces are calm; the heroes, in whatever violent action engaged, retain a serene aspect."

To appreciate this encouraging transformation in Peter, his previous life may well be grouped in successive scenes:

Act I. Peter's pride and penitence. Scene 1, boasting at the last supper (Mark 14: 29, 31). Scene 2, fleeing and denying (Mark 14: 47-71). Scene 3, weeping in penitence (Mark 14: 72).

Act II. Commissioned, but also doubly reproved, at the sea of Galilee (John 21: 15). We make the selections mostly from Mark, because that is really Peter's own Gospel, Mark having been his secretary. It is in his own Gospel his faults are most plainly recorded.

Act III. Peter's Jewish prejudices banished at Joppa (Acts 10: 11).

Act IV. Peter sleeping in rock-firm God trust (Acts 12).

What a growth Peter made in grace and grit from the time he bragged to Christ at the last supper, "Though all should deny and forsake thee, yet will not I," a boast he soon belied; to the time when in greater peril, he slept in chains, with his executioners for bed-fellows! Well may we pray in the presence of "such a faith as this":

Calm me, my God, and keep me calm
While these hot breezes blow;
Be like the night dew's cooling balm
Upon earth's fevered brow.

Calm me, my God, and keep me calm,
Soft resting on thy breast;
Soothe me with holy hymn and psalm,
And bid my spirit rest.

—Horatius Bonar.

"HE WIST NOT THAT IT WAS TRUE WHICH WAS DONE BY THE ANGEL."

are gathered in watch-night groups in various homes to entreat God for him! Simon Peter, who could not stand even a servant's sneering finger a few weeks before, sleeping with the sword at his throat!

And it was not the light and troubled sleep of those worn out with anxieties. He slept so soundly that when an angel delivered flooded his prison with light as of sunrise, he did not awake, but only when the angel had struck him an arousing blow. Imagine a man condemned to die in a few hours, lying down for sweet sleep beside his own open grave! Not soldiers only, but Death was Peter's bedfellow. Such sleep is the triumph of trust, as well as the proof of innocence.

This story of Peter should always be grouped with the like case of Argyle. In the times of persecution in Scotland, the then Duke of Argyle had refused to renounce the "covenant," in which "Christ's crown" was acknowledged as the only one to which men should bow in religious matters. He would not accept King James as the head of the Church. For this loyalty to Christ he was accused of "high treason," and sentenced to die, and the ecclesiastics and the crowd had already gathered to enjoy the execution. Then the amazing word was brought that Argyle was sleeping. "What!" exclaimed a stern Popish officer of state, "Argyle, within an hour of eternity, yet sleeping as pleasantly as a child!" He would not believe it till he was led into the prison. The door of Argyle's apartment was opened gently, and the officer looked out all the occasions when God's angel army, singly or in battalions, took part in Bible times in the battles of earth. The whole teaching of the Bible as to angel ministries and guardian angels might well be taken up as a study by way of following up this lesson. We can refer now only to the angels that came in direct answer to prayer. Elisha, surrounded by an army of foes that expected to capture and kill him, felt no fear, but for the sake of his trembling servant he prayed, "Lord, open the young man's eyes that he may see." And presently he saw an army of angels, in warlike array about the prophet, his master. Daniel was praying and confessing, and had not yet reached his amen, when an angel came in answer, and touched him, saying, "C Daniel, greatly beloved." So this angel that delivered Peter came in answer to the prayers of the Church. What a touch of nature it is, when we are told that when the living answer to their prayers knocked at the prayer-meeting door they would not believe it was Peter, but thought it must be his ghost. Here we see prayer as a golden key that unlock prison doors, aye, unlocks heaven, to bring angel deliverer to our sides. How significant it is that the only name that has come down to us from that prayer meeting in the house of Mary is the name of the servant girl, Rhoda, who believed when others doubted that their prayers were really answered. How many such prayers are still offered, answers to which would be a genuine surprise to the offerer!

Across the Desert of Israel's Wanderings

A Series of Articles Descriptive of his Experiences While Attempting to Follow in the Footsteps of Moses and the Israelites

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR "THE CHRISTIAN HERALD" BY PROF. GEORGE L. ROBINSON, PH.D., OF MCCORMICK UNIVERSITY, CHICAGO

I. PREPARATIONS FOR THE JOURNEY

It had long been the writer's earnest wish to visit Mt. Sinai. During his three years' (1887-1890) residence in Beirut, Syria, such a trip had been impossible, and in consequence it was indefinitely postponed. But an opportunity was given this past spring; accordingly, on February 1, 1900, we sailed from New York to Naples and thence to Alexandria, reaching Cairo in the latter part of the same month. We began at once planning our trip through the Peninsula of Sinai. Our purpose was to follow as closely as possible the route of the Israelites in their Exodus journey under the leadership of Moses.

Engaging a Dragoman

In preparing for a Desert trip like the one contemplated, the prime necessity is naturally the securing of a faithful dragoman, or guide. When this has been accomplished, a very large proportion of the trouble and difficulty has been overcome. The minor difficulties can then be relegated to him. Now, there were numerous guides to be had in the city of Cairo for all ordinary routes of travel, such as the trip up the Nile, to the Oasis of the Fayum, through Palestine and Syria, and even to go directly along the seacoast to Mt. Sinai and return; but, to travel across the desert, and especially north from Mt. Sinai, through the heart of the desert of the wanderings, guides were not so numerous. We could find but two among all the score or more waiting about the largest hotels of the city, who would so much as talk of making such a trip, and one of these disappeared suddenly after the first interview. There was one man, however, who had had large experience, who had repeatedly escorted travelers to Mt. Sinai and return, and though he had never visited Kadesh-Barnea, or Petra, he was not unwilling to undertake to escort us to Kadesh. But he absolutely refused to take us to Petra. His name was Hanna Abu Saab. This name plenty of Armour's beef, two barrels for drinking water, a coop of fifty chickens (the most pathetic looking creatures later on when let loose each night in camp and they found their number gradually diminishing), crates of oranges, skins full of dried dates, nuts, mixed pickles, etc., etc., besides swords, and revolvers, and rusty-looking guns carried by the Arabs for our protection. Hanna was at once our guide,

We left Cairo at about noon on March 10th, 1900. It was the day of the Mahmal, when three or four thousand haji or Mohammedan pilgrims, started off to make the pilgrimage to Mecca. Our caravan had gone on three days before as far as Suez, where we were planning to overtake them. Many friends saw us off at the railroad station. It was a sad as well as a joyful parting, considering the dangers attending such a trip. Prayers were silently breathed in each other's behalf as the train pulled out of the station and we passed out of sight. In the Orient, they have a proverb which says: "There are three states of wretchedness—sickness, fasting and travel," because travel among them means discomfort, danger, and expense. The day was bright and cool.

We rode through the very heart of Goshen, along the bank of the Sweet Water Canal (originally dug by the Israelites), through Wady Tumilat to Ismailiyeh and on to Suez. From the train, of course, we were unable to get more than a general impression of the country. A careful study of Goshen I postponed till my return, when I made two special excursions to different parts of it. But, on that mediator, and hotel proprietor, and in no one of these capacities was he ever found inefficient.

What Our Travelers Carried

To travel comfortably, intelligently and safely an indefinite period on the Desert, certain precautions are necessary, as is self-evident. One's clothing must not be too heavy, for the sun at mid-day is usually hot at any season; neither must it be too light, for the nights are usually cool. A medicine chest is indispensable, though ours was scarcely opened during the entire trip. Field glasses, compasses, note-books, sun-umbrellas, colored spectacles, guide books (the Bible is day in March the Delta looked green and especially charming. The palms were, as usual, luxuriant, the ethal shade trees numerous, the soil black, the cotton, green and thrifty men and women were in the fields everywhere, some were ploughing, some cutting the heavy clover, others making mud bricks, to be dried by the sun, while still others were irrigating the fields, "watering them with the foot" (cf. Deut. 11: 10). Everywhere the fertility of Goshen was in striking contrast with the sands of the desert which bound it.

Goshen proper lies in the triangle between Bubastis, Belbes and Abu-Hammad, having at present approximately 12,000 inhabitants. Its ancient capital has been identified with the modern Saft-el-Henneh, discovered in 1885 by Ed. Naville, and published by the Egyptian Exploration Fund in 1887. That portion of the Sweet Water Canal which extends from Bubastis to Abu-Hammad is

A GENERAL VIEW OF GOSHEN

MAKING MUD BRICK IN GOSHEN

A GRAIN PIT AT ANCIENT PITHOM

DR. ROBINSON AND PARTY SETTING OUT FROM SUEZ

"BAHR EL MUSA" (RIVER OF MOSES)

we thought at first, seemed unpropitious, meaning "John, the Father of Difficulty." However, we engaged him.

After five days of tedious and wearisome (Oriental) bargaining, the contract was eventually written out and signed in the presence of the American Consul in Cairo, being sealed with his official seal. Its essential stipulations were to this effect, "that Dragoman 'John, the Father of Difficulty,' binds himself to conduct the travelers, Lee, Anthony and Robinson, following the track of Moses from Goshen by way of the Red Sea, Marah, Elim, Rephidim, Mt. Sinai, Kadesh-Barnea, etc., to the Promised Land; and, that all provisions for the voyage, such as steady-riding camels, good tents, food in ample sufficiency, water that would be drinkable, all black-mail, and so forth, should be provided by the Dragoman without stint, the travelers, on the other hand, to pay altogether £7 per day (his original price for each), for as many days or weeks or years as might be required in reaching our destination; in addition to which £2 extra should be allowed for a special guide to Kadesh, £140 of the prospective sum total to be paid in advance." The contract being signed, Hanna was given his advance money, and while he was providing for the expedition, which required two weeks, we visited Upper Egypt.

Our Dragoman's Equipment

No prouder man walked the streets of Cairo than Hanna, during those two weeks of active preparation. The Sheikh of the Arabs of Sinai was summoned, fifteen camels were hired, a dozen servants secured, among whom was a Nubian cook and a Syrian waiter; two large new tents, richly decorated with Arabic mottoes on the inside, were purchased; bright American flags fastened to their poles to float above us when in camp; other tents also, of smaller dimensions, provided for cooking and mid-day luncheon; Turkish rugs to cover the ground, iron bedsteads, tables and washstands, upright and comfortable chairs, huge boxes of provisions, the best, good cameras—all these we had in abundance. Fire-arms and revolvers, however, we left behind, lest, in a moment of rash haste, we might shoot some one and be obliged to pay the penalty of blood-revenge, which is still the law among the Arabs, as aforetime among the Hebrews (cf. Deut. 19: 21): "Eye for eye," "tooth for tooth," "life for life." The gold which we intended to carry with us we had sewed between strips of flannel, and secreted between the linings of our trousers, vests and coats.

THE SEVEN YEARS' FAMINE INSCRIPTION
On rocks at Sekel, Upper Egypt

called by the Arabs Bahr-el-Musa, or "River of Moses," which associates this portion of the Delta in particular with the Lawgiver of Israel. Passing by Tel-el-Kebir, noted as the scene of Arabi's defeat by the British troops in 1882, we stopped at a station called Tel-el-Maskhuta, which has been identified by Naville with Pithom, one of the two treasure cities built by the Israelites in the days of the oppression (cf. Exod. 1: 11). As is evidenced from the accompanying photograph, the ruins are in heaps. Scores of ancient grain-pits are still to be found there, rectangular in shape, the chambers having been built of mud-brick, without doors, the corn being probably poured in from above, and thought by most authorities since Naville to be the actual "storehouses" of the Bible. The city is favorably situated for a magazine on an elevated site in the dry sand, just south of the Sweet Water Canal and about fifteen miles west of Ismailiyeh and Lake Timsah.

Turning southeast at Ismailiyeh, we skirted the western coasts of Timsah and the Bitter Lakes, and were immensely delighted with the evening scenery of water, sand and mountain, for on our right hand rose in succession Jebels, Gen-effe and 'Ataka.

Where Israel Crossed the Red Sea

The atmosphere was cool and balmy when we arrived at Suez. The train was on time, and Hanna was at the station ready to escort us to our hotel. He assured us that the caravan had arrived, and that all would be in readiness to begin our desert trip about noon the next day. We partook of a good dinner, wrote some farewell messages to our friends, read again the history of Joseph in Genesis, and passed a peaceful night, our last in ceiled houses for thirty-three days, until we reached Jerusalem. The next morning was spent in Suez, sightseeing and getting our hair clipped. It is still a disputed question as to where Israel actually crossed the Yam-Suf, or Reedy Sea. In Exod. 14: 2, we are told that the Lord spake

CONTINUED
ON PAGE 387

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year.
Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends.
Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

The Final Tributes

AMID the many eulogiums of Dr. Talmage, from pulpit and press, all testifying in varied ways to his greatness of soul and his personal worth, there is one notable point upon which agreement is universal. It is that which was so aptly emphasized by the leading newspaper in Europe, the London Times, when it summed up the whole of his public ministry in a single pregnant sentence: "The world was his congregation!" Even in these days of swift electric communication and cheap printing, it might well be regarded as a marvelous and incredible thing for a man to address weekly, year after year, the intelligences of over twenty millions of human beings. An audience of one thousand is a good-sized congregation; but Dr. Talmage every week spoke with potential eloquence to no less than twenty thousand such audiences!

What was the secret of this astounding popularity? Why did the multitudes, though of different races and nationalities, and living far apart in the world, love his utterances and read them with such deep and sincere satisfaction? How was it that he succeeded, when others had failed, in arresting the attention and awakening and holding the interest of this great army of readers?

He preached the plain, old-fashioned Gospel—that is the secret; the old, sweet story of Christ's love and Calvary's sacrifice, that has ever been the energizing factor in all Christian effort throughout the world, from the days of Paul till now. Putting all other issues aside, he let the living Gospel stream flow like a river through every sermon he ever preached. Never a discourse without the lifting up of the Cross, and the proclamation of pardon and grace abounding for the repentant sinner. Toward this end, his wonderful eloquence, his rich vocabulary, his endless fund of illustration and anecdote, his matchless gift of influencing the emotions, were all directed with a zeal that has rarely been paralleled. He did nothing by halves; he never temporized with sin. It was no more possible to misunderstand his tremendous arraignment of human wickedness, than it was to doubt the genuineness of the appeal to repentance and the offer of forgiveness. This, and this alone was "the Master's business," as he interpreted it, and in the course of a long and extraordinarily active career, he found time for nothing else. The Gospel was the hub around which all his activities, mental, moral, spiritual and physical, revolved. It was the main-spring of his life. It vitalized every sermon and every utterance. What wonder, then, that those who heard or read, found in his sermons that simple, yet magnetic spiritual power, which was to them the most helpful? There is, within the range of human experience, no theme which can afford such consolation in sorrow, such hope in despondency, such strength in weakness, such light in darkness, as the Cross of Christ. And it was the whole of Dr. Talmage's theology.

They have taken the last long look at his dead face; they have spoken over him the final eulogies; and they have laid him away among the beautiful flowers in the spring silence of Greenwood. Their glowing tributes have been published to the world; but the finest tributes of all are those that are unwritten—that rise in voiceless gratitude from the thousands of hearts that have been won to Christ through his consecrated efforts.

"And they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever."

Christianity Triumphant

FAIL, or be discouraged? Surely not any follower of Christ, who will only lift up his eyes upon the Gospel battlefields and see how far advanced is the standard of the cross to-day; what victories have been won in the short time, but little more than a century, since the command, "Go into all the world," took hold upon the heart of the long-slumbering Church.

In the year 1760, in a room in Geneva, Switzerland, Voltaire boastfully predicted that "before the beginning of the eighteenth century Christianity will have disappeared from the earth." William Carey was not born until one year later, yet the missionary spirit which was rekindled by his holy zeal has filled the century with the glorious records of his triumphs. Within the last eighty-five years, two hundred million copies, in whole or in part, of the Word of God have been scattered abroad, a number thirty times as great as existed in the world in all the thirty-three centuries since the Law was given on Sinai. The very room in which Voltaire uttered his vain prophecy is now a Bible depository, while the Gospel of Christ, gathering to itself increasing power as it moves, strong in the irresistible might of God, goes on conquering and to conquer until the whole earth shall rejoice in his salvation.

At this moment, over China, India, Japan, Persia, Hindustan, Turkey, Bulgaria, Africa, Madagascar, Greenland and the islands of the Pacific, there are probably fifty thousand Christian laborers toiling diligently to represent to sorrowful and guilty men the glory, the beauty and the healing of Christ's love. In these lands, schools, colleges and theological seminaries have been established, in which Christian instruction is given to more than a million youths of both sexes. The largest church in the world is said to be on the island of Hawaii, scarcely fifty years removed from the most debased savagism; and during this century, in more than three hundred islands of Eastern and Southern Polynesia, the Gospel has swept heathenism entirely away.

So much for the "failure of Christianity."

Army Investigation

THE President can confidently rely on having the hearty support of all Christian people in the attitude he has taken on the subject of the army abuses in the Philippines. While recognizing the provocation given by "foes who habitually resort to treachery, murder and torture against our men, nothing," he says, "can justify, or will be held to justify, the use of torture, or inhuman conduct of any kind on the part of the American Army." A searching inquiry into the charges of cruelty which have been made, has been ordered, and there are signs in the President's order that the inquiry will be resolutely conducted. This is as it should be. It is easy to understand how sorely men are tempted when exasperated by treacherous and cowardly attacks, to retaliate in the same way. But the honor of the country is at stake, and it must not be said of our officers, that, when savagely treated, they become savages. Some of the reports of retaliation are too horrible to be believed. It does not seem possible that any of our own countrymen could have acted as alleged; but enough has been admitted to arouse suspicion, and even to bring a blush of shame to our faces. Doubtless, there are many who will tell the President that war is necessarily inhuman, and that he must not be too severe in punishing hard measures. It is right, therefore, that he should know that the Christian conscience of the nation supports him in vindicating the American name and bringing every wrong-doer to justice. It is incumbent on our officers in that distant land to set an example of forbearance and chivalry; and the natives should learn by the swift and rigorous punishment meted out to those officers who have disgraced their country, that our civilization, if not our religion, prevents our practising inhuman cruelties.

Women in Conventions

WHEN we compare the quiet little mothers' meetings which used to give women their only opportunity for speech outside their homes, with the great conventions which form their arena to-day, we are impressed by the change in the situation. Formerly, women were timid and flustered if called upon to speak in meeting. Now they are assured and parliamentary. An entire absence of self-consciousness has succeeded their once hampering diffidence.

The straightforwardness of woman's public speaking is quite evident. And they generally have in view some purpose of reform or improvement, something worth doing, something that women understand how to do. Withal they have not lost any feminine charm, nor have they taken on any peculiarly masculine assertiveness in this new departure. Certainly this is a happy age for woman. She has solved some problems to her own advantage. For instance, she has disposed forever of the theory that because a woman's chief end is to take care of her home, she must never go beyond its doors. The woman who is narrowed to a routine of domestic duties in which there are no breaks, does not take care of her home so successfully as her friend who has some outside interests. The outside engagements freshen her, keep her youthful, and give her a wider outlook. She is more intelligent in the carrying on of her housekeeping than she would be if she never discussed methods with other housewives.

All things considered, the woman who takes time to go about in the world to a reasonable extent, and takes part in the world's work as it comes within her power to do so, is a more entertaining companion, and a bigger personage than she who is contented to stay always within the four walls of her house.

The Gate Not Wide Enough for One

AN Eastern legend said the gate of heaven was so narrow, that one man walking alone could not pass through; two men walking side by side, one of whom had helped the other, found easy entrance; and when ten men came, who had all been serving one another in love, they found the gate so wide that they saw no post on either side.

Some men will come up to the gates of the other world, and when asked what they have done, the reply will be, "We worked and bought a house and lot; we put in furniture and books and pictures; we had good standing in society, and membership in church, and so we made our way through life, never injuring any one." Then the question will come, "Where are the helpless souls you saw by the way? Where are the sinful ones you might have won for Christ? Where are the struggling boys who might have been assisted by you in starting in business and getting on in the world? Where are the confused, beclouded souls to whom your clearer head might have brought light and faith? How many needy ones might have shared in your advantages, and been helped to make the journey, and yet you appear alone!"

A Timely Word of Caution

WITHIN the next few weeks, there will be issued from the press a complete and authentic life of our late beloved and revered editor-in-chief, Dr. Talmage. Certain publishing concerns, with doubtful enterprise, have already issued prospectuses announcing their intention of inflicting upon a helpless public, so-called "Lives" of Dr. Talmage, without the faintest shadow of authorization or any title to authenticity. It looks as though the same piratical tactics which flooded the country with cheap, spurious, and utterly valueless lives of Spurgeon and Moody were again to be adopted in the present instance.

We would give a timely word of caution to the readers of this journal and their friends, not to be misled in this matter. The Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, who writes the introduction to the life of his father (which is now in preparation by Dr. Talmage's editorial associates), explains the situation in a few very plain words, which cannot be misunderstood. He writes:

Hardly were my father's lips closed in death when the daily newspapers had announcements from at least six different publishing houses that a life of T. De Witt Talmage was about to be published. Agents were wanted to sell the same. Some of Dr. Talmage's nearest friends came together and decided to send forth a book as a message of love, which would state the true facts in reference to his life: a book which the readers of Dr. Talmage's sermons could understand and appreciate.

Asked to write an introduction to this biographical edition, I comply gladly. The editors of this book have known my father intimately, and two of them have been identified with him for many years, as editorial associates on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. They not only worked with him, but they loved my father. Nothing has gone into this book except the material they personally have furnished or passed upon. There has been a task of love.

We have no sympathy with the efforts to make merchandise of Dr. Talmage's memory, which is clearly the object of the publishers in question. We have, moreover, an intense desire that no unauthentic or spurious "Life of Dr. Talmage" should find its way into the hands of those who, having for many years read Dr. Talmage's sermons, loved and respected him for his sterling Christian worth. It would grieve the hearts of all who were near to him and who knew him most intimately, should such a thing occur. Therefore, we ask them to wait for the authentic life, to be issued shortly, which will be a fit presentation of the grand career of the world's greatest preacher.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Belgium's Crisis

RIOOTS, involving serious loss of life have been the outcome of the political agitation in Brussels and other towns of Belgium. They threaten now to be complicated by an industrial strike, which will extend to all grades. The question at issue is the franchise, which is nominally manhood suffrage, but is so regulated as to favor the wealthy and educated classes. Previous to 1893, the men who had the right to vote for members of the Legislature numbered only 135,000, in a male population of 1,472,000. But in that year, a general strike of all workmen so paralyzed the trade of the country, that a concession was made, conferring the right to vote on every man of twenty-five years of age and upwards. In order, however, to prevent the workmen obtaining control of the government, a provision for plural voting was incorporated in the law. This gave the man possessed of property of a certain amount, the right to cast an additional vote, sion to the demands of the people. But as has so often happened in history, they do not appear to realize their danger.

Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish. (Ps. 49: 20.)

Unconscious Heirs

Three young men appeared in the New York Supreme Court last week to present their claim for a share of a fortune of two million dollars. They say that twenty-five years ago, when they were little children, they lost their mother. Their father, being unable to take care of them, placed them in the Juvenile Asylum. In due time they were apprenticed in the West, and two of them are now working in Iowa, and the third on a railroad in Washington. They have lost all trace of their father for some years, and they believe he is dead. Their mother's sister was the only member of the family who continued to communicate with them. They remembered her kindness to them when they were little children, and she at it was thin, to ascertain the nature of the soil beneath. In the course of their excavations, they found under the lava, a number of half petrified human skeletons. They were in various postures, as though death had come suddenly upon the people, striking them down as they were engaged in the daily routine of life. Next, the searchers came upon rude spoons and bowls. They were apparently of stone, but they bore no resemblance to the Indian relics which the traveler sees often in that region. Implements, which perhaps were used as hammers and chisels, were found. They, too, were totally unlike the known implements of the Indians. Some of the stone articles were of such design that they could not be classified at all. The surveyors became convinced that they had chanced upon relics of a race that antedated the known Indians so far as to have little in common with them. It was the conviction of the party that the ruins of a settlement or city, possibly engulfed with its inhabitants by an eruption of a volcano, now long extinct, lie be-beetle of rolling its eggs in a pellet of dirt, which it buries in the warm sand. The sun's rays hatch out the egg and the creature seems then to emerge alive out of the sand. Therefore the Egyptians may have believed that the beetle had the power of coming to life again. The sign of the sun is generally carved on the scarab in connection with the king's name and titles, which confirms the author's theory. The guess is ingenious and is probably true, but it shows how far the Egyptians were from the truth in hoping that the sun would bring the dead to life again. That truth had to come by revelation.

Our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel (II. Timothy 1: 10).

BRIEF NOTES

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, by means of his recent conferences in St. Petersburg, has given a permanent impulse to the religious life of the city. Between the two series he preached at Dorpat, a great University centre, where he was accompanied by Baron Nicolai as interpreter.

MARIE, QUEEN OF BELGIUM

THE ROYAL PALACE AT BRUSSELS

LEOPOLD II., KING OF BELGIUM

which resulted in one man being counted is two at the polls. Another provision gave the graduates of certain universities the right to cast two supplementary votes, so that each college man counted is three voters. By this means the property-holding and educated classes were enabled to maintain their preponderance in the electorate. Members were elected in districts in which a majority of the voters were opposed to them; but they held their seats because they had received a majority of votes. This result has become so exasperating to the workmen, that the demand is now urged that in no case shall any one man have more than one vote. The demand is resolutely opposed by the Government leaders, and a bill granting the concession was rejected by the House on April 18, by a vote of 36 to 64. In the meantime, the temper of the people is growing more violent. Workmen to the number of 300,000 have struck work, and as there are no funds in hand to maintain them, many of them are suffering privations which are maddening. The Belgian army of 35,000 men, aided by the police, are striving to maintain order; but collisions in the streets are frequent, and many lives, both of soldiers and of strikers, have been sacrificed. It is evident that a revolution is impending, if the King and his ministers obstinately refuse any concession to the demands of the people. But as has so often happened in history, they do not appear to realize their danger. Man that is in honor, and understandeth not, is like the beasts that perish. (Ps. 49: 20.)

one time proposed adopting them, but her letters became erratic, and at last ceased. After some years one of the young men casually heard that his aunt had become a very wealthy woman, but had afterwards lost her reason and was confined in an asylum for the insane. Her property is administered by the direction of the courts. The three young men ask that they be recognized as her heirs, and that a portion of the surplus of her income be assigned to them during her lifetime. They will, however, be obliged to prove their relationship before the court will consider their claim. They say that when they heard of their aunt's wealth, they lost no time in presenting their claim, and there seems no doubt of that fact. That is generally done, though men do not show such promptitude in seeking heavenly riches, which are offered to them freely and are infinitely more valuable.

I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty (II. Cor. 6: 18).

An American Pompeii

A press dispatch from Redding, Calif., announces the arrival there of a party of surveyors, who report that in their journey from Lassen Buttes, they made a startling discovery. In a valley near Noodles Pass, they spent some days examining the lava formation, and in digging at places where neath the lava, and can be reached with comparative ease from certain points where little lava remains. Doubtless further search will be made, though there is no record in history of any such people, or of such a catastrophe in that region. It is marvelous that a people should have existed and disappeared so completely as to leave no record, but, as we know from the ruined cities of South America, there have been such races in our hemisphere. But while peoples rise and flourish and pass away, there is no change in our God.

Thou hast destroyed cities; their memorial is perished with them; but the Lord shall endure forever. (Ps. 9: 6.)

The Ancient Scarab

A recently published work contains a catalogue of the Egyptian objects, which were carved in stone in the shape of beetles, and engraved with the names of kings. A large number of these of varying sizes have been found in the ancient tombs, and have been deposited in various museums. The author of the work referred to has catalogued them with the object of finding some clue to the use of the symbol. He has arrived at the conclusion that they were intended to denote immortality or resurrection. He believes that the idea arose from the habit of the Calcutta is at present the scene of a united evangelistic campaign. A staff of over a hundred speakers is preaching daily in the squares and streets. A large band of young men belonging to the churches and colleges has been very useful in house-to-house visitation.

Bramwell Booth is now the only son of Gen. Booth holding office in the Salvation Army. Herbert Booth, the youngest son, has resigned his position as commandant, but no unpleasantness or unfriendliness has accompanied the arrangement. Physical inability to stand the strain is stated as the sole reason for his decision.

The revival meetings in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, of Newark, N. J., conducted by Rev. Arthur J. Smith and Major Fred S. Marquis, have been concluded. The pastor, Rev. Davis W. Lusk, says that this has been one of the most successful series of meetings ever held in the church. Over one hundred persons have signed cards, which said, "I desire henceforth to lead a Christian life."

The Turkish authorities at Alexandretta complained that some seamen of the British squadron had distributed religious tracts ashore. An inquiry showed that the charge was true, some Christian sailors having given away tracts printed in Turkish, Arabic, and Greek. The Turkish officials regarded them as incentives to revolt, and the commodore issued strict orders against distribution.

The report of the government census of Canada just issued, gives the following religious statistics: The Roman Catholics claim 2,228,997 communicants; the Methodists, 916,862; the Presbyterians, 842,301; the Church of England, 680,346; the Baptists, 316,000, and the Congregationalists, 28,283. Thirty "denominations" have between them only 149 members. Some bodies have peculiar names, such as "the Restitutionists," "the St. Johnists," "the Transmigrationists," "Daniel's Band," and the "Church of the Firstborn."

GEN.-SEC. MYRON A. CLARK

Brazil's Young Christian Army

Remarkable
Y. M. C. A.
Progress

THE recognized responsibility of young men for young men has been the stimulus of the Foreign department of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, which has already accomplished so much in Sweden, Russia, in the Levant, and in South America. An Association established on last Independence day in Rio de Janeiro, had an interesting and growing life. Rio has 700,000 population, and has only six evangelical churches, with a membership of about a thousand. It is a city peculiarly liked by young men. They throng toward its bright, and often sinful, life. Here young men have even more influence than in older States, for in Brazil things are largely new and undeveloped. Young men are here managers in commercial enterprises, banking institutions, and importing houses, as well as often leaders in social, political and religious movements. There are many temples with few worshipers. Religion is discounted, and temptations run rife for the ruin of men. In Rio, the Young Men's Christian Association sheds a pure light in a region full of music-halls, low theatres, sporting agencies, dives, vile saloons and gambling dens.

Starting with seventy-one charter members (only thirty-five of them Christians), it has struggled on until now it has a membership of nearly three hundred. For five years it carried on its work in rented rooms, and then acquired, through friends, a building in the heart of the city worth $40,000. Last year they raised $6,500 toward clearing the debt on the property, and are anxious to pay it all off. The rooms are kept scrupulously clean, and they are open to strangers and travelers. The work is similar to that in other lands, including socials, receptions, prayer meetings, Bible classes, popular lectures, educational classes, outings, and athletics. Instruction is given in evening classes in arithmetic, bookkeeping, Portuguese grammar, English, French, and drawing. Sunday afternoon evangelical services are constantly kept up.

The general secretary, Myron A. Clark, is a native of Buffalo, N. Y. He was Y. M. C. A. general secretary at Faribault, Minn., at Lexington, Mo., and Kansas City, and was sent in 1891 by the International Committee to Brazil, for a work of enlargement. He has helped to organize branches in Taubato, Sorocaba, Campos, and Castro. He organized last year a flourishing Association of seventy-three members in Porto Alegre, and is now working for a national alliance with a dozen Associations. An active member, Alvaro Almeida, is spending three years in the training school at Springfield, Mass., to prepare himself for work for the salvation of young men in Brazil.

F. B. Schenck, treasurer of the International Committee, 3 West 29th street., New York City, will gladly answer any inquiries concerning the work of the Y. M. C. A. in Brazil.

A HOLIDAY OUTING OF THE BRAZILIAN Y. M. C. A. NEAR RIO DE JANEIRO

OUR COMPLETE COURSE IN SHORTHAND

ISAAC PITMAN'S 20th CENTURY REVISION
By Special Arrangement with Isaac
Pitman & Sons, 33 Union Square, N. Y.

LESSON IX.

81. The consonants l, r, and s are not hooked to indicate the addition of l or r. The signs l and r are, therefore, used as extra forms for fl, fr, and s as extra signs for thl, thr, which with the corresponding heavy consonants, have duplicated forms, thus, fl, vl, thl, thl,

fr, vr, thr, thr.

L Hook

82. A LARGE initial hook adds l to the curves l, l, l; thus, fly, coil, Ethel, official, camel, penal. The double consonant shl may be written either upward or downward; it is, however, generally written upward. The right curves l and l must only be used AFTER another consonant; they are most conveniently written after k, g, n, or a straight up-stroke, as cavalry, gruffly, inflamm, reflex; and l after b, l, as Bethel, lethal.

R Hook

83. A SMALL initial hook adds r to curves; thus, offer, every, author, either, usher, measure, calmer, dinner. The double consonant shr is written downward only.

84. Alternative forms for fr, vr, thr, are employed thus:
(a) When not joined to another stroke consonant, the LEFT curves l and l are used when the word begins with a vowel, as ever, affray, ether.

(b) The RIGHT curves l and l are used when a vowel does not precede the consonant, as fray, three.

(c) When joined to a stroke consonant which is written towards the right, the RIGHT curves should be used whenever possible, as in throb, proffer.

(a) When joined to a stroke consonant written towards the left, the LEFT curves should be used whenever possible, as in average, Jeffrey.

(c) But in preference to an awkward joining, either form can be used, as in Frank, frighten.

NG Hooked

85. In accordance with rule, the sign ng would represent the sound ng-r, as in singer. There are, however, so few words in which ng is followed by r, that this hooked outline is used to represent the frequently occurring sounds of ng-kr and ng-gr, as heard in banker, tinker; finger, linger. Words such as singer and wringer must, therefore, be written in full, thus,

Exercise 22

Exercise 23

1. ARRIVAL, rival, cavil, flap, muffle, fennel, kennel, shuffle.
2. Athol, flog, floor, flurry, ruffle, flinch, gravely, flask.
3. Fever, leather, Arthur, knuckle, freak friar, locker.
4. Canker, malingering, adverse, packer, loafer, docker.
5. Fisher, rider, owner, taper, bugler, treacle, rumor.
6. Dover, river, giver, manner, tether, thrust, freely.

Exercise 24

for, from, Mr. or mere, more or remarked (1), near, nor (1), their, or there, very.

Exercise 25

1. My dear Ethel,—From tropical Africa there arises a call for more laborers to raise the black people from their very low scale of life. 2. As Lord Bythell and Mr. Thacker both remarked, this people has a rightful claim on all who care for the progress of the race, and the removal of brute rule. 3. Slavery, drink, the evils of rubber gathering, the rivalry of the leaders, and the horrible cannibal customs cause fearful sorrow, nor is it a mere form of speech to say man tribes must die out. 4. May we all try to take away the fearful yoke is the prayer of,

Yours sincerely, GRACE FLETCHER.

Circles and Loops Prefixed to Initial Hooks

86. The circle s is prefixed to straight consonants which are hooked for l, and to curves which are hooked for l or r, by writing the circle inside the hook; thus ply, supply, disciple, explode, settle, pedestal, sickle, physical, cipher, decipher, evil, peaceful, summit, dulcimer, sinner, prisoner.

87. In cases where the hook cannot be clearly shown (which are comparatively few), the separate consonant should be written, as in forcible, unsaddle.

88. The circles s and sw and the loop st are prefixed to the straight consonants which are hooked for r, by writing the circle or loop on the same side as the hook, thus turning the hook into a circle or loop, as pry, spry, prosper, sweeper, steeper, tray, stout, destroy, distress, cater, sweeter, stout, crew, screw, corkscrew.

89. When the circle and hook occur medially at an angle, both circle and hook must be shown; thus, past, abstruse, extra, gastric, mystery, lisp, reciter. The method of writing skr and sgr after the consonants t and d is shown in the following examples:

tacker, tasker, degree, disagree, digress, disgrace.

The student is recommended to purchase the Key to the Shorthand Instructor, which forms a Key to all the Exercises appear in these lessons, as well as to all the Review Questions. It is an indispensable companion for all students mastering the art without teacher. The price of the Key is 50c., and all orders should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office. Lesson No. X. will appear in the issue of May 14.

In the Budding Spring time

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

House-Cleaning

"It does seem a pity," said Mrs. Follansbee, "that house-cleaning always comes along in the spring, when it is so pleasant to be out of doors enjoying one's self. Nature manages her work very much better; she gets through her worst campaigns in February and March."

"You would never need an annual house-cleaning, lady," said Mrs. New Woman, "if you would do away with your tiresome carpets, and content yourself with hardwood floors, or else with painted or stained ones, and put down a rug or two. Rugs that may be taken up and shaken every few days, floors that may be mopped, or wiped, or polished at will, simplify the housekeeping problem very much. I do believe that but for carpets one need never clean house in the old-fashioned meaning of the term."

"But dust does accumulate, and bric-a-brac gathers it, and the lace curtains and draperies are its hiding places; and as for insect pests, they would get the better of us, if there were no cleaning done."

"Shades of my grandmothers! I never meant to imply that one could get along without a battle with dirt," exclaimed Mrs. New Woman. "But I do mean that one may use modern methods; one may keep so clean straight along that she does not need a cyclone once a year. I have never forgotten how my father hated house-cleaning times, and in consequence I manage so nicely now, that my husband does not suspect that the house is ever cleaned. He probably supposes that it cleans itself."

"Well," said Aunt Betsey, our peacemaker, observing that Mrs. Follansbee looked a little annoyed, "you are both right, according to your lights. We, who have always had carpeted floors, prefer them, and you who enjoy the later fashion, stand up for that. My view is that we may as well attack the fortress by easy stages, clean the cellar thoroughly one week, and the attic the next. Then, by degrees, we may go over closets and pantries, do the other rooms one at a time, and finish up finally with the woodshed, tiring nobody, and giving ourselves sufficient intervals in between, to wander forth into the fields and parks and get the good of the spring. I hope, too, that we'll not forget our gardening. Even if we can have only a very few flowers, they will help us to be happier and better."

"I happened on a chapter in a book I was reading," said Mrs. Emerson, "and I copied it for just such an occasion as this, when we dear gossips meet over a cup of afternoon tea. The name of the book? It is 'What a Woman of Forty-five Ought to Know,' and the woman who wrote it is a doctor, Mrs. Emma F. Angell Drake. One thing that gives me confidence in her is that she was, at one time, connected with Mr. Moody's school for girls at East Northfield. That is a regular certificate of her worth in my eyes. Here is my quotation from Dr. Drake."

"I knew a woman several years ago, who began married life on an uncleared farm in one of our western states. She did all sorts of work, both indoor and out, incidental to farm life. She bore and reared eight, and I am not sure, but ten children. Her husband was a close, hard-working man, seeing in nothing any value unless it could be turned into gold. He allowed no hours to go to waste, and worked from early morning until late at night, to add to his pecuniary wealth. Of course he was prosperous, as the world goes, and after some years had sufficient to live with comfort and to take life easier. But he did not do it, neither did he allow his family comfort or rest. His wife was different. While she was willing to work, and did so to the full extent of her strength, she had a ruling passion for flowers, and flowers she would have, and would cultivate them in the few minutes she would wring from a full day, until all about her blossomed like the rose.

Her husband always complained about the wasted time and wasted space, and always with the added words, 'I don't see what you can want of them; they are neither good for anything to eat or drink or wear.'

"Oh, but they are," the wife would answer, and go on cultivating them. In the end the children grew up lovers of beauty, and helped their mother, to whom the exercise and outdoor life brought health and strength, and while the husband died worn out in middle life, the wife lives still in a serene old age."

The Story Told by Our Hands

I am not a believer in palmistry, and no fortune-telling by the lines of the hand appeals to me; but I do think that one's hands have a story to tell. Said a lady the other day of a girl who had just gone out, "That young woman is fearfully lazy and incapable, I knew it by the limp and languid feeling of her hands." When one shakes hands, and gives you a warm, cordial clasp, with a heart-throb of feeling in it, you are aware that you have come into vital contact with a large, impressive and magnetic personality. A fishy, clammy, detached sort of hand-shake, shows a selfish nature not moved by

THE COUNTRY CARPENTER

OF all trades, the cleanest, most wholesome, and most delightful seems to me that of the carpenter. He is, in a sense, a creator, for out of the rough blocks, or the smooth boards, he hews homes for men and women, and makes tables, chairs, bedsteads, boxes, and all the various furniture that civilization demands. Our Saviour worked in Nazareth in the carpenter's shop, and no doubt the articles he wrought were perfect of their kind. The country carpenter may well think of Joseph, at whose feet once stood the little Jesus, who looked up in his face, as the child in the picture at the man to whom he brings his toy.

sympathy. Some hands are hard; they have toiled faithfully for the loved ones; they have not shirked any task. Such hands are far more honorable and, therefore, are more beautiful than the delicate hands which have saved their roseleaf softness and pink tinting at the expense of others, whom they have not helped.

For the Missionary Barrel

It was a question of packing a barrel for a home missionary. "I should not think it necessary to send that fine new suit of clothes to the missionary way out there, preaching as he does to those plain people," said a lady, hesitatingly. The pastor said, winningly, "Ah! Mrs. —, I look at it this way, 'What is not good enough for me, is not good enough for my brother, in his harder field than mine.'" When we are packing box or barrel let us put in our best, not our half-worn and shabby garments. The home missionary's wife will appreciate nice linen for her table, and such sheets, pillow-slips and towels as you who send, use in your own home. Slip in some surprises by all means if you can.

MY STRENGTH AND MY REDEEMER

MY strength and my Redeemer,
In the hour when faith is weak,
I listen through the darkness
To hear my Saviour speak.

He bids me lean upon him,
My Rock of sure defense:
He bids me trust in every time
His ceaseless Providence.

Wherever he may send me,
There gladly would I fare.
No place can be a desert,
If Christ is with me there.

—JEANIE CAMERON.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S EASY CHAIR

ONCE in awhile your Aunt Prudence likes to sit down and fold her hands. When she finds the twilight coming, in these days of the longer lingering sunset, she doesn't even take up knitting-needles, she just sits still and rests, until some child clambers into her lap and demands a story. But this time she is thinking over her letter-box, and here is one which she will let you see, too, as maybe you can help her querist better than she can.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:—I would like to know what you think on this point. I have a daughter, fifteen years old, who seems exceedingly independent for one of her age. She receives letters from people I do not know, and refuses to let me see them. It worries me very much. Am I right in intercepting such correspondence, or in opening it before Emilie has a chance to do so. Yours in distress,
M. R. F.

This letter comes from a conscientious mother, who longs to do her duty. I fear that in some way, perhaps through being too busy, she has failed to keep her child's confidence, so that the girl, little more than a child in years, is suspicious of and antagonized by her own mother. Surely the loving method will be better here than the harsh one. The mother has a right to know from where Emilie's letters come, and to forbid the writers to send them, if she feels that course wise; but she should do nothing clandestine. Even at fifteen, one should open her own letters. At least, so it seems to me. The mother may, I think, try to persuade the daughter, for her good, to cease writing and receiving letters which she deems indiscreet. She may, if it seems to her essential, openly take the letters away and destroy them in her daughter's presence, unread. But gentle measures are best. Make your own home so bright and happy that your child will not long for forbidden pleasures. Do not worry too much over her independence, which is probably only a passing phase in her character. Transition periods are trying for both girls and boys. What do other mothers think? Perhaps some reader can help M. R. F. better than I can.

—MOTHER. The lad who is rude to you will be rude to his wife when he is a husband bye and bye.

—WINNIE. A girl should know her own mind. To let a man propose to you, and then boast of your refusal, is a most unworthy proceeding.

—ANXIOUS. I am a member of the Methodist Church, and have a wife and nine children. After many years of happy, wedded life, my wife has developed a passion for theatre-going, which she defends, though it is contrary to the rules of our church, by arguments drawn from the preachers of the present day. I observe a corresponding decline in her spiritual life. What can I do?

The mother of nine children may have reached a point in her life where she rebels against monotony, and demands variety and recreation. I do not like the theatre, and I agree with you about its deadening effects on spirituality. Try to provide other pleasures for your wife, to compass some change of scene for her, to provide her with entertaining reading. Above all, live in a sweet, prayerful atmosphere, and surround her and your home with Christian tenderness. Cease to oppose her in words, and do not raise an issue, thus provoking antagonism.

RUBIFOAM

as a dentifrice is the children's delight. It makes young teeth healthy and keeps them so.

25c. at all Druggists.

For free sample vial, address
E. W. HOYT & CO., Lowell, Mass.

The AMERICAN BOY

Biggest, Brightest, Best Boys' Paper in the World

Hezekiah Butterworth says, It enters into their life

Trial: 3 months for 10c
Regular: $1.00 a year

Boys are enthusiastic over it. Clean, inspiring stories. Information, encouragement, advice. Games, Sports, Animals, Stamps, Printing, Photography, Debating, Science, Puzzles. How to make boats, traps, etc. How to make and save money. How to succeed. Meets universal approval. The only successful attempt ever made to lead a boy in right directions, and at the same time chain his interest. One hundred pictures each month. See it and be surprised at the feast of good things for that boy.

Address SPRAGUE PUBLISHING COMPANY
275 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Benjamin Franklin Said—

"Empty your purse into your head, and no man can take it from you."

A little money, and such times as you can spare, will give your brain a training that will increase your earning power, win promotion, qualify for better work. I. C. S. Textbooks make it easy for busy people to learn by mail.

Courses in Engineering, Mechanical Drawing, Architecture, German, French, etc. Write for circular, mentioning subject that interests you.

INTERNATIONAL
CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS,
Box 861, Scranton, Pa.

STANDARD TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS
(INCORPORATED)
119 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Manufacturers and dealers in new and second hand

Standard Typewriters

and
Typewriter Supplies

All makes sold and rented. Our connections and sources of supply are such that we can sell you better goods for less money than any other concern in the U. S. A.

STANDARD TYPEWRITER HEADQUARTERS
119 La Salle St., Chicago. To avoid delay address Dept. 7

Anniversary Music

"SONGS OF REJOICING"
Music dignified and singable—written by the best writers. FITHIAN, HOWARD, ESTWICK, etc.

"REJOICE EVERMORE"
An excellent collection of bright carols.

"ONWARD GO"
A beautiful service with a truly religious theme. WORD EDITOR of the above services.

Samples of all three services for 6 cents.

MacCALLA & CO. (Inc.); 255 Dock St., Philadelphia.

LYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS,
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Our Mail-Bag

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Present Issue

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 11

Do the marriages of Americans with foreign aristocrats and nobility tend to weaken our republican institutions, or otherwise?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 18

Is a lawyer justified in doing his utmost to secure the acquittal of a client of whose guilt he is cognizant?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 25

Does a parent do wisely to shield a son or daughter jealously from the ordinary stress and struggle of life?

To be Answered in the Issue of July 9

In what sense may prayer be regarded as the most potent agent at the Christian's command? Illustrate by some incident within your own knowledge or experience.

Question of the Week

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

We are by nature constituted with instincts for the preservation of life as well as for protection in other ways. The dread of death is one of these life-preserving instincts. So pronounced and so universal is it, that men feel its power everywhere, and in all mental and moral conditions, with the single exception of certain states that are more or less frenzied. It is no measure of a man's moral or religious status that he dreads death more or less than another man. It is a dread that often subsides as the dissolution begins, and indicates that dissolution, but nothing respecting the eternal destiny of the dying man. It is probable that the dread is a constitutional reflex of the nerves, also, which cannot be avoided unless by the nerves being in an abnormal condition. It is really through reflex nervous energy that most instincts carry themselves out.

C. P. ATKINSON.

Impractical Christianity is the cause of much of this fear. The true Bible Christian is prepared for all the vicissitudes, and trials, and sufferings of this life, and for death when it comes. If one cannot meet death as bravely as Stephen and Paul and John, it is because he has not caught their spirit and paid the price of the practical life they lived. To get into the spirit of Christ and of the New Testament and of the Spirit-filled saints since Pentecost, will enable any one to rise victorious over all fear of death. Such a Christian is not afraid of life or death or the judgment. He can say with Paul, "I am in a strait between two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ," or with him, a willingness to abide in the flesh. "For me to live, is Christ, to die, is gain." "Oh, death, where is thy sting, oh, grave, where is thy victory." This makes life a holy romance and robs death of all its terrors.

W. J. MOSIER.

Among the low and the high, the most highly educated and the illiterate, oftentimes is the same dread and terror of death. This is a natural fear, and as Bacon wonderfully well expresses it: "Men fear death as children fear to go in the dark." The child's fear of darkness, like the fear of death, is the great feeling of mystery, of some unknown thing about to envelope one and carry them far away. So, we fear death; we may have seen the choking breath and white face of a dying friend or relative, and ever think of the agony of death, while the sufferer's mind may be in perfect peace, in entire unconsciousness of the frail body, which houses it. A Christian feels and knows that he will be happy and at peace, in whatever way his home may come. And yet his thoughts are at times those of Shakespeare, who says: "The undiscovered country, from whose bourn no traveller returns, puzzles the will, and makes us rather bear those ills we have, than fly to others we know not of?"

RUBY L. BURNS.

The science that asserts the act of dissolution to be as painless as that of birth, is well called the conjectural science. I have looked into the faces of hundreds of new-born infants, and am prepared to say that I never have seen the slightest appearance of pain depicted. Now the other side of the question. Those of us who have stood many times by the deathbed of our loved ones, watching with breaking hearts for the look of unutterable anguish that usually precedes death, cannot delude ourselves into the belief that death is painless. Paul calls death our enemy. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. But the Christian knows that the strong enemy death cannot separate him from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

E. J. CUSACK.

The dread of death is partly natural. For all my conscious life I have dwelt within this body. Here I am at home. I dread to leave it, much as I should dread to leave any home within whose walls I had spent every conscious hour of life from infancy to mature manhood. I may know it is better outside, and yet dread to go. The dread is partly acquired. The large majority of the men and women of to-day, even of those brought up in Christian homes, were taught in early childhood, both by word and by action, that death was a thing to be dreaded. That has been the prevalent tone of the thought and teaching of past generations. The Christian world is coming gradually to a more rational and more Christian idea of death; it is one of the incidents of life; we live by dying; and especially that Christ has taken away the curse. But this confidence, this knowledge, will not entirely remove the dread which we got in the early years, any more than knowledge and reason will entirely overcome his dread of the dark who, in his nursery days, was taught that darkness was full of horrors too dreadful to name.

E. W. BUTLER.

It is not an established fact that the acts of dissolution and of birth are painless, but providing it is true, we will say that the dread of death comes from lack of experience and from ignorance of its painlessness. All of the attendant circumstances indicate the presence of pain at the hour of death. Long and lingering sickness, or sharp, quick attacks, are attended with much suffering, and it is positively known that in many cases the pain continues almost to the hour of death. So, if the very moment of death be painless, it is nevertheless preceded by such as makes anyone dread to pass the ordeal. Then the sight of the distorted and pain-racked countenances of those who have passed away argues almost irrefutably, that there has been much suffering and agony. And the knowledge of what comes afterward, the decay and falling into corruption of the once fair and animated form; the uncertainty and doubt as to what may be beyond the grave—these things work powerfully on the fears of frail and helpless humanity. It is true that the Christian's faith is a help to him, and this help is great in proportion to the nearness of his life to God. Many are, through this faith, enabled to conquer the universal fear of death and see in it no sting. But the unconverted man and the weak Christian have no antidote for the natural fears that arise through the contemplation of death.

L. T. RIGHTSELL.

The dread of death, though painless, is God-given. It prevents suicide. Without that fear countless men and women would thus cut the "Gordian knot" of difficulty. So God has made this fear of death natural. The uncertainty of the sleep and the dreams which troubled Macbeth make thousands halt before taking the irrevocable "leap in the dark." The consciousness of sins committed, of wrongs done to others, of slights of God

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Two MARVELOUS IMPROVEMENTS make the EDISON

PHONOGRAPH

Perfect.

Thomas A. Edison

The New Moulded Record "Hard Wax," and the New Reproducers

duplicate the human voice in volume and clearness. Absolutely free from scratching—perfectly smooth and natural. A new result from your old phonograph.

New Reproducers on all new phonographs. Nine styles from $10.00 to $100.00. The new Records, 50 cts., $5 per dozen. Full particulars at all dealers.

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH CO.
New York Office, 135 Fifth Avenue
Chicago Office, 144 Wabash Avenue
Foreign Dept.,
15 Cedar Street,
New York

HOT SPRINGS OF ARKANSAS.

The Hot Springs of Arkansas, owned and endorsed by the United States Government as beneficial for a score or more of human ills, including rheumatism, catarrh, neuralgia and nervous troubles. Splendid winter climate; two hundred hotels of all grades. These springs are best reached by the

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES, and their connections.

Ask nearest ticket agent for reduced rates and other information.

For a copy of Four Track Series No. 3, "America's Summer Resorts," send a 2-cent stamp to George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York; or send 5 cents for a sample copy of the "Four Track News," a beautifully illustrated monthly magazine of travel and education.

DEPOSITS THAT YIELD FIVE PER CENT

We act as the Savings Banks do for depositors. We accept sums of $50 and upward for as short or long a term as desired. We pay 5 per cent. per annum from day of deposit to day of withdrawal. Our loans are made on improved home real estate, and our records are open to examination; are regularly passed upon by the State Banking Department; have been inspected and approved in other states as well during the past year. In nine years we have accumulated a surplus and undivided profits of $152,000. We present testimonials from clergymen, men of other professions, and business men who have deposited with us and who know our methods. Annual statement and further detailed information on request.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

430,000

"Church Hymns and Gospel Songs," have been sold.

The leading Hymn book for Prayer Meetings, Your People's Societies, Sunday Evening Services, Sabbath Schools, etc. Contains 367 choice standard hymn best Sacred Songs, favorite Gospel Hymns. Firmly bound, $25 per 100. Sample, postpaid, 20c. THE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago. Publishers of the Moody and Sankey "Gospel Hymns."

Can you Write... SHORT STORIES

Would you act as newspaper-correspondent or a special contributor? If so, send today for our free booklet, "Writing for Profit." It tells you HOW AND WHERE to sell short stories, and how to develop your talent, and starts you right.

NATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.
47 BALDWIN BUILDING, INDIANAPOLIS, IN

SHORTHAND. Students of the Christian Herald should obtain 60,000 words in shorthand with Key. $1.50. Specimen free. ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, 33 Union Square, NEW YORK himself — these make many tremble and shrink from the everlasting issue. Then the mourning of friends and loved ones adds weight to the balance of life. All truly ambitious shrink from laying down life until they have done more. Hopes unfulfilled call us to struggle on, and to wish for death is thus a cowardly thing. When our work is done, then God will call us home, and then he will take away that shrinking from death. There is also a dread lest death in our case, as in many cases, may be attended with great suffering.

Our Mail-Bag

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 382

A. W. LEWIS.

To the guilty conscience death is, of course, a "king of terrors," for "the sting of death is sin." But even the Christian, conscious of forgiveness, may dread it, partially from the instinct of self-preservation and partially, perhaps, from not realizing that physical death is natural as birth. Then, too, death, like life, is strange, and we shrink from it as from a dark and unknown river. We dread death, too, because of its gloomy associations, for in its effects it is sad, shadowing the lives of those bereaved. But most of all, perhaps, we dread the pain that may precede death. Though death itself is probably always painless at the last, yet we know not what may be suffered ere the stage of peaceful unconsciousness be reached. The one antilote to this dread is trust; trust in him who will be with us to the end, Heb. 13: 5. "The same hand," said a dying saint, "which took care of me when I came into this world will take care of me when I go out of it."

AMELIA HOYT.

Christian and pagan alike dread death because it is passing into the unknown. We know not the country nor the inhabitants, and worst of all, we know not what we shall see. The human soul clings with wonderful tenacity to its own individuality. We may long with a great desire to possess the spiritual gifts, the intellectual force, the physical charms, of some other individual; we may look with wistful eyes at the belongings and surroundings of the more fortunate, yet—we would not exchange our "ego" for that of another to gain all these. However dark and unfortunate our lives, however stupid and unknowing our intellects, however faulty and distorted our spiritual natures, in our heart of hearts, we still believe in our own ego; we still feel that we are ourselves—and be our shortcomings what they may, we are secretly satisfied that our own personality is better than that of any other. The severest sting of death would be removed, if we could feel that our ego would not lose itself in the grave.

ROSE L. ELLERBE.

Miscellaneous Questions

Constant Reader, New Albany, Ind. About two years ago, a lady joined the church and became converted. She wrote to her husband (a traveling man), telling him of it, and to her surprise, he replied that she must choose between him and the church—either take her name off the church rolls or off the marriage certificate. Has he the right to do this?

Certainly not. He cannot get either a separation or a divorce on any such grounds, or can he legally coerce his wife to abandon the church, however he may threaten. Should he endeavor to carry out his threat of abandonment, he would be liable to arrest for coercion and non-support.

R., Farmwood School, New York. 1. Can I, though I have but a common-school education, hope to succeed as a writer? 2. Is knowledge of grammar essential to success in this field? 3. Must a writer have the whole plot in mind before beginning to write a story? 4. Are there any schools teaching journalism? 5. Must a writer send long article or story in whole or in sections as written, to publisher? 6. What must an author do to get his article or book copyrighted? 7. When a publisher has been paying an author so much a column for his serial, who gets the money for it when it appears in book form, and whose privilege is it to bring it out in this shape?

1 and 2. Something to say and an interesting way of saying it are the essentials to success as a writer. Without a thorough knowledge of grammar, however, an author could be seriously handicapped, and his article would have to be of such compelling interest that publishers could afford to have the necessary work spent upon it to prepare it for printing. 3. Some writers sketch plot in advance. Others weave as they go. 4. Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., has such a department. 5. Where articles are contracted for in advance, installments are usually sent as written. An unknown writer could hardly make such an arrangement. 6. Write to the Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C., for correct copyright forms, with application or copyright. 7. Book right usually belongs to author; agreement with first publisher should cover this point, however.

Typewriter, Portsmouth, Ia. 1. About what rate of speed on a typewriting machine should be attained before one can qualify for a business position? 2. What is expert rate?

1. On unfamiliar matter taken from dictation, thirty-five to forty words a minute is about the capacity of an average operator in steady, all-day work; in one to ten minutes' speed-trials, the average is much higher. About 2,000 words an hour is fair work. Many operators, however, are equal to fifty or sixty words per minute in steady work. Before reaching average speed, typists sometimes are able to secure positions where rapid typing is not needed; and thus, while gaining speed by practice, are able to make a salary—usually quite small, for speed is essential to good pay. 2. Ninety words a minute from dictation of unfamiliar matter for ten consecutive minutes, is expert work; forty a minute from printed matter for all day would rank in the same class.

Americus, Washington, D. C. Are our days numbered? When persons die from unnatural causes, do you think our Heavenly Father intended that to be the manner of their death? Of course he permitted it, otherwise it would not occur.

Our days are not numbered, in the sense that each individual has just so many days to live. Nor do we believe that the time and manner of death are inflexibly fixed in advance. Such a belief would be fatalism, and would logically lead to the conclusion that, if destiny controls in all things, man is powerless, and therefore irresponsible. The Almighty has ordained certain natural laws, and conformity with these laws, or disobedience to them, is within our own control. Violation brings pain and death; obedience, health and the full measure of existence. Yet, while we are free to choose either course, it is not to be questioned that Divine omniscience foresees all things, even the manner of our choice and the outcome of our mortal career.

Mrs. C. M. S., Okolona, Miss. Please give me the names of the women inscribed in the tablets in the "Hall of Fame."

There are no women's names inscribed in the Hall of Fame. In order that authoritative information might be given as to why this is the case, your letter was sent to Rev. Dr. Henry M. MacCracken, Chancellor of the New York University, which institution received the Hall as a gift from Helen Gould. Dr. MacCracken courteously replied: "The following women were nominated for the Hall of Fame and received the number of votes given, but in no instance did they come near the majority of 51 required. Please remember that no one that had not been deceased ten years was eligible. There were three women electors on the board. Helen Hunt Jackson 1, Mary Lyon 20, Emma Willard 4, Lucretia Mott 11, Dorothea Dix 12, Maria Mitchell 7, Charlotte S. Cushman 13, Martha Washington 14." There were one hundred electors.

E. H. P., Whitehall, R. I. Does the term, "Garden of Eden," as used in Genesis, mean a location, or a condition? If a location, where was it?

"Eden" means delight, tenderness, loveliness. Even the oldest translators hesitate between applying a mystical or a literal interpretation to the words in Genesis. The language of the Bible story, however, is specific as indicating that it was an actual locality, and it is so fully described that many eminent scholars have not hesitated to identify it with the locality of the junction of the rivers Tigris and Euphrates in Arabia. Others have located it on the high table lands of Armenia, still others in Ceylon, and some speculative writers, with less probability, in Egypt, Syria, India, Ceylon and Cashmere.

Inquirer, Hiram College is in Ohio. Eddie A., Essex Junction, Vt. Don't know his denomination.

S. A. M., Everett, O. Her friends should call in some good physician.

Sila F. A., Hawley, Pa., we do not regard the cases as suitable for comparison.

Mrs. L. N. L., Osman, Ill. The Bible story contains all that is known about Cain's wife.

St. Paul, Oskaloosa, Ia. He would not be justified in staying away from church for such reasons. On the contrary, he should stay, and endeavor by his influence and otherwise, to improve the church's spiritual condition.

Subscriber, Milford, Pa. We are not sure that quick walking or rapid working is injurious to a person of nervous temperament. It is simply a natural method of expressing feeling by action, and where there is no organic weakness, can do no harm.

C. B. J., Wilsonville, Neb. Among the places that still retain the names of Bible times are Jerusalem, Damascus, Bethlehem, Joppa, Sidon, Hebron, and many others. There are also many now in ruins, but whose locations have been positively identified. In other cases, the names have been changed, and the exact locations of the original sites are uncertain.

ALWAYS ASK FOR WALTER BAKER'S COCOA AND CHOCOLATE

LOOK AT THE LABELS

PURE-DELICIOUS-NUTRITIOUS
ESTABLISHED 1780

WALTER BAKER & CO. Limited.
DORCHESTER, MASS.
THREE GOLD MEDALS PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION

He Preached to 20,000,000 Weekly

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage

Whose fame as a preacher was limited only by the millions who weekly read his sermons in every hamlet of America and in far away lands. This is

The Only Authorized Life

INTRODUCTION BY HIS SON,
FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

EDITED BY
LOUIS ALBERT BANKS, D.D.
AND THE ASSOCIATE EDITORS OF DR. TALMAGE

This Memorial Volume is magnificently embellished with

OVER 100 EXCLUSIVE ILLUSTRATIONS

The Greatest Money-Making Opportunity For Agents

BOUND IN CLOTH, $2.00; HALF MOROCCO, $2.75

Outfit Free. Be first in the field. Order at once. Previous experience not necessary. Beware of hastily prepared and cheapbooks.

BEST TERMS TO AGENTS. FREIGHT PAID. CREDIT GIVEN.

215 Locust Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

P. W. ZIEGLER & CO.

324 Dearborn Street
Chicago, Ill.

THE LEONARD-CLEANABLE REFRIGERATOR

This Porcelain is the same material that the blue and white preserving kettles are made of. A luxury at the price of a necessity.

MADE IN GRAND RAPIDS.

This Style, Polished, quarter sawed golden oak case; size, 35 in. long by 22 in. deep, by 46 in. high. Porcelain lined, $24.00. Sliding shelves adjustable to any height. Other styles and sizes from $20.00 to $50.00. In zinc lined, $8.50 to $30.00. With the LEONARD-CLEANABLE every part is accessible. It strains the back to remove the whole ice box which some makers compel. Here is a vital point! THE LEONARD-CLEANABLE ALL METAL ICE BACK purifies the condensation and prevents ice water dripping upon food. Avoid refrigerators with under wooden sticks—they mould and become musty. Still another point: OUR EIGHT WALLS WITH MINERAL WOOL INTERLINING save ice bills. Where is another equal to the Leonard? We ship the Leonard to you freight free anywhere east of Omaha or north of Tennessee, where we have no dealer; pro rata beyond. Guaranteed to be greater value than any other, or your money returned without comment. Sample of our Porcelain Lining with booklet How to Use a Refrigerator and catalogue sent FREE.

Grand Rapids Refrigerator Co., 9 Ottawa Street, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Hot Weather Wisdom

lies in saving your steps. Much strength and time is squandered walking around a hot kitchen. Economize both by using a "Hoosier" Kitchen Cabinet.

Everything needed in preparing a meal is at your finger tips. Neat, compact, convenient. Helps you to manage your house work instead of its managing you. Other cabinets, sewing tables, etc., $5.50 and up. Write for catalogue, free.

This is a real Hoosier Cabinet. Don't buy until you see our Catalogue. The Hoosier Mfg. Co., 26 Adams St., New Castle, Ind.

Dirt and Disease=Germ

cannot exist where Banner Lye is used. It is not ordinary lye; there is nothing like it.

It is recognized in public institutions, hotels, restaurants, households, offices, etc., as the best cleaner and disinfectant; far superior to costly disinfectants.

Banner Lye

will destroy everything foul and dangerous. In corners of the house, that are hard to keep clean, wash with a little Banner Lye. Use it in Sinks, Toilets, Commodes, Slop-jars, and by all means in

Cuspidors

In the laundry soak the soiled wash in water to which a little Banner Lye has been added.

In the kitchen use it for cleaning grease and dirt from all utensils—add a little Banner Lye to the dish water.

SOAP Refuse grease from the kitchen can be made into the best hard soap in ten minutes, without odor or boiling. One ounce of Banner Lye makes ten pounds hard soap or twenty gallons soft soap.

At your druggist's or grocer's. If you can't get it, send for book, and tell us who your grocer or druggist is. The Penn Chemical Works, Philadelphia, U.S.A.

"WEARS LIKE IRON"

JAP-A-LAC (REGISTERED)

NEW WOOD FINISH

FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK

RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD OR METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED.

MADE IN ONE MINUTE! HUNGARY, CHERRY, GREEN, OX-BLOOD, BLACK, COBALT, & RED. NATURAL GLASS, IVORY & YELLOW. COLOR CARB & BROWN. FINEST.

SAMPLE CAN 10¢

THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.

DEPARTMENT 5 CLEVELAND, O.

QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS.

BAIRD'S Non-Alcoholic FLAVORING POWDERS

Absolutely pure—Stronger and cheaper than liquid extracts—Unequaled in delicacy of flavor—You'll need them for cakes, custards, jellies, ice cream, etc. Absolutely no alcohol.

FULL SIZED BOX BY MAIL 25c.

Big money maker for agents. Write today for particulars. BAIRD SUPPLY CO., 103 Delroy Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Make Ironing Day Pleasant

for the entire household by using the

THE GEM IRONING MACHINE

Saves worry, confusion and work and nine-tenths of the time usually required. Costs only 1c per hour to heat by gas or gasoline. Soon pays for itself. Satisfaction guaranteed. SENT FREE—Illustrated booklet, "Modern Methods of Ironing."

Write today. Valuable suggestions. DOMESTIC MANGLE CO. Box C, Racine Junction, Wisconsin.

Chapter XXIV.—Continued

THE dinner was all that the young man desired. His attention indeed was not on the viands, but on the girl who had aided in their preparation.

"Do you like reading, Miss Hilda?" asked Immanuel, regarding the girl with a new interest.

"Yes," she murmured, dropping her long lashes.

"Our Hilda's a great hand for story books," observed Mr. Scott, passing his plate for a second slice of the pudding. "What was that last one—The Phantom Wedding?"

"Yes," she murmured, dropping her long lashes. "I read pretty nigh a chapter of it myself! I guess Hilda 'ud lend it to you, if you like story books, 'Manuel. Wouldn't ye, Hilda?"

The girl flushed uneasily under Immanuel's inquiring eyes. "It isn't very good," she murmured faintly, "but of course I am willing to—"

"I have a great many books at my house," said young Rossi, gravely; "perhaps there is something there better worth reading than the book you speak of. I will bring you a book to-morrow, if you like."

"Sho! I'd clean forgot 'bout Ol' Mose's books," said Mr. Scott. "He was allers settin' 'round over a book. I s'pose you've got 'em all; but I wouldn't advise ye to waste yer time on 'em. Books ain't any good 'xcept to pass away the time when ye can't do anythin' else. The weeds don't let up growin' day ner night; they git the start of ye quicker'n greased lightnin'."

Hilda was loitering in the shade of the hickories that afternoon, when Immanuel passed out of the ten-acre meadow with his scythe on his shoulder.

"I didn't thank you for offering to bring me a book, Mr. Rossi," she said, with a pretty air of timidity. "There aren't many books at gran'pa's, and I do like to read."

"I will bring you something, certainly," said Immanuel. "What shall it be, biography, travel, poetry or—I am afraid there aren't many story-books. You like stories, don't you?"

Hilda had not listened to the lectures of the high-school principal for nothing. She stole a shy glance at the strong, thoughtful face bent toward her. "One shouldn't read stories too often," she said primly. "You may bring me—bring me something you think I would like."

Oh, artful Hilda! This young man then, weary with a long day's toil in the hay-field, must stand before his uncle's book-case thinking what you would like. He must learn to weigh things in this new balance, and his lesson shall begin with the books on the worm-eaten shelves of the shabby old house.

Miss Hilda offered to assist her aunt Emmeline in the gathering of the currants next day. Mrs. Scott had already appeared, armed with a six-quart tin pail.

"Now, gran'ma," cooed the girl; "it's too hot out here for you, isn't it, aunt Emmeline? I can pick ever so fast, and we'll be through in no time!"

"Well, I don't know," began the old lady doubtfully; "I would like to mend father's overalls."

"I guess you might as well go on," said her daughter easily; "me an' Hilda c'n ten't the currants. Hilda's gettin' real helpful lately."

But Miss Scott presently found herself working alone, while Hilda, comfortably ensconced in the shade of a big gooseberry bush, concentrated a fire of questions upon her somewhat wandering faculties.

"Don't you think he's handsome, Aunt Emmeline?"

"Who you talkin' 'bout, Hilda?" inquired her aunt, glancing doubtfully at the graceful figure in its attitude of indolent ease.

"Why, I mean Mr. Rossi; he isn't a bit like a common farmer; do you think so?"

"I don't know," said Emmeline; "I never thought nothin' 'bout it."

"He talks exactly like our minister's brother; he visited in our place last summer. He'd just graduated from college, and he was awfully smart. Say, Aunt Emmeline, where did Mr. Rossi go to school?"

"I don't know, child; he never lived here much. We never knew what they was doin'."

"Where did he live the rest of the time?"

"In the city, mebbe," said Emmeline. "They did used to say his uncle had money left him, but I guess that was a story. When you goin' to pick currants?"

"In just a minute. Do you suppose he's been to college?"

"Why, land! how should I know? I'll ask him, if you want I should."

"No, don't do that; I don't believe he'd like that. I can find out some day. But don't you think it's funny that he should work for gran'pa just like a hired man?"

"Land, no! Everybody does that by spells; they ain't nothin' to do on his own place but plough. Pa's goin' to take a holt there after a spell an' get things to goin'."

"Did you ever go inside his house?"

"Why, no; come to think, I never have. Ol' Mose Armitage was kin' of queer 'bout everythin'. He never neighbored with anybody much. I remember mother went to his wife's fun'ral; but that was years ago."

"I wish I could see it," said Hilda, plaintively.

"See what, fer the land's sake? I do wisht you'd go to work at these currants. I guess I'll have to call mother."

"No, don't; I'm going to help in just a minute. Wouldn't it be fun, Aunt Emmeline, for you and me to go over there after supper! I want to take that book back that he brought me; I don't like it a bit."

"Why, I don't know," hesitated the older woman; "I guess there ain't much to see."

"Well, we can take a walk up the road after supper, anyway. You'll go with me, won't you, Aunt Em?"

"I guess so, if the currants is picked; I've got to make my jell this aft'noon; to-morrow's bakin' day."

Hilda sprang up, and her slim fingers were busy among the bushes for awhile.

"Aunt Emmeline," she murmured, at the expiration of perhaps five minutes, "do you mind if I go in now? It makes my head ache to stoop over."

"I guess the sun's too hot fer you, deary," said the other tenderly. "Go in and rest. Aunt Em c'n pick 'em all right."

At sunset that night, as Immanuel rested on the porch of his lonely little house, he heard the sound of voices wafted toward him on the evening breeze. There was a snatch of song, sung in a light clear soprano, then a trill of laughter, sweet as the song of a homing bird. He leaned forward and peered through the barrier of dusty lilac leaves. There were two figures coming up the road, the sunset light at their backs; one broad and ungainly, gowned in lilac calico and topped by a huge sunbonnet; the other, slim and graceful, the long, level rays of light kindling an aureole of glory about her uncovered head. He sprang from his chair and went out to meet the two women. "Isn't it a lovely evening, Miss Scott?" he began, addressing the sunbonnet with due respect.

"Yes, I guess so," replied the lady with mild querulousness. "I've been makin' jell most all day, an' I'm tired 'nough to set still; but Hilda here was set on—"

"It was so beautiful out of doors that I couldn't stay in," cried the girl, with a warning squeeze of the fat arm linked within her own.

"What you a-pinchin' me for?" murmured Emmeline, crossly. "I was jest sayin' that you was set on—"

"Won't you come in and rest a while, Miss Scott?" asked Immanuel hospitably. "It is quite a walk from the farm."

"I don't know as we'd ought to; I ain't 'tended to the milk yet; but I s'pose, Hilda—"

"Of course, we'll go in, Aunt Em," said the girl, with a mischievous laugh. "We want to see Mr. Rossi's housekeeping."

"Oh, as to that, Miss Hilda," said

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Mellin's Infants' Food

and good fresh milk make a combination that is like mother's milk.

Send for a free sample of Mellin's Food.

Mellin's Food Company, Boston, Mass.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

SAVE $10 PER COW EVERY YEAR.

300,000 NOW IN USE.

Indispensable to Successful Dairying

CATALOGUES ON REQUEST

THE DE LAVAL SEPARATOR CO.

CHICAGO PHILADELPHIA SAN FRANCISCO
MONTREAL TORONTO WINNIPEG

Libby's Quick Luncheon

Are just as good as the you had put in all day preparing them, and a lot easier. Everything you want in dainty meats, in key-opening cans.

Libby's Atlas of the World, with 32 new maps, size 8x11 inches—the practical home Atlas—sent anywhere for five 2-cent stamps. Our little book, "How to Make Good Things to Eat," free.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

Kitchen Utensils

HAVING THIS TRADE MARK

AGATE NICKEL-STEEL WARE

By the Blue Label use only by us (and full sustained by recent S. Circuit Court decision) pasted on every piece of genuine Agate Nickel-Steel Ware. Booklet showing full details of this label etc., mailed free any address.

Agate Nickel-Steel Ware is by the leading Dishes and Housefurnishing Stores.

Lalanc & Grosjean Mfg. Co. New York, Boston, Chicago

METALAC

A Silver Finish Applied by Brush or Dries Rapidly

For all metal surfaces. Produces a beautiful silver finish, does not tarnish. Good for bathtubs, sinks, radiators, fences, smoke stacks, everything metal outdoors. Durable, wearable, withstands fire or boiling water or ice.

WRITE FOR TRIAL CAN.—Enough to cover 15 square feet by mail, 25 cents. Twice as much, 40 cents. Illustrated information free. Ask your dealer for Sole distributors west of Rochester, N. Y., north of Gulf Coast.

THE BILLINGS-CHAPIN CO.

Dept. F, CLEVELAND, OHIO

"SHYNEY-SHYNE" SILVER POLISH

Contains no acids. Non-injurious. Makes beautiful silver. Once used, always used. We want a million of this season. By mail, 15c. Two boxes, 25c. Till Jan. 31 will send package of flower seeds free with each 15c. box.

THE SHYNEY-SHYNE CO., Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A.

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 384

Immanuel, "I fear you will be shocked at the disorder. I am not a practised hermit as yet."

Hilda's bright eyes wandered curiously over the quaint interior of the old room, where Moses Armitage's benign presence seemed yet to linger. "Why, it's—it's real pretty!" she said at last, "If there were ruffled muslin curtains at the windows, and—" she stopped short with a vivid blush. "I brought back the book," she concluded.

"And did you enjoy it?" asked her host, somewhat perfunctorily. He was absorbed in the picture the girl made as she sat by the empty hearth in an old carved chair. He wondered vaguely what Moses Armitage would have thought of this young, rosy creature.

Hilda flashed a displeased look at her questioner. "What if I did not like it?" she asked.

"Why, then, I must try again; or stay, you shall choose for yourself."

To select a book from a crowded shelf is a most becoming task for a pretty woman. It brings into play such charming attitudes of a slim, virginal shape; little rounded wrists and slender fingers gleam white against the sombre-backed books; blue eyes upturned in earnest thought shine jewel-like. One must be assisted, too, in the choice. Insensibly, Immanuel's dark head bent closer to Hilda's golden one; his voice fell into an intimate murmur as he showed her his own old favorites, read to the tune of pattering summer showers, or the wailing of winter winds.

Miss Emmeline Scott's faded eyes rested kindly upon the pair. Her feet ached cruelly; she dreaded the long walk home. "I guess we'd better be goin' along, deary," she remonstrated, mildly; "mother, she'll be wonderin' where we be."

"In just a minute, aunty," said Hilda, without turning her head. "This was the one you liked so much, The King of the Golden River? Yes, I am sure I should like it, too. It is a fairy story, is it not?"

"It is a wonder tale, yes," said Immanuel. "But it is a parable also. I shall be curious to know what you think of it. I was always ready to go on my knees to Ruskin to write more stories after I had finished it."

Hilda had some vaguely disagreeable associations with the name of the author. She fancied it might be connected with the tiresome study of "literature," in which—thank heaven—she had "passed" long ago. Her blue eyes told nothing of all this, however. "I've always been so fond of Ruskin," was what she said with enthusiasm. Then fearing lest this unguarded remark might lead to embarrassing consequences in a further conversation, she turned to her aunt with a pretty little air of obedience. "Now, aunty dear, we'll go; I'm so glad you're rested!"

Chapter XXV.—Summer

DURING the long, sweet days of mid-summer Nature worked steadily on toward the perfecting of all things visible. There was also forethought for other years. Myriads of creatures lived and loved that in days to come there might be other myriads to carry on the vast cycle of existence. Life unending, undying, manifested itself anew in countless grass blades, in innumerable leaves; every blade and every leaf the home of a higher creation that knew itself only as Love swayed it.

Immanuel understood nothing of the force which had laid hold on him. He only knew that the problems and questions which had tortured him in the past seemed to have withdrawn themselves into infinite distances. The blue-rimmed valley was filled with a joyous tranquillity. It would, perhaps, always be summer; he would always work with his hands, his mind at peace with all the world. That he should have given his millions to the service of the toiling sufferers in the foul city yonder appeared to him the veriest commonplace. What was money? Could money buy a single hour of this deep-bosomed summer?

Hilda Wilde was very far from being a finished coquette—save in imagination. Neither did she in the least resemble the supernally lovely heroine of modern fiction, she who is wont to unite under an exterior of dazzling beauty all the loftiest qualities of human kind. Our poor Hilda was simply a very foolish and ignorant little maid, whose conquests had been easily won among the apple-cheeked schoolboys of her native village.

It could not be truthfully affirmed that the young farmer who labored in her grandfather's fields filled out in any particular the extraordinary outline which Miss Hilda had sketched from a composite likeness of the various heroes of romance. He had no "style," she decided, and his serious ways puzzled her. But the relative value of lovers must be reckoned like all else fleeting and uncertain under the sun. One man in the hand, so to speak, is worth two in the bush. Immanuel Rossi could be set down under the first category; he therefore took precedence for the moment of a tolerably long list of youths who had for a longer or shorter period occupied the narrow niche of her maiden fancy.

In voluminous letters addressed to her "most intimate friend," Miss Wilde alluded to the young man as perfectly fascinating. "I am sure there is some deep mystery about him," she declared—not in the least believing that there was. "He is certainly very good-looking, Amelia; his eyes are brown, and they look right through one, and they are so expressive and melancholy. Do you remember the description of Ethelbert Montmorency in that sweet story, The Fatal Ring? His eyes are exactly like Ethelbert's. He is ever so much taller than Jack Snider, and has such broad shoulders! Grandfather says he is the strongest man he ever had on the farm. I think I hear you say, a common hired man! But he is nothing of the kind, my dear; he is very well educated, and has positively read everything. He owns a large farm next to grandfather's, and the sweetest little house. With ruffled muslin curtains at the windows, and a few sofa pillows and embroidered things it would look perfectly dear! Of course, I am not thinking of him in that serious way! But I am sure I should die in this stupid place if there was not some one to help pass the time."

Some wiseacre has said that in spite of old-time notions to the contrary, it is not sovereign man who picks and chooses what it pleases him to cull in "the rose-bud garden of girls." That sweet, blushing young thing, who scarce dares to raise her eyes to yours, my masculine friend, may, or may not, have elected you to be the companion of her future. If she has, you might as well surrender at discretion; the denouement is inevitable. You will, perchance, fancy yourself deliberating, deciding, within the defences of your impregnable heart, but in reality your foolish barriers are as gossamer before the shy glances of those innocent eyes. It is she who calmly decides whether or no she wishes to pour your coffee through an indefinite number of summers and winters. Her decision, moreover, will be influenced by trifles light as air. More than once has a man's future happiness trembled in the balance because his hair was cut too short by a reckless barber, thus unduly exposing a rack of ears a thought too big or too red. And a case is actually recorded in feminine annals of a luckless individual who unwittingly dashed the cup of matrimonial bliss from his thirsting lips by thoughtlessly assuming a straw hat with a Prince Albert coat; and of another swain, who was summarily dismissed because he neglected to remove his spoon from his cup amid the joyous agitation of an afternoon tea with the beloved object of his affections.

Truly one of the most curious spectacles in the world is the progress of an ordinary, every-day love affair. And perhaps because, of its delicious folly it is the one of all others of which the world never grows tired.

TO BE CONTINUED

WHEN you send your boy to the store for biscuit, be sure he understands that he is to get the kind that come in the

In-er-seal Package

The following are a few of the varieties now sold in In-er-seal packages,—Soda, Milk, Graham, Oatmeal and Butter Thin Biscuit; Vanilla Wafers and Ginger Snaps.

Look for the In-er-seal Trade-mark design in red and white on each end of the package,

Copyright 1901
by National Biscuit Company.

O'NEILL'S

SIXTH AVENUE, 20th to 21st Street, NEW YORK

Importers and Retailers

DRY GOODS, FANCY GOODS, CLOAKS and COSTUMES,
FINE MILLINERY, HOUSE FURNISHINGS, SEWING
MACHINES, BOOKS, PHOTO SUPPLIES, Etc., Etc.

Send for our new

FASHION BOOKLET

Mailed free to all applicants
residing out-of-town

Every other month we issue free to out-of-town applicants an illustrated booklet which describes the newest and best things in the Dry Goods Market. It is a very useful little book, particularly so to those living at a distance from the Metropolis, for it places the reader in touch with the whole world of fashion.

Send us your name and address and we will place you on our Mailing List

Mention this paper.

H. O'NEILL & CO., 6th Ave., 20th to 21st St., NEW YORK

SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS'

Hair Grower
AND Scalp Cleaner

Always have been, are to-day, and will continue to be perfect preparations for the production and maintenance of bountiful, soft, lustrous hair. Being sold by over 25,000 dealers should be evidence of their popularity and merit.

Ladies should always remember—

"It's the Hair—not the Hat"

That makes a woman attractive

"He that works easily works successfully."
'Tis very easy to clean house with

SAPOLIO

MORE BRIGHT BEACONS

Friends Far and Near Set New Lamps Alight in the Bowery Mission

GOOD words, good wishes, pledges of help continue to come from every State in the Union, where God's people are praying that the old Gospel Light-house on the Bowery, may send forth brighter and brighter beams on the way to the Cross. There are so many hopeless wanderers, alas, treading that thoroughfare; sin invites on every hand; hunger drives towards crime; and the only chance of salvation for these, our brothers, is through our faithfulness in showing them how to find Christ, the great loving Elder Brother, who is able to save to the uttermost all whom we bring to him. The good words, given below—extracts taken from a few of the many letters received—are typical of the spirit of all:

M. E. Van S., Plainfield, Mich. We have read of the great good you are doing at the Bowery Mission and send our mites. Two friends gave each $1, and so, with mine, I send you $3.

J. T. C., Pompey Centre, N. Y. ($1). To make the light burn brighter. May many wanderers be shown the way to Christ at the Old Bowery Mission!

E. L. R., Rockford, S. Dak. ($1). To set up another light to shine for Christ.

New Dorp Beacon Lighthouse ($1). After living thirteen lonely years in lighthouses upon the water, shut off from all church privileges, we have at last, through our loving Father's gift, a home upon the land. As it is, as was our old home, a Beacon Light for sailors at sea, we will give as memorial of God's goodness $1 a year so long as we are able to the Bowery Mission, "God's light along the shore." THE CHRISTIAN HERALD has been more to us than any living friend.

A Friend, Leesburg, Va. ($1). For the Bowery Mission, from one who gives his tenth. God bless Mother Bird!

A. D. W., Norway Ridge, Wisconsin. A dear friend placed $5 in my hand, saying: "You have many opportunities for doing good. Use this from my thank-offering box, where most needed." After earnest prayer for divine guidance that this tribute may lead some wanderer to the light, I send it to the Bowery Mission.

Mrs. C. J. S., Lowell, Mass. ($1). I will send $1 per year for the Bowery Mission as long as God gives me power.

Mrs. M. H. W., Plainfield, Mich. ($5). I am an old lady, 82 years old, and it is my intention to help God's work along with this much each year as long as I live.

Mrs. T. B. W., North Portal, Can. ($1). God's blessing go with this! It is a little seed—I will cultivate it yearly.

B. M. S., Newaygo, Mich. ($1). I pledge myself to pay one dollar or more every year to help the work of the Bowery Mission.

Rev. R. E. W., Minneapolis, Minn., $2 from myself and wife for the old Bowery Mission Gospel Lighthouse. God bless the work!

The following contributions were received during the week:

| | |
|-----------------------------|---------------------------|
| M. Nichol... $1.00 | Wm Wallace... $1.00 |
| Hester Masters... 1.00 | Norman W Dodge... 15.00 |
| Mrs G E Fuzzell... 1.00 | Two Friends, New... |
| Mrs L L Clark... 1.00 | Britain, Conn... 2.00 |
| M Craven... 1.00 | Chas Moos... 5.00 |
| Mrs A Sealey... 2.00 | "In His Name," |
| "In memory of my | Clarkville, Va... 5.00 |
| mother," Isadora MS 1.00 | O E W. Tonganoxie, |
| Mrs E C Johnson... 5.00 | Kan... 1.00 |
| "I H N," Camp Chase... 2.00 | Mrs L B Williams... 1.00 |
| "Jean," Brooklyn... 2.00 | M J Mowe... 1.00 |
| C O Olsen & wife... 50 | S N Mowe... 1.00 |
| C Wheeler... 1.00 | J F Mowe... 1.00 |
| Nancy Welch... 1.00 | Lucy J Harrington... 1.00 |
| S D Guengerich... 1.00 | Mrs A H T. Centre- |
| Mrs F M Lentz... 1.00 | ville, So Dak... 2.00 |
| M A Belcher... 1.00 | Jennie Dyer... 1.00 |
| Ettie Vinyard... 1.00 | Geo E Parrett... 1.00 |
| Nettie Vinyard... 1.00 | E V B. Adrian, Mich. 1.00 |
| Mrs M V Lee... 1.00 | "Honey Bees," Ran- |
| Eliz Cairns... 1.00 | ton, Ill... 3.05 |
| Hattie Brownell... 1.00 | W F Pettit... 40 |
| "Pachogue... 1.00 | Mrs J L B. Tekamah, |
| J H Stone... 1.65 | Neb... 2.00 |
| Mrs G W Palmer... 1.00 | Mis M Delany... 1.00 |
| Mrs E Kidder... 1.00 | Mrs J H McDonald... 1.00 |
| Florence E Helphin- | H B Dewey... 1.00 |
| stine... 1.00 | Mrs Eliza G Lease... 2.00 |
| From a Friend, New | Wanaque River Paper |
| Market, Va... 1.00 | Co... 25.00 |
| —, West Haven, | Mrs Mary E Sylvester 2.00 |
| Conn... 5.00 | Mrs F M N. Charles- |
| A Subscriber, Schag- | town, Mass... 1.00 |
| hicoke, N Y... 1.00 | Mrs Catharine Al- |
| Mrs James Mitchell... 1.00 | bright... 50 |
| E Canard... 1.00 | Anxious Mother, Bal- |
| Louisa Jaeger... 1.00 | timore, Md... 1.00 |
| Bell Memorial Union | Second Congrega- |
| S S. Whitney, Pa... 7.04 | tional Y P S C E, |
| Mrs E S S. Eaton, Col 1.00 | Greenwich, Conn... 2.00 |

| | |
|-----------------------------|----------------------------|
| A Friend, Cupertino, 1.00 | Woodville, Tex., 1.00 |
| A Friend, Thomaston, | I H N. Brooklyn, N Y 1.00 |
| Conn... 1.00 | Miss E Cartwright... 1.00 |
| Julia Erskine... 1.00 | Miss Nellie Stone... 1.00 |
| W S Bagley... 1.00 | Mrs A M U. Hooper, |
| Miss Jennie Gore... 1.00 | Colo... 1.00 |
| Mrs A E Crocker... 1.00 | Henry J Pyeatt... 1.00 |
| Mrs Hughes... 1.00 | Mrs A M Bates... 1.00 |
| Mrs Helen M Arnold 1.00 | Mrs Helen Gunther... 1.00 |
| —, Denham Springs 5.00 | E Early... 1.00 |
| L M Tygar... 1.00 | Graham F Blandy... 10.00 |
| J W M. Oswego, N Y 1.00 | —, Rhinebeck, N Y... 5.00 |
| An Old Lady, Perry, | W M D. Le Roy, Ill... 3.00 |
| N Y... 1.00 | Mr & Mrs C J Wood... 5.00 |
| W Va Paper Co... 10.00 | Sarah A Calhoun... 1.00 |
| Mrs E F C. N Y city... 2.00 | Miss Mary Montgom- |
| Mary Brooks Pearson... 1.00 | ery... 1.00 |
| W McKwen... 1.00 | Mrs H E Barnard... 1.00 |
| H V Doysee... 1.00 | Miss M E Hilsley... 1.00 |
| Mrs Julia A Sweet... 1.00 | Wm Scott... 1.00 |
| Ada M Welles... 1.00 | Haaks S S. Luther... 1.00 |
| Mr and Mrs Carl A | Mrs M Tuttle... 1.00 |
| Thimsen... 2.00 | S E Nuckols... 1.00 |
| Mrs A A Stearnes... 1.00 | S E Robinson... 1.00 |
| Berlin & Jones En- | Dorothea N Y City... 20.00 |
| velope Co... 10.00 | Mrs F Billings... 1.00 |
| Frederick H Levey... 10.00 | Friend, Dayton... 1.00 |
| Reader of Your Pa- | —, E Orange... 1.00 |
| per... 2.00 | Friend of the Work, |
| E W Durkin... 3.00 | Bristol... 1.00 |
| Robert A Pinkerton... 5.00 | —, Stockton... 5.00 |
| Anonymous... 30.00 | J U Welander... 2.00 |
| —, Montrose, Mo... 1.00 | E A Carney... 1.00 |
| Hannah J Pickering 1.00 | Mrs F O Brockway's 1.00 |
| Hattie A Pickering... 1.00 | Lucilla Reed... 1.00 |
| Mrs David C Bowers... 1.00 | Friend, Conewango... 50 |
| P A F. Albion, N Y... 1.00 | A A Hanscom... 1.00 |

A Sick Missionary's Appeal

Miss Helen F. Clark, the Director of the New York Foreigners' Mission, lies very ill in the Sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich., and the hearts of all who know of her noble life go out to her in sympathy. Hoping to make friends for her work among the Chinese and Italians in Mott and Mulberry streets, Manhattan, Miss Clark left the city last November for the Pacific coast, with the view of speaking in the larger cities of the West on the Foreigners' Mission in the metropolis, to which she has given ten years of her life. At Chicago, while on her way to a church, where she expected to speak, she was suddenly taken ill; and for months she has been under the care of a doctor and nurse. The latest reports tell of her improvement; but it will be some time before she is able to take active charge of the work again.

From her chamber of suffering she sends out an earnest appeal that the Mission be sustained; and the Board of Directors are determined, if possible, to "hold the fort" until she is in the field. Day and night classes, street preaching, and house-to-house visitations are being sustained; and the good work seems to be unabated, despite the unfortunate sickness of Miss Clark. The Mission's financial embarrassment weighing heavily upon her mind and retarding her recovery, she pleads for aid from those who desire to keep the good work alive at this critical juncture. Contributions sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York, will be forwarded to Miss Clark.

A Cot at Mont-Lawn

A "Friend of Little Children," Canon City, Colo., writes:

Will you let me co-operate in your good work at Mont-Lawn, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Children's Home, by supporting a cot there? How much would it cost for, say, a season of ten weeks?

The sum of $21 will maintain a cot at Mont-Lawn for a season of ten weeks. For $3 any child can be given an outing of ten days there, this amount covering all cost of transportation back and forth, medical examination, caretaker's attention, food, shelter, clothing, etc.; $6 sends two, $9 three, $12 four, $15 five, $21 seven, $24 eight; for $36 twelve waifs can be made happy.

A Church That Lives by Faith

From Mrs. L. M. Duryee, of Boonesboro, Boone County, Ia., comes this interesting letter, which describes the condition of a young and struggling church in that State:

Our church is called the Gospel Tabernacle, and is conducted upon Moody's plans. All expenses, including our pastor's salary, are paid by voluntary offerings, and we go in debt for nothing. We are poor, but we trust in God, and believe he will give us the desires of our hearts. Our pastor is Rev. J. Charles Crawford. My husband is one of the officers of the church, but our pastor organized, planned and conducts all its affairs, and is an orthodox Christian. We have as yet no seats in our church, or any bell to call us together; but the Lord will provide in his own good time. I trust some church which has laid aside a communion set for the new "individual cups," may wish to send their old set to us. I will be responsible for expense of freight if securely packed.

"One of these Days"

usually means "NEVER." The time to apply for Life Insurance is "NOW" while you are young and insurable. Postponement may be disastrous.

The Prudential

Insurance Company of America

JOHN F. DRYDEN, PRESIDENT. HOME OFFICE, NEWARK, N.J.

Fill out this slip and send to us.

Without committing myself to any action, I shall be glad to receive, free, particulars and rates of Policies.

For $..... Age.....

Name.....

Address.....

Occupation.....

DEPT. 70

American Success Series

HON. ASBURY FRANCIS LEVER

the youngest member of Congress, was former secretary and typewriter for his predecessor from South Carolina

"Improvement the order of the age"

Highest typewriting possibilities available only to users of the great Success,

The Smith Premier Typewriter

American Success Series in Book Form

At the end of this year, the Smith Premier Typewriter Company will publish a handsome booklet containing pictures and brief biographies of twelve successful Americans who have profited by their use of stenography or typewriting. These books will be mailed free only to persons who send us their names and addresses, with request for same.

The Smith Premier Typewriter Co., Syracuse, N.Y., U.S.A.

McCray Refrigerators

Fine Tile, Odorless Wood & Other Linings
Built to Order

Also a full line of stock sizes ready for immediate shipment, For Residences, Hotels, Clubs, Restaurants, Groceries, Meat Markets, Hospitals, Public Institutions, etc.

THE MCCRAY SYSTEM insures perfect circulation of pure, cold air; absolutely dry; never sweats; therefore is PERFECTLY HYGIENIC Iced from Outside House. Unequalled for Economy of Ice.

Physicians, prominent men, hospitals and sanitariums endorse the McCray Refrigerators.

McCray Refrigerators are Guaranteed

Catalogues and estimates sent free. Catalogue: No. 38 for Residences, No. 45 for Public Institutions, Hotels and Cold Storage Houses. No. 55 for Groceries and Meat Markets.

Order now to secure prompt delivery.

MCCRAY REFRIGERATOR COMPANY, 227 Mill Street, Kendallville, INDIANA.

New York—341 Broadway. Chicago—55 Wabash Ave. Columbus, O.—356 N. High St. Washington—610 11th St. N. W. Detroit—7 and 9 Clifford St. Pittsburgh—545 Liberty St. Branch Offices: Boston—52 Commercial St. St. Louis—414 N. Third St. Columbia, S. C.—1210 Main St. San Francisco—106 Front St. Toronto—25 Wellington St. Birmingham, Ala.—1820 3rd Ave.

Address main office unless you reside in one of above cities.

A BURNING BLACKSMITH Changed Food and Put Out the Fire.

Even sturdy blacksmiths sometimes discover that, notwithstanding their daily exercise and resulting good health, if their food is not well selected trouble will follow, but in some cases a change of food to the right sort will quickly relieve the suffer, for generally such active men have fine constitutions and can, with a little change of diet, easily rid themselves of the disease.

I. E. Overdorf, Vilas, Penn., a blacksmith, says, "Two months ago I got down so bad with stomach troubles that I had to quit my business. About ten o'clock each morning I was attacked by burning pains in the stomach, so bad I was unable to work."

Our groceryman insisted upon my changing breakfasts and using Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food instead of the ordinary breakfast of meat, potatoes, etc. So I tried and at once began to mend. The new food agreed with my stomach perfectly and the pains all ceased. I kept getting better and better every day and now I am able to follow my business better than before in years. I am a thousand times obliged to the makers of Grape-Nuts for the great benefits the food has given."

GRAVES' TOOTH POWDER

Antiseptic and beautifying. Sweetens the breath. Purifies the mouth. Whitens and cleans the teeth. Hardens soft and bleeding gums. An aid to good health. A standard dentifrice. Endorsed by dentists. At druggists, 25c. Graves' Tooth Powder Co., Chicago, Ill.

POZZONI'S COMPLEXION POWDER

Beautifies Without Injury. Made of purest materials. Contains no lead, arsenic, lime or anything else poisonous or injurious. The wooden box preserves the delicate perfume. Sold everywhere. Full Size Box Sent on Receipt of 50c. J. A. Pozzoni Co., Chicago, Ill.

It's This Way—

If you want the latest, most improved, high arm, double lock stitch sewing machine buy this

Successful

It does equally well all the things that the extreme price machines will do. We sell it direct from the factory to the buyer—no agents, and ship them anywhere on 30 days' free trial. Wood work of polished oak in best design and finish. We can't tell all its good qualities here. Our illustrated catalog does that. Send for it. The Price Is Right. CLAY PHELPS & CO., 54 M Street, Cincinnati, O.

CARPETS

Direct from Factory to families or churches at Retail.

49¢ per yard for best all-wool extra super Ingrain Carpets.
55¢ per yard for best all-wool plain fillings in any color.
2c a yard allowed for freight.

One sample of carpet showing quality and six illustrations of different patterns sent upon application. State color and style of pattern preferred.
CAYUGA COUNTY CARPET CO.
Auburn, N. Y.

BATH CABINETS

We make 8 styles of cabinets, under our patents, for taking Turkish Baths at home. We sell on approval, and warrant them to be the best cabinets made. More of the best families use the Racine than all others together. Write for catalogue. RACINE BATH CABINET COMPANY, Box J, Racine, Wisconsin

A BAPTISM AT METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE

AN interesting spectacle was witnessed at the new Metropolitan Tabernacle in London, recently. The vast building, which occupies the site of the one in which the late Pastor C. H. Spurgeon for so long a time proclaimed the Gospel, was filled with a great congregation. Doubtless many came out of curiosity to witness the baptism of a number of converts, but even they were impressed by the simplicity and solemnity of the ceremony. The baptistry at the Tabernacle is sunk in the lower of the two platforms, of which the higher serves as a pulpit. They are at the eastern end of the oval-shaped building. The baptistry is of marble, with a flight of steps at each end. On the evening in question, there were among the candidates several members of the French community in London, and the rite was administered to them by the French missionary who had been instrumental in leading them to Christ. To the usual formula, he added the words in French, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

BAPTIZING FRENCH COMMUNICANTS IN SPURGEON'S TABERNACLE

A MISSION'S GROWTH

THE twenty-fifth anniversary of Rev. J. Wesley Sullivan's ordination to the ministry, and the sixteenth of his pastorate of Calvary Baptist Church, Philadelphia, was celebrated in a most interesting way. Ground was broken for a new church building, and, in the presence of a great gathering of the Baptist ministers of Philadelphia, the corner-stone was laid. The congregation, rich in faith but not in this world's goods, have made sacrifices to build their church over which, they say, when finished, no debt shall hang for improvements. Sixteen years ago, when Mr. Sullivan took charge, Calvary was only a little mission. Its growth has been phenomenal. The pastor's life has been a story of conquest and development in more ways than one. Into the management of his church he brought good business ability, gained in the hard school of experience. From a newsboy, he made his own way up, struggling through universities and seminaries and thoroughly preparing himself for the work to which he felt God had called him—the Christian ministry. "One of my best sources of inspiration," he says, "has been THE CHRISTIAN HERALD; and one of my most valued possessions is a complete file of all the numbers, except twenty-five of 1881, that have appeared from the first issue up to the present. This journal is an invaluable aid in progressive church work."

REV. J. WESLEY SULLIVAN

ACROSS THE DESERT of ISRAEL'S WANDERINGS

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 377

unto Moses, saying, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pihahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baalzephon; before it shall ye encamp by the sea." The problem would be greatly simplified could we once definitely fix the locations of these places. They were doubtless situated, however, somewhere in the near vicinity of the Bitter Lakes, most probably between these and Lake Timsah. This would locate the place of Israel's crossing the Red Sea in that immediate vicinity, which, in our judgment, is the most reasonable hypothesis.

That the Israelites crossed at Suez, and especially south of Suez, seemed to us, as we studied the situation, quite impossible, and for these reasons chiefly: (1) The close proximity of Jebel 'Ataka; (2) the fact that they journeyed three days after crossing without finding water (Exod. 15: 22), and on arriving at Marah, found that the waters were bitter. Marah, is best identified with 'Ayun Musa, which is only two hours distant from Suez. (3) Besides, geologists are nearly all agreed that the arm of the Red Sea, known as the Gulf of Suez, extended in Moses' time considerably north of its present coast line, and included Timsah and the Bitter Lakes. In that case, there would have been a narrow, shallow neck of water joining these two bodies as known to us, through which, in our opinion, the Israelites made their escape. Several considerations favor this conclusion, but we shall mention only two: (1) the fact that the Egyptians pressed after "into the midst of the sea" (Exod. 14: 23), apparently unwittingly (verse 25). This would indicate that the channel was not deep. (2) Israel's escape and the Egyptians' overthrow seem both to have happened in one and the same night (Exod. 14: 21, 27), which suggests that the channel was not very broad.

TO BE CONTINUED

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE ONLY AUTHORIZED AND BIOGRAPHIC

LIFE OF TALMAGE

Introduction by his Son

REV. FRANK DeWITT TALMAGE, D.D.

EDITED BY THE ASSOCIATE
EDITORS OF THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

contains over 500 pages; magnificently illustrated; price, $2.00. Highest commission; freight paid; credit given. No capital required; experience unnecessary. Any one can make from $10 to $25 per day easily. BEWARE OF OTHER TALMAGE BOOKS, as they are not genuine and biographic. The people want "The Only Authorized Life" and will have no other. Outfit free for 15 cents to cover postage. Order outfit to-day. Address

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO.,
718 Arch St., Phila., or 334 Dearborn St., Chicago.

LIFE of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage

Introduction by his son, Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage

Only authorized Life of Dr. Talmage. Public interest is intense. Beware of misleading advertisements. Don't waste time with "fake" books. Large volume, finely illustrated. Retail price $2.00. Special confidential terms to agents. May work full or part time. Agent's beautiful outfit free for 15c. postage. Rare opportunity. Act quickly. Address authorized publishers

INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHING CO.,
Dept. B, 44 N. Fourth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AGENTS To sell the only authorized life of Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage; introduction by his son Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage and associate editors of the Christian Herald. Outfit free. Address J. A. Stewart & Co., 385 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The best lamp
in the world is not best, without the chimney I make for it.

MACBETH.

My name on every one.

If you'll send your address, I'll send you the Index to Lamps and their Chimneys, to tell you what number to get for your lamp.

MACBETH, Pittsburgh.

Artistic Monuments

Cost No More than
Plain Ones in

White Bronze

Marble is entirely out of date. Granite soon gets moss-grown, discolored, requires constant expense and care, and eventually crumbles back to Mother Earth. Besides it is very expensive.

White Bronze is strictly everlasting. It cannot crumble with the action of frost. Moss growth is an impossibility. It is more artistic than any stone. Then why not investigate it? It has been adopted for nearly one hundred public monuments and by thousands of delighted customers in all parts of the country. Many granite dealers have used White Bronze in preference to granite for their own burial plots. We have designs from $100 to $4,000.00. Write at once for free designs and information. It puts you under no obligations. We deal direct and deliver everywhere. Over $70,000 worth of work sold to Christian Herald readers in the last few years.

The Monumental Bronze Co.
70-90 Howard Ave., Bridgeport, Conn.

The Style

of a "CORLISS" Collar is unmistakable—it is also dependable. For Spring and Summer we offer an attractive line in various shapes and heights, to suit every occasion and every individual. At all dealers 2 for 25c. If unable to procure them send to us. Whether you order or not, write for Complete Style Book, sent FREE.

DEPT. X, TROY, N. Y.

CORLISS, COON & CO.

COLUMBIA YARNS

For knitting and crocheting, the famous Columbia Yarns are unequalled. The well-known brands—German-town, Spanish, Saxony, Shetland Floss and Shetland Wool, are all celebrated for softness, elasticity, and evenness of thread, brilliancy and durability of color. They are sold by dealers everywhere, and each skein is bound with the Columbia Ring Label, without which none are genuine. The third edition of Columbia Book of the Use of Yarns ready April 15. At your dealer's. Price, 15 cents.

WOOLEN CLOTHS

FROM LOOM TO WEARER—EXPRESS PREPAID

If you have always bought cloth at a store, TRY THE MILL, where it is made, and have a revelation. No middlemen—only an mill profit to pay.

We make cloth for all outer apparel purposes, for men, women and children.

Write for free samples and booklet "Good Cloth"—stating what garment you wish to make.

PASSAIC WOOLEN COMPANY,
Mills: 15 South St., Passaic, N. J.

PRESIDENT SUSPENDERS

give ease and grace to every motion

Moves when you do. Adjusts itself to every bend of the body. Every pair guaranteed. Look for "President" on the buckles. Trimming can not rust. New model now ready for men of heavy work; also small size for boys. Price is 60c. If your dealer hasn't got them, send us the price and we will send you a pair. We pay the postage and you get the very latest designs.

C. A. EDGARTON MFG. CO.,
Box 209 Shirley, Mass.

There's Money in it!

"The breed that lays is the breed that pays"

SINGLE COMB WHITE LEGHORNS

There is money in them and pleasure as well. The suburbanite can make his poultry go a long way toward keeping his family. The young man or woman desiring a clean, healthy and money-making business, will find it in this occupation. We teach how to start right and furnish a complete outfit. A postal card will bring full particulars. Have you a few hens now? Perhaps you want to introduce new blood into your flock. Our strain of Single Comb white Leghorns is the finest in the country. Their show records prove it. Eggs for hatching from heavy laying matings $2.00 per 15; $8.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Prices on stock and eggs for hatching from prize-winning matings given on application.

The White Leghorn Poultry Yards, Box C, Waterville, N.Y.

PETS LIVE STOCK AND POULTRY OF ALL KINDS

ABSOLUTELY STOCK PEDIGREED AND REGISTERED. POULTRY SCORED FREE

all bred and raised at the Epitomist Experiment Station where the Agricultural Epitomist is edited and printed amid the activities of real farm life, in which results of experiments made at this Station are given from month to month together with other information of inestimable value to every farmer, garden and household generally, with any size farm down to the smallest garden plot. We breed nothing but the best and purest strains of all kinds of Stock and Poultry including Angora Goats, Scotch Collie Dogs, Belgian Hares, Etc., and all the best strains of Poultry. It is our aim to aid every one whose stock and poultry is not absolutely pure to start in right. A postal card with your name and address and calling attention to this advertisement, will get you full particulars together with descriptions and illustrations of our Pets, Stock and Poultry which we give absolutely free. Address

EPITOMIST EXPERIMENT STATION, Spencer, Ind.

ORNAMENTAL FENCE

25 designs, all steel. Handsome, durable. Cheaper than a wood fence. Special inducements to church and cemetery. Catalogue free. KOKOMO FENCE MACHINE CO., 415 North St., Kokomo, Indiana.

YOU CERTAINLY WILL

—If you order fence from us once you are certain to do it again. THE ADVANCE FENCE is sold direct from the factory to the farmer at wholesale prices. You get the best price. Entirely interwoven. No loose ends. Many heights. Write for free circulars and special prices. ADVANCE FENCE CO., 149 Old St., Peoria, Ill.

DON'T SET HENS the same old way when our new plan bears it 10 times. 1400 Egg Hatcher Cans Only $2. Over 94,000 use Yenda's 5000 agents wanted for 1902, either res. Pleasant work. Big profits. Catalogue and 10 Egg Formula FREE if you write today. Natural Hen Incubator Co., B 84, Columbus, Neb.

LIVING BREAD*

Spiritual Sustenance Provided for Every Spiritual Need

BREAD and water, the two essential elements of human sustenance, are both used by Christ as symbols of his relation to his people. The Jews who heard him utter the words about the living bread put a grossly literal meaning on the expression, as the Romish Church does to-day. The words do involve a mystery, and we are brought no nearer to their elucidation by adopting a literal explanation. It is still impossible to explain how the wafer of the Mass taken into the stomach can build up spiritual strength. There is no clue to the mystery so forcible as those words that Christ quoted in his temptation in the wilderness. His physical frame, enfeebled by his forty days' fast, was in that condition of need in which the suggestion that he turn the stones into bread would appeal to him. He put the temptation away from him with the words: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." That is to say, that human nature has higher needs than the material and physical. There is a hunger of the soul which needs such satisfaction as bread gives to the hunger of the body. The need is provided for, and as the strength of the body is restored and developed by eating food, so the strength of the soul is restored and developed by taking into it the sustenance God has provided.

Instances of mental hunger there have been, which help to explain the seeming anomaly. In some farm-house in a remote section of the country, there is a boy who, in some way, has had a vision of intellectual life. The visit of some highly educated traveler, or the casual possession of a book, has kindled an ambition to know. The desire grows into a passion. Perhaps his father, or employer, belongs to a family in whose occupation the farm has been for generations. Every representative of the family has been content with the most meagre mental equipment. He wonders what is the matter with the boy. Plenty of good wholesome food and comfortable quarters in the home do not seem to satisfy him. What more can he want? Send him to school and college, give him books and opportunity, and this want, mysterious and incomprehensible to the farmer, is satisfied. The boy could not live by bread alone. We say he devours his books, and truly they do seem to become a part of him, though we do not mean that he eats them.

The spiritual nature has also a hunger of its own. When once it becomes conscious of life, the soul learns its own weakness. It realizes that it needs sustenance. It does not control the life as it should. It does not even obey its own conceptions of duty. The picture Paul paints in the seventh chapter of Romans, is its sad experience. The good it would it does not, but it does the evil that it hates. What does it need? It needs to be invigorated. It needs power which must come to it from outside.

Christ affirms that he is that power and sustenance. The weak soul dwelling upon him, taking into itself his principles and spirit, will grow strong by him. It identifies itself with him, embodies in itself his teaching, lives his life, and grows into his image. Christ does not say how this is done, but he insists that if a man will do it he will realize that it is true though he cannot understand it. Experience proves the truth of his assertion. One instance out of many illustrates the idea. A Christian man takes honest pride in his good name. He may not be wealthy, but he rejoices in the fact that he pays his debts promptly, and maintains a good business standing. As he sees other men go into bankruptcy and hang their heads in shame, he feels that an experience like that would break his heart, would kill him. But he has not fully tested divine power. Reverses come, and he is not only flung into poverty, but he cannot pay his creditors the money he owes them. He does not abandon his faith, so he goes to God in prayer, asking for help to bear this heavy burden. The prayer is answered. He receives such proof of divine sympathy, such comfort from the divine presence as he never had before. He is wonderfully sustained, and as his friends drop away from him he cleaves closer to his God and is supported. He has learned that there are resources in God's love and help that he did not know of. He eats of the bread of life and is built up. So it may be in bereavement, or under temptation, or in some other way when the need of special strength arises, it is supplied and the living bread is found adequate to every need.

joices in the fact that he pays his debts promptly, and maintains a good business standing. As he sees other men go into bankruptcy and hang their heads in shame, he feels that an experience like that would break his heart, would kill him. But he has not fully tested divine power. Reverses come, and he is not only flung into poverty, but he cannot pay his creditors the money he owes them. He does not abandon his faith, so he goes to God in prayer, asking for help to bear this heavy burden. The prayer is answered. He receives such proof of divine sympathy, such comfort from the divine presence as he never had before. He is wonderfully sustained, and as his friends drop away from him he cleaves closer to his God and is supported. He has learned that there are resources in God's love and help that he did not know of. He eats of the bread of life and is built up. So it may be in bereavement, or under temptation, or in some other way when the need of special strength arises, it is supplied and the living bread is found adequate to every need.

New Jersey's Historic Sanctuary

RECENTLY, the Presbyterian Church of Cold Springs, Cape May, N. J., known as the "Old Brick Church," celebrated the sixty-second anniversary of its Sunday School. Connected with this church are two chapels, one at West Cape May, and the other on the Main Road, Cold Spring. The anniversary is always anticipated with much pleasure, not only by the congregations and Sunday Schools of the chapels and church, but by the entire community, the M. E. Chapel, at Fishing Creek, holding no service on anniversary day in order that its members may attend.

THE "OLD BRICK CHURCH"

The "Old Brick Church" has an interesting history. Its organization dates back to 1714, when it was under the care of the Presbytery of Philadelphia, then the highest court of the Presbyterian Church in this country. A piece of board of the old building still preserved, bears the inscription, "1714." The first pastor was Rev. John Bradner, of Scotland. The present shepherd of the fold is Rev. D. H. Laverty, D.D. President Benjamin Harrison used to make his church home while residing at Cape May Point. Mr. John Wanamaker, who has a cottage at the Point, attends worship here. Here it was that the Rev. Mr. Fernly and Prof. John R. Sweeny, with his picked choir, held their first evangelical meeting in Cape May County. Many other notable events have occurred in this church. FRANK TULLIS CHURCH.

IN THE BATTLE-LINE

BE loyal to the Saviour's cause; The triumph will be divine; Though foes be strong and strife be long Stand firm in the battle-line.

CHORUS.

Stand firm in the battle-line, my brother,
Stand firm in the battle-line;
Let thy faith ne'er fail and thou shalt prevail,
Stand firm in the battle-line.

Gird on the armor of the Lord,
The shield of salvation bear,
Till warfare's done and victory won,
Then garlands of honor wear.

Stand firm beside the faithful ones
Who battle against the wrong,
Then bye and bye, beyond the sky,
With them sing the victor's song.

South Whitley, Ind. JENNIE WILSON.

Dollar Watch

FITS A MAN'S POCKET

in more ways than one. It gives him a guaranteed accurate time-piece for less than the cost of ordinary repairs. Ask for an "Ingersoll" and see that you get it.

For sale by 25,000 dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Our book tells about this and all our other watches. Send for it—it's free.

ROBT. H. INGERSOLL & BRO.
Dept. 61 67 Cortlandt Street, N. Y.

buys the celebrated, high grade new 1902 Model EDGEMERE BICYCLE, 28-inch wheel, any height frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT, ANY COLOR ENAMEL, STRONGEST GUARANTEE. $10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle. $12.75 for the celebrated 1902 Elgin King or Elgin Queen. $15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MORGAN & WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC TIRES, A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE. 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL. For the most wonderful bicycle offer ever heard of, WHITE FOLK OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Farmers' Handy Wagon

With 4-Inch Tire Steel Wheels

Low and handy. Saves labor. Wide tires, avoid cutting farm into ruts. Will hold up any two-horse load. We also furnish Steel Wheels to fit any axle. Any size wheel, any width of tire. Catalogue free. Address Empire Manufacturing Co. Quincy, Ill.

The Life of the Wheel depends upon the make of the wheel. ELECTRIC WHEELS last almost forever. Fit any wagon, straight or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free. ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 136, Quincy, Ill.

Free Trial. Get a HAWKEYE. It is sold on thirty days' free trial. Copper tank, three walls, most perfect heating and ventilating system; fully guaranteed. 60-egg machine $7.50 on trial. Write for free book, or send 10c for catalogue and a year's subscription to leading poultry paper. HAWKEYE INC. CO. Dept. Z. Newton, Iowa.

* Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, for May 11. John 6:22-35; 45-58

A CHINA HEAD

Comes From Tea Drinking

A lady writes from Shanghai, China, "In the summer of '98, Husband and I were traveling through Southern Europe, and I was finally laid up in Rome with a slow fever. An American lady gave me some Postum Food Coffee which I began using at once. It was my sole breakfast and supper. In a short time the change in my physical condition was wonderful to see. I will never travel again without Postum."

When we arrived in Shanghai we were in an English community and found ourselves in the midst of the four o'clock tea custom. Before long we began to have sleepless nights and nervous days as a result of our endeavors to be amiable and conform to custom.

As soon as it could arrive from San Francisco we had a large supply of Postum Food Coffee, and began its use at the four o'clock tea table. I cannot tell how popular the coffee table became for afternoon callers. In fact a number of the business men, as well as missionaries, use Postum now wholly in place of tea, and the value of the change from coffee and tea cannot be estimated. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE Internal Bath

More Important than the External

If external cleanliness is essential to health, how much more important is internal cleanliness? Every disease arises from the retention of waste and foreign matter in the system—Nature's drainage being blocked. In the vast majority of cases the clogging is in the colon or large intestine. Positively the one armless and efficient means of clearing away this waste is the eternal bath given with the

J. B. L. CASCADE

The treatment is a sovereign remedy for and prevention of 90% of all Digestive derangements. It is Hygienic, scientific and logical. It is a perfect tonic, with no after depression. Its action

Prevents Appendicitis

Billiousness, Dyspepsia, Obesity, Headaches, Constipation, etc. It is recommended and prescribed by such eminent physicians as Dr. DANIEL LEWIS, Pres. N. Y. State Bd. of Health. Dr. HERMAN J. GOLDT, Prof. Post Graduate Hospital, N. Y. Dr. V. B. DE GARMO, Prof. Post Graduate Hospital, N. Y. Dr. CYRUS EDSON, and many others, among whom are the following clergymen, who testify as to its great value: Rev. JOHN POTTS, Victoria College, Toronto, Can.; Rev. A. T. BOWSER, 906 Broome Street, Wilmington, Del.; Rev. JOSEPH VOOD, Germantown, Pa.; Rev. CHAS. S. TINKER, Bridge, N. J.; Rev. J. N. WATERBURY, Tawas City, Mich.; Rev. W. H. HILLER, M. E. Church, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Were it possible to reproduce here our file of voluntary letters of commendation received from prominent people, who do not ordinarily permit the use of their names in advertisements, no doubt could exist in one's mind as to the extraordinary merit of the "J. B. L. Cascade" treatment.

These facts are set forth in detail in a booklet entitled "The What, The Why, The Way," which we desire to send free to every reader of this publication. It is a most noteworthy statement of what progress has been made toward a medical system without drugs—an end which is naturally desired by all.

The Ralston Health Club, which as an organization has had the greatest growth of this or any age, having almost Ten Million Members Throughout the World, authorizes us to say: "Our Cascade" is not endorsed by the Ralston Health Club of America, as that Club never endorses anything, no matter how good, but it has been officially adopted by the Club for use in the inward bath treatment, which is one of its many systems of natural cure."

TYRRELL'S HYGIENIC INSTITUTE
Dept. 10K, 1502 Broadway, New York

TRICYCLES for Invalids
WHEEL CHAIRS

Made to specifications to fit every case.

Obtain our prices on any special work desired. Catalogue Free.

Z. C. FAY TRICYCLE & INVALID CHAIR CO.,
Elyria, Ohio.

Invalid Comfort

Chairs (out-door or in-door) for a third less than usual; and yet strong and well-built—a shaky chair makes people nervous.

Our name on all our chairs. If your dealer won't sell you ours, write for book. We pay freight anywhere in the United States.

Philadelphia Baby Carriage Factory,
Eighth and Spring Garden, Philadelphia.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

A Christian Endeavor Meeting in the Taj Mahal

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR meetings have been held in all sorts of unlikely places. I once attended one in the hollow trunk of a big tree in California. I have knelt with other Endeavorers in the contracted cabin of a Japanese steamer. I have seen the "prayer shelf" which some earnest Juniors of Turkey mounted that they might find a place for their meeting, and also the bare, hot hillside, baked in the glare of centuries of Indian sunshine, where some Juniors of western India draw near to God.

But the most wonderful spot for an Endeavor meeting was the Taj Mahal, of Agra. It stands on the banks of the sacred Jumna, and was built by the famous Shah Jehan as a tomb for his beloved wife, Mumtaz. It cost twenty millions of dollars. But these figures give no idea of its real value or of the wealth lavished upon it, until we remember that even paid labor in India at the present time costs only seven or eight cents a day, and that the Taj was built largely by forced labor, for which nothing was paid. Twenty thousand men worked for twenty-two years to make this the grandest and most exquisite tomb that poor mortality ever occupied. It is entirely of white marble, from the lowest course to the topmost pinnacle of the majestic dome, which seems to soar like a mighty bubble toward the sky, its spotless dome so unstained and unmarred is it by the hand of time. You approach the Taj through a magnificent gateway of red sandstone and white marble. Just within this gateway you find yourself at the edge of a long and lovely garden, filled with orchids and roses and brilliant flowers which we never see in a temperate clime. Palms and orange trees and huge banyans compete with humbler shrubs to add their beauty to the garden. Down the centre runs a long, shallow marble basin, perhaps five hundred feet in length, filled with gold fish and silver fish.

At the end of this vista of perfect loveliness rises the Taj—that exquisite dream in white marble, absolutely the most faultless and perfectly satisfying building in all the world.

We pass within the ever-open portal, through an inner screen of lacelike marble, and find ourselves at the tomb of the beautiful queen. This is in the exact centre of the building, while at one side, and raised a little higher, is the tomb of Shah Jehan himself. Both of these tombs are sprinkled thick with inlaid jewels.

In this inner tomb was the little Christian Endeavor meeting held. There were twelve or thirteen of us. We were all seated upon the tombs. Overhead soared the vast dome, two hundred feet above our heads. So perfect is this dome that every sound uttered within the tomb is echoed and reechoed, and echoed again, a hundred times, until it dies away in the vast bubble. Especially are high musical tones reproduced in a most weirdly, marvelous way, until you almost think that a choir of ten thousand angels has taken up the song, and is chanting the refrain begun on earth.

Jack and Grandma

LITTLE son, get your red coat, and let us go and play at the pond. I have all the boats and we can sail them.

Jack was so joyful that he turned three somersaults in the grass. Then, pulling

*Fellow Travelers. A Personally Conducted Journey in Three Continents, with Impressions of Men, Things and Events. By Rev. Francis E. Clark, D.D., President of the World's Christian Endeavor Union. Pp. 288. Cloth and illustrated. Price $1.25. Published by Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

*A Bonnie Boy. A story of Happy Days. By Julia MacNair Wright. Pp. 206; $1; published by the American Tract Society, 150 Nassau St. New York City.

his cart, he trotted before grandma over the hill. It was very lovely at the pond. The white bush honeysuckle and the spice bush made all the air sweet; yellow water lilies, blue arrow-plant, golden St. John's Wort, and tall purple flags, made fragrant bouquets all around the still, shining pond. Birds and dragon flies and butterflies darted and dipped over the water, and Jack was much delighted with some whirling bugs that dashed over the surface of the blue pond as if it were a firm floor. Grandma told him they had air bubbles on for skates. Grandma put Jack into a boat, and they pushed out the length of the mooring rope and then set their fleet of little ships and boats on the water. Some of them they loaded with flowers, and some with chips. Some water beetles and frogs came up to look at them, and a turtle stuck his head out of the water at a safe distance. Jack played in the water for more than an hour. Then the boats were put into the basket. Jack filled his cart with flowers for bouquets, and they set out for home. As they climbed up the hill, grandma heard a cheery little voice behind her, calling out, "How you getting on, darling?"

"First-rate," said grandma, looking back at the square little figure tugging along: Moses under one arm, the cart dragging by the other hand, the round pink face streaming with perspiration, his curls hanging damp about his neck.

The Story of Washington

IN two handsome volumes, bearing the title, Washington, the Capital City, and its part in the History of the Nation. Rufus Rockwell Wilson has presented a work which gives to the student and the general reader what has long been desired—the story of the nation and its capital in an attractive and engaging literary form. It is a pleasure to turn from dry histories and still duller, matter-of-fact guide-books, to these pages, which invest the story with all the charm of a romance, with this difference, that it is literally true. The author has dug out of the old records a great deal that is intensely entertaining, yet little known to the average American, about the early days of Washington, its people, its society, its leading families and its quaint colonial customs. He leads us along from the time when John Burnes owned a great part of what is now the site of the city, to the time of building the White House and the full establishment of the National Government with its varied machinery. An interesting chapter is devoted to the original plan of the Washington monument; another to the White House in Monroe's time, and a third to the Van Buren regime. A thousand entertaining episodes, social and official, little known or else forgotten, are revived and told in a quaint and pleasing way. The Washington of Lincoln's day and generation is equally interesting and well described. The space devoted to a full explanation of the Smithsonian Institution and the various departments at the present time is crowded with valuable information. At every page one encounters some striking incident, historical or biographical, and entertaining passages in the lives of many of the most distinguished Americans and the best known families of a century are related with such detail and fidelity that one is struck by the amount of research involved in the securing of such material for the work. The two volumes are well illustrated, and make together 830 pages, cloth bound, top gilt. Price $3.50. J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia, publishers.

BOOKS RECEIVED

God's Perfect Will, by Rev. G. Campbell Morgan. Chapters on the Message of the Bible, the Threefold Demand and the Practicability of the Realization. Pp. 164. Price 50 cents. Published by the Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, Chicago and Toronto.

Ralston
PURINA CEREALS

Send us $2.00 and your grocer's name and we will send you, FREE, a baby wagon (everywhere east of Rocky Mts.), an elegant wagon, strongly built, iron axles, containing Two Dollars' worth of Cereals—5 packages of Ralston Breakfast Food, 1 of Oats, 1 of Barley, 1 of Pankake Flour, 1 of Hominy Grits and 2 1/2 lbs. sacks of Purina Health Flour. The Wagon is Free. Only one to a family.

PURINA MILLS
"Where Purity is Paramount"

874 Gratiot Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Baby's Go-Cart

The Bloch reclining go-cart makes the baby (or older child) more comfortable; makes less work for the mother; is better-looking; is better built; it takes up less room; it is better in every way than any other go-cart or baby-carriage. It is go-cart and baby-carriage put together.

BLOCH is stamped on every Bloch go-cart. Get a Bloch of your dealer if he has it, or of us if he won't get it for you.

You will have the best go-cart and baby-carriage in town, and it won't cost you so much as a baby-carriage alone.

We ship to any part of the United States and we pay the freight. Send for book.

PHILADELPHIA BABY CARRIAGE FACTORY
Eighth and Spring Garden, Philadelphia

Pullman Combination Go-Carts

Called "Pullman" because they can be turned into a Baby Carriage. Are a boon to baby and mother alike. Always ready when baby wants to sleep or sit up comfortably; a perfect ambulator in the park or street; a hygienic bed at home. Over 50 HANDSOME 1902 STYLES beautiful reed-work; upholstery and parasols of best materials. green enameled, specially trued gears of Bessemer steel; wheels rubber tired, with latest improvements throughout. Also a complete line of Baby Carriages from $3.75 up. Sent subject to approval, to be returned at our expense and money promptly refunded if not satisfactory. Write for catalog today, FREE.

CASH BUYERS' UNION (INC.)
154-168 W. Van Buren St., Dept. C-1, Chicago, Ill.

A NICE GO-CART
For Your Baby
AT FACTORY PRICES

Do you intend to buy a pretty Go-Cart for your baby? If so, write us for our catalog; shows all the latest styles of sleeper Go-Carts, from the cheapest to the best, and at prices much less than you can purchase in the stores, because we sell from factory to you, and pay freight.

Write and see if we cannot please you.

MARQUA CARRIAGE & TOY CO.,
Dept. 3. CINCINNATI, O.

Cash for REAL ESTATE
no matter where it is. Send description and cash price and get my wonderfully successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHEAP RATES California, Washington, Oregon, Colorado. We save railroad rates on household goods and furniture shipped to the above States. Write for rates. Mapes, California, Free.
TRANS-CONTINENTAL FREIGHT CO.
38 Market Street, Chicago, and 40 West 24th Street, New York

SHE LIKES HER MATTRESS.

You can't blame her for it is an

Ezybed Kapok Mattress

You would like it too, for it is elegantly made, light in weight, soft and elastic. It fits the body and is sanitary and durable. We sell it on 60 nights' trial, and deliver it to your home, expressage paid. Our handsome booklet, "Ezybeds of Kapok," tells more about our elegant line of mattresses, also about our pillows and cushions, for cosy corners, yachts, etc. We mail it free.

The Bohnert Brunsmann Company,
Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

G & J Bicycle Tires

YOU JUDGE the worth of a tire by its speed, good wearing qualities and ease of repair.

G & J TIRES are made from the best rubber; are light enough to be resilient, strong enough to be durable, and easy riding, thus insuring comfort and safety. Catalogue at your Agent's or by mail.

G & J TIRE CO., Indianapolis, Ind.
Also Makers of G & J Tires for Motor Bicycles, Carriages and Automobiles.

Handsome Hardwood Mantels

With and without mirrors. Handsomely carved from perfectly seasoned woods selected for Rare Beauty of Grain.

We sell direct from factory with freight paid to your home.

Write for free booklet, showing styles telling why our mantels excel and how you save money and get a better selection by buying direct. Also tells how to properly set mantels, tiles, grates, etc.

WHITE MANTEL AND TILE CO.,
615 Gay St., Knoxville, Tenn.

Floors and stairways treated with

61 Floor Finish

do not show scratches or heel marks, but present a brilliant, durable and cleanly surface. Booklet on care of hardwood floors sent free.

PRATT & LAMBERT
New York, Long Island City.
Chicago, 310-375 24th St.

CLASS PINS this style, with any letters or figures and one or two colors of enamel, sterling silver, 25c. each; $2.50 a doz. Silver plated, 10c. each; $1.00 a doz.

Special designs in pins or badges made for any class or society at reasonable prices; send design for estimates. Catalogue free. Bastian Bros., Rochester, 87 N.Y.

The Natural Body Brace advertised in this paper in the first issue of this month, is a delightful, certain remedy for ailments peculiar to women and girls. It makes walking and work easy; gives good figure and light step. Write the Natural Body Brace Co., Box 171, Salina, Kan., for free illustrated book.

PRAYING MEN SURPRISED

Christians Who Could Not Believe That God Had Answered Them

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

THERE are those who are frequently occupied with doubt as to God's dealings with his people. "Why," they ask, "should Stephen and James have suffered such early martyrdom, and Peter and Paul have so often escaped, to be martyred late in life?" No man can answer such questions. Where there is a complete satisfaction with the character of God, and full belief in his perfect love and unerring wisdom, such thoughts do not arise. But for the sake of such as Satan may succeed in troubling by them, we may remind our readers once again of two classes of the men of faith in Heb. 11. They who by faith were delivered, and that in a most miraculous way (Heb. 11: 32-35), and others who by faith were tortured, not accepting their deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection; of whom the world was not worthy. There are secrets of God's dealings with his saints which are hidden from man and which cannot be reduced to human system. Let us adore him who cannot but do right, and cease to dishonor him and to torment ourselves and others by useless questions.

When Peter had been led by the angel out of prison into the street and was left alone, he first recognized the hand of God who had sent the angel and delivered him out of the hand of Herod and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews. And when he had considered, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark (the son of the sister of Barnabas, Col. 4: 10). What drew him there? Peter knew the voice of the Spirit of God, and without doubt he had some intimation that he should go to that house where prayer was being made. He knocked, and a maid came to answer named Rhoda, who knew his voice, and, leaving him still outside the closed door, she ran in to tell the praying company that Peter was standing before the door. Instead of believing that their prayers were answered they said, "Thou art mad," and when she insisted it was he, they said, "It is his angel." But Peter continued knocking, and when they had opened they saw him and were amazed.

Why should they have been amazed? When the company of the disciples after the first signs of persecution had prayed for boldness to speak the Word by the stretching forth of God's hand to heal, etc. (Acts 4: 29-31), when "the place was shaken where they were assembled together, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost," there was no such astonishment. They had counted on their God. They knew they were in the will of God, and that he heard them, and so they knew that they had the petition which they desired of him (1 John 5: 14, 15). This confidence in him had declined in the church at Jerusalem.

There were many gathered together praying in the house of Mary. Perhaps there was more in quantity than quality. It is not the number of those who pray which makes prayer effectual; it is that those who pray count on God's fulfilling his Word. It is not according to our numbers, to the length or the eloquence or apparent fervency of our prayers, but on our faith in the faithfulness of God, that the power lies. Peter told the praying company what had happened to him, and how their prayers were answered. And charging them to tell James and the rest of the brethren, he departed, and went elsewhere. We read of him again at Jerusalem, where the first synod of the Christian Church took place (Acts 11).

But Herod must be held responsible for the way in which he had treated two of the Lord's servants. When it was day there was no small stir among the soldiers what was become of Peter—no trace of him, no evidence could be found of his efforts to escape—nothing but his unaccountable absence. Had the history of God's opening the prison doors (Acts 5: 17-27), never reached the ears of Herod? Had he never heard of how that and the first imprisonment of Peter and John (Acts 4: 3) had been futile? Was he not now consciously fighting against God? In the councils of heaven it was so regarded, and God dealt with him accordingly. Herod's sin must ripen, and then the full judgment of God must fall upon him. He executed the innocent soldiers who had guarded Peter, thereby giving the lie to the miraculous interposition of God. This sin led on to greater sins still. There is a graduating in wickedness as in righteousness, and this wicked king was soon to fill up the measure of his iniquity.

He had a quarrel with Tyre and Sidon which were dependent upon Judea for supplies of food-stuffs, so the people carried favor with Blastus his chamberlain, who no doubt told them the weak side of the tyrant, and they flattered him when he made an oration to them, and said, "The voice of a God, and not of a man." It was his crowning sin to have thus accepted Divine honors.

A NEW REMARKABLE INVENTION

Time and again in these columns attention has been called to the dangers of drinking unpurified water.

Statistics show that 250,000 deaths, over 500,000 cases of dyspepsia, stomach, heart and blood diseases, all kinds of fevers, typhoid, yellow, scarlet—malaria and kindred diseases are caused annually by unpurified drinking-water.

Is it any wonder we have sickness, affliction and premature death on every hand when our wells, cisterns, hydrants and streams are polluted with sewage, drains, surface water, decayed animal and vegetable matter, lime and other health-wrecking minerals, alkali, fever and disease germs, etc.?

A genius of Ohio has invented a new device known as the Puritan Water-still, that is proving a blessing to thousands of users. It is a plain, simple, heavy sheet-metal device, which, placed over the kitchen stove, purifies the foulest water by a new process of distillation, removing all impurities, mud, lime, alkali, health-wrecking minerals, fever and disease germs, etc., and furnishes plenty of pure, distilled water for family use—clear, soft, sparkling, delicious to the taste, absolutely pure and safe.

That millions will be sold is the foregone conclusion. No man and woman can in this day and age but realize the absolute necessity of purifying all drinking water before using.

THOUSANDS A WEEK

Upon inquiry at the factory, we found that this invention has caused a remarkable excitement all over the United States; that their capacity has been tested to the utmost, the demand being so enormous—orders aggregating hundreds daily.

From the thousands of letters received from users, it is plain to be seen that the world is hungry for pure distilled water, that may be drunk without fear or reproach. Some of these letters give a vivid picture of water as we get it, and below are printed a few extracts that show the wonderful benefit derived from distilled water.

Rev Park O. Herbert, pastor Christian Church at Burlington, Kan., writes: "I consider the Puritan a blessing to humanity, a necessity in every family, and hope to live to see it in use in every home in the land. It produces absolutely pure, delicious drinking-water for my family of four persons from water which before distillation was not fit to drink."

Frank W. Johnson says: "For five years past I suffered from kidney and bladder troubles, little thinking it was caused by our drinking water. I spent about $100 doctoring, receiving but little benefit. Since I received the Puritan and drink only distilled water I have felt like a new man. My kidney and bladder troubles are no more and I have not had a pain or ache for nine weeks."

Mrs. J. R. Stacy says: "Our hydrant water is muddy. The children and my husband were sick so much I thought it must be the water. I got one of your Stills and now we all drink distilled water. It is delicious. Have had no sickness, and the children are doing fine on it."

A prominent physician, Dr. Lilly, says: "Thank God, every family can now have pure water, purified by distillation. It is truly 'the elixir of life.' Will prolong life, prevent old age, almost every disease, and save doctor bills."

Miss Lulu Wilson says: "Our well and cistern water, when distilled, is perfectly lovely. Relieved father's rheumatism and kidney troubles."

James Pilcher says: "Out here in the alkali country your Puritan Still is just what everybody needs. This water seems to dry up our insides, harden our bones and causes almost every disease. Even the horses die of kidney disease, and we are all thin. Distillation removes all the alkali and impurities, turns this water into a pure, delicious drink, palatable and satisfying. I would not take $50 for my Puritan."

Fred D. Hale, D.D., pastor Third Baptist Church, Owensboro, Ky., writes: "Have received the Puritan Still. Perfectly delighted with the water we get from it. It furnishes not only clear, sparkling, but absolutely pure drinking water for my family of nine, and I consider its use a great preventive of disease."

Dr. R. W. Thomas: "Filtering is like perfuming sewer gas. Distilled water is the only water to drink with perfect safety."

Dr. L. M. Walley: "The death rate in this neighborhood from typhoid, heart, kidney, bowel troubles and other diseases are alarmingly large. Our impure water supply is the cause. I advised every one of my families to obtain a Puritan, not only as a protection from disease, but because I believe distilled water is the only water that young or old should touch."

Other remarkable cases are those of Emma Edmonds, who was relieved of dyspepsia and stomach troubles of six years' standing; Ralph Curry, an old war veteran of '61, who was relieved of dysentery and bowel troubles contracted during the war. Also Mrs. Margaret A. Thompson, who suffered for years with liver and heart troubles, and was entirely relieved by drinking large quantities of distilled water.

PHYSICIANS BELIEVE IN IT

Austin Flint, M.D., New York City, highly recommends distilled water, as also does Mrs. Mary R. Melendy, M.D., who says: "To insure a permanently smooth and brilliant complexion, use only distilled water. It is splendid for babies and children. It keeps the blood pure, the bowels regular, prevents colic, cramps, etc."

The Ralston Health Club says: "Well water is, at its best, a hastener of the ills that flesh is heir to. We can prove that all typhoids, nearly all malarial, contagious and organic diseases, are due to the water we drink. There is no doubt that distilled water is the best medicine that can enter the system."

Dr. R. N. Tooker, Chicago: "For flushing the kidneys, stimulating the sluggish liver, eliminating waste matter from the system, pure distilled water furnishes the long-sought desideratum."

C. P. Cathart, M.D., Kansas City, Mo., says: "Distilled water is a powerful solvent, and at the same time a delightful drink; prevents disease; relieves rheumatism by dissolving the acid crystals."

James H. Jackson, M.D., physician-in-chief of the Sanitarium, Dansville, N. Y., says: "The purest water in New York State is inferior to distilled water."

Dr. David H. Reeder, of Chicago, says: "Now as we have learned that pure distilled water is one of the most powerful solvents, is not man wise when he decides to follow the example of the Creator and distill for himself a supply of water that cannot be contaminated with soil or disease germs, and provide himself with a safe guard against both disease and old age?"

More evidence is certainly unnecessary to convince all that a device that produces distilled water should be in every home. Investigation proves that this "Puritan Water Still" is well, durably and handsomely made of the best material throughout, and with proper care should last a lifetime. It is so simple to operate that even a child could easily do it safely. It is amply large enough for family use. May be easily carried in a trunk when traveling; weighs about four pounds.

ALL READERS

Should have one of these remarkable Stills. Drinking unpurified water is certainly a sin, for the preservation of health is a solemn duty you owe your Creator.

Don't fail to write to-day to the Harrison Mfg. Co., 625 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O., who are the only makers, for full information, valuable book, etc. Sent free. Or, better, order a Still. The price is wonderfully low. Only $8. for finest and best solid copper Still No. 9, complete, or $5. for Style No. 7. Tin complete, including plain directions, and it is indeed difficult to imagine where one could invest that amount of money in anything else that guarantees such security and good health. You can't be disappointed, for this company is responsible and reliable. Capital, $100,000. Will ship immediately upon receipt of your remittance, by money order, draft, check or registered letter, and guarantee every Still and will refund your money after ten days' use if not just as represented.

In any event, don't fail to send for booklet, as it is full of interesting matter. This Still is proving

A WONDERFUL SELLER FOR AGENTS.

The demand seems to be enormous. Millions will certainly be sold, and the company offer special inducements to both men and women upon request. Thousands of Puritan Stills can be sold in every city and county in the United States. Everybody drinks water, and every body wants it pure. Many are making $100 to $200 a month and expenses. Write to-day

THE DAWNING LIGHT

KEP working on for what is right,
And God will shed around his light,
As daylight follows after night;
Then all, at last, the dawn shall see,
And know the will of God shall be
To make our souls sincere and free.

While only truth and love shall stay
To usher in life's glorious day
And teach mankind the heavenly way,
To find God's kingdom, bright and fair,
Where souls are free from mortal care,
And find sweet peace, beyond compare.

—MARTHA SHEPARD LIPPINCOTT.

Forestown, N. J.

THE CRUSADE
AGAINST PROFANITY

N response to the article in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD of Feb. 26th, setting forth the work of the Anti-Profanity League, hundreds of the readers have sent in to the secretary of the League letters of interest, encouragement and enlistment in the cause. So many pledges of membership have been received, that in just one month the League has members, from every rank in life, thirty States, one Territory and Canada, uniting their efforts against America's most popular sin.

A Presbyterian Mission teacher among the Indians in Utah writes, "The most fearful things are matters of common conversation. I am glad of anything looking toward a rebuke of it. I enclose pledge-cards signed by my school children." A lady in a village in New York writes, "Profanity was so terrible at the fire and post office, that I would neither go nor let my children go. I sent to the proprietor, and he returned word that he would ban the talk up, and I need no longer fear to go." In the town of Talmage, Pa., the woman of the largest cigar factory called the men together before work and told them that the rights of the Christian men must be respected, and that if any could not do without swearing they need not put on their aprons.

Local agent of the Methodist Church South, writes, "I see the great need of a forward movement here, and will do what I can." A teacher, by the wise use of literature in the teaching-room in a Massachusetts shoe factory, reports that there is no longer swearing in her presence. A city missionary in Omaha,
Nebraska, is organizing the newsboys into a League, and instead of wearing a button advertising a certain brand of cigarettes, they will be wearing one reading, "Swear not at all." A Philadelphia daily paper has taken up the agitation there, with the result that scores of sermons are being preached, leagues organized, and the attention of the public forcibly drawn to the Third Commandment.

Never in the history of Christendom has profanity been so prevalent as now, and never has now has any organized movement been made to check it. Any reader who would like to aid the movement to make God's name be held in greater honor, will receive full particulars if he will write to Roland D.
Wyer, General Secretary, Anti-Profanity
League, Hanson, Mass.

Chinese Eating Grass and Acorns

Harry H. Fox, Honorary Secretary of the Anglo-Flood Relief Fund, writes from Shanghai to Dr. Kiopsch, acknowledging receipt of $1,000 U. S. gold, handed to him through the American Consul-General, Mr.
Goodnow, being THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's contribution to the fund, and conveying the thanks of the Committee. Mr. Fox writes:
"The money collected in China (amounting to the $18,000 Mexican), is almost exhausted;
the distress among the poor people in the Anglo valley is still very widespread and acute. We have already helped thousands escape starvation by distribution of rice and other foodstuffs, but thousands still remain in utter destitution, subsisting on grass and acorns, and even eating stones—a soft stone in some places being pounded to powder and mixed with tree bark to make bread! And, of this, many can afford only one meal a day. The distribution is mainly effected by the local missionaries, but the funds are always in the hands of the British Consuls or Commissioners of the Imperial Customs."

A CORNISH
PIANO OR ORGAN
Free

FOR A YEAR

We will ship any Cornish
American Piano or Organ upon the distinct understanding that if not found entirely satisfactory after 12 months' use we will take it back and refund purchase money and freight charges with 6% int. added.

Thus Giving You One Year's Free Trial in Your Own Home.

You take no risk when you buy on the celebrated Cornish Plan. It is the only way. Arguments and claims are worthless in the face of this guarantee. If as good pianos and organs could be bought anywhere else for as little money, we could not afford to make an offer like this, but we'll go further. In proof of this statement which may to some appear extravagant, we give to every purchaser a guarantee that is practically a bond secured on the whole of our plant and property, worth over ONE MILLION DOLLARS, warranting each instrument sold to be exactly as represented. Furthermore the Cornish American Pianos and Organs are distinct and different in construction and appearance from any other make and are sold on their merits to the public direct without the intervention of agents and dealers; and as a matter of fact they are BETTER in EVERY IMPORTANT CHARACTERISTIC than the majority of other makes. EVERYTHING is gained and one-half saved to purchasers of the CORNISH instruments. OVER A QUARTER OF A MILLION SATISFIED PATRONS testify as to this.

MINIATURE PIANOS AND ORGANS FREE

To every intending purchaser we will present a beautiful set of miniatures, being accurate representations of our Pan-American models of the latest styles in Cornish Pianos and Organs. These miniatures constitute the most costly advertisements ever issued and enable anyone to select an instrument no matter at what distance they live—as the Piano and Organ in exact color as to wood, etc., is exactly reproduced. This elegant embossed set is sent free and with it the CORNISH AMERICAN SOUVENIR CATALOGUE handsomely illustrated with presentation plate in colors and fully depicting and describing 50 exposition models of Cornish American Pianos and Organs, also our interesting book "The Heart of the People" and our co-partnership plan by which you or anyone can get a

CORNISH PIANO or ORGAN FREE.

Send us your address to-day and we will mail catalogue and miniatures FREE if you mention this paper.

CORNISH CO., WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

FOR 50 YEARS PIANO & ORGAN MAKERS to the AMERICAN PEOPLE

Be a Trained Nurse

and find Ready Employment which is agreeable and profitable. A thorough, practical course of instruction and training is given by an institution established under the laws of the State of Michigan—a course which you can take at home, in your own town, by mail, at small expense, with opportunity to earn during the course more than double what it costs you. Diplomas are issued to our graduates which guarantees our course of instruction. Terms and all particulars mailed on application. THE DETROIT SCHOOL OF NURSING, (Inc.) Suite 22-30 Chamber of Commerce, Detroit, Mich.

THE "BEST" LIGHT

is a portable 100 candle power light, costing only 25¢ per week. Makes and burns (seven gas). Brighter than electricity or kerosene, and cheaper than kerosene. No Dirt. No Grease. No Odor. Over 100,000 lbs. tested instantly with a match. Every lamp warranted. Agents Wanted Everywhere.

THE BEST LIGHT CO., 3-70 E. 5th St., Canton, Ohio.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL. Largest Nursery. Free Book Free. Result of 76 years' experience. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Danville, N.Y.

CAN WE HELP YOU?

We find for Employers on short notice, no matter where located, guaranteed capable, reliable and experienced help, male or female, for any and every position or grade of employment. Cashiers, teachers, salesmen, Bookkeepers, Stenographers, Agents, etc., all trades, Railroad, Domestic and Farm help. We also find positions of employment for worthy persons in all walks of life, no matter where you live. Our system is perfect and successful. Write for our plan and application blank stating your wants. Enclose stamp to NATIONAL EMPLOYERS SUPPLY CO., Newark, New Jersey.

DO YOU KNOW HOW to Read Character From Handwriting? If you want to find out, are experienced in book-cannvassing and want to make more money than you ever have made, address, R. S. MICHILL & CO., 156 Fifth Ave., New York City.

1877 FOR 25 YEARS 1902
we have successfully treated all forms of Cancer, Tumors and other low growths except in the stomach, and the Thoracic Cavity
Without the use of the knife.
As a logical result of our success

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS Sanatorium

has become the largest and most completely approved private institution in the world for the treatment of a special class of diseases, and has no rivals.

All physicians are cordially invited, as our guests.
Upon receipt of a description of any case, the more or tumor
we will mail you a full and complete booklet, THE MOST VALU-ABLE AND COMPREHENSIVE TREATISE ever published on this special subject, and will give you an opinion as to what can be accomplished by our method of treatment, and will refer you to former patients.

DRS. W. E. BROWN & SON, North Adams, Mass.

Cod Liver Oil
is a food

and the greatest care should be exercised in its selection.

Peter Moller's
Cod Liver Oil

is the best oil that over fifty years of continued scientific research has produced. By the process employed the oil is kept from contact with the atmosphere from the beginning of the process of manufacture until it is safely corked up in bottles, thus preventing contamination of any kind and excluding all impurities.

Ask for Peter Moller's Oil, and see that the bottle, a flat oval one, bears our name as agents. Notice the date in perforated letters at bottom of the label.

Schieffelin & Co., New York

ARE YOU
DEAF

The Morley Ear-drum makes up for all deficiencies of the impaired natural ear. Entirely different from any other device. No drugs. No wire, rubber, metal nor glass.
Invisible, comfortable, safe. Adjusted by any one.

For sale by leading druggists.

If yours doesn't have them, write for booklet, FREE

THE MORLEY COMPANY, Dept. E,
19 South 16th Street, Philadelphia

CORNS PERMANENTLY
RELIEVED FREE

ALLEN'S ANTISEPTIC CORN PLASTER
relieves corns permanently. To prove it
I will mail free plaster to any one. Send name and address—no money.

GEORGE M. DORRANCE, 221 Fulton St., Dept. G, New York

STEM-WIND WATCH CHAIN AND CHARM

You can get a Stem-Wind, Nickel-Plated
Watch, warranted, also a Chain and Charm for selling 19 packages of Blume at the cash Send name and address at once and we will forward you the Blume and our large Premium List, postpaid. No money required.
BLUME MFG. CO., Box 686, Concord Junction, Miss

HAIR DYEING COMB

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, undetectable. Circular sent in plain sealed envelope.
Dept. E. KARL GERSTNER, 83 4th Avenue, New York.

CHURCH MONEY

ONES EASY for Young People's Societies, Sunday Schools or Classes by Using Our Beautiful Souvenir Glass PAPER WEIGHTS.

Mail us a photograph of your church and pastor (Cabinet size preferred). Either together or separately. We will reproduce them together in one gross (144) solid glass paper weights.
similar to accompanying cut, which is greatly reduced in size, actual size 1 inches long, 2 1/2 inches wide and 1 inch thick. These beautiful weights will readily sell at eight for twenty-five cents each to church members and business men in your locality, many of whom will buy several, as they make a beautiful souvenir and are an ornament on any desk. We charge you 12 1/2 cents each in gross lots.
You make $18.00 on each gross. We guarantee freight will not exceed $1 to any point west of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio River. You are at no risk, as we give you twenty-days' time to examine and sell them, enabling you to dispose of most of them before remitting to us. Send us your order at once, enclosing photograph of your church and pastor, giving us the names and full directions for shipping, and be the first to take up this plan in your vicinity. Write us for a booklet and for further particulars if desired. Address

WILFRED SMITH & CO., 946 American Tract Building, New York.

RIPPLE, PA., April 15, 1902.

WILFRED SMITH & CO., New York,
GENTLEMEN: Enclosed find postal money for twenty-five dollars, $25. to pay for 200 paper weights recently received. They were sold in twelve hours from the time they were received. My Junior Epworth League wants 200 more as soon as you can get them and ship them. Very truly, REX E. HARDER.

NORTH BAPTIST CHURCH, N. Y.
January 10, 1902.

WILFRED SMITH & CO.
GENTLEMEN:—We hereby sell the entire two gross in just one week after receiving your invoice, and will wait the twenty days to remit, but take possession enclosing hereon check for $56.00 payment.

We were not so well pleased with them that I hope after the next meeting of our Junior Society, to send another order.

CHAS. E. NASH, Pastor.

$10 Secures a $480 Lot IN GREATER NEW YORK...

Safest, Surest and Most Profitable Investment Ever Offered—Guaranteed Increase in Value 20% Within One Year—Will Undoubtedly Double in Value Upon Completion of New Bridge—Only 35 Minutes from New York City Hall—Free Trip to New York and Return

A Rugby Residence, E. 46th St.

THIS remarkable proposition carries the guarantee of the largest real estate firm in the world, established 15 years, with over 30,000 satisfied customers, whose testimony is the best evidence of its sterling character.

It brings you into personal touch with New York's wonderful expansion, and enables you to profit by its enormous growth in values. It offers you an opportunity to realize large profits from a comparatively small investment, and with absolute safety—an opportunity to make money the way the Astors made theirs, by legitimate natural increase in real estate values. We own 1,500 acres of the best land in Brooklyn, secured before its consolidation with New York, lying in the direct pathway of the tremendous development now going on, and which will be enormously increased by the new bridges, tunnels, etc., of which you have read, now building to accommodate the great and swelling tide of overflow population. Write us for all the facts and convincing evidence of this unprecedented situation and the wonderful future of Brooklyn Borough.

It's matter of common knowledge that the big fortunes of the oldest New York families began with the enormous profits accruing from early investments in New York real estate. The time for modest investment in the older city is of course long since past, but when New York recently burst its strained boundaries and began to overwhelm Brooklyn, then again came like opportunities for early investors—yes, even far greater, for the Astors and others had no such marvellous combination of circumstances to operate in their behalf, because the last two years have accomplished, and every two years from now on will accomplish, greater development and far greater increase of values than a decade did in the old days. The shrewd ones who take immediate advantage of the present situation can repeat and surpass the historical record and unquestionably make comfortable fortunes and even great wealth.

Our property is only $\frac{3}{4}$ miles from Brooklyn Bridge; only 35 minutes from New York City Hall; we are developing it with the highest class of improvements (see photograph) in exact accordance with city specifications, on 60, 80 and 100-foot streets, boulevarded with macadam from curb to curb, granolithic curbing, gutters and sidewalks (5 feet wide and 12 inches deep) with flower beds, trees and shrubbery, city water, etc.

The lot we now sell for $480 and guarantee will be worth $576 within one year, will unquestionably bring $10,000 in ten years' time; it is to-day intrinsically worth as much as the $40,000 lot at 92nd Street, New York, for it is under the same city government, transportation is similar, same distance from City Hall, same running time, same fare, almost the same street improvement, and now merely lacking building development. Values must equalize themselves, and are already increasing with marvelous rapidity.

HERE'S OUR PROPOSITION

For $10 down and $1.50 per week, or $6 per month, until paid for, we will sell you a regular New York City lot, full size, subject to the following guarantees from us:

20 PER CENT. INCREASE GUARANTEED

If at the expiration of the year 1902 this $480 lot is not worth $576—or 20 per cent. increase—based on the price at which our corps of salesmen will then be selling similar lots, we will refund all the money you have paid us with 6 per cent. interest additional.

If you should die at any time before payments have been completed we will give to your heirs a deed to the lot without further cost.

If you should lose employment or be sick you will not forfeit the land.

SEND US $10 ONLY

and we will reserve you one of the best unsold lots, then you may pay $6 per month until the full amount is paid; this gives you all the benefit of the increase in value from the time you make the first payment; but send us your name at least, and we will mail you maps and full information free.

MAP OF BROOKLYN, SHOWING LOCATION OF OUR PROPERTY, RUGBY

Examples of New York City Increase

Lot on corner 146th street and 3d avenue, New York City, worth in 1881 $1500, sold in spring of 1901 for $70,000 to Henry Lewis Morris. His grandfather sold it for $155 in 1853.

Lot on 80th street, opposite Central Park, sold in 1850 for $500, in 1901 brought a price that showed an increase of $500 every sixty days from 1850 to 1901.

Our Final Word of Counsel:

These lots are selling very fast. To secure best selection and an immediate share in the increase of values, send us $10 now. Then, if you are not perfectly satisfied, on examining our entire proposition within one year, that it is just as represented, we agree to return to you—cheerfully and without quibbling—all the money you have paid us. Isn't this fair? Sit right down and mail us $10.

YOU'LL NEVER REGRET IT.

1 The Present Brooklyn Bridge.
2 THE NEW BROOKLYN BRIDGE—
Soon to be completed—The nearest way to this property—Only 30 minutes by direct trolley—Fare five cents.

FREE TRIP TO NEW YORK

As a further guarantee of good faith, we agree with all persons living East of Chicago to pay you in cash the cost of your railroad fare to New York and return, if you visit our property and find one word of this advertisement a misrepresentation; or in case you buy, to credit the cost of the fare on your purchase; to those living farther away than Chicago we will pay an amount equal to round trip Chicago ticket.

AS AN INVESTMENT.

we believe this to be one of the safest, surest and most profitable that could be entered into. It is bound to increase rapidly because there is no other land within the same distance of New York City Hall that can be had for anything near as low a price, and because New York has become so congested that the "density belt" has advanced to the very gates of our properties which are directly in the line of this development.

You will note three distinct points of advantage in this proposition. First—It is a Life Insurance for your family. Second—It enables you to pay in small sums as you would in your savings bank and cannot cramp you; and, Third—It enables you to participate in the great growth of values in New York real estate which are due to natural conditions; and furthermore, the three advantages are absolutely without risk.

Titles are guaranteed to us by the Title Guarantee and Trust Co., of New York City.

NOTE OUR REFERENCES

The Commercial Agencies, 20 National Banks, and 30,000 customers all over the United States—probably some in your own vicinity with whom you are acquainted. Send to us for some of the letters from those who bought more after seeing Rugby than they did by mail.

The following testimonial was given us by the Nassau National Bank of Brooklyn: "There is no doubt the property offered by Wood, Harmon & Co. in the Twenty-ninth Ward represents one of the best investments a man of limited income can possibly make within the corporate limits of Greater New York. It can be said without hesitancy that Wood, Harmon & Co. are perfectly reliable and are worthy the fullest confidence of the investor, whether he resides in Greater New York or any other section of the United States. THE NASSAU NATIONAL BANK OF BROOKLYN."

WOOD, HARMON & CO., Dept. "B9," 257 Broadway, New York

This corner lot at Flatbush and Linden Aves., Brooklyn, is worth $8,000 and is but little over a half-mile from our property, Rugby

Residences on Linden Avenue, between the foregoing Flatbush Avenue corner and the Utica Avenue corner, in next view

Corner Linden and Utica Avenues, Rugby Showing the superb character of the improvements we make

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER ANNUM
Louis Klopsch, Editor and Proprietor

NEW YORK, MAY 7, 1902

VOL. 25—No. 19. PRICE, 5 CENTS
Offices: Bible House, New York

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

Copyright, 1902, by Louis Klopsch

SEE PAGE 997

THE REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D., PASTOR OF JEFFERSON PARK
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, CHICAGO

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of THE MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the Mail-Bag must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 14

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right under any circumstances to play for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest, the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 11

Do the marriages of Americans with foreign aristocrats and nobility tend to weaken our republican institutions, or otherwise?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 18

Is a lawyer justified in doing his utmost to secure the acquittal of a client of whose guilt he is cognizant?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 25

Does a parent do wisely to shield a son or daughter jealously from the ordinary stress and struggle of life?

To be Answered in the Issue of July 9

In what sense may prayer be regarded as the most potent agent at the Christian's command? Illustrate by some incident within your own knowledge or experience.

Miscellaneous Questions

A. A. A., Arcadia, N. S. Are Sunday concerts to be avoided?

Most of the so-called Sunday "sacred concerts" are simply ordinary, every-day, secular concerts in all but the name. There are, unfortunately, many persons who eagerly grasp at the slightest excuse for neglecting the religious duties of the Sabbath, and such people flock to the Sunday concert, where they listen to operatic airs, vaudeville songs and here and there a hymn interspersed, "to please the religious element." Such "sacred concerts" are a mockery and a profanation. The true sacred concert is that found within the walls of God's house, or wherever the hearts and voices of good men and women are lifted in praise to the Almighty Father. A make-believe "sacred concert" is an offence to most people, yet there are many who, even while knowing its character, are willing to patronize it.

Inquirer, Boston, Mass. Does the acceptance of theosophy involve abandoning Christianity?

We do not see how a person can hold the cardinal doctrines of Christianity and yet be a theosophist. In so far, however, as a man looks to Christ for salvation and depends on the Holy Spirit for the power to live a holy life and in all things tries to live the Christ life in the world, being kind and loving and helpful, and ever striving to grow more into his image, it may be possible for him to hold also the speculative doctrines of theosophy. But we think that the practical duties of life and the strenuous endeavor to attain growth in grace will tend to weaken the hold theosophy may have on him.

Mother, Lansing, Mich. 1. Will THE CHRISTIAN HERALD CHILDREN'S HOME open as usual this summer? 2. In what way can I best aid that excellent work for little ones? I have happy girls and boys of my own, and I want to show my gratitude for the comforts God enables me to give them by sending some brightness into the lives of children of the tenements. The summer, which brings country holidays to my children, brings, I know, wretchedness and peril to them in their overcrowded, sweltering abodes.

1. Certainly; as soon as the hot weather comes, and with two new cottages and room for more children. 2. To any extent, and in any way you like. Additional room and larger population means heavier expense, and contributions of any size are welcome; $3 gives one child a ten days' outing, covering cost of transportation back and forth, medical examination, caretaker's attention, food, shelter, etc.; $6 sends two; $9, three; $12, four; $15, five; $30 makes a round dozen happy; $21 sustains a cot for a season of and possession of wings. To present this power for aerial travel, and also because of pictorial beauty, artists usually endow their angels with wings, which, according to common belief, angels possess. As to whether angels really are winged or no, one can hardly know this side of heaven. 2. They are not always represented as women. In pictures of the annunciation, for instance, the angel bearing the hily is Gabriel. Because of the greater beauty of the feminine over the masculine type, and because we associate angelic virtues more commonly with women than men, the feminine type is perhaps more frequently chosen.

Inquirer, Brooklyn. A scientific friend contends that the first human pair appeared simultaneously, and if there could have been priority, it would have been with the female. What are we to infer from the Bible?

The account in Genesis 2:22, most certainly implies that man was created before woman. The apostle Paul evidently believed that it was so (see I. Timothy 2:13). The other account of the Creation (Genesis 1:27), indi-work, a natural ability to present his beliefs forcibly, a most complete consecration and a readiness to submit wholly to God's guidance. With all these, however, there may be no call, if the way be not opened. When God calls a man to his service, he providentially makes the way clear.

Despairing One, Seattle, Wash. I had given up hope of ever being saved, because I am one of those mentioned in Heb. 6:4-6, who after being once enlightened, have fallen away. That passage says it is impossible that they shall be saved. A casual copy of your journal has fallen into my hands and I found a remark in it that gives me hope for the first time in years. I entreat you to tell me if there is any real ground for such hope?

There is certainly real ground for the hope. There are many promises in the Bible encouraging the backslider to return, and promising him pardon and restoration. Hosea 14:4; Zech. 10:6; Malachi 3:7, are very explicit in promising acceptance and forgiveness to a penitent backslider. David and Peter are examples. Both sinned most grievously, but when they repented were pardoned. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews apparently had in mind the common experience that when a man who had been converted did fall away, it was difficult to reawaken in him the desire for pardon. It is the experience of all ministers and Christian workers that none are so hard to win as a backslider. To them it is impossible, but when the Holy Spirit touches the heart of such a man and he yields, God will welcome his return, as the father of the Prodigal Son welcomed his repentant boy.

Reader, Fredonia, N. Y. Is there any standing offer to the inventor of a perpetual motion machine? If so, by whom. And what is the offer? I have heard there was such an offer by the Government.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD sent your letter to the Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C., and received in reply the following, from the Chief Clerk of the U. S. Patent Office: "I am directed by the Commissioner to return herein the communication which accompanied your letter, and to say that this office knows of no 'standing offer to the inventor of a perpetual motion machine.' On the contrary, the Patent Office endeavors to discourage applicants for patents for such alleged inventions, deeming them impossible. Should an applicant insist upon filing such an application, the first requirement of the office is a working model, which, of course, the applicant is unable to furnish."

Mary A., Schenectady, N. Y. 1. Why is wine or some other intoxicating liquor used in the christening of a ship? 2. Would it not be far more practical and also more picturesque to make the ceremony a symbolical one, and to omit the vulgar bottle?

1. It is a survival of the ancient heathen form of pouring out a libation to the gods. An offering of wine was poured out on the ground to propitiate the deities and win their approval of any enterprise about to be undertaken. 2. Unquestionably, it would be better. The Japanese have a beautiful custom which is employed at the christening of vessels. In a large cage, covered with roses and other flowers, are two doves, which are released by the pulling of a string the instant the vessel begins to glide down the ways. They flutter upward a moment gracefully, and then fly straight to their dovecotes, their flight telling all observers of the success of the launching.

Subscriber, Nelson, Pa. "Auld Lang Syne" may be freely translated "The Old Times Long Ago."

L. C., Avilla, Mo. The doors of Christian churches should be closed against all Mormon missionaries.

Mrs. M. E. A., No. Cohocton, N. Y. If her conscience reproves her, she should stay away, and frankly tell her husband the reason.

F. B. Weiser, Idaho. Whether or not it be right to hold it in the church, depends upon the character of the entertainment, not upon the admission fee.

A. A. H., Moodus, Conn. For an unbeliever to sing such hymns as you mention, or indeed any Christian songs, is a mockery, yet it is quite common.

Mr. R. T. Stiles writes us that the Orphans' Home, corner Yale and Alpine streets, Los Angeles, Calif., can use to advantage S. S. cards, papers, singing books, etc.

EVANGELIST FLUCKIGER AND HIS FRIENDS AT THE TRADITIONAL TOMB OF CHRIST

JACOB FLUCKIGER, a native of Switzerland, is known as the "Pilgrim Evangelist." He came to America in 1860, and was converted in 1875. In 1883 he began preaching on the streets and in the jails. Early in 1890 he went to Honolulu, preaching and working; thence to the South Sea Islands. He next went abroad, preaching and distributing Scripture tracts, as opportunity offered, from Switzerland to England and back to California, thence to Chicago where, with others, he had a mission. He went to Cuba in 1900, and thence to Puerto Rico; afterward to France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Russia, Sweden and Denmark. Starting from Paris with a friend, he visited Egypt and the Holy Land. On the return journey he visited Bavaria, Saxony, Prussia, and Holland. Evangelist Fluckiger has distributed many thousands of Scripture tracts in the different countries, printed in various languages, and he means to continue in this work while he lives. His work is wholly one of faith. He has never sold a book or tract, believing the Gospel should be delivered to the world without money and without price. "God supplies me in everything," he declares, "according to his riches and glory."

seventy days. There are to be some memorial cots. Yours can be a thank-offering cot if you like. Garments your girls and boys have laid aside will be welcome; our children are from four to twelve. Send to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, N. Y.

Subscriber, New Castle, Pa. 1. Do angels have wings? And if not, why is it that they are always represented with them? 2. Why are they represented in female form?

1. In the Scriptures, mention is not made of their wings when "angels" are spoken of, but neither are other characteristics of form; they seem to have appeared in human semblance; "cherubims," who are indicated as another, possibly a higher, order of celestial being, are represented as having four and even six wings; so, too, the seraphim. The offices of angels, however, as messengers between heaven and earth implies motion through space, and this, in turn, suggests need cates a simultaneous creation. Whether we are to accept the account in Genesis 2:22 as a fuller and more detailed narrative, or whether we must regard it as an attempt to prove the close and intimate relation of husband and wife, is not clear. Biblical scholars, however, lean to the belief of simultaneous creation, and regard the account of the rib removed from Adam's side as a poetic symbolic narrative.

T. G. L., Limerick, Ireland. What is the best evidence of a man having been called to the work of the ministry?

The most conclusive is that conversions occur under his speaking at meetings and in services where he delivers Gospel addresses. When a man is used by the Holy Spirit to lead sinners to repentance and faith in Christ, the natural inference is that it would be well if he devoted himself exclusively to that work. Other signs are, an ardent longing for the is a Benedict Arnold. Then, finding that the worldly success which he has won at the expense of his soul does not bring the much sought after happiness, he will let his evil passions run a madder riot. He will drown his sorrows in the drunkard's cup. He will dazzle himself into blindness by the hellfire of licentious carousal. He will curse sin, as a drunkard after suffering the terrors of delirium tremens will curse liquor, and then drink. He will curse sin as the poet cursed it, and yet keep on sinning.

"Good-bye," I said to my conscience,
"Good-bye for aye and aye,"
And I put her hands off harshly
And turned my face away.
And conscience, sorely smitten,
Returned not from that day.

But a time came when my spirit
Grew weary of its pace,
And I cried "Come back, my conscience,
I long to see thy face."
But conscience cried "I cannot;
Remorse sits in my place."

Now, while there is nothing in this world that can be compared in value to an immortal soul, my text does not imply that if a man gives his soul to Christ, he shall have nothing but poverty and humiliation, the poorhouse and a Potter's Field. The Bible refutes that idea. In the thirty-seventh Psalm we read: "I have been young and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." The same God who cares for the sparrow and who numbers the hairs of our head, will not let his children want. The Divine Father will always see, if we do our duty, that we have enough to eat and to drink, enough to wear and a place where we can sleep. Every one who gives his soul to Christ will be able to sing Channing's symphony. He will have, at least, an opportunity "to live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury, refinement rather than fashion, to be worthy, not respectable and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages with open hearts, to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never—in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden, grow up through the common." Could happiness demand any greater opportunity to exist than these opportunities which are given by God to all his children who obey him? I would that we all might go back more contented to our every-day duties of life, no matter what these duties may be. Whether they are in the store, the office, the pulpit, the parlor, the nursery, or the kitchen, it matters not. I would that we would all go the more cheerfully, because the harder our lot in life the nearer these troubles can bring us to God. When we are friendless and poor and helpless, then God is always ready to pour out the measureless wealth of his affections upon us, his suffering children.

A noted London preacher was delivering his sermon in an open field. Upon the outskirts of the audience there halted the carriage of a famous family. Lady Anne Erskine, for that was the name of the occupant, became an absorbed listener. Suddenly the minister turned, and facing this aristocratic beauty, began to sell her soul, as though she was on the auction block and he was the auctioneer. "My brethren," exclaimed the preacher, "I am now going to hold an auction sale and I bespeak your attention for a few moments. I have here a lady and her equipage to expose to public sale; but the lady is the principal and the only object that I wish to dispose of at the present time. There are three earnest bidders in the field. The first is the world. Well, and what will you give for her? 'I will give riches, honor, pleasure.' That will not do. She is worth more than that, for she will live when riches, honors and pleasures of the world have passed away. You cannot have her. The next bidder is the Devil. Well, and what will you give for her? 'I will give all the kingdoms of the earth and the glory of them.' That will not do, for she will continue to exist when the kingdoms of the earth and the glory of them have vanished like the shadows of the night before the rising sun. You cannot have her. But list, and hear the voice of another bidder, and who is that? Why, the Lord Jesus Christ. Well, what will you give for her? 'I will give grace here and glory hereafter; an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.' These three bidders still contend for the possession of souls. Your soul, my soul, and the soul of every one that cometh into the world. One bid or the other we must accept. The choice must be made. The decision rests with you. May God help every one of us to decide aright, 'for what shall it profit a man, if he should gain the whole world, and lose his own soul.'"

IN HIS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS

The Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, Pastor of Jefferson Park Church, Chicago

SINCE the death of Dr. Talmage, the eyes and expectations of a very large portion of the Christian people of this country have turned toward his son. As was the case with both Spurgeon and Moody, it was naturally expected that Dr. Talmage would choose his son to carry forward the work of his world-wide ministry, which has been so abundantly blessed to multitudes during the last half century. That this was Dr. Talmage's dearest wish and desire is well-known to his most intimate friends and associates. From boyhood, Frank DeWitt Talmage was a consecrated child—consecrated to spiritual effort, just as his father had been before him. He was literally born into the ministry. As a young man, he was deeply and permanently influenced by the close companionship of his father, and by the latter's glorious example as a preacher who knew only "Christ and Him Crucified." Twelve years of ministerial experience have only served to strengthen and broaden that influence.

The Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage is now in his thirty-fourth year. He was born in Philadelphia on November 29, 1867, and received his early education at the Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn. In 1886 he entered the New York University, and graduated from there in the spring of 1890, being named as the orator of his class, an honor which his father received in the same University in 1853. On leaving college he entered Union Theological Seminary, to study for the ministry. He has held pastoral charges in Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and in both cities he not only became exceedingly popular, but his labors were attended by excellent spiritual results. He is at the present time pastor of Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago, where he has made a wonderful record. When he accepted the Chicago call, the church was out of repair and sadly in debt. In a year, the church became full of spiritual activity, the mortgage was lifted, the church and Sunday School attendance was doubled, and over $20,000 spent in much-needed repairs. The Jefferson Park Church has now one of the finest auditoriums, and also one of the strongest congregations in the West.

JEFFERSON PARK CHURCH, CHICAGO, ILL.

Dr. Frank DeWitt Talmage possesses many of the characteristics that distinguished his late father. He is tall and strongly built, his expression is pleasing, and his voice genial and resonant. In the pulpit he is magnetic, and so holds his audience by virtue of his extraordinary gift of natural eloquence, that one, on hearing him, ceases to be surprised at his popularity. His sermonic delivery is marked by tremendous earnestness, and impressive gestures; and it is quite clear to all his auditors that he is "a man with a message." That message is the old, old Gospel story, with its infinite variations and its nameless charm for all human hearts—the story that formed the theme of T. DeWitt Talmage's life-work, and which is now inspiring the labors of his only son and ministerial successor.

Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage has traveled widely here and abroad, and has spoken to large gatherings in many places, both in the pulpit and on the lecture platform. At Nazareth, Pa., he made a Gospel address to a great audience of farmers on the race-track, holding their attention by one of the finest oratorical efforts ever heard in that region. In conjunction with his father, he shared the labor and helped reap the spiritual harvest during the great series of revival mass-meetings in New York City several years ago, when father and son spoke from the stages of different theatres to vast audiences. He has also spoken from the platform in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Newark, Baltimore and other cities. He was his father's companion on the last round-the-world tour which Dr. Talmage undertook. At that time the young minister made the personal acquaintance of many leading men in other lands.

In his preaching, the Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage adheres strictly to scriptural lines, and to the orthodox Gospel. His discourses are replete with illustration and incident, and abound in imagery and epigram. He is an ardent student of nature and rural life, and many of his brightest passages are drawn from wood and valley, stream and field, farm-house and cabin. He is a natural orator, whose fresh, vivid, forceful utterances are everywhere appreciated, while his clear and simple exposition of the Gospel message carries with it a convincing power that reaches and influences many hearts.

A "Cellar Prayer Meeting"

IT was seemingly an inauspicious moment for a prayer meeting. Four Italians were holding a beer-drinking party in a cellar. A wager of some sort was involved, and with oaths and curses they were keeping count as the can went its rounds. Occasionally, one would jump up, and with outstretched arms appeal to the pictured saint looking down on them from the wall, to bring down maledictions on the rest, and again all four would be on the point of blows. Searching for some of our Home Garden children, I entered; speaking very gently to them in their own language, I told them of the wrong they were doing. Beyond a glance of impatience, no one paid any attention to my words, except the little woman who was kept busy running for them to the saloon, which is always so fatally near the tenement home. Moved by an impulse of pity for their terrible degradation, I knelt and began to pray. Astonishment or awe held them silent till I rose. I left them fighting like beasts over the can. "Perhaps I have done a foolish thing," I thought. But two months later, one of these came to the meeting and gave himself to Christ, saying that he had never known a moment's peace since that prayer.

The Home Garden is doing a work among children of the streets, where scenes like this occur. It reaches out also, as in this case, to adults. As its name indicates, it is a Garden, where virtues that make home sweet and precious are cultivated. With its games, clubs and classes, it affords a happy refuge for the children of the street outside of school hours. On the Lord's day, there is a Sunday School and religious services.

To keep children from descending to the depths of the four brigands in my cellar prayer-meeting, is surely worth while. The work is supported by voluntary contributions. I will gladly answer any inquiries from friends interested in the work, addressed to me at the Home Garden, 322 Pleasant avenue, New York City.

ANNA C. RUDDY.

A New Home for Sailors

An interesting movement is now under way for the establishment of a "Sailors' Home" at Hampton, Va. Rev. R. E. Steele, late Chaplain, U. S. N., who is initiating this work, was for seven years Chaplain of the New Orleans Seamen's Bethel and Home; he also served in the Brooklyn Navy Yard under Rear-Admiral Philip, as organizer of the Naval Y. M. C. A. His new enterprise has the hearty endorsement of Bishop Randolph, of Virginia, as well as other prominent clergymen, and meets the warm approval of Rear-Admiral Watson, and many other officers of the Navy, and various influential citizens of Norfolk. It is to be an interdenominational Christian work, not confined to naval sailors alone, but reaching all seafaring men in the vicinity. "There can be no doubt of the need of such an institution," says Chaplain Steele. Great fleets of steamers and sailing craft, daily increasing in number, are sailing into Hampton Roads and loading either at Norfolk or Newport News.

Off Old Point Comfort, nearby, is the principal rendezvous of the American Navy on the Atlantic. A Harbor Mission or Home, operating a launch, could reach thousands of sailors, who now come under no religious influences. Chaplain Steele, Box 130, Hampton, Va., will furnish any information desired concerning this work.

A Church Rededicated

Mr. A. C. Tuxbury, of North Tonawanda, N. Y., writes an interesting letter to this journal, giving an account of the rededication services of the First Baptist Church of that place. "We were pleased," he said, "to have with us Dr. Rush Rhees, President of the University of Rochester, and Dr. Pattison, of Rochester Theological Seminary, both of whom gave us excellent sermons. Our former pastor, Rev. Charles E. Barker, took charge of morning and evening services. Our church has been repaired at an expense of $4,000, and is now thoroughly equipped for work." It is always pleasant to chronicle the restoration to usefulness of a house of worship.

A Nation's Tribute to Talmage

Glowing Eulogies from Noted Statesmen, Legislators, Preachers and Men of Prominence in America and Europe

IMEDIATELY after the death of Dr. Talmage became known, messages of condolence, memorial resolutions and letters and telegrams from a very large number of eminent persons, both here and abroad, began to arrive, both at the Talmage home in Washington and at the offices of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. These kind messages of sympathy and appreciation were so numerous that to answer each individually was an impossibility. The Proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, in behalf of Dr. Talmage's family, and in his own behalf as Dr. Talmage's associate, desires to make this acknowledgment to all those friends who have sent such communications, and to express thanks for the same. A few of these memorial tributes, selected from many hundreds, are given below:

Charles A. Fairbanks
U. S. Senator, Indiana

D. B. HENDERSON
Speaker House of Representatives

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW
U. S. Senator

Nelson A. Miles
General Commander, U. S. A.

Admiral Schley's Noble Tribute

THE RICHMOND,
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 14, 1902.

DEAR MRS. TALMAGE—Mrs. Schley and I offer our sympathy and sorrow in this sad, dark hour of gloom, and we are certain that the great and good God, whom Dr. Talmage loved, served and preached all his long and brave life will comfort the loved ones in his stricken home. Peace to his blessed ashes and honor forever to his precious memory.

W. S. SCHLEY.

Russia's Grateful Remembrance

From Count Andre Bobrinsky, the personal friend of the Czar and a Russian noble of high rank and exalted official position (whom Dr. Talmage met when in St. Petersburg in connection with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's famine relief work in 1892), came this cablegram:

ST. PETERSBURG, April 21.

Deeply affected. We keep in grateful remembrance Talmage's fraternal assistance in our days of need.

(Signed) BOBRINSKY.

A Great Religious Force

He was a great religious force, a spiritual tonic and a most remarkable personality. He was the peer of the most potent in attracting men to himself. No religious teacher of any sect or denomination in this country ever had a more brilliant career. We shall never see his like again.

LESLIE M. SHAW,
Secretary of the Treasury.

He Touched on Every-day Life

Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage's name will go down to posterity as among the foremost of those ministers of the Gospel who gained the popular love of the American people in the nineteenth century. While he had a rare gift of eloquence as a pulpit orator, who could stir the religious emotions of human hearts, he was a many-sided man, whose messages were delivered in many ways. He was, perhaps, the most popular lecturer, to whom a welcome was extended in the towns and villages of the land. As an editor, he was associated with religious journals that are found in the homes of the people far and near. While in the field of literature he was the author of more than thirty volumes, which have gained a wide circulation. It is not often that to one man, the double gift is accorded, of moving the better aspirations of others equally by his eloquence in the pulpit and his thoughts upon the printed page. And if such success has followed Dr. Talmage's efforts, in his long ministry of fifty years; it has been because, as a typical American, he knew how to touch the every-day life of the people at large; and because, in his religious teachings he dwelt so earnestly upon the Old, Old Story of Christ's life and the home truths of the Gospel.

T. H. Y. SATTERLEE,
Bishop of Washington.

Greatest Preacher of His Generation

Doctor Talmage was the greatest preacher that the living generation has heard. He has preached to more people than any one since Christ. His loss cannot be estimated.

C. H. GROSVENOR,
House of Representatives.

His Influence Powerful for Good

Dr. Talmage was one of the great preachers of this age, reaching with his sermons more hearers and readers than any other. At the same time he was one of the most popular lecturers in the country. Both in pulpit and on platform his influence was powerful, always for good. He has gone for his reward.

WM. P. FRYE,
Pres. U. S. Senate.

"I Miss His Pleasant Face"

Dr. Talmage was a remarkable pulpit orator. I shall miss his pleasant face, which I have been accustomed now for several years to meet on the streets of Washington. It always beamed with intelligence and with a kindly recognition.

JOHN D. LONG,
Secretary of the Navy.

He Leaves a Large Void

I have known Dr. Talmage for twenty-five years. He was a very remarkable man, brought up, trained, and remaining always in the school of Calvinism and the Presbyterian church, he yet succeeded, without offending his brethren, in somehow creating the impression that he had liberalized the principles of the great Geneva reformer. He performed one feat which I know of no one else doing except Beecher. He stood the test of a weekly publication of his sermons for years, that publication being in the same newspapers and to the same audiences. A relative of mine, who was his warm admirer and friend, said of Henry Ward Beecher that he clipped the files in which his sermons appeared, and at the end of five years made a critical review of the clippings. He told me that he failed to find a single repetition in illustration, anecdote or phrase. This is unequalled intellectual resource and versatility; but my impression is, after having read many of Dr. Talmage's sermons, that they would bear an equal scrutiny and review. The influence of a teacher who commands so wide an audience can hardly be estimated, and his death leaves a large void in the agencies which go for better thinking and better living. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, U. S. Sen'r.

Preached to the Islands of the Sea

My personal acquaintance with Doctor Talmage was too limited for me to refer to it, yet I wish to say a word as to the extent of his influence. He was never in the Hawaiian Islands but once, and then only for a day at Honolulu, but every English-speaking citizen of our little mid-ocean commonwealth knew Doctor Talmage. Each weekly paper from the States came bringing one of his sermons. In this way he preached to congregations in the islands of the sea, five thousand miles away from his home, and girdled the globe, wherever English was spoken, with his good influence.

SANFORD DOLE,
Governor of Hawaii.

He Represented the Sunlight of Theology

Doctor Talmage will be missed. He was a high type of the great modern preacher. He represented the sunlight and not the clouds of theology. He carried sunlight into the pulpit, into the home, and into human hearts. He lifted up and never depressed. He was genial as a friend, fearless as a foe, and soon made the foe a friend.

D. B. HENDERSON,
Speaker House of Representatives.

The World's Great Loss

In the death of Dr. Talmage the world loses one of its brightest Christian ornaments. I knew him well and esteemed him highly; and in this esteem I am sure that I was joined by thousands of my countrymen, who knew him only as they could picture him from reading his sermons. He and his sermons will be missed in countless homes all over the world.

GEORGE DEWEY,
Admiral of the Navy.

He Pointed the Way to Heaven

In the death of Dr. Talmage we lose a great and good man. Two hemispheres mourn at the grave of one who has been a most potent influence in lifting humanity into a higher and serener atmosphere. He was acknowledged the foremost pulpit orator of his time. No one possessed in a fuller measure than he, the power of impressing immortal truths upon the souls of men, and of pointing the way to an everlasting life. His good deeds will live after him.

CHAS. W. FAIRBANKS,
U. S. Senator, Indiana.

A Great and Good Man

Doctor Talmage touched and moved the religious feelings of the masses most completely and widely by his brilliant thought and earnest eloquence. He impressed me as a great and good man, who devoted his life work to the moral and spiritual welfare of his fellowmen.

NELSON A. MILES,
Gen'l Com. U. S. A.

A Mountain of Spiritual Splendor

Dr. Talmage was more nearly a world preacher than any other person in his time. Looking at his work without personal intimacy with the man, it appears a mountain of intellectual and spiritual splendor, sufficient to supply the religious and moral needs of the race for a century. Add to the work personal acquaintance with the man, and it takes on a sweetness and mellowness nothing else can impart.

Mr. Talmage's death makes a gap in the ranks of pulpit and platform teachers that generations may not close up. Prodiges come with the longest intervals between. When Mr. Talmage's vacant place will be filled a prophet alone can foretell. I knew Mr. Talmage, not intimately, but well. The memory of all his greatness and brilliancy and goodness is a life gift with which I would not part. T. M. PATTERSON,
United States Senator from Colorado.

A Valiant Herald of the Cross

I knew Doctor Talmage, and with all his countrymen esteemed him the ablest exponent of the Christian religion, and one of its mightiest orators. With all good people I deplore his death. A Valiant Herald of the Cross has fallen indeed, and for him we sincerely mourn.

HENRY C. CORBIN,
Adj.-Gen. U. S. A.

His Power of Illustration

Dr. Talmage was a very attractive speaker. His power of illustration was almost boundless in its scope. He pleased his audiences, because, when he spoke, he had something to say worth hearing. There are plenty of openings in the pulpits of the world for men of his ability. JAMES WILSON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

The Age's Greatest Preacher

The Hon. John F. Lacey, member of the House from Iowa:

I considered Doctor Talmage the greatest preacher of the age since Beecher. There is one thing I should like to say of him. I heard him speak many times, whenever the opportunity offered, and I never heard him repeat himself. This is a remarkable tribute to any public speaker, and especially to one who spoke as often as the distinguished dead divine.

He Garnered the Unchurched Masses

Hon. Edward S. Minor, Member of the House from Wisconsin:

Dr. Talmage, in his unique way of speaking, reached more people than any of his contemporaries. His style was inimitable and appealed to the public. He was a sort of garner, and everywhere, wherever he spoke, he garnered up the mighty host of the unchurched. In his death, humanity lost a sincere friend.

William O. Frye
President U. S. Senate

WM. H. MOODY
Secretary of the Navy

REV. WALLACE RADCLIFFE,
New York Ave. Church, Washington, D. C.

James Wilson
Secretary of Agriculture

Christendom's Tribute to Talmage

What Leading Thinkers and Writers Say of the Greatest Personality the Pulpit has Known in a Century

He Made Mankind Better

Ex-Secretary John W. Foster, America's most eminent diplomat, who was also one of the pall-bearers:

Dr. Talmage was pre-eminent as a pulpit orator, but he had a much broader field of usefulness in his written word. No man of his generation was so widely read as he in his weekly sermons, and the quiet influence of those printed sermons has been very great in leading men to a better life. Nothing illustrates more fully that the intelligent common people welcome the simple Gospel preaching. Dr. Talmage's theology was of the old-fashioned kind, not clouded with doubt or uncertainty as to the inspiration of the Scriptures or the miracles, and little influenced by the higher criticism. His preaching was the Gospel proclaimed by Whitefield and Finney, and which made Moody so popular. Many thousands of men and women, throughout this and other lands, who have been lifted up and made better by his preaching and his writings, will deeply mourn his death.

He Did Much Good

The Hon. William H. Moody, of Massachusetts (who succeeded Mr. Long as Secretary of the Navy):

Dr. Talmage impressed me as a man of great intellect, physical vigor, and power of speech. His published sermons gave him a wide reputation, and undoubtedly did much good.

He Gave His Life to His Work

Illinois' able Senator, the Hon. Shelby Cullom, who was one of Dr. Talmage's pall-bearers, adds the following:

Dr. Talmage for a number of years has been my neighbor. I had learned to love him. He was a great man, a great preacher, and a great writer. His sermons have found their way into more families every week than have the sermons of any other living man. He has preached to millions of people. No one can estimate the amount of good he has done as a minister of the Gospel. He had the power to do work to a marvelous degree. He did too much work; he wore out his brain, he overtaxed it, and it gave way to the strain. He gave his life, in his zeal, for the uplifting of humanity. He was a man of great physical and mental powers; he did not realize that there was any limit to his endurance, or his capacity to do. His work is done, his career on earth is ended, and the world will miss him. His family are sitting in the dark shadow of death. Talmage is dead!

None to Fill His Place

United States Senator, John H. Mitchell, of Oregon:

No other minister of the Gospel ever held such a place as Dr. Talmage. In illustration of this, take my own far-away State of Oregon. Dr. Talmage never preached or lectured there to my knowledge, yet I venture the assertion that he was better known, and that his sermons were more read than were those of any minister residing there. This was because of his syndicated sermons, which were published in the Monday morning papers. They were read not only by church-attending people, but even more largely so by the usual non-goers, and the amount of good which they must have accomplished is incalculable. It is likely to be a long time before anyone will arise who can fill his place.

Preached to the Multitudes

Hon. James D. Richardson, leader of the minority in the House of Representatives:

I admired Dr. Talmage very greatly. I was not a member of his denomination, but I never failed to hear him when it was possible to do so. As a preacher he was unequalled, but the greatest amount of good that he accomplished was undoubtedly through the wide publication of his sermons. Thousands of men who, from want of time or inclination, did not attend church, had the Gospel brought to them in the daily newspapers. They read his sermons on Monday morning, as they were whirled to business in the train or street car, or perhaps in the quiet of their offices, and beyond a doubt they were made better men for reading them.

The One Dominant Religious Force

Congressman W. A. Smith, of Michigan, one of the pall-bearers:

Dr. Talmage was at the time of his death the most dominant force in the religion of our day. He illuminated the Holy Scriptures with a radiant and living light. He stood out from his fellows like a great beacon in the ocean of life. To have known him intimately, was a priceless privilege which I shall always treasure. He encompassed the world with his thought and brought all people nearer to God. He dwelt among his friends in unrestrained kinship; but like a great mountain peak he towered so high, that as the clouds fell nearer the earth, his was the first lofty and majestic figure to pierce the azure blue. The millions living, whom he has comforted, will greatly miss him, while those whom he has led through the dark valley, will, this morning, sing anthems of joy.

Preached the Gospel and Nothing Else

Senator Beveridge, junior Senator from Indiana:

He addressed the greatest audiences of any living preacher; for his sermons were reproduced in a great many of the papers, both daily and weekly, throughout the republic. This remarkable hold he had on the American people was due chiefly to the fact that he preached the Gospel and nothing else. His marvelous imagery, his amazing fertility of illustration, all contributed to the entertainment he afforded his readers; after all, the unswerving, unyielding preaching of the Gospel was the principal source of his power. The American people are tired of hearing learned and entertaining lectures delivered under the guise of sermons; they hunger and thirst for the preaching of the faith, unweakened by doubts, criticism or explanation, uncompromisingly delivered, as Dr. Talmage gave it.

A Great Light Eclipsed

Senator Francis M. Cockrell, of Missouri, paid the following tribute:

In the religious world a great light has gone out, and the darkness is the deeper because of the grandeur with which it shone.

A Loss to the Nation

Hon. George Clement Perkins, United States Senator from California:

I liked his sermons; liked his style of delivering them; and always made it a point to hear Dr. Talmage whenever he spoke. He was, in my opinion, the most eminent Christian minister since Beecher's time, and second only to him. He had a national reputation and drew large audiences in California as elsewhere, being as popular there as he was in the East. In his death the nation has met a great loss.

His Influence Will Go On

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, Chairman Democratic National Committee:

Dr. Talmage was one of the most remarkable men of the times. He possessed wonderful oratorical powers, which have rarely been equalled, and his earnest work in the elevation of mankind will, in my opinion, be felt effectively in the years to come. He was a most genial and lovable man, with a heart brimful of human kindness and in sympathy with every good work. His teaching and example have already accomplished great good, and will have a material effect on the American people and, in fact, on all English-speaking people, for a long time to come.

Last of the Great Preachers

Senator George Turner, State of Washington:

I had the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with Dr. Talmage, and only those who had that privilege could know the sweetness and depth of his character. Every one knows that he was a forceful, brilliant orator, but not every one knew his sunny, happy disposition, which was a prime element of his strength. I regard him as the last of a class of great preachers who made the ministry of the nineteenth century famous.

The Whole World His Field

Hon. Augustus O. Bacon, senior Senator, Georgia:

Dr. Talmage has had a remarkable career, and one that is absolutely unique in the Christian ministry. No other clergyman of any denomination or faith has ever had his sermons published all over the world, each week of the year, as did he. This has been a new method of spreading the Gospel and certainly a most effectual one. It has given him a world-wide field, and in it he has been pre-eminently useful. It will be a long time before we will ever see another man like him.

A Man of Great and Varied Gifts

Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, New York Avenue Church, Washington, D. C.:

I have known Dr. Talmage for more than twenty years and have always been impressed with his public power. He was a genius; unique, forceful, dramatic. He believed and therefore spoke. He had unusual gifts intellectually and physically; great endurance, superb vigor, a voice not musical nor responsive, but strong and commanding, and a rhetoric extraordinarily vivid. His gifts gave him greater audiences by far than came to those who criticised. He believed intensely; he preached with tremendous power the great truths of immortality, the atonement, personal faith and "the common people heard him gladly." His career has been in many ways extraordinary. He was capable of hard work and did it. He was a genial, genuine, earnest man who spoke his message, and who has gone to his reward.

Greatest Preacher of the Century

Third Assistant Postmaster General W. S. Shallenberger:

Dr. Talmage was easily the most popular preacher and lecturer of the past century. His written and printed sermons, even more than his spoken addresses, established his reputation. The people in most remote and isolated sections eagerly awaited the weekly paper containing one of his sermons, and were charmed by the brilliancy of his imagery and word-painting. He played upon the heart-strings of humanity with consummate skill and tact. Multitudes the world around will pay tribute to his memory.

Closest to the Popular Heart

Representative Robert G. Cousins, of Iowa:

He helped to fill our world with life and love and liberality. I believe he was a good man, and helped tremendously the cause of progress. He was a great, large, natural man, somewhat erratic, but thinking all the time; more largely read than any of the great divines, save possibly Spurgeon and Beecher, and therefore closer to the average mind—the millions of America. It is a great consolation for our world to feel and know that the influence of one so largely known and greatly read has been for good.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 411

John W. Foster
A Minister of the Navy

REV. TUNIS S. HAMLIN
Pastor Church of the Covenant, Washington

HON. JOHN D. LONG
Ex-Secretary of the Navy

REV. JAMES DEMAREST
One of the Leading Speakers at Funeral

REV. THOMAS C. EASTON,
Who delivered the memorial address in Washington

Secretary of the Treasury

HENRY C. CORBIN
Adjutant-General U. S. A.

HON. H. B. F. MCFARLAND
Pres. Board of Commissioners, D. C.

REV. J. HOWARD SUYDAM
Who officiated at the President's Funeral

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly. Subscription price, $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the safest manner available to the remitter. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage.—For each copy to be mailed outside the U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year. Change of Date.—It takes at least two weeks to change the date, after your subscription is renewed.

Expiration of Subscriptions.—The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription ends. Change of Address.—Give both your old and your new address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

Dancing Churches

IN these somewhat too liberal days one need hardly be surprised at any new development on the part of a certain class of churches which have to be denominated as modern and progressive. We have churches that lay such stress on the importance of social functions that one would almost think they were recreation clubs, rather than earnest, Christian men and women, banded together in spiritual fellowship for the world's betterment and the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth. There are other churches that are so amazingly liberal in their views of what church life ought to be that they expend their energies in making God's house a headquarters for amusement and exhilaration. Then, too, there are boxing and calisthenic churches, which seem to have forgotten the fact, in their eagerness to prepare for a strenuous life, that a Christian church should be under the banner of the Prince of Peace, and that the stimulation of human combativeness is by no means in accord with Christly and apostolic teachings. Paul adverted to the fact that he had once been a gladiator and had fought with wild beasts at Ephesus; but some of our modern athletic churches have members who could do what Paul did at Ephesus and not think much about it. There are still other churches that make the Lord's house a bazaar, where all the arts and petty chicane of the vender of merchandise may be witnessed to such an extent that one naturally wonders, amid all the chatter and bargaining of church fairs, whether the money changers and others whom Christ whipped from out the Temple really were much worse than the mercenary, trading element in our modern temples. As to the church raffles, lotteries and the like—the less said, the better.

And now we are threatened with a dancing church! Some ultra-liberal church-goers in Chicago have warned certain pastors that unless the prohibition against dancing is revoked, the young folks will leave their home churches and seek others where more freedom and congeniality, coupled with a less rigid discipline, will allow them to dance as much as they please. They have not yet proposed to hold their "small and earlies" in the consecrated edifice itself, though that may come later.

There is a great deal of talk nowadays, concerning the wane of church influence and the decline in attendance. But where a church is spiritually alive, these complaints do not exist. Wicked excess and sinful absurdities, such as those described, are largely responsible for our church troubles, and for empty pews and spiritual torpidity. Whenever you find a congregation given wholly over to worldly amusement, that church is either dying or dead. God will have none of it; he will spew it out of his mouth. It must be true to him, true to the spirit of pure religion, true to itself, or it must die.

Vigorous Old Age

HOW many among us are prepared to take so cheerful a view of the advent of old age as that expressed by Senator Chauncey M. Depew at the birthday dinner given in his honor a few days ago? We hear so frequently that this is an age of young men, and that old age, and even middle life, is a barrier to employment in the ministry and in industrial pursuits, that the man of fifty years is apt to yield to the common opinion and feel that he has no longer a place in active life. Mr. Depew has attained the age of sixty-eight, but he refuses to accept this sentence of condemnation. There was a time, he admits, when he regarded the man of sixty as senile and worthless, but he has seen reason to change his opinion. He therefore pleads that society should revise its judgment, and especially that old men themselves should keep up their interest in life, and contribute all that they can to the common welfare. That they are able to contribute more than is generally believed, Mr. Depew is absolutely certain.

It is well that we should learn this lesson. In Europe it does not need to be taught. The spectacle of such men as Bismarck, Gladstone, Disraeli, and other statesmen, as well as many judges, professors in colleges, and leaders in medicine, art, and literature, doing magnificent work at eighty years of age, has convinced the public there that old men are the most useful citizens, bringing to their work the treasure of ripe judgment and the wisdom produced by long experience. Our nation has now attained a position in the world, that especially demands such qualities. The energy, the enterprise, the vigor and freshness of youth we still need; but we need, too, the discretion and knowledge of the world that come only by long experience.

How to grow old gracefully is a problem that many find it hard to solve, and perhaps it is the fact that so few solve it, that has led us, in our American life, to turn to young men to find a spirit in harmony with our institutions. They are more cheerful, more hopeful, more optimistic, as a rule, than old men, but there is no need that it should be so. It is possible to preserve the optimistic spirit into old age, and to draw from the experience of sixty years, lessons of confidence in God's providence, which may be uttered for the encouragement of the world in its hours of apprehension. The beautiful spirit which we have recently lost, and whose departure we all deplore, uttered in these columns at seventy years of age, words of hopefulness and good cheer, which were all the more impressive because we knew that his faith had been tried in the furnace, and that he was speaking truths that he had tested in the crises of his long experience. Mr. Depew is right: our old men are our best advisers and our most trustworthy guides, and when they have not become gnarled and crabbed in their long conflict, but are rather mellowed and sweetened by their long communion with God, their influence may be the most precious and inspiring that we can enjoy.

China's First Fruits

WE have always contended that if any progress was to be made in bringing heathen China into the light of the Gospel, it would be most surely accomplished by a policy of Christian fellowship and fraternal sympathy rather than by the sword. And now from Peking comes the cheering intelligence, that our missionaries have already begun to gather the first fruits of the spiritual harvest, the seed of which was sown during those terrible famine months when our relief workers were made instrumental in saving thousands of Chinese from death by starvation. In Shansi, one of the provinces where the famine raged in the greatest intensity, making a wide and deadly swath among the population, the provincial authorities have just given most grateful and emphatic recognition to the value of the splendid, self-denying work then performed by our missionaries, and in return for the waiver of all claims for indemnity arising out of the Boxer outrages. In Tai-yuen-fu, the leading city of the province, a Protestant College is to be established, and the Governor has announced his intention of giving it an annual appropriation of fifty thousand taels for the next ten years.

Of course, it was hardly to have been supposed that the anti-Christian element in China—the Confucians—would allow so great a triumph to be scored by the Gospel without a struggle. They planned to establish a rival university. Prince Ching promptly squelched the project by declaring that the Province could not afford two universities, and that the Governor must co-operate with the missionaries. It was clearly in his mind that the nation as a whole, and Shansi in particular, owed a debt of gratitude to the Christian missionaries, which should be honorably discharged. And this is how the munificent endowment of the Tai-yuen-fu Protestant University, of which the Rev. Timothy Richard, and Dr. Moir B. Duncan, two of the faithful missionaries who conducted THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's relief work in Shansi, are to be Chancellor and Principal, respectively. It is the first substantial victory for Christianity in China in recent years, and will doubtless be the forerunner of other triumphs.

Among the Workers

—REV. EDGAR L. WILLIAMS, of Peoria, Ill., and Prof. Harry L. Maxwell, of Greencastle Ind., who is to be associated with him as singing evangelist, have just closed a remarkable Gospel meeting in Guthrie, Okla. They will sail the first week in May, and will begin their work in the Stockbridge United Free Church, Edinburgh, Scotland.

GEMS FROM TALMAGE

Voices of Nature

—WHAT A GRAND thought that the lightnings, and the tempests, and the hail, and the frosts, which are the enemies of unrighteousness, are all marshaled as the Christian's body-guard. They fight for him. They strike with an arm of fire, or clutch with their fingers of ice. Everlasting peace is declared between the fiercest elements of nature and the good man. They may in their fury seem to be indiscriminate, smiting down the righteous with the wicked, yet they cannot damage the Christian's soul, although they may shivel his body. The wintry blast that howls about your dwelling, you may call your brother, and the south wind coming up on a June day by way of a flower-garden, you may call your sister. Though so mighty in circumference and diameter, the sun and the moon have a special charge concerning you. "The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night." Elements and forces hidden in the earth are now harnessed and at work in producing for you food and clothing. Some grain-field that you never saw presented you this day with your morning meal. The great earth and the heavens are the busy loom at work for you; and shooting light, and silvery stream, and sharp lightning are only woven threads in the great loom, with God's foot on the shuttle. The same Spirit that converted your soul has also converted the elements from enmity toward you into inviolable friendship, and furthest star and deepest cavern, regions of everlasting cold as well as climes of eternal summer, all have a mission of good, direct or indirect, for your spirit.

The Spirit of the Flowers

—YOU SAY THESE flowers will fade. Yes, but perhaps we may see them again. They may be immortal. The fragrance of the flower may be the spirit of the flower; the body of the flower dying on earth, its spirit may appear in better worlds. I do not say it will be so. I say it may be so. The ancestors of these tuberose and camelias and japonicas and jasmines and heliotropes were born in Paradise. These apostles of beauty came down in the regular line of apostolic succession. Their ancestors, during the flood under ground, afterwards appeared.

Strew the casket with flowers, the hearse with flowers, the grave with flowers. Put them on the brow—it will suggest coronation; in their hand, it will mean victory. Christ was buried in a garden. Flowers mean resurrection. Death is sad enough anyhow. Let conservatory and arboretum contribute to its alleviation. The harebell will ring the victory. The passion-flower will express the sympathy. The daffodil will kindle its lamp and illumine the darkness. The cluster of asters will be the constellation. Your little child loved flowers when she was living. Put them in her hand now that she can go forth no more and pluck them for herself. On sunny days take a fresh garland and put it over the still heart.

The world started with Eden, it will end with Eden. Heaven is called a Paradise of God. Paradise means flowers. While theological geniuses in this day are trying to blot out everything material from their idea of heaven, and, so far as I can tell, their future state is to be a floating around somewhere near the Great Bear, I should not be surprised if at last I can pick up a daisy on the everlasting hills and hear it say, "I am one of the glorified flowers of earth. Do you not remember me? I worshiped with you one Easter morning on earth."

Recognition in Heaven

—HOW DIFFERENT IT is on earth from the way it is in heaven when a Christian dies! We say, "Close his eyes." In heaven they say, "Give him a palm." On earth we say, "Let him down in the ground." In heaven they say, "Hoist him on a throne." On earth it is, "Farewell, farewell." In heaven it is, "Welcome, welcome." And so I see a Christian soul coming down to the river of death, and he steps into the river, and the water comes to the ankle. He says, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not death." And he wades still deeper down into the waters until the flood comes to the knee, and he says, "Lord Jesus, tell me, tell me, is this death?" and Christ says, "No, no, this is not death." And he wades still further down until the wave comes to the girdle, and the soul says, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not." And deeper in wades the soul till the billow strikes the lip, and the departing one cries, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not." But when Christ has lifted this soul upon a throne of glory, and the pomp and joy of heaven come surging to his feet, then Christ says, "This! oh, transported soul! This is death!"

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Crisis in Mindanao

SPECIALY deplorable is the news that was received two weeks ago of the possibility of a conflict with the people of Mindanao. We had congratulated ourselves amid our troubles in the other Philippine Islands, that our rule had been peaceably accepted by the fierce and warlike inhabitants of the great Southern Island. It appears, however, that some of our soldiers were treacherously murdered by a few Moros, and that when Gen. Chaffee demanded that the assassins be delivered up for punishment, he was met with a curt refusal. The chiefs, or dattos, took the further step of forbidding our representatives to search for the criminals. General Chaffee realized that defiance so open was dangerous to our prestige, and promptly dispatched a force to compel obedience, and to establish our right to go anywhere on the island. The President and Cabinet received the news with regret, and cabled General Chaffee to delay the departure of the expedition until efforts had been made to bring about a peaceful solution of the difficulty. The order, however, did not reach him until the expedition was already on its way, and had twice come into conflict with the Moros. The Washington Government admitted the truth of General Chaffee's representation, that it would be unwise to withdraw our troops after they had once landed, and therefore consented to his proceeding at his discretion, but urged him to show moderation and be value. They took it to the appraiser's stores, and summoned experts in old books to estimate how much it is worth. The value of the cover and the jewels can easily be appraised, and bibliophiles can say how much a manuscript book over a thousand years old is worth; but none of them can estimate the real value of a book of which the inspired writer said:

The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver. (Ps. 119: 72.)

A Chart of Treasure

Three men have set out from Los Angeles, Cal., for Brazil, with the expectation of locating an enormous horde of gold. They have as a guide a chart that one of the party found among the papers of a dead friend. He said: "We have implicit faith in this chart, for it was prepared by a man whom I have known all my life. Before his death he often spoke of gold hidden in caves in the northern part of Brazil. I often asked him to tell me about the location of the gold, but he refused, saying that he intended some day to get it himself. Being of a selfish and reticent na-

GEN. ADNA B. CHAFFEE

brought with him, began to explore the passages which led to the interior. He found that one led into another, and he continued to press forward, without finding anything notable, until he thought it wise to return to the river. After walking several hours, he discovered to his horror that he had lost his bearings. He was compelled to rest, but soon resumed his journey. He believes he must have walked many miles in the intricate passages, but he could not find one that led to the river. At last his light was exhausted, and he was in despair. The instinct of life, however, was strong, and he groped his way in the darkness hour after hour. He had quite given up hope, when he saw in the distance a gleam of daylight. He made his way toward it, and finally came out into the open air at a point five miles from the place where he had entered the cave. He sank exhausted on the ground, where, an hour later, he was found and cared for. On inquiring what day it was, he found that he had been in the cave four days and nights. It is marvelous that any man could survive such an experience. It is consolatory to reflect, that in the mazes of life and in the spiritual darkness that so often comes to the wanderer, God has provided a Guide who never fails.

To give light unto them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet into the way of peace (Luke 1: 79).

BRIEF NOTES

A concert was recently arranged at Derby, Conn., for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. At the last moment it was abandoned,

TYPES OF THE PEOPLE OF MINDANAO

CHIEFS OF THE MOROS

careful not to provoke a general war. They were gratified by receiving on April 25, news that the chiefs had submitted and had asked for peace. It is now hoped that the crisis has passed, and that a friendly conference with the chiefs may achieve the end desired without further bloodshed. In dealing with these proud and high-spirited Mohammedans, who certainly prefer our rule to that of Spain, Gen. Chaffee will act wisely and will win the approval of the President if he follows the advice that the aged men of Israel gave to their young king:

If thou answer them, and speak good words unto them, then they will be thy servants forever (I. Kings 12: 7).

Jewel-Covered Bible

A precious copy of the Bible was brought to New York, a few days ago, by a nephew of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, as a gift to his uncle. It was purchased from a monastery in Italy, and is said to have cost fifty thousand dollars. It is a manuscript copy in Latin, and is believed to have been written some time before the year 800 A.D. It is twenty-two inches long and eighteen inches wide, and is bound in gold, set with precious stones. The front cover alone contains two hundred and fifty jewels, including garnets, rubies, sapphires and diamonds. They are not pierced, but are set immovably in the cover, as if the wealthy possessor had made them a permanent part of the book. The text appears to have been the work of several hands, and probably belongs to different periods. The titles and initials are highly illuminated. Mr. Morgan mentioned the Bible among the articles in his baggage, subject to duty, but left the Custom House people to assess its ture, repeated efforts to learn anything about his secret failed. Not long ago I overhauled some of the things left by him after death, and found a sheet of paper marked with figures, lines and crosses. Later I ran across an old diary kept by him, and in it were the directions about the route to be taken. We are going on this trip fully equipped to stand the hardships that will be ours before we get to the end of our journey." They are sure of the hardships; but they cannot be sure of finding the treasure. If they would put as much faith in the Bible as they do in this chart, they would run no risk of disappointment in seeking eternal treasure.

Seek ye out of the book of the Lord, and read; no one of these shall fail, none shall want her mate (Isa. 34: 16).

Lost in a Cave

A thrilling story is told by a man who was found half dead at St. Genevieve, Mo., on April 8. When he had been cared for and nourished back to life, he said that he had spent four days in the huge cave near that place, which has never been explored, and on account of the number of deaths that have occurred in it, is called Dead Man's Cave. Having heard of strange sights in the cave, he determined to examine it, and though warned that none who penetrated to its depths ever returned, he persisted in making the attempt. He found his path barred about a mile from the entrance by a dark river, which he was convinced flowed into the Mississippi. He therefore returned, and procured a light canoe, which he dragged into the cave. In this he crossed the river, which proved to be of a much stronger current than he expected. He tied his canoe up on the other bank, and lighting the lantern he had because the chief singers were Roman Catholics, and their priest forbade them to sing for the benefit of an institution which was anti-Catholic.

Eight Christian Endeavor Societies have been organized among the Boer prisoners in Ceylon.

It is estimated that in Africa alone there are one hundred and fifty million persons who have never heard the Gospel.

Plans have been accepted for the new Broadway Tabernacle in New York. A prominent feature will be a well equipped parish house for institutional work.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, speaking recently to the graduating class of the Mechanics' Institute, New York, said: "The man who works for money alone will not find happiness. Money never buys satisfaction, but it does bring disappointments and arouses many jealousies."

Archdeacon Wilberforce of Westminster, recently invited a number of working men to attend a service in the cloisters of the Abbey. As an encouragement to them to come, he told them they might smoke while he preached. He had a large congregation. It was noticed that every man laid aside his pipe during the prayers.

A laconic note was left in Salvation Army headquarters by a man who, having had supper, bed and breakfast there, was expected to saw a cord of wood in return. He slipped out when the clerk's back was turned. He left on the desk a slip of paper, on which he had written: "Just tell them that you saw me, but you did not see me saw."

A distinguished physician, who has a large practice among Jews, says that the rate of mortality in that race is fifty per cent. lower than among Gentiles. Consumption seldom occurs among them. The most common diseases are nervous and mental, and there are an unusual proportion who suffer from blindness and near-sightedness.

The Brotherhood of St. Paul, a social organization connected with Sands Street Memorial M. E. Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., is doing noble work for the Master. It has recently opened a reading room in the church building, for the use of young men who are fond of spending a pleasant evening after their day's work. The tables of the room are filled with the evening papers, together with the choicest literature of the day, and here a pleasant hour may be spent, away from the gilded halls of vice. The room is open every week night, from 7 to 10 o'clock, and is well worth a visit. The church is situated at the corner of Clark and Henry streets.

Choosing Darkness Rather than Light • The Early Christian Missionaries

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 18
ACTS 13: 1-13

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT -- MATT. 28: 19:
"GO YE THEREFORE, AND TEACH ALL NATIONS"

The Lesson Story

THE Queen-Mother of Missions" was the title gracefully bestowed by the chairman of a missionary meeting in introducing the first lady missionary sent out from the United States, on her return in old age. So Barnabas and Saul may be called the fathers of missions, because they were the very first ordained missionaries. "They blazed the way." Through a trackless forest one may go safely to his destination by following the marks cut on the trees by some skilled guide, made by chipping off pieces here and there from the trees. These way-marks are not at one's feet, but above the level of the eyes, so that one must look up continually. All Asia, all Europe, was a trackless waste, so far as Gospel paths were concerned, before the time of our lesson story. But since the days of Barnabas and Saul, how many missionaries have followed the path they blazed, until the whole world is covered with paths that have been worn by the beautiful feet of those who publish the glad tidings of salvation.

That was a wonderful day in Antioch when Barnabas and Saul received their credentials of appointment. Their fitness for such work had been passed upon by God himself, and the commission had been sent to them in letters of fire. There were five men who may fairly have been considered "candidates" for entering the foreign mission field: they were Barnabas, Niger, Lucius, Manaen, and Saul. One of these, Manaen, was distinguished as being the foster-brother of the king. But he was passed by, and so were Lucius and Niger, and God's choice rested upon Barnabas and Saul, and by the Holy Spirit they were set apart for missionary work. And then came the farewell meeting, when they were lovingly sent away by the members of the church. It was a solemn occasion, with fastings and prayers and laying-on of hands. Those in the home church we know, without being told, must have ministered gladly to the necessities of those who were about to go to the mission field. It is likely that they were accompanied by not a few on the first stage of their journey, sixteen miles to the sea, where they were to take ship. There was a third person in the party, who had not received a commission from the Holy Spirit, a young man named Mark, a nephew of Barnabas. Did he have a right to go? This, indeed, may be questioned, in the light of what happened afterward, for he returned to Antioch when the journey was only fairly begun.

In some way, in all probability by direct leading of the Holy Spirit, Barnabas and Saul were constrained to visit some of the chief cities of Asia Minor, famous for wealth and culture, but given to idol-worship. First of all, however, en route they stopped at the island of Cyprus. Less than two days' sailing brought them to their first port, Salamis. And then they passed through the island, which was about one hundred and fifty miles long, stopping along the way to preach Christ. Barnabas met many familiar friends, for Cyprus was his native place. At length they came to Paphos, which must be considered the capital city, since the Governor, Sergius Paulus, resided there. He had heard about the mission of Barnabas and Saul, and he was greatly desirous of hearing what they had to say. But there was at his court a man who tried to prevent him from doing so, one Elymas, a magician. He tried, by all of his arts, to keep the Governor in his power. But the Spirit of God was mightier than Elymas, and Barnabas and Saul were brought in to preach to Sergius Paulus about Jesus. Elymas was there, too, but to his own undoing, for the Spirit in Paul caused blindness to come upon Elymas, as a punishment for choosing darkness rather than light. When Sergius Paulus saw what the power of God had done to Elymas, and heard the wonderful words which God's Spirit helped Barnabas and Saul to speak, he was ready to quit the worship of idols, and serve the true God.

Illustration and Application

The Holy Spirit said, Separate me, Barnabas and Saul. Missionary work had been developing very informally, but had now reached the point where it must be organized. The early Christian church, notwithstanding the Golden Text Christ had left them, "Go and teach all nations," did not really believe it was expected to save anybody outside of Palestine, except the scattered Jews and proselytes in other lands. God led them gently to the true meaning of his message. First, a layman, Deacon Philip, was drawn to revival work in Samaria, whose people were half Jews. Then the apostle Peter, by a vision, was constrained to preach to the Gentile family of Cornelius, who lived in Palestine, so that this was only like preaching to foreigners in our own country. At last, some of the lay people, scattered by persecution, told the good tidings to Grecians at Antioch, and the first real missionary church was thus formed. All this volunteer fighting was exemplary. It teaches us plainly that no man or woman who knows that Jesus saves, should delay to tell the glad tidings to his brother man because he is unordained or uneducated. If a friend's life is in danger, one does not excuse himself for taking the witness-stand because he is not a professional orator. His simple story may be all the more impressive. Not all Christians are called to

"edify," but all are commanded to testify. "Ye shall be my witnesses" is a word to us all.

Something more than informal witnessing, however, is needed in the church. There must be teachers and preachers especially prepared to defend the truth and attack error. "Order is heaven's first law." It is also needed on earth, even in the church. There is always danger that in organizing fellowship it will fossilize into formality. But we may keep a "Spirit in the wheels." Wesley's enthusiastic followers were called "Methodists" because there was so much method in their zeal.

Up to a certain point, independent missionary work is useful, at home and abroad; but so soon as one needs to call on others for funds, or there is material for a church, the movement should become a part of some denomination or union of denominations, or should in other ways be organized for permanence and wise direction.

This lesson is a good place to make our young people feel that the ministry is a "calling," and not a "profession." God does not always point out one's field, but in the Student Volunteer Movement the story of Barnabas and Saul repeats itself on a large scale in young men manifestly called of the Holy Spirit to the foreign field. Whether called to preach abroad or not, let us all at once heed the nearer call to testify at home.

Thou child of the devil, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord? Here we have a specimen chapter of early missionary work. Note that not alone the poor, but some of the influential, heard the Gospel gladly, of which Sergius Paulus, the noble Roman Governor of Cyprus, is an example. He seems to have been naturally religious, and of this quality a greedy Jew magician, Elymas Bar-jesus, had taken advantage after the fashion of modern spiritist mediums, who have frequently fleeced rich victims. But when he heard the truth, he was able to distinguish it from the errors that had been thrust upon him. Elymas Bar-jesus saw his victim escaping from his clutches. Instead of repenting, he withstood the missionaries. Paul, who on other occasions besought men with tears, saw that this was a case of severity and plain speaking. Not in personal anger, but in righteous indignation, he called the sorcerer a "child of the devil and enemy of all righteousness," for seeking to "pervert" one that Paul was seeking to convert. Then followed Saul's first miracle. When God had arrested him as an enemy at the gate of Damascus he had blinded him, as if to picture his state of mind in fighting against Jesus of Nazareth. So Saul brought for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Rebukes should usually be given by one to one—seldom, as in this story, in public, and in both cases usually with tears in our tones. It requires much grace to give rebukes wisely, and yet more to accept and profit by them. Children should remember that God bids their parents, teachers and pastors rebuke their wrong-doing for their good, and should be great-hearted enough to take it as a real kindness, intended to save them from greater pain.

"IMMEDIATELY THERE FELL ON HIM A MIST AND A DARKNESS"

Paul dared to rebuke not only this sorcerer, but even kings, as when "Felix trembled" as he spoke of "righteousness, temperance, and a judgment to come." Let us recall the glorious company of heroes that have dared to give such fearless rebukes to sinners who might have slain them for their plain speaking.

I am a prophet who sent a tall young king, at God's command, to destroy a wicked people and all their property. He spared the best of the cattle for his stock farm, and thought to atone for his disobedience by giving the Lord a few of these cattle in sacrifices. I said to him in stern rebuke, "Obedience is better than sacrifice," that is, it is vain to pray if you do not also obey." Who am I? Samuel.

I am a prophet dressed in rough skins, who rebuked a king that had killed a neighbor to get possession of his beautiful vineyard. God's judgments came on this king and his wicked wife, who tried to slay me. Who am I? Elijah.

I am a prophet who was a chaplain to another king, that caused one of his soldiers to be killed that he might have his wife. I told him a story of a poor man from whom a king, who had great flocks, took his one ewe lamb. My sinful master did not see that the story pictured his own meanness, and so I said plainly, "Thou art the man." Who am I? Nathan.

I am a prophet that rebuked a king who, in his success, forgot to thank God, and said, "Is not this great Babylon that I have built?" I told him that he should in madness roam the fields, and feed on grass like an ox, and it was so. Who am I? Daniel.

I am a prophet of the New Testament, who told a wicked king that had taken his brother's wife, that it was not lawful for him to have her, and for that true word I was imprisoned, and afterwards assassinated. Who am I? John the Baptist.

Such cases of heroic rebukes do not end with the Bible. I am a Scotchman, of whom some one said, "He never feared the face of man." When my queen indulged in folly and sin I rebuked her. Who am I? Knox.

Nor are all such heroes dead, for there are men living who dare to rebuke living kings for Sabbath breaking, gambling, encouraging the drink traffic, and impurity.

Let us, like Mary Lyon, be afraid of nothing but that we shall not see and do our duty.

From these pictures of courageous testimony let us come back to missions, and place beside their beginnings in this lesson, their extent in 1900, as shown by the table at the foot of this page, compiled by Dr. James S. Dennis.

Like a modern repetition of the cry of the man of Macedonia, "Come over and help us," is the story told in 1893 by Dr. John G. Paton, the apostle of the New Hebrides. He said that three years before, he called at the island of Ambrym, on his way to take a missionary to another island. There was no missionary at Ambrym and not very much was known of its people. Dr. Paton and his friends were consequently not a little alarmed, when they saw the shore covered with armed savages. One of them seized his arm and asked him what he had come for. "Are you come," he demanded, "to steal boys and women?" Being assured that he had not come for any such purpose, but was a missionary, the savage gave him hearty welcome. He was sorely disappointed when he learned that Dr. Paton was not going to stay, and begged that a missionary might be sent to teach his people about the true God. Before leaving, Dr. Paton promised that a missionary should be sent at the first opportunity. Three years passed after the giving of that promise before it was possible to keep it.

Evangelical Missions of the Whole World in 1900

| | Number of societies | Total income | Total number of missionaries | Total number of native helpers | Organized churches | Total number of converts | Additions last year | Sunday-schools | Total Sunday School membership | Total of native contributions | Total of native Christian Community |
|---|---------------------|--------------|------------------------------|--------------------------------|--------------------|--------------------------|---------------------|----------------|--------------------------------|-------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Directly engaged in missions | 249 | $17,161,092 | 13,607 | 73,615 | 10,993 | 1,289,208 | 83,895 | 14,940 | 764,684 | $1,833,981 | 4,327,283 |
| Indirectly aiding | 98 | 1,227,731 | 1,255 | 3,216 | 17 | 25,561 | 37 | 14 | 1,150 | 1,225 | 76,328 |
| Engaged in special foreign mission work | 102 | 737,297 | 598 | 507 | 29 | 2,825 | 254 | 78 | 6,094 | 6,551 | 10,625 |
| Totals | 449 | $19,126,120 | 15,460 | 77,338 | 11,039 | 1,317,694 | 84,186 | 15,032 | 771,928 | $1,841,757 | 4,414,236 |

A DANUBIAN MARKET-WOMAN

THE EMPEROR'S PALACE

GRAIN MILLS TURNED BY WATER

A RIVER TYPE

DOWN THE DANUBE THROUGH HUNGARY

WHEN one realizes the interest, comfort, and cheapness of a trip on the Danube, it seems strange that the ordinary tourist stops on his southward journey at Vienna, or, if he is wiser, goes as far as Budapest. Thanks to the comfortable steamers, the trip into Roumania may be taken as pleasantly as on the Hudson, and the return trip by rail to Vienna, owing to the zone system on the Hungarian railways, is agreeable and ridiculously cheap. A small knowledge of German is an essential. In the small towns of Hungary, Servia and Roumania, where no word of English is spoken, someone who speaks at least a German patois can always be found.

The dividing line between Austria and Hungary is about thirty miles south of Vienna, and the first town of importance over the line is Pressburg. It is in Pressburg that you realize that you are leaving the beaten track of tourists—the peasants, in their queer sheepskin coats, with the wool on the outside, the signs in Hungarian, in which all the s's and z's left over from every other language are slung together in a haphazard fashion, the country wagons, with their wicker-work bodies, give a uniqueness to the town to one accustomed to the usual tourist resorts.

One has heard of the vast Hungarian plain, but it takes a trip across it to make you realize what it really is. Mile after mile of absolutely flat country, the only living things in sight long-legged cranes, who eye the boat with a stupid curiosity. Of villages, there are none for hours. At irregular and infrequent intervals, the boat stops at a landing, where only two or three rough houses, a few peasants, and always a herd of gaunt, woolly pigs are in sight. Anchored in the stream near many of the stopping-places, are curious grain mills, looking for all the world like the Noah's arks which delighted us as children, and one almost expects to presently see the animals come out two by two, headed by Shem and Japheth. By the side of the large, ark-like structure is a smaller one, and connecting the two is a huge wheel, which, slowly revolving with the force of the current, turns the stones which grind the grain for the invisible population. Sometimes twenty or thirty of these mills stretch in a string down-stream, each a trifle further out in the current than its predecessor, so that all may enjoy the force of the water.

The town of Gran, seen from the steamer, seems as if it were a town made up of priests. It is the seat of the Primate of Hungary, and the cathedral, with its lofty dome, is a landmark for miles. Below the cathedral, on the edge of the river, is the bishop's palace. In the dusk of evening, the lights of Budapest are seen in the distance. Budapest is a city of the first-class, whose shops and boulevards rival Paris, whose park—the Stadtwaldchen—is a dream of beauty, whose underground electric tramway and surface lines are essentially up-to-date. The Franz Josef Quai, during the late afternoon and early evening hours is the focus of a cosmopolitan throng. Turk elbows Russian; and German, Hungarian, Italian and English are heard on every side. The palace gowns and gray beards making them look like patriarchs; soldiers, with much red in their uniforms, wearing flat, Russian-looking caps, peasants in brilliant coloring. In the middle of the street are huge bullocks, drawing clumsy-looking wagons with enormous wheels; men on horseback, donkeys, an occasional carriage, and many dogs. The Konak, or royal palace, on the principal street, is fronted by a beautiful little garden, bright with flowers. The principal park, the Kalemegdan, is perched high on a bank overlooking the confluence of the rivers, and is thronged in the early evening hours by the fashion of Belgrade.

But it is the market in Belgrade that is the most picturesque part of the town. There, gathered under the trees, in a square, in the early morning, may be seen the country people, dressed in the national costume, in which reds and yellows predominate. The women, more picturesquely dressed than the men, are flashes of color, from their roughly-knitted red and white stockings, a discreet glimpse of which may be caught below their moderately short skirts, to the red and yellow handkerchiefs which adorn their heads. Some are very pretty, with a wild eastern type of beauty, and their dress serves to set it off to advantage. It is hard to resist their requests to buy. As you continue your journey, along the river, you may see on the Servian bank many holes cut into the rock just above the high-water mark. These are all that is left of Trajan's road. When that Roman emperor led his legions down through this country, he caused a road of beams, securely fitted into these holes which were drilled by hand, to be made for the use of his army. The holes alone remain, a mute testimony of his energy and perseverance. At the end of the Defile of Kazan, on a cliff overlooking the river, Trajan caused a commemorative tablet to be made. The tablet may still be seen, but the weather has sadly marred the lettering.

Orsova, which we next reach, has a capital little hotel, and it is the last town in Hungary. The market is bright with picturesque peasantry. The women wearing a costume with long strings of bright-hued material, tied at the waist and hanging down the back of the skirt.

Ten miles below, rocky ledges known as the "Iron Gates of the Danube," the Roumanian town of Turn Severin is reached. Once more passports have been examined. Then, after a night's rest, the early morning is the time to see the Turn Severin market. Nowhere, may such wealth of color in peasant costume be seen. Red and pink sound as if they might

CONTINUED
ON PAGE 404

A STREET SCENE IN PRESSBURG

of the emperor, on the opposite bank of the river, stands out in the dreamy light like a marble cloud. The busy cafes and hotels are bright with color, and the strains of numerous bands fill the air. Surely there was never a more beautiful sight than the Franz Josef Quai on an evening in early June. It is almost with a sigh of regret that you board the steamer and resume your journey. Twenty-five hours from Budapest, the lights of Belgrade are seen, and the boat, leaving the Danube, turns up the Save and soon ties up for the night at Belgrade. A policeman demands your passport. Your baggage is quickly past the custom officers, and a drive over villainously paved and lighted streets, patrolled by police carrying long rifles, lands you at your hotel.

Belgrade is a jumble of a western boom town and a Russianized Orient. The main street straggles along in an unfinished and unkempt condition; on the sidewalk are tall priests of the Greek church, their long black

A SHEEPSKIN SUIT

AT THE TURN SEVERIN MARKET

TYPES OF PEASANT WOMEN

A BREEZY COSTUME

IN A BELGRADE STREET

A · GREAT · WORK-SHOP · BIBLE · CLASS

MR. D. L. BALL, PRESIDENT, WARREN Y. M. C. A.

TELLING CHRIST'S STORY TO MEN IN THE IRON WORKS

MR. H. E. DODGE, SECRETARY, WARREN Y. M. C. A.

CARRYING the Gospel to men at their places of toil, is one of the most successful methods of modern evangelical work. In Warren, Pa., teaching Christ to men on week days has been effectual in bringing them to church on the Sabbath. Warren is a little town in the heart of the oil country; of its 8,000 inhabitants, a large number are workmen.

Among the fine buildings for which the town is noted, is the home of the Y. M. C. A. This organization has developed so rapidly during the last three years, that it is well known in Association circles. Its officers in the fall of 1900 believed that the men employed in the various industries would appreciate a weekly presentation of the Gospel in the form of a "Shop Bible Class," and such a class was organized in one of the oil refineries, at the request of the managers. This class was so eminently successful that other classes quickly followed, until now there are six.

These "Shop Bible Classes" meet at the noon hour, usually from 12.20 to 12.40. After singing several Gospel songs, some visiting lady or gentleman vocalist renders a solo. The teacher then takes up the lesson in an eight to ten minutes' talk, giving the men the historical facts about the special subject under consideration. One or two striking illustrations are generally used to reinforce and bring out more clearly the points of the lesson. The facts laid before them, the men are left to draw their own conclusions. No attempt is made to bring men to an open decision for Jesus Christ, neither are they exhorted to do this or that. The truth is told, and the consequences of acting or refusing to act on it, are laid down. The classes at present are studying "the story of Jesus," taking up the events of his life in their chronological order.

Among the results already noted is the decrease of profanity and impurity of speech in the places where the classes are held, and quite a number of men from the various shops have professed conversion in the Men's Gospel Meeting held at the Association building every Sunday afternoon, converts uniting afterwards with the church of their choice.

Possibly one of the greatest helps in maintaining the attendance at these meetings is the weekly distribution of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. The Y. M. C. A. purchases 400 copies weekly of this paper, and at the close of the "class" they are given to the men attending. Every man is anxious to get one, and takes it home so that his family can read it too. The general manager of one of the industries where these "classes" are held said—"the men seem more eager to secure these papers than they do their pay checks." Another said: "The way the men come forward for their papers makes me think of a cane rush in college." The management of all the industries where classes are held, are in full sympathy with the movement, and render valuable assistance from time to time.

The accompanying picture represents the "Shop Bible Class" at the large establishment of Struthers, Wells & Co., the photograph being taken while the ladies rendered the closing songs. The pile of CHRISTIAN HERALDS, marked X, are seen in the centre, ready for distribution as soon as the song is finished and prayer offered.

Down the Danube Through Hungary

CONTINUED
FROM PAGE 403

jar—and so they do with us—a pink handkerchief worn on the head of a Roumanian peasant woman seems to be made to go with the bright reds and yellows of her clothing. The whole costume is so barbaric in cut and coloring that ordinary rules are set aside, and what to our Western minds would seem a horror of color, appears absolutely harmonious. Strange-looking men in long sheepskin coats, their heads covered with hats of the same material, are here, evidently the lords and masters of the brilliantly-clothed women. But it is the women who are the workers. They have for sale, and urge you to buy, their queer-looking vegetables and squealing pigs. By eight o'clock the market is over. The town itself is uninteresting. The market is the redeeming feature, it is the one thing which makes a visit to Turn Severin worth while, it makes up for fleas and dirt and other annoyances that afflict the traveler.

To the traveler interested in queer types of humanity, to the practical man of affairs interested in effective and cheap means of transportation, to the artist keenly alive to the beauties of nature, to anyone interested in what the rest of the world looks like, there will be found a great deal of interest and enjoyment in a trip down the Danube.

W. BRADFORD ALLEN.

Alice Roosevelt, Friend of Lepers

THE lepers of Molokai, it is said, are turning their eyes toward Miss Alice Roosevelt, and giving her the place in their hearts held by their beloved young Princess, Kaiulani, who died not long ago. To Kaiulani, they used to send their appeals; and now, they think they have found in the President's daughter a new friend, who will remember their sad case, and lend sympathetic ear to any plans looking to the amelioration of their condition. So far, it is only a slight thing Miss Roosevelt has done, but it is sufficient to show her interest in them, and the simple, responsive Hawaiians overflow with grateful appreciation. She has demonstrated her desire to secure for them better nursing and care—an evidence of which appears in the following incident, recently cabled from Honolulu:

The Board of Health has received a communication from Acting Governor Cooper, enclosing a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, forwarding a copy of a personal letter received by Miss Roosevelt from Marie Leurquin, a French nurse at Brussels, Belgium, who wrote that she had a great desire to consecrate her life to the care of the Molokai lepers, and asking Miss Roosevelt to aid her in securing permission to enter the colony. She said: "I am forty years old, and without being rich, mademoiselle, I am able to pay 1,000 francs a year for my board, and all the expenses of the voyage. I have taken the liberty of addressing myself to you, mademoiselle, hoping that Monsieur, the President, your father, would not refuse you this, if you would have the kindness to present my request to him yourself. If I obtain that which I desire, my gratitude toward your august

MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT

Copyright, 1900, Frances B. Johnston family will be eternal. I will pray every day for the President in a manner special, in order to preserve him from the evil which actually threatens all crowned heads."

Miss Roosevelt presented the appeal to her father, who sent it, through the Interior Department, to Governor Dole, with request for the necessary permission, if it can be obtained. For a volunteer nurse to secure admission to the leper colony is not an easy matter. Many people, women chiefly, who want to minister to the lepers, are yearly refused. Volunteer helpers, it is urged, are often inefficient, however willing they may be; and their introduction into the colony has been, at times, the cause of trouble. To keep the disease from spreading, it is also Government policy to discourage accessions to the settlement. In the present case, competent aid seems offered; and if the Catholic sisters at Molokai are willing. Mme. Leurquin will, through Miss Roosevelt's intercession, be allowed to devote her life to this work of mercy. About eight hundred lepers make up the settlement at Kalaupapa, Molokai. The Government, it is said, does much to relieve their sufferings and make their lives as pleasant as possible. There are schools and churches of various denominations. Several hundred people, not lepers, but relatives of lepers, live in the settlement, in spite of the Government's efforts to prevent this. The lepers themselves, of course, may not leave the island. On three sides, Kalaupapa is surrounded by the sea; on the fourth, a sheer precipice, 1,800 to 8,000 feet deep, divides it from the rest of Molokai.

Her interest in the lepers is not the first active evidence our President's daughter has given of a philanthropic spirit.

Missionary Olsson's Travels

This letter from Emilio Olsson, missionary correspondent in South America, tells of his recent evangelistic travels:

MY DEAR DR. KLOPSCHE: During January I traveled over 300 miles and disposed of nearly two boxes of American Bibles. I hope to start again in a few days and trust I shall reach Neuguen, near Chile, in the Cordilleras de los Andes. This is a very important journey overland, as I hope to reach a good number with the Gospel of Christ. In traveling by Galera we employed thirty-six horses and the rest of the tour was done by rail. Many people were glad to hear the message, and the Bible was received with great interest. There I sold all my books. My work here is very important and the Gospel need is great. Yours in Christ, EMILIO OLSSON.

FOUR EXTRA PAGES

In consequence of the unusual space devoted in this issue to the tributes to Dr. Talmage's memory, four extra pages have been added to the number, in order that our readers may have the usual full variety of interesting articles concerning different phases of Christian work throughout the world.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

LOUIS KLOPSCH, PROPRIETOR

NEW YORK, MAY 7, 1902

BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK

COPYRIGHT 1902 BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

DRAWING BOOKS FROM THE UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT LIBRARY

A PLEASANT HOUR IN THE SETTLEMENT READING ROOM

New York's New Settlement Leader,
Robert Hunter.....

CASTS HIS LOT WITH THE POOR

A Rich Young Man
Living among Tenement
Dwellers

WITH the installation of young Robert Hunter as Headworker in the University Settlement, corner of Eldridge and Rivington streets, a new and interesting factor is added to the great system of sociological work for which the Metropolis is noted. Of this system, the institution over which Mr. Hunter presides is, as readers of this journal are aware, one of the most dignified and effective centres, and the young gentleman succeeds a worker of international reputation, Mr. James B. Reynolds, whose resignation was necessitated by his duties as Private Secretary to Mayor Low; Mr. Stephen H. Olin takes Mr. Low's place as President of the University Settlement Society.

For this accession to her ranks of sociologic workers, New York has drawn upon the Middle West. Mr. Hunter comes from Chicago, where he has made a brilliant record for himself. Though only twenty-eight, he long since passed the 'prentice stage in his chosen field of labor, which he entered immediately upon completion of his course in the University of Indiana in 1896. While achieving, as organizing secretary, the establishment of the Associated Charities in Chicago, he was successively a resident in Northwestern University Settlement, Helen Heath House and Hull House. As Chairman of the City Homes Association (which instituted investigation of Chicago's serious housing problem), member of the Special Parks Commission and of the School Extension Committee, and Superintendent of the Municipal Lodging House, he rendered signal services to humanity's cause in that city. His "Report on Tenement Conditions in Chicago" won wide recognition as an original and scientific contribution to the subject. More than any city in the union, Chicago is troubled with the tramp problem, and this, Mr. Hunter attacked with courage and skill. His travel abroad, and temporary residence in Toynbee Hall, London, "Mother of Settlements," round out his training for the exacting duties he has assumed in New York.

The compelling point of interest about the new leader's personality lies in the fact that he is a young man of wealth, position and exceptional culture, who might, if he so desired, tread the primrose path of ease and idle pleasure, but who chooses instead to live and labor among the poor of the crowded East Side. In personal appearance, he has been variously described as a "Club man," and a "Society man." He is really a college-bred, athletic, prosperous looking young American—a "good fellow" in the best sense of the term as it has come to be applied to an increasing number of men of similar qualifications, who are devoting their talents and energies to the solution of humanity's many vexed problems. In connection with his present course, he disclaims any idea of sacrifice. He loves altruistic work, and enjoys the privilege of bringing blessings into the lives of the unfortunate. THE CHRISTIAN HERALD gladly emphasizes these points, because it were well to spread the noble contagion, happily attacking so many of our wealthy young people, until every rich man and woman in the land is sharing treasures of mind and purse with less favored fellow mortals. Perhaps the advice which Christ gave to the rich young man who went away sorrowful, is to bear abundant fruit in the twentieth century.

When the word "reform" was used in connection with his East Side Work, Mr. Hunter, loyal to his neighbors, interrupted quickly: "These people," he said, "do not need reform. They only need opportunity. They will uplift themselves if they have a chance. They will choose the better things if the bet-we but serve ourselves in performing it. Particularly do conditions bear hard upon tenement children, who are practically without room to grow in or place for play, and before whose eyes evil finds continual presentment."

When asked if he would inaugurate any changes in the conduct of the Settlement, Mr. Hunter said: "The work has been so wisely conceived and faithfully carried on that I should speak with diffidence about making improvements or innovations. The normal growth of the plant and changes arising in the city or neighborhood will naturally call for the putting forth of new efforts. We expect to co-operate in every way possible with the Tenement House Commission, which is a new City Department; a great work lies before it in the betterment of East Side homes. We shall do what we can to secure more small parks and playgrounds. We have, too, a new home for our music school. Mr. Henry P. Wertheim has given us a handsome property, adjoining this, just for that purpose. The hunger of these East Side children for music is something phenomenal, and is recognized as a leverage which may be used for their advantage by all East Side workers."

Mr. Hunter has an able Assistant in Mr. Thomas J. Jones, who held this position to Mr. Reynolds. The big building is one of the busiest places in New York. In the morning, kindergarten children are in possession; and Settlement workers, with problems to solve, and neighborhood people wanting advice or aid, are coming and going to Mr. Hunter's office. When public schools are out, the place overflows with boys and girls, and all sorts of clubs and classes are regnant; reading-room and library are crowded with visitors; and roof-garden games go on overhead. With evening, older people come in for meetings, social educational or philanthropic. Similar activities are conducted at the West Side branch, 38 King st. What most impressed the writer is the air of pride and proprietorship which neighborhood people take in the establishment. "Let me show you our Guild Hall," said a little lad. "Have you seen our gym?" asked a young man.

Readers of this journal are not unfamiliar with the history and influence of the University Settlement, nor are they ignorant of conditions on Eldridge, Rivington and contiguous thoroughfares, where poverty and squalor lay suffocating hands on the child in the cradle, youth in what should be its bloom, and old age in its weakness. Pavements swarm with pushcart vendors; little children literally live on the streets; saloons are everywhere; underground groceries and bakeries abound, and many people dwell in dark, unwholesome cellars; garbage cans are everlastingly in evidence; untidy sights and evil odors afflict the senses. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD will surely wish success to Mr. Hunter and the corps of cultivated men and women to whom he stands as leader in their efforts to make life a better, brighter, happier thing for those among whom they have elected to dwell as neighbors and brethren.

MYRTA LOCKETT AVARY.

MR. ROBERT HUNTER, HEADWORKER AT THE UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT

ter things are set before them. We have in them the making of a magnificent citizenship if we will only see it so and lend a helping hand. The conditions of existence in these big tenement districts is enough to crush aspirations, and it is a wonder that it is not crushed. Crime and degradation attributed to the East Side are not so much due to these people as to their circumstances; in the main, they have made a fine, noble struggle against the vices of this great city, where poverty presses and temptations assail them on every hand. Many of our foreign colonists here who come from rural districts over the sea, are simple and true of heart. We have a duty to perform toward them, and we have a duty to perform toward them, and

The American Pulpit

... A Sermon by ...

REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

TEXT—Mark 8: 36: { "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul" }

MOST magnificent text, especially easy of interpretation at the present time. This is pre-eminently a commercial age. Everywhere man is struggling after the mighty dollar. Capital strives to beat down every obstacle, that its rivers of gold may grow into oceans. Prove to a man who has money that by a certain investment he can make more money, and there is no trouble to persuade him to invest. Why does a real estate speculator buy land? To make money. When examining a piece of property he says to himself, "If I buy, shall I be able to sell at an advanced price? Is this suburban region going to be built up? Will the electric cars come out here? Shall the future residents have easy access to the city? Shall I be able to make enough out of my bargain to warrant the output of cutting this farm up into streets and building lots; enough to pay my taxes in the meantime?" The merchantman's chief thought is to decrease his expenses, and thereby increase his profits. To have the maximum of returns for the minimum of output, he sends his buyers to Europe. There they can buy the cheapest. He has wires strung round the store so he can dispense with his cash girls. He pays promptly for his goods to avail himself of the discount. To woo more trade, he has his delivery wagons stationed in the neighboring towns. His customers are thus accommodated. They do not have to carry their bundles home.

To increase the profits and decrease expenses the large corporations are being formed. There is the steel trust, the oil trust, the tin can trust, the sugar trust, the tobacco trust, the coal trust, the flour trust, the meat trust. A trust is primarily formed to regulate the selling prices. But secondarily, a trust is formed to lessen the cost of production.

The Crucial Question of Profit

Thirty or forty men in the same line of business come together. They say to each other: "What is the good of trying to financially cut each other's throats? Why not have a community of interests? Instead of having many different offices we can have one big central office." Instead of having thirty or forty different presidents, and secretaries, and treasurers, and cashiers, and superintendents, and general managers, we can have each department under a single head." If we are in the brick business we can have the brickyard which is nearest to the site of the proposed building make the bricks, and thus save expense of cartage. The tie which binds the leaders of a great corporation is not one of sentiment, but one of profit. Christ, in my text, talks to his auditors as though they were a collection of business men. He practically says: "Before you settle the question of your eternal destiny I want you to enter into some Gospel mathematics. I want you to put down upon a piece of paper all the riches of the world. Place there the value of the gold of countless mines and of the cattle on a thousand hills. Place there the value of the palaces of kings and queens. The value of the great commercial interests of the world. Put all these values down. Add the figures up. Then from that aggregation of numbers subtract the value of your immortal soul, and behold what you have left."

Mathematics cannot lie. Two and two, always make four. Ten times ten make one hundred. Twelve divided by four always gives three. Five from five leaves nothing. Come, let us try to solve the greatest of all problems: "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

He who solves this Gospel problem must realize that he can only get a life interest in the world, and not a title-deed in perpetuity. Every would-be purchaser of a home is very careful about the title-deed. When a man is about to buy a house he has his own lawyer go to the county building and look up the records. The attorney traces the history of that land from owner back to owner, until he comes to the original settler who bought the land from the Government or the Indians. If there is any flaw in any deed the would-be buyer refuses to purchase. He says to himself: "I am afraid that I might be involved in future litigations. My children may have this property taken from them after I am dead. I will not buy. The title is not perfect." Within a short distance of my old Brooklyn home there was a tract of land which was called Jackson's Hollow. It was in the very centre of the city. Well-paved streets ran through it. The drainage pipes were all there. The city grew. The houses were built up for miles and miles beyond this location. Jackson's Hollow was uninhabited for fifty years, except by a few poor families, who had erected shanties. These poor families were squatters. We boys would play ball in those vacant lots. Jackson's Hollow, in its status, existed because there was a flaw in the title to the land. No man would build there a house until he was positive about his ownership. A few years ago the civil courts rendered favorable decision concerning the title deeds. Then the masons and the carpenters came in swarms. Jackson's Hollow disappeared forever from public view.

"But," says some one, "to possess a life interest in the world means a very great deal. Think of owning all the money stored away in the vaults of the United States Treasury. Think of possessing the royal jewels of England, and Germany and Russia and Spain. Think of having your wardrobes filled with the costliest of dresses now being made in the large establishments of the Parisian modistes. Think of all the new bonnets one could have, all the horses one could drive, all the steam yachts which would ride at anchor in front of one's summer home. Indeed, it looks as though to have a life interest in the world is not to be despised, even though we must surrender all at the brink of the grave."

An Annuitant's Investment

But Satan's offer is not so liberal after one begins to rightly estimate the results. The other day I was talking to the representative of a great life insurance company. I said to him, "I have a horror of old age, weak and helpless. I do not want to be a wornout minister, who has to preach to earn his daily bread. When I grow so old that the people would prefer a younger man to take my pulpit I would like to be able to resign my pastorate." After hearing me patiently, this life insurance agent answered, "There would be no danger of that if you only had a little money. When you become sixty or seventy years of age, you could go to a life insurance company and purchase an annuity. For a very moderate sum you could at that age secure an annual income that would be sufficient to keep you from all want." "But," I answered, "suppose I could not pass a medical examination, what then?" "Ah," replied the life insurance agent, "you do not have to pass a medical examination. The older you are and the poorer your health, the more anxious the company would be to get you to invest. As soon as you die the company will possess your principal." Satan, in a similar way, comes to a man who, in all probability, will not live over five or ten or perhaps twenty years, and he says, "My friend, you give me a mortgage on your eternal soul, to be foreclosed at your death, and I will give you a life interest in the world. I will give you more food than you can eat, more clothing than you can wear, more houses than you can live in, more money than you can spend. And at your earthly demise, I will not care for your money, or your stocks, but, will only demand and take your immortal soul." Come, now, let us reason together. Are you, an immortal man, with a soul which shall live on through the coming ages, with a soul that shall stand by the cradle of unborn millenniums, with a soul that shall yet witness this earth gasp and die of old age, to enter into such a contract. Read the simple statement of the proposed agreement. Ask yourself this momentous question: "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul," and exercise the common sense God has given you.

Harassed Millionaires

Great worldly possessions do not necessarily imply a life interest in happiness. Indeed, we believe those in the ordinary walks of life have better possibilities for happiness than those in the higher walks. The more influential one becomes the greater his responsibilities and anxieties.

What was the happiest time of your life? You are now a great merchant or lawyer or physician or Governor or Senator. Is this your supremely happy moment? "No," you answer, "the happiest time of my life is not found in the present, but in the past. Now I have riches, a city mansion and a country home. These results of financial success do not bring to me peace of mind and contentment. The happiest time of my life was, when a poor young man I lived on a small salary. Though my wages were not large, I yet had enough to marry on. I won a true, good, noble wife. We started out in two small rooms. The babies came one by one. The small salary was somehow able to stretch enough to furnish food and clothing for all. We always had enough to eat. Our garments could defy any cold. Never were a pair of birds happier hatching out their eggs in a dove-cote than my wife and I in our little nest. But now, instead of working as a mechanic ten hours per day, I am planning most of the time. I am afraid the men will strike, and the whole plant will stand idle. My poor brain, tired from overwork, will not let me sleep at night. I am worried, because I fear that if I should die my children could not straighten out the estate. They might lose everything." Indeed, there is but little pleasure in being rich and owning more houses than you can live in.

That the advantages of wealth are frequently over-estimated is peculiarly well illustrated in one of Dr. Dio Lewis' lectures. He says: "How much more does the capitalist get out of his millions than the man of hundreds gets out of his hundreds? The millionaire cannot wear, as he walks the streets, a hundred coats, a hundred vests, a hundred hats, or a hundred pairs of shoes. When he sits down at the table he cannot eat a whole roast ox, two or three barrels of potatoes, a couple of bushels of turnips—in fact, he very rarely eats as much as his brother in poorer circumstances. When he dies, he requires no ten-acre lot to bury him. The hole that his body will fill will be no larger than that required by the pauper who died in the poorhouse. His eyes can penetrate no further than mine, his ears can hear no better, his feet can run no faster, his life's enjoyment is no keener. Alexander T. Stewart, the multi-millionaire merchant, said, in response to the suggestion that being such a successful and wealthy man he must be a very happy man:

'All I Get Out of the World is my lodging, my clothing and my board, and in view of the state of my health the board is very poor.' Cornelius Vanderbilt was out one day on a tour of inspection of his great railroad, accompanied by Chauncey M. Depew. At about noon the train was sidetracked to give a through train the right of way. Mr. Vanderbilt happened to look out of the window of his drawing-room car, and saw one of his own track laborers sitting on the ground and keenly relishing a generous ham sandwich, washing it down with copious draughts of coffee. Mr. Vanderbilt turned to Depew and said: 'Chauncey, I would give all of my millions if I could enjoy my meals as that man does his.' At that particular time Mr. Vanderbilt's diet was raw chopped beef and rice. Stephen Girard, the Philadelphia millionaire, once said, 'I do not value money for the mere pleasure of possessing it. The only purpose I have since I made financial success is to work so hard during the day that when night comes I may be able to forget my existence in sleep.' In the light of these testimonies I ask you, my hearers, does it pay to gain financial prosperity at the expense of your immortal soul?

Fame does not assure happiness. A prominent man is the world's target to be shot at. No matter what his motives and ambition may be, defamation and slander and misrepresentation never tire of haunting his tracks. The giants are the pigmy's natural objects for ridicule. A ground mole has never any respect for the broad wings of a flying eagle. Daniel Webster, the great constitutional lawyer, made this solemn statement: "In my time I have often done wrong. I am by no means perfect. But before God, I can say that for the words I have spoken and the deeds which I have performed with the holiest and the most unselfish and the purest of motives, I have been the most bitterly assailed. If it were not for the fact that I am trying to live by principle, and do my fellow-countrymen some good, I would have given up the struggle of public life long ago." Success may mean great opportunities for usefulness. It also means tears and heartaches and agonies. It means that if you are to accomplish any great good in the world, you must also be cut and slashed and maimed. The lightnings play upon the rugged heights of a tall mountain far easier than they strike into the valleys below. The bird which flies nearest to the sun, has its wings scorched quicker than the little wood-robin cooling his throat by the mountain stream. The songs of the night are the sweetest of all songs. They are the songs sung by a broken heart.

Closing the Bargain

When the man of the text gains a life's interest in the world by losing his own soul, he unkennels and unleashes the blood-hounds of his lower passions. He enters into a contract with Satan the same as he would sign a promissory-note to his creditor. As a merchant, there comes to him a questionable proposition. He knows that if he yields, great profit will accrue. He knows that if he does what this questionable proposition demands, he must practice deceit. He lies awake two or three nights trying to decide whether or no he will be dishonest. At last, in the midnight hour, he yields. He practically calls Satan into his bedroom. While lighting the gas, he says, "Now, Satan, I am resolved to be dishonest. I intend to be a Shylock and demand the full pound of flesh nearest to Antonio's heart. Give me success and I am willing to sell you my soul." When a man comes to such a decision as that he naturally lets loose the lower part of his nature. As a merchant he becomes a mere money-making machine. As a lawyer who seeks political preferment, he becomes an Aaron Burr. When he reaches thus for a soldier's reward, he

Wretched pest, you have probably come direct from some hospital, garbage jail or stable, laden with fifth and possibly disease germs. If I try to banish you by poison of any kind, you drop into the provisions and food, and I have made matters worse. There is only one way to get rid of you—

TO USE

TANGLEFOOT Sticky Fly Paper

It will catch and hold and cover you all over, and the germs and dirt that you are carrying, with a varnish from which you can never escape to trouble me either living or dead.

TANGLEFOOT is for sale everywhere and is absolutely the only safe protection against flies.

The O. & W. THUM CO., Mrs.,
GRAND RAPIDS MICH.

THE PEACE QUEEN'S PERIL

GR EAT anxiety has been felt in Holland over the serious illness of Queen Wilhelmina; and the world at large sympathizes with the Dutch people in their grief and concern at the suffering and peril of their fair young "Peace Queen," who is dear to the hearts of all nations.

Her Majesty had been reported as far from well for some time prior to the publication in April of the news that her indisposition had developed into an acute trouble, with the gravest possible symptoms. Next, came the formal announcement by her physicians naming typhoid fever as the afflicting malady. Though their reports did not forecast a fatal termination, all Holland was shaken with grievous fear that such would be the case. With the first intimation of danger, all the churches began to offer special prayers for her recovery; and among nobles and simple peasant and fisher folk, the topic of the hour was the distress and jeopardy of their beloved young monarch. Within the palace, attendants walked softly, and great physicians watched unceasingly; while the Prince Consort, overwhelmed with anxiety, rarely left her bedside, save during her sleeping hours, to answer personally sympathetic telegrams and inquiries pouring in from European sovereigns and courts, and from America. A manifesto to the effect that he wanted all the public festivities planned for his birthday, April 3, postponed, was published in official journals. The queen mother, also at Loo, was constantly beside her daughter.

QUEEN WILHELMINA

Wilhelmina, "the darling of Holland," has always received from her subjects a rather unique regard—in which reverence for her as sovereign and tenderness for the little child whom they had "brought up," had share. At ten years of age she became Queen; William III., her father, dying in 1890; then her doll play, and her pony rides were matters of pleasing talk at homely Dutch firesides. In 1898, she took the oath of office and became actual ruler. All Holland went mad with joy at her coronation; fisher folk and peasant folk, flocking from far and near to join in the festivities. So, too, at her marriage, in 1901, to Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who was then invested with the title of Prince of the Netherlands. The great event of the life of the Queen—that which makes her a most gracious and revered figure in international history—is her connection with the World's Peace Congress of 1899. She was hostess of that august body, and in her beautiful historic palace, House-in-the-Woods, Occidental and Oriental nations joined hands in the interests of international harmony. When the Boer war seemed imminent, she pleaded for intervention by the Great Powers, and when war came she promptly arranged for the comfort of the wounded. All Christendom unites with Holland in earnest desire for the Peace Queen's restoration to health.

O'NEILL'S

SIXTH AVENUE, 20th to 21st Street, NEW YORK

Importers and Retailers

DRY GOODS, FANCY GOODS, CLOAKS and COSTUMES,
FINE MILLINERY, HOUSE FURNISHINGS, SEWING
MACHINES, BOOKS, PHOTO SUPPLIES, Etc., Etc.

Send for our new

FASHION BOOKLET

Mailed free to all applicants
residing out-of-town

Every other month we issue free to out-of-town applicants an illustrated booklet which describes the newest and best things in the Dry Goods Market. It is a very useful little book, particularly so to those living at a distance from the Metropolis, for it places the reader in touch with the whole world of fashion.

Send us your name and address and
we will place you on our Mailing List

Mention this paper.

H. O'NEILL & CO., 6th Ave., 20th to 21st St., NEW YORK

"WEARS LIKE IRON"
JAP-A-LAC
(REGISTERED)
NEW WOOD FINISH
FOR FLOORS AND INTERIOR WOODWORK
RESTORES THE FINISH ON ALL ARTICLES OF WOOD AND METAL THAT HAVE DETERIORATED.
A VARNISH AND STAIN COMBINED
MADE IN OAK, WALNUT, HAWGANY, CHERRY, GREEN, OR SLIPPER, BLACK (CRACKS & REPAIRS), NATURAL (OILY),
IVORY & YELLOW, COLOR CARD & BOOKLET FREE.
SAMPLE CAN (4 Fl. Oz. Easy Color) by mail, postpaid, for 10¢
THE GLIDDEN VARNISH CO.
DEPARTMENT C CLEVELAND, O.
QUART CAN BY EXPRESS, PREPAID, 75 CTS

Do You Need a Steel Range or Steel Cook Stove?
If so, we will sell you a
KALAMAZOO
direct from our factory at factory prices on
30 Days' Free Trial.
All our stoves and ranges are equipped with this, our patent oven thermometer and all other the improvements. Our entire warehouses are filled with us. All manufactured in our own factory and only direct to users. Freight prepaid. A word to the wise. If you want a good article and want to get it at the right price, write for our free catalogue. Address
KALAMAZOO STOVE CO., Mrs.,
Kalamazoo, Mich.

The KHOTAL
is a gas range for city or country homes, small,
compact and powerful; burns
without smoke,
soot or smell; generates its own gas from ordinary kerosene; economical in first cost and maintenance. Prices from $3.75 upwards.
Send for catalogue.
HYDROCARBON BURNER COMPANY
196 Fulton Street, New York City

A FENCE MACHINE
That combines Simplicity, Durability, Rapidity and Economy. The DUPLEX. It makes over 100 Styles, 50 to 70 rods a day, of Horse-high, Bull-strong, Pic and Chickens-tight
Fence that combines Strength, Uniformity,
Permanency, Reliability and Efficiency
AT COST OF WIRE. Machine on Trial. Full information free. Wire of every description at Wholesale Prices. Write today.
KITSELMAN BROTHERS, Box 1251 Muncie, Ind.

SHREDDED
WHEAT BISCUIT
WHOLE
CAUSE 1. The primary cause of poor teeth and therefore poor health is the general use of white flour. In milling the mineral properties of the wheat that make teeth have been removed. Your reason tells you to change your diet.
CAUSE 2. Another cause for poor teeth and therefore poor health is the use of soft cooked cereals. Being soft they are swallowed without mastication. The vigorous use of the teeth is a necessary exercise and the only way to mix saliva with the food. Your reason tells you to change your diet.
THE LAW. The law is: "Naturally organized foods make possible natural conditions; there is no other way." In white flour the law is broken because a part of what nature has organized in the wheat has been removed and in soft, cooked food the law has been broken by robbing the teeth of their natural uses.
WITHIN THE LAW. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is within the law because the whole wheat is used—nothing added—nothing taken away. The crispness of SHREDDED WHEAT BISCUIT compels mastication and causes the flow of saliva. It is therefore Natural food. Your reason tells you to adopt it. It is sold by grocers.
MORE LIGHT
Our booklet "The Vital Question" will give you more light on the food subject. Sent free upon request.
THE NATURAL FOOD CO.
NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

Earn a Roman Divan

with automatic adjustment, the latest and most popular thing in parlor furniture, without paying out a cent, by taking orders for the celebrated Niagara Extracts, Perfumes and Toilet Preparations from your neighbors and friends.

Only a few hours spare time required.

Our goods are absolutely the best of their kind, and cannot be bought for less anywhere. We are the only firm in the world making its own goods and its own premiums, and can guarantee absolutely unequalled values. We send premium with the goods, without a cent in advance and allow 30 days in which to sell the goods.

FREE. To show what we mean by quality we will send on request a sample package of Niagara Talcum Powder with our new catalogue of hundreds of premiums easily earned. Write today.

S. A. COOK & COMPANY, 1 Cook Bldg., Medina, N. Y.

No. 391 Buggy. Price, $19.00. As good as sells for $25.00 more.

29 YEARS' SELLING DIRECT.

We are the largest manufacturers of vehicles and harness in the world selling to consumers, and we have been doing business in this way for 29 years.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS

but ship anywhere for examination guaranteeing safe delivery. You are out nothing if not satisfied. We make 195 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness. Our prices represent the cost of material and making, plus one profit. Our large free catalogue shows complete line. Send for it.

No. 710 Open Stanhope. Has 14 inch Kelly rubber tires. Price, $82. As good as sells for $50 more.

Elkhart Carriage & Harness Manufacturing Co., Elkhart, Ind.

You're killing two birds with one stone when you use PEARLINE.

“Work” and “Wear” are both avoided by washing without rubbing—the PEARLINE way. More economy. You save health, strength, and money when you use PEARLINE. Facts never disproved. The common sense, up-to-date way of getting things clean is the

Pearline Method 660

There's Money in it!

“The breed that lays Is the breed that pays”

SINGLE COMB WHITE LEGHORNS

There is money in them and pleasure as well. The suburbanite can make his poultry go a long way toward keeping his family. The young man or woman desiring a clean, healthy and money-making business, will find it in this occupation. We teach how to start right and furnish a complete outfit. A postal card will bring full particulars. Have you a few hens now? Perhaps you want to introduce new blood into your flock. Our strain of Single Comb white Leghorns is the finest in the country. Their show records prove it. Eggs for hatching from heavy laying matings $2.00 per 15; $8.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000. Prices on stock and eggs for hatching from prize-winning matings given on application.

The White Leghorn Poultry Yards, Box C, Waterville, N.Y.

$8.95

EIGHT DOLLARS AND NINETY-FIVE CENTS

ours the celebrated, high grade new 1902 Model EDGEMERE BICYCLE, 28-inch wheel, any height frame, high grade equipment, including high grade guaranteed pneumatic tires, adjustable handle bars, fine leather covered grips, padded saddle, fine ball bearing pedals, nickel trimmings, BEAUTIFULLY FINISHED THROUGHOUT, ANY COLOR EXAMEL. STRONGEST GUARANTEE.

$10.95 for the celebrated 1902 Kenwood Bicycle.
$12.75 for the celebrated 1902 Elgin King or Elgin Queen.
$15.75 for the highest grade 1902 bicycle made, our three crown nickel joint, Napoleon or Josephine, complete with the very finest equipment, including MORGAN & WRIGHT HIGHEST GRADE PNEUMATIC TIRES, A REGULAR $50.00 BICYCLE.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL on any bicycle ordered. offer ever heard of, WHITE FOOL OUR FREE 1902 BICYCLE CATALOGUE. Address: SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

EARN A BICYCLE

distributing 1000 catalogs for us in your town. Agents can make money fast on our wonderful 1902 offers.

1902 Models, $9 to $15

1900 & '01 Models, high grade, $7 to $11

500 Second-hand Wheels

all makes and models, good as new, $3 to $8. Great Factory Clearing Sale at half factory cost.

We SHIP ON APPROVAL and 10 DAYS TRIAL to anyone in U.S. or Canada without a cent in advance. Write at once for net prices and special offer to agents. Tires, equipment and sundries, all kinds, half regular prices.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. 64 E CHICAGO, ILL.

$26.50 BUYS A BUGGY

(with top $33.50) of very superior QUALITY, STYLE AND DURABILITY

Entire output of two enormous factories, sold direct to consumer. We manufacture full line Buggies, Carriages, Harness, and all other goods, ship on approval. WE DEFY COMPETITION & SAVE DEALERS' PROFIT.

Money back if not satisfied. Send for CATALOGUE and SPECIAL OFFER. UNION BUGGY COMPANY, 202 Saginaw Street, Pontiac, Mich.

STARK TREES SUCCEED WHERE OTHERS FAIL.

Largest Nursery. Fruit Book Free. Result of 76 years' experience. STARK BROS., Louisiana, Mo.; Danville, N.Y.

PRACTICAL CONSECRRATION*

ORDINARY DUTIES PERFORMED IN THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST

YOUNG Christians often shiver at the word, Consecration. The meaning it carries to them is of something gloomy, ascetic, depressing. It calls up a conception of a joyless life from which smiles and laughter are excluded. It suggests such an existence as the one that the famous essayist describes, in which all pleasure, all gratification, all that we delight in, is resolutely renounced in exchange for the hope of happiness beyond the grave. That these are mistaken views of consecration, is obvious, in the light of the description of a consecrated life which Paul gives in the chapter associated with the topic. He cites various characteristics of the life and draws a picture of the consecrated man, telling us what he is and what he does. It really does not seem a very objectionable life. So attractive does it appear, that one would like to live with people of that kind even if one did not practise their virtues. They must be the best of friends, the most delightful associates, people whom we could love and reverence.

The list of duties surprises us by its simplicity. The consecrated man is not to be vain or proud. If he has a special gift, he is to use it for the purpose for which it was given, and for the general benefit. He is not to disparage the gifts of others, but to recognize the fact that other men, whose gifts differ from his, fulfil a useful purpose, and are needed by his brethren. His love is to be sincere. He is to hate and avoid evil; to be diligent in business; to be cheerful and patient when in trouble; to be charitable and hospitable. Not only is he to show forbearance toward those who injure him, but to be kind to them. He must be sympathetic, as ready to enter into the joys of his brethren as into their sorrows. Toward the poor and the foolish he is to be kind and tolerant, showing no arrogance or impatience. He must be honest and peaceable, and so far from retaliating when he is wronged, he is to return good for evil. Finally, as a general principle, he is not to yield to the evil around him, not suffer it to influence or control him, but to overcome it by good, which is its surest and best antidote. We can imagine what a changed world this would be, if people generally followed these simple rules. Wars would cease, quarrels would be unknown, generosity would take the place of selfishness; the curse of competition would be removed, for no one would want to get ahead of his neighbor, or supersede him, and love would rule in every community.

What a changed world it would be, too, if all who call themselves Christians followed these simple rules! Nothing could so advance the cause of Christ in the world, as for every follower of him to be such a man as is described in this chapter. We make much of orthodoxy and of doctrine, and we are justified in doing so, for as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he; but there is a danger of being satisfied with creed. We need to make our creed practical by embodying it in our lives. The world would be inevitably attracted to our creed, if it found by experience, that every man who took upon him the name of Christ, was the kind of man that the apostle describes. And as he frankly declares, this is our reasonable service. He who has been saved, ought to live such a life. The divine life within him should have such a visible manifestation. That is the only way in which such a life can be developed. The root of the tree, which bears those fruits, is the Christ in the soul. Simple, as are the duties enjoined, they do not proceed naturally from the unrenewed heart. They come only from that process which is here described as being transformed by the renewing of the mind. When that process is taking place, there is hope that the Christian may no longer shrink from the test of Christ: By their fruits shall ye know them.

*Topic of the Christian Endeavor Society, Epworth League and Baptist Young People's Union for May 18. Romans 12: 1-21.

All Hands On Time

The second hand, the minute hand, the hour hand, run in unison on an

ELGIN Watch

Perfect in construction; positive in performance. Every genuine Elgin has the word "Elgin" engraved on the works. Illustrated art booklet free.

ELGIN NATIONAL WATCH COMPANY, Elgin, Ill.

ESTABLISHED SEVENTEEN YEARS.

Any Young Man or Woman Can Earn a BICYCLE FREE

without interfering with present occupation, by riding and selling our HIGH GRADE One Year GUARANTEED

1902 "OAKWOOD" and "ARLINGTON"

In addition to FREE BICYCLE we will give $1,000.00 IN GOLD to those making the LARGEST SALES in April, May and June, 1902.

No catalogues or circulars to distribute. BICYCLES FROM $8.95 UPWARDS. All new styles; no second-hand wheels; no old models. Our highest priced 1902 "Oakwood," strong, graceful frame, seamless tubing, 64.4 tires, Garford saddle, adjustable handle bar. Everything guaranteed first-class. Only $18.75. Equal to any wheel sold for $50.00. You can sell it for $25 the day you receive it. Write for particulars concerning FREE BICYCLE and CASH PAYMENT OF $1,000.00. Address: CASH BUYERS' UNION, DEPT. D-18 CHICAGO, ILLS.

REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO.

RHEUMATISM

RELIEVED WITHOUT MEDICINE

New External Remedy That Relieves and Is Sent on Approval to Anybody for the Asking.

Magic Foot Drafts are driving away Rheumatism all over the world. Ordinary cases are permanently relieved, and the most obstinate ones always comforted. Try them. If you are satisfied with the relief they give you then send $1.00. If not, don't send us a cent. The drafts draw out the poison from the blood through the large pores of the feet. At no other point in the body can the circulatory and nervous system be so conveniently reached as on the soles of the feet. Poisons are absorbed there and given off there. Magic Foot Drafts draw out the uric acid of Rheumatism, effecting permanent relief.

I am entirely free from Sciatica, which had been troubling me for the last 20 years. I treated with our home physicians, but found no relief until I used the Magic Foot Drafts, which did the work and did it well, with about one-fiftieth the expense of doctors and medicines.

DEWITT C. FAXON,
912 1st Street, Jackson, Mich.

Write to the Magic Foot Draft Co., 87 Oliver Bldg., Jackson, Mich., for a free trial pair of Drafts and their new booklet, "To One With Rheumatism."

HEMET LANDS IN CALIFORNIA

The Hemet Lands are located near Los Angeles. Water supply abundant. Soil and climate suitable to the culture of the Orange, Lemon and Olive. Corn, wheat and potatoes yield splendid returns. Market good, prices excellent. The town of Hemet is a live, wide-awake place, prosperous stores, banks, schools and churches.

FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

Large, illustrated pamphlet, giving reliable information about the best irrigable lands in California, in tracts to suit, on easy payments. Title perfect.

P.N. Myers, Address: HEMET LAND CO.
Gen'l Mgr. Dept. F, Hemet, Riverside Co., Cal.

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE

REMOVES AFFECTIONS PECULIAR TO WOMEN

COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY IT.

Thousands of letters like this prove our assertions:

"Curtis, Miss., Sept 1st, 1898 The brace I bought of you two years ago did all you claimed for it. It freed me from the worst forms of illness peculiar to my sex. Before using the Brace I suffered with prolapsus, periodical cramps, inflammation, constipation, headache, and other things of 20 years' standing. I had spent hundreds of dollars for medicines and doctors before trying the Brace."

Send for full information with booklet, mailed free in plain, sealed envelope. Address:

THE NATURAL BODY BRACE CO.,
Box 171, Salina, Kansas

SIMPLE IN CONSTRUCTION—COMFORTABLE
ADJUSTABLE TO ANY FIGURE.

DENT'S Toothache GUM

A SWELL AFFAIR

When applied to cavity or surface of aching tooth relieves the pain instantly. No experiment, but a standard and widely known remedy. Be sure to get Dent's; imitations are useless. All druggists or by mail, 15 cents.

C. S. DENT & CO., DETROIT, MICH.

SALESMEN AND AGENTS WANTED

BIC WACES—Our Famous PURITAS WATER STILL, a won derful invention—not a filter. 22,000 already sold. Demand enormous. Every body buys. Over the kitchen stove it furnishes plenty of distilled, aerated drinking water, pure, delicious and safe. Only method Distilled Water relieves Dyspepsia, Stomach, Bowel Troubles, prevents fevers and sickness. Write for Booklet New Plan, Terms, etc. FREE Harrison Mfg. Co., 143 Harrison Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

A-LOG-CABIN HOME IN PIONEER MORMON REGIONS—OUTSIDE AND INSIDE—THOSE AT THE RIGHT OF THE FIRST PICTURE BELONG TO A SEPARATE FAMILY

WHAT THE UTAH
GOSPEL MISSION IS DOING

Missionary Work in Mormonland

By the Rev.
JOHN D. NUTTING,
Sec'y of the Mission

READERS of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD are already familiar to some extent with the work of the Utah Gospel Mission of Cleveland, O. It aims to reach the 310,000 Mormons with the Gospel of Christ. Not all the Mormons live in Utah; probably about one-third of them live outside of that State.

The census of 1890 showed Mormons in twenty-two States and Territories, Utah leading with 117,640, Idaho coming next with 14,816, Arizona 6,500, Colorado 1,640, Wyoming 1,322, and others from 453 in New Mexico down to 14 in Indiana. No doubt the distribution now is in similar proportions. The total number of Mormons is now fully 310,000, having more than doubled in the last twelve years!

REV. JOHN D. NUTTING

Thus the work of the Utah Gospel Mission is broad and difficult. Its workers serve without salary, living in roomy gospel wagons, and doing their own cooking. The work goes on in zero weather just as much as in summer. Since last June the workers have visited about 3,000 homes, having religious conversation in probably 1,000 of these, and carefully using over a million pages of specially prepared literature, besides much of ordinary character. Colporteur work has been fairly started. Evangelistic workers will hold meetings in the villages, beginning as soon as the way is open. About $1,200 would be needed to buy a wagon, team, and all complete, and support three good men for the year's work. The writer visited nearly 800 families in Utah and Idaho last summer. Away in Idaho, is a lane of scattered log houses called "a village." Frontier homes all, just a few years from the sage-brush; and all owned by Mormons—as are nearly all the others in that great region. One of them is a little better than the rest, and has barns in good shape; it is the bishop's house and the post-office. Another, is both school-house and Mormon meeting-house. The missionary wagon drives up to the first one (as it is after seven o'clock and time to stop for the night), and gets leave to stop right there, with feed for horses in the pasture. Getting chips and bread and milk is one man's work; another cares for the team, while the cook sets the table (made of the two cupboard doors), and gets a hasty supper. Then the writer starts off down the road, to call on the people till bed-time. First house, not at home; second house, a woman is rocking baby to sleep, and other children are pretty lively, but she invites us in, and is quite ready to talk. At first she mistakes us for one of the "elders," who frequently go about thus. Soon she launches out into praise of polygamy, though we had not suggested the topic at all, saying "it was heavenly—so heavenly that we were not worthy of it, it was taken away from us, and we do not practice it now." Poor woman! We pity her ignorant belief, which she had no doubt been brought up in, that only those who are polygamists in this world can reach the highest state of "exaltation" hereafter—in other words, can themselves become great gods, instead of the little ones or angels or servants, which all other folks must be! The talk went on a little further, and after explaining our literature and urging her to study it, the next house was visited. Here the call was without unusual incident, save that we were urged to hold meetings in the village. Returning to the wagon, we found the house full of people waiting to hear us sing, and expecting a meeting, and the other brothers waiting. So we had a "sing," and talked to the people.

Another night, we had just driven across a canal so deep that the water filled the wagon. Coming to a long, low log cabin, we concluded to camp by the road there. The head of the family was an unusually intelligent Mormon elder, who had been "out on a mission" and was anxious to hear what we had to say. So he and his wife and the writer sat at three sides of the table and talked religion, until a quarter past eleven. This elder was a poor man, but unusually clear of head and fair-minded.

The impression left on the writer by the summer's work was chiefly one of sadness and pity for the universal ignorance of all the great teachings of the Bible which he found. The people were constantly quoting the Mormon books supposing they were quoting the Bible. In no case which he can recall, out of 800, did a Mormon seem to hold a single great doctrine of Christianity truly. A letter just received from a friend in Utah says: "I have noticed the moral condition of this people, and have drawn this conclusion, that they know nothing of sin or its consequences, and are just drifting along in the assurance that if they are just baptized and do some work in the Temple (secret ceremonies for the dead) they will get the exaltation" (the Mormon expression for a degree of their heaven).

These people are sincere in their beliefs, for the most part. Two out of three of them were born into Mormonism and have never had a chance till now to know that it is not real Christianity, as they are taught that it is. The only way to reach them is to go to them in a kindly, self-denying, Christian spirit, as the Utah Gospel Mission is doing, and with just the kind of truth they need, presented in the way that will not arouse their prejudices. This Mission is the only organization attempting this special work. Its efforts have been very greatly hampered thus far by lack of means. It is deserving of the most cordial support at the hands of those who are interested in spreading the Gospel among the Mormons. Its appeal is for means to meet the actual expenses necessary, for devoted men who serve without salary, and to provide the outfits and literature for careful distribution. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD can learn further particulars concerning the work by addressing the Utah Gospel Mission, 739 Republic street, Cleveland, Ohio.

As Mormon elders and propagandists are exceedingly active at this season of the year in many States, pastors and Christian workers should be prepared to refute the errors and enlighten the people as to their heresies. Pamphlets specially prepared for this purpose are supplied at nominal rates by the Utah Gospel Mission.

WESTERN SHEEP HERDERS, AND A FLOCK OF ABOUT 3,000 SHEEP

UTAH GOSPEL MISSION WAGONS SETTING OUT FOR WORK

ANSWERED PRAYERS

W. S. F., Tacony, Phila., Pa., writes: I want you to say in your "Answered Prayer" column, that God has been wonderfully blessing me, as I read the testimony of others.

Reader, North Enid, Okla., writes: I was in great trouble; a dangerous temptation had come to my life, which I knew would lead to my ruin; but I could not conquer in my own strength. Almost hopeless, I went to my God and asked for his help and strength. He has greatly helped and delivered me.

R. W., Cape Girardeau, Mo., writes: In reading "Answered Prayers," I felt I must add my testimony to that of the others.

for God has repeatedly answered mine. Only last week I had a blessed answer. I had prayed to hear from my son, who had long been away from home. A few days ago I received a letter from him.

Mrs. G. M., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: The "Answered Prayer" column has done wonders. Our faith has been strengthened.

I wish I could tell you of all the good that has come to all the people here—you would surely say, "Praise the Lord."

E. R., Honesdale, Pa., writes: Last spring, something I valued very much was taken from me. I prayed about it, and asked God, if it was his will, to please restore it to me. My prayer was answered.

Sending Golden Sunshine into Shadowed Lives

THE value of organization in securing effective work is shown in the report received from Miss Harriet B. Swineford, President of the Philadelphia Branch No. 1 of the International Sunshine Society. The Branch has one hundred members, men, women and children. Whenever a call is made by the president, every member is anxious to help according to his or her power. The Branch is divided into five sections, each with its vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Each section selects work most congenial to its members. Ladies' Section B, for instance, is active in cheering the sorrowful and lonely by song and recitation. Many entertainments have been given in the Barracks at League Island, on board merchant vessels, and in the Homes for the Aged. Junior Section B, composed of bright boys and girls, have shown their energy and generosity by conducting a fair, the proceeds of which, amounting to $600, will be applied to charitable uses; this Section B has also established a circulating library of over 200 books, for the use of its members. Miss Swineford always emphasizes the fact that Sunshine is not a charity, but only the passing on of a favor, the spreading of "good cheer."

St. Cecilia League

The Sunshine work of this New York League was never better illustrated than last week, when the members went to Bellevue Hospital and sang in three of the wards. Among those who helped in this good work were: Mrs. L. V. Sheldon, vocalist; Mrs. Stokes Palmer, violinist, and Miss Eva A. Vescelius, the president, who rendered a contralto solo. Miss Vescelius is the Sunshine member who has charge of the Sunshine Carnival which will terminate the Annual Meeting on May 29. This will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria from 9 A. M. until 6. The Carnival and reception will take place at the Carnegie Lyceum. The newest mechanical and electrical effects have been secured for the Carnival, and a most enjoyable evening will be assured.

Sunshine Banner

A Sunshine Branch in Jersey City, Mrs. Brice-Collard president, has recently ordered a handsome banner for Sunshine, from the best flag maker in the city. It will be presented at the Annual Meeting.

Many members write to headquarters, saying that if they had materials, they would make dainty and useful articles, suitable for birthday gifts and Sunshine gifts to shut-in members. There is always a demand for these sort of things. If you have a duplicate pin-tray, and do not know what to do with it, send it to 96 Fifth avenue. Send a little flower vase, book-rack, table-cover—in fact anything pretty for which you have no further use. When you go away on your holidays, take some little pieces of fancy work, marked "To be worked for Sunshine gifts." You do not know what "good cheer" you may be scattering, when you forward these things to be sent out from Sunshine Headquarters.

A Birthday "Letter Party"

Sadie and Esther Ford are sisters, and both invalids. Sadie will have a birthday on May 3, and would like a letter party from Sunshine members. She makes lovely silk sofa-pillow tops, and is anxious to sell some of them to help pay for necessary medicines. Any member who would like to write to these two deserving invalids can address them, care of Miss Esther A. Ford, Monroe Centre, Maine. Writing a letter costs so little. How many people can you cheer by a few written words?

REV. AUGUSTA J. CHAPIN
Sunshine Chaplain

GLADYS P. CANFIELD
(Worker for Sunshine Carnival)

MRS. THEODORE HAYNES
Minneapolis S. S. President

Is there any member in New York City who can spare an hour twice a week to take out an invalid girl, who passes most of her time in a wheelchair? Such a case for Sunshine is at present before us. Send to headquarters, 96 Fifth avenue, if you are willing to shed this sunshine. The young girl lives in Harlem, N. Y.

A call for reading matter, histories of any country, has been made by Mrs. Lillie Glenn, Mound City, Holt County, Mo. She writes, "My little ones are out of school and cannot go to Sabbath School. I have no near neighbors, and sometimes we are lonely and unhappy." Mrs. Glenn would much appreciate pressed wild flowers (with names), cotton blossoms, buttons or beads, marbles, or anything to amuse the children in this lonely place.

Mrs. Nora Colley, of Aspinwall, Va., is anxious to get some clothes suitable for her children. There are two little boys about four and six, also a dear little baby, born March 25. Mrs. Colley has always been a good Sunshine member, and has been helping another family with food every day.

Who will send good cheer to Mrs. M. D. Kennedy, of Fairbault, Minn., R. F. D. 6? Her husband broke his arm last week and the family are having a hard time.

Now that you are sorting your clothes, and putting the winter ones aside for the summer ones you will surely find some garment that will help some of these deserving cases. Do not let the moths eat up such things when they mean comfort for so many.

Two little Sunshine members are anxious to help a sick woman who cannot walk. They thought, perhaps, some member might have a chair which could be lent to her. Address Grace and Freda Smith, Box 35, Lowellville, O.

Miss Thomas, New York City writes: "I have taken very lively interest in the development of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD Sunshine Branch and its work; and it has occurred to me, that now that the summer is at hand, many of our members might be glad to have a share in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD's beautiful Fresh Air work conducted at Mont-Lawn, on the Hudson. I am sure that our local chief, Miss Ella Klein, and our International President Mrs. Alden, will approve of this suggestion."

"In their own squalid quarters children of New York's crowded tenements have no place to play save on the blistering pavements. Some of them have never seen a flower growing. Would you like to send sunshine into one little shadowed life? Only $3, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD tells us, gives a week's outing, covering cost of transportation, medical and caretakers' attention, etc. $6 sends two little ones; $3 three; and so on. Perhaps some Sunshiner who wants help, but is not able to give it, might enlist his or her Sunday School class or the Sunshine friends around them, to aid in making up the amount. Sunshine sewing circles might see clothing that boys and girls between four and twelve can wear; and mothers give their children's outgrown garments. I enclose a contribution of $3 for one week's outing, and urge that others send sunshine for Children Home to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, N. Y."

How They Sing Up Yonder!

"Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repented" — LUKE 15: 7

H. E. JONES

D. B. TOWNER

Copyright, 1896, by D. B. Towner. Used by per.

From the new book "SACRED SONGS NO. 1." By per. of The Biglow & Main Co.

Where to Send "Good Cheer"

A little boy, aged twelve, is a very patient invalid. His mother is poor. She longs to give him pretty books to help pass the weary time, but lacks the money to purchase them. There are many Sunshiners who have interesting illustrated books suitable for such a boy. He is anxious to learn, but is unable to go to school. Address Ralph Wade, Mt. Sylvan, Smith County, Tex.

$3, might enlist his or her Sunday School class or the Sunshine friends around them, to aid in making up the amount. Sunshine sewing circles might see clothing that boys and girls between four and twelve can wear; and mothers give their children's outgrown garments. I enclose a contribution of $3 for one week's outing, and urge that others send sunshine for Children Home to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, N. Y."

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

A REMINISCENCE

WHEN I first heard Doctor Talmage preach, he was a young man, tall and straight as a pine tree, and his voice, resonant and clear, had more music than when, in later years, it had been taxed by the frequent addressing of many thousands in the open air. I recall his ending a vivid description of heaven, as his poetic fancy painted it, with "arborescent and oresent forever." Now, he has gone to dwell where Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood Stand dressed in living green.

aid a friend, when she heard the tidings of his death, "I have been thinking all the morning of the shout of welcome that greeted Dr. Talmage when he stepped on the shining shore. Such multitudes he has led to Christ: there will be a mighty throng to wish him joy over there!" Some years ago, Dr. Talmage was to preach one summer Sabbath at Bay View, Mich., and stopping at the same inn with him at Petoskey were several friends, of whom I was one. We all started together for the scene of the conference, but on the way there was an accident, and we had to walk a little distance to the campground. Reaching a closed gate, we waited for some one to unbar it, and passed through with a word of thanks. After a few steps Dr. Talmage turned, and, taking the gate-opener by the hand, said, "My friend, may the doors of heaven one day swing as widely open for you, as this gate you have just opened for me."

No one who ever heard the great chorus of voices in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, singing, "Hold the Fort," or "Saved by grace," or "Jesus, I my cross have taken," or "Lead, kindly light," will ever forget the thrill and the marvel of that breaking wave of praise. With the splendid organ, played by a master-hand, and the mighty host of voices ending in majestic harmony, there came a realization of the oneness of earth and heaven. Such music fitly pared to join the gladness round the throne.

It is given to many men to be clear thinkers, accurate scholars, fine orators, and good pastors. Now and then, God touches some human lips with a coal from the divine altar, and to one elect among his fellows it is given to be superbly eloquent and magnificently dramatic. With Wesley and Whitefield and Spurgeon, with Luther and Beecher, T. DeWitt Talmage is numbered among the great and massive preachers of Christendom. It is easy enough and life enough for meaner men and cowardly tongues to belittle now that he is gone, the most brotherly and the most mildlike as well as one of the truest of men; but no criticism can undo the fact that his name was a household word on both sides of the sea. In lonely mountain farms, in mining camps, on shipboard, in foreign lands, men and women read Talmage's sermons, and they carried everywhere the straight, simple, good news of Him who came to save.

We wish our friend might have stayed longer here. But he had done a vast deal of work, and it was well one, and now as he has gone, we sing, knowing how sweet is his repose after labor, "Good-bye, Mr. Standish. God be with you till we meet again."

Two Animal Stories

Here are two animal stories well worth repeating. No. 1 is clipped from the columns of the Portland Oregonian. No. 2, from the Daily Tribune, of Newcastle, Australia.

Two Faithful Shepherd Dogs

A. M. Holter, of Helena, Mont., who is largely interested in the cattle and sheep industry in that State, says that last October a cold spell killed several sheepherders in the Great Falls district, one of whom was taking care of Mr. Holter's flocks. At that time two feet of snow covered the range in places, and the thermometer indicated forty degrees below zero. The herder was frozen to death on the prairies while caring for the sheep, and it was three days before his fate was known to his employers. Two shepherd dogs were with him when he died, and one of these stayed with his body while the other attended to the sheep, just as though the herder had been with him. The dog drove them out on the range in the morning and back again at night, guarding them from wolves and preventing them from straying off. Neither dog had anything to eat during the three days' vigil, so far as could be ascertained; but the twenty-five hundred sheep thrived as well, apparently, as though directed by human agency.

Horse Saves Two Drowning Girls

Agnes and Pauline Bain, of Tipton Ind., aged 14 and 11 years, respectively, attempted to ford Cicero Creek on horseback, last even-

STEPPING STONES

Don't be afraid, little brother,
Sister is close at your side;
And the stones are right near to each other,
Though the brook is so deep and so wide.

ing. The horse's feet became entangled and he threw the girls into the stream. Pauline had sunk twice when her sister caught her by the hair and the horse swam to them.

The elder sister caught the beast by the tail with one hand, and, holding Pauline with the other, they reached the shore safely. The horse started home on a gallop and neighed as if in great trouble, which attracted the attention of its owner on its arrival. The animal immediately whirled around and went in the direction of the little girls with great rapidity, with the parents in pursuit, and they were met making their way homeward bound. The horse ran up to them, rubbed his head on the little one's shoulders and nickered as if he was very glad they were alive. Only a short time ago Mr. Bain offered the animal to a dealer for $100, but the sale was not consummated. Since the heroic deed of the animal in saving his daughters' lives he refuses any price, and avers that at the death of the animal a monument will mark his grave.

Dogs and horses are too often treated with very little respect. These faithful friends deserve good treatment, all the more that they cannot remonstrate in our tongue against the opposite.

Every-day Etiquette—VIII.

The Part of Common Sense

I DO not wish to impose my views on any one, and as several readers have written dissenting from my opinion about chaperonage, and some think my notions of table manners over fastidious, I wish to say to all critics, "Consult your common sense." You are not bound to accept the dictum of anybody, but if you please, you may consider me as a simple reporter of the modes that are current in the most refined society. One mother writes in this approving style from an Indiana town:

A number of mothers in this vicinity think you have stated the case exactly right. But we are in the minority here.

Some mothers of sons and daughters, in many respects excellent persons, and well informed, permit their young daughters, sixteen, to take "solitary, unchaperoned rides," at night, a distance of five or six miles, to parties or entertainments, with boys but little older than themselves. While all about us are wrecked lives, "birds with a broken pinion," it makes trouble for us who do not consider it wise. One mother thinks a girl should be thrown on her own responsibility in this matter, lest she may appear green. An overripe reputation is far more to be deplored in a young girl, to my way of thinking.

There are very few conventional rules governing conduct that are not based upon prudence, discretion, convenience, and good sense. Take, for example, the laws that control conversation; that the elder have precedence over the younger, that people do not rudely contradict, nor yet boorishly interrupt one another, and that violent and vehement catch-words, such as "Mercy! Gracious! Good lands!" are in shocking taste. These commend themselves to our instinct of propriety at once.

TO-DAY

OUR yesterday hath veiled her face,
And gone as far away
As sands that swept the pyramids
In Egypt's ancient day.
No man shall look on yesterday,
Or tryst with her again,
Forever gone her toils, her prayers,
Her conflicts and her pain.
To-morrow is not ours to hold,
May never come to bless
Or blight our lives with weal or ill,
With gladness or distress.
No man shall clasp To-morrow's hand,
Nor catch her on the way;
For when we reach To-morrow's land
She'll be, by then, To-day.

You ask me for the golden time,
I bid you seize the hour,
And fill it full of earnest work
While yet you have the power.
To-day the golden time for joy
Beneath the household eaves,
To-day the royal time for work,
For bringing in the sheaves.
To-day, the golden time for peace,
For righting ancient wrongs,
For sending from the grateful heart
The melody of songs,
To-day the time to consecrate
Your life to God above,
To-day the time to banish hate
Or vanquish it by love.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

AUNT PRUDENCE'S EASY CHAIR

—VIOLA. Tan or gray gloves are the most desirable.
—HATTIE. Your friend cannot give you first place after her engagement.
—LAURA. If you cannot control yourself you cannot control your pupils.
—BELLE. A lady signs her Christian name in full in her letters, and puts Mrs. or Miss in brackets.
—JEANNETTE. You cannot accept gifts of jewelry or of dress from any man except a near relative.
—EMILY LUCY. The minister's sermons will do you more good if you will pray for the right spirit in which to hear.
—G. T. Flowers serve every purpose from congratulation to condolence. It is always safe to send them to a friend.
—MOTHER. Announcements of a babe's birth may be made by sending to friends a tiny card with baby's name, tied to the mother's card, or the child's name may be written in the lower right-hand corner of the mother's card.

Mellin's Food

Have you ever tried it? If not, you can get a free sample by writing a postal to the

MELLIN'S FOOD COMPANY,
BOSTON, MASS.

Can You Knit or Crochet?

$1,000.00 in Prizes is offered by the well-known and responsible firm of CALHOUN, ROBBINS & CO. (established over 50 years), for the best specimens of knitting or crocheting done with their

"LION BRAND YARNS"

The following prizes will be awarded by a Committee of Experts, selected by editors of "Delineator," "Harper's Bazar" and "McCall's Magazine."

| | | | |
|------------|----------|-------------|---------|
| One Prize, | $200.00 | Two Prizes, | $50.00 |
| " " | 150.00 | Four " | 25.00 |
| " " | 100.00 | Five " | 15.00 |
| " " | 75.00 | Ten " | 10.00 |
| | | Twenty " | 5.00 |

All articles returned to owner or purchased at price set. Send postal-card request for FULL PARTICULARS OF CONTEST. You risk nothing and may get a large award.

MARK POSTAL "CONTEST," DEPARTMENT 13
CALHOUN, ROBBINS & CO.,
408 & 410 Broadway, New York

FROM FACTORY $21.50

Buys this Beautiful Drop Head Machine

Golden oak finish, full sized, high arm, ball bearing, none better made.

Sold on Approval
If not satisfactory return at our expense.
Write for samples of the work done with attachments.

Send for Catalogue No. B-705.

THE HOMER YOUNG COMPANY, Ltd., Toledo, O.

These Arnold Goods

Simply postal and the answer a beautiful catalogue telling you of the finest knit underwear in the world for woman, child or babe and the reasons why our knit fabrics are ideal for underwear.

NOVELTY KNITTING CO.,

328 BROADWAY, ALBANY, N. Y.
Full line of goods carried at Baby Bazar (Fannie M. Young) 62 West Twenty-second Street, New York.

We Carpet Your Floor for $3

To introduce our new, serviceable and beautiful

BRUSSELETTE ART RUGS

Attractive and artistic patterns, woven on both sides and in all colors and sizes. Easily kept clean and warranted to outwear higher priced carpets. Sent prepaid to any point east of the Rocky Mountains. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Illustrated catalogue showing rugs in actual colors sent free.

Sanitary Mfg. Company 54 Bourse Building Philadelphia, Pa.

Chap. XXV. Continued

FOOLISH and ignorant as Hilda Wilde was, as has been freely conceded, her folly was so sweetly veiled, her ignorance so cunningly hid beneath a dazzling play of dimples and sparkling eyes, that a wiser man than Immanuel Rossi might have been excused for mistaking both for the loveliest childlike innocence. And what is more fascinating than the attitude of such a child at the feet of wisdom, especially when wisdom is incarnate in a young man in his twenties, and the child is just emerging from her teens. Immanuel Rossi presently found himself very delightfully occupied with the task of imparting a love of classic literature to a mind thirsting for information. The books on the dusty shelves of the little unpainted house found their leaves twirled rapidly over by the daintiest of fingers; while the brightest of eyes skimmed light as swallows over pages wrought out in painful solitude by the mighty minds of the ages.

"But I understand it all so much better when you read it to me," cooed artful Hilda.

And so it came about that the two might often be found ensconced in some shady nook, young Rossi reading aloud from the pages of his favorite books. Just how much of the wit and wisdom of the sages found its way into the pretty drooped head of the listener it is hard to say. During these hours she certainly had time and opportunity to study the reader, and in the pursuit of this branch of knowledge she showed surprising aptitude.

"Your uncle was a very wise man, wasn't he?" she asked one day. (Hilda always avoided abbreviations when she talked with persons whom she wished to impress with her elegance and culture. She had noted and admired this peculiarity in certain distinguished heroines who invariably married the hero in a blaze of glory.)

"Yes; he was—a very wise man," replied Immanuel, sighing. "I hardly know how to live without him. He was all the father I ever knew."

Hilda knew something of the strange story of Immanuel's childhood, but although she was intensely curious on the subject, she never quite dared question the young man concerning it. This feeling of awe and hesitancy which invariably crept over her in his presence, she found fascinating to a surprising degree. She stared at his dark face now with wide eyes, her rosy mouth half open as though a question had halted in mid-air.

Immanuel glanced up, and caught this puzzled, questioning expression on the girlish face. "You are wondering at me," he said, with a short laugh. "You wonder why I stay here and waste my time."

Miss Hilda was not of the opinion that time spent in her company was wasted, and she managed to convey her idea in no uncertain terms, yet with a degree of childlike naivete which brought a smile to the grave face at her side. "I was not wondering why you were here," she added, "why should you not be here? But I should like to know—" She stopped short and gazed shyly at him from under her long lashes. "Of course it does not matter to me," she concluded, with a bright blush.

She looked pure and sweet as a young angel in her pale rose-colored gown, over which the shifting leaf-shadows wrought graceful patterns; her round arms and shoulders gleamed white through the diaphanous folds. Immanuel's brown eyes dwelt thoughtfully upon the warm loveliness of the downcast face.

"I wish I could believe that my life was of any interest to you," he said in a low voice. Then he sprang to his feet with a little exclamation of dismay. Silas Scott's shrewd face, puckered into a thousand troubled lines, was at that moment protruded from a near-by window.

"You'd kinder fergot 'bout that 'are fodder, hadn't ye, 'Manuel?" drawled the old man. "I'd clean fergot it myself, havin' dropped off into a leetle nap in my cheer. I'll be out to th' barn in less 'an no time, if you're ready to 'tend to it."

Half an hour later, Mr. Scott turned up a bushel measure on the barn floor and seated himself upon it with an air of leisurely determination. "I'd like to hev a word or two with ye, 'Manuel, afore we go on with the chores," he remarked, fixing his small twinkling eyes upon the young man with some sternness.

"D' ye remember what I tol' ye 'bout my gran 'darter when we fust struck up a bargain betwixt us?" he asked, after a pregnant pause. "I see 'at you'd either fergot it, or set it to one side, an' thinks 's I'll go to headquarters an' fin' out."

"I love your grand-daughter, and I intend to marry her if she will have me," said Immanuel briefly, and without pre-facing stammer or blush. This determination had sprung up and reached full maturity within the last half hour; but he did not question it. He turned his glowing face full upon his inquisitor. "I intend to marry her," he repeated.

"Hold on, young man!" ejaculated Mr. Scott, reaching out for an oat straw, which he proceeded to masticate with deliberate relish. "Ye don't want to take the bit in yer teeth an' go ahead too fast. That's the way men as well as hosses come to grief. S'pose she'll hev ye, what then?"

"I shall take care of her."

"You will, will ye? An' how'll ye go at it? You've got a purty poor farm an' a house that's fair to middlin'; but ye ain't no notion of farmin'. I don't advise ye to perceed, young feller. I know Hildy; she ain't good fer shucks when it comes to work. These 'ere rose-blows 'at my wife sets so much store by is good 'nough to put in a chiny vase; but come winter they don't stan' by ye like a per-tater. Hildy's somethin' like one of them pink blows; she ain't fer you."

Immanuel hesitated. "I have some means beside the farm," he said at last. "But—"

"I guess you ain't no millionaire, my young friend," drawled the old man ironically. "You wouldn't be earnin' your keep on Si Scott's farm if you was."

"That's not the question, sir," said Immanuel, stung to sudden wrath. "The question is whether or no I can take care of a wife; and it occurs to me that you are not the proper person with whom to settle the matter." He turned on his heel and left the barn.

Mr. Scott stared after him, shaking his head dubiously. "That young feller ain't cut out fer a farmer," he said ruefully; "he's too durned hasty. Now I was 'lottin' to let him down easy at the last, an' tell him 'at mebbe I could help him out with some stock. But I'm durned if I don't tell mother to send Hildy hum to her pa; I da'n't take no respons'bility in the matter."

Immanuel had gone straight in search of Hilda, his mind a ferment of hope and fear. "Hilda," he said abruptly, "will you walk with me as far as the hickories?"

The girl looked up. She was an arrant coward, and something in the young man's masterful air filled her with vague alarms. "You—you are angry with me?" she whispered.

"No—no, Hilda, I am not angry with you; come, I must talk with you."

That night before she slept, Miss Wilde indited a voluminous epistle to her dearest Amelia, in which she informed that young lady that she was too excited to go to bed. "Only think, Amelia, he has proposed! I was never so surprised in my life—yes, and frightened too. He was almost fierce about it: I can't think why. And what did I say? you ask."

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Feeding to Fit

is the problem with infants. The growing child has ever changing needs, but a perfect milk can never go amiss. Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is the acme of substitute feeding. Send for "Baby's Dairy." 71 Hudson St., N. Y.

Exceptional Values in Fine Waists, Skirts, Costumes, Capes

Jackets, Raglans, Petticoats, Etc.

Portrayed in our new Spring and Summer Fashion Catalogue, No. 79

Mailed free for the asking.

THIS HANDSOME GIBSON WAIST, $4.98

No. 4855 O. An extremely nobby Silk Waist, made in the new Gibson style of a fine quality Taffeta Silk in Black, Old Rose, Light Blue and White, is trimmed front and back with clusters of pin tucking and finished with numerous small, silk covered buttons. Sleeves and standing collar similarly trimmed, made over fitted lining. $4.98

Taffeta Silk $7.95

Drop Skirt, $7.95

4488 O. A ladies' very handsome Dress Skirt of finest black taffeta silk; deep graduated flounce of black lace netting; overlaid with two graduated accordion-plaited silk ruffles, which in turn are trimmed with rows of silk ribbon ruching; upper portion of skirt tucked as shown; drop skirt of black lusterine with accordion-plaited ruffle. $7.95

Samples Free

Agents Wanted

Write for Particulars.

EDWARD B. GROSSMAN
170-172 STATE ST. CHICAGO
THE GREAT MAIL ORDER CLOAK HOUSE

REVERSIBLE Linene Collars & Cuffs

MANY ADVANTAGES.

Perfect in fit, never ragged or uncomfortable. Very convenient, stylish, economical. Made of fine cloth and exactly resemble linen goods. Turn down collars are reversible and give double service.

NO LAUNDRY WORK

When soiled, discard. Ten collars or six pairs of cuffs, 25c. By mail, 30c. Set 6c. in stamps for sample collar or pair of cuff. Name size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. P, Boston

WOOLEN

FROM LOOM TO WEARER—EXPRESS PREPARED

If you have always bought cloth at a store, THE MILL, where it is made, and have a revelation. No middlemen—only our mill profit to pay.

We make cloth for all outer apparel purposes for men, women and children.

Write for free samples and booklet "Go Cloth"—stating what garment you wish to make.

PASSAIC WOOLEN COMPANY

Mills: 15 South St., Passaic, N. J.

CLOTHS

FOUND AT LAST!!

AGENTS WANTED

U. S. Pat. Apr. 26, '98 & Aug. 22, '99. Canadian Pat. Sept. 29, '99.

The Stephenson Shirt-Waist Holder and Skirt Supporter—always ready for use. Holds waist down, skirt up. Absorbs no sewing. Reduces waist line. Made of twine and iron. Will not rust or corrode. Avoid worthless imitations. Greatest Agent's article ever invented. Big profits; quick sale.

Sold only by Agents. Sent prepaid 25 cents each.

C. L. STEPHENSON & CO., 110 W. 42d St., N. Y.

Uncle Sam will help remove corns. 15 cents, by mail, and we send you a box of A-CORN SALVE. Use it. It should be used. If the corns don't appear, your money will be returned.

Giant Chemical Co., Philadelphi

CORNISH PIANO AND ORGAN MINIATURES

FREE

TO ALL READERS.

We will forward without cost to you anywhere, our new 1902 Souvenir Catalogue, with embossed and colored plates, illustrating all our styles of Pianos and Organs. It will prove to you that we really sell a better instrument for less money and on more liberal terms than any other reputable firm in the country, also.

FROM $155.00

how we send instruments on ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL. With the catalogue we will forward prepaid to any interested person a set of Piano and Organ Miniatures FREE absolutely correct in coloring, to aid them in making a selection best suited to the color scheme of their home. This unique advertising matter has been prepared by us at great cost and no intending purchaser can afford to be without it.

ALL FOR NOTHING. Write for it to-day and mention this paper. Full particulars of our Co-Partnership Plan are also sent, showing how you can get a PIANO OR ORGAN FREE No matter how much or how little you wish to pay for a musical instrument, we can please you and save you money. Write to-day.

CORNISH CO., Washington, New Jersey. Established 50 Years.

TO SAVE TIME IS TO LENGTHEN LIFE

STANDARD

REMINGTON TYPEWRITER

The REMINGTON Typewriter

is the universal saver.

It is a time saver, a labor saver, a trouble saver, an expense saver, and a business builder.

WYCKOFF, SEAMANS & BENEDICT
(Remington Typewriter Company)
327 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

You Can Play It Without Learning

ZOBO The Musical Wonder

Made of solid brass. Delivered free.

ENTERTAINS EVERYBODY EVERYWHERE

at Church, Sunday School or Home Societies. Free illustrated Catalogue sent on application.

ZOBO Manufacturing Co., 242 W 14 St., Dept 19, New York

430,000

Church Hymns and Gospel Songs,"

have been sold.

The leading Hymn book for Prayer Meetings, Young People's Societies, Sunday Evening Services, Sabbath Schools, etc. Contains 367 choice standard hymns, 1st sacred Songs, favorite Gospel Hymns.

Only bound, $25 per 100. Sample, post paid, 20 cts.

HE BIGLOW & MAIN CO., New York and Chicago.

Publishers of the Moody and Simkey "Gospel Hymns."

THE NEEDLE'S EYE

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 404

Really, my dear girl, I don't believe I said very much. I didn't say that I would marry him. In fact, now that I think about it, he did not ask me in so many words, but of course he meant that. He wanted to know if I could love him—if I would love him. He didn't seem to care about anything else. I really believe I do; he is so fascinating. I told him I did, any way, and he was perfectly satisfied. Oh, Amelia, only think what Jack Snyder would say if he knew; wouldn't he be crazy?"

At breakfast time the next morning, there was ominous silence. Mrs. Scott's shrewd eyes dwelt anxiously on the girl, who dimpled and smiled and blushed with conscious triumph.

"I've had a letter from your pa, Hildy," observed the old lady, following her grandchild on to the porch at the conclusion of the meal.

"Have you?" said the girl indifferently. "He says he thinks it's 'bout time fer you to be comin' home. He's lonesome, your pa is."

Hilda shrugged her shoulders. "He was anxious enough to have me go away," she said coldly. Melia Hurd says he's been calling on her stepmother lately. Wouldn't it be a joke for Melia and I to have the same stepmother?"

"I hate to have you go," faltered Mrs. Scott. "We shall miss you terrible, dear; we always do."

"I don't want to go."

"But if your pa wants, you should, Hildy."

"I don't care what he wants. It's too hot to go home now. Why, he said I might stay till fall."

"There ain't no use in mincin' matters that a-way, mother," observed Mr. Scott, advancing with an air of weighty authority. "Hildy, I ain't pleased to hev you in 'Manuel's company so stiddy. 'Manuel's a real nice young man, but I don't think you're cut out fer a farmer's wife, an' that's the long an' the short of it."

The girl turned her face away; her mouth was set in obstinate lines.

"Hes he said anythin' to ye, girl?" demanded Mr. Scott.

Hilda jerked her elbows petulantly. "I sh'd think it was my affair any way," she whimpered. "If I want to marry him I shall, so there!"

"Well, you'll go hum to yer pa, an' let him say what you'll do," grumbled her grandfather, "though I mistrust mebbe we're lockin' the barn door after the calf's stolen."

To Hilda's surprise and discomfiture Immanuel was found to agree entirely with the views of Mr. Scott. "It will be far better for you to go home at once," he said decidedly. "I ought not to have spoken till I had seen your father. But I could not wait any longer to find out whether you loved me, Hilda—my little Hilda!" The last words were uttered with an ardor that caused the girl to look up with the loveliest blush and smile.

"But you want me to go home," she said, plaintively. "I don't want to go home."

"It is only for a little while," said Immanuel, taking one of the plump, white hands in his. "I shall ask your father to give you to me very soon." After a pause he asked with an anxious tremor in his voice: "Will you be satisfied to live in the little house, dear? Do you think—could you be happy there with me?"

Hilda looked at him meditatively from under her curling lashes. "I shall have ruffled muslin curtains at the windows," she said positively. "Oh, yes—it will be quite pretty!" She drew a deep breath. "If it could only be painted on the outside, and I am sure it would be nicer with a carpet on the sitting-room floor—don't you think so, Immanuel?" She pronounced his name for the first time with the sweetest maidenly hesitation.

"It shall be just as you like it, dearest," cried Immanuel. "The little house shall be painted, papered, refurnished." He stopped short; the girl was gazing at him with wide, serious eyes.

"But that would cost a great deal of money, and you—you are quite——" She hesitated, the rose brightening in her soft cheeks.

"But you love me, Hilda—dearest Hilda, even if I am quite—quite poor!" murmured Immanuel; there was deep exultation in his voice; his eyes, as they rested on the girl, were filled with tears. "I shall never forget, dear, that you were ready to be happy with me in a poor little house, on a lonely country road. I have not deserved such happiness!"

Hilda moved her shoulders ever so little. "But can you really have the house fixed, as you said?" she asked, in a bright, hard voice. "It would certainly be pleasanter."

Immanuel was too deep in his dream of joy to notice either the shrug or the tone. "I have money enough to give you a comfortable home, dear Hilda," he said gently. "Then I shall work—yes, I shall work hard—for you."

Hilda was regarding him intently; she was filled with curiosity, and longed to ask a hundred questions, but that strange hesitancy stilled her tongue. She wondered, at herself a little because of it, "I don't see why I shouldn't know all about him now," she said to herself. If she had been told at that moment that she would never in the slightest degree understand the soul that gazed at her so yearningly from out her lover's brown eyes, she would have resented the idea as absurd. She was listening to him as he explained his plans of seeing her father; her attitude, as she sat with drooping lids and sweetly pensive air of compliance betraying nothing of the thoughts within. A single word in a carelessly dropped phrase caught her wandering attention. "The city," she echoed, her blue eyes lighting up with surprise, "Did you say you were going to the city; oh, I wish I could go!" "Yes, I must go for a little while," said Immanuel frowning. "But it will not be for long; October, I hope, will see us at home." He uttered the last word with rapture.

TO BE CONTINUED

AN HONEST FRIEND. Cleared Away the Family Troubles.

There is not one thing on earth that could enter a family and do as much honest good and bring as much happiness as in certain cases where coffee drinking is left off and Postum Food Coffee used in its place.

A family in Iowa Park, Texas, furnishes a good illustration. The mother says, "I want to tell you what happened in our family when we left off coffee and took up Postum. About eight months ago we made the change. I had been, for quite a while, troubled with rheumatism in my right hip and shoulder, swimming of the head, and fluttering of the heart, so I thought I had heart trouble.

Sometimes in walking my head would swim so that I would be obliged to sit down. I had other disagreeable feelings I cannot describe but they will be readily understood by coffee drinkers if they will confess it.

My family were more or less ill and were all coffee drinkers. Well we gave up the coffee and started in on Postum Food Coffee; husband, myself and four children. Even the two year old baby (she had been puny since having the grip) had her coffee along with the rest of the family. When we made the change to Postum she began to fatten and now is perfectly healthy and fat as a pig.

My boys, ten and twelve years of age, are so stout and muscular that people remark about them and ask what makes them so. I do not have any more trouble with rheumatism or with my head, neither does my husband, who was troubled much in the same way. We are all in better health every way than we have been before in years and we are always glad of an opportunity to recommend Postum. I hope what I have said will lead others to make the change." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BOOK OF VACATION STORIES.

The Summer Book just issued by the Lackawanna Railroad contains a series of delightful vacation stories, entitled, "The Experiences of Pa." Everyone who is seeking a place in which to spend the summer months will be interested in these amusing sketches. The book is handsomely illustrated and describes some of the most attractive resorts of the East. It will tell you where to go, how to go, and the price of board. It is called "Mountain and Lake Resorts of the Lackawanna Railroad," and will be sent on request, accompanied by 5 cents in stamps to T. W. Lee, General Passenger Agent, New York City.

OLD HICKORY PORCH SET

Great Combination Offer

HERE is the greatest inducement we have ever offered you. A small sum will now make it possible for you to attractively furnish your room and lawn with the celebrated Old Hickory Furniture.

All our furniture made entirely of finest hickory, comfortable, durable, attractive and stylish. The entire set as illustrated—

Chair, Rocker and Settee, $7.75
Chair and Rocker, $3.50
Settee and Rocker, $6.25

Goods delivered free east of Mississippi River.

DESCRIPTION—Chair, Spindle Back; seat, 18 inches wide, 16 inches deep; height over all, 3 feet 4 inches. Rocker, same as chair. Settee, Spindle Back; seat, 36 inches long, 16 inches deep; height, over all, 36 inches.

If your dealer will not supply you, send direct to us. Don't miss this great offer. You are welcome to our 48-page catalogue, showing 125 patterns. Ask for it.

THE OLD HICKORY CHAIR CO.
461 Cherry Street, Martinsville, Ind.

THE EQUITABLE

"STRONGEST IN THE WORLD"

J. W. ALEXANDER PRESIDENT J. H. HYDE VICE PRESIDENT

"What lawsuits grow out of the graves of rich men every day; sowing perjury, hatred and lies among near kindred, when there should be nothing but love."

The Continuous Instalment Policy of the Equitable does away with any possibility of a lawsuit. It permits a man to practically probate his own will, and to protect any dependent as long as he, or she, lives. He even protects them against themselves, for the money paid under such a policy can neither be squandered nor wasted. It provides a fixed yearly income during the life of the beneficiary, and the Equitable, the strongest financial institution of its kind in the world, is the executor of the will.

For information fill up and mail the following coupon.

THE EQUITABLE SOCIETY,
Dept. No. 60 120 Broadway, New York.

I would like to receive information regarding a Continuous Instalment Policy, issued to a man aged.....years, for a beneficiary aged.....years.

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

CHECKER-BOARD PACKAGES

GET A WAGON FREE FOR YOUR CHILDREN

Ralston
PURINA CEREALS

Only One Wagon to a Family.

Send us $2.00 and your grocer's name and we will send you FREIGHT PAID, (everywhere east of the Rocky Mountains,) an elegant Wagon, strongly built, with iron axles, size 2 feet long by 14 inches wide, containing 5 pkgs. Ralston Breakfast Food, 1 pkg. Ralston Health Oats, 1 pkg. Ralston Barley Food, 1 pkg. Purina Panake Flour, 1 pkg. Ralston Hominy Grits and 2-12 lb. sacks of Purina Health Flour.

Two Dollars' Worth of Ralston-Purina Foods. The Wagon is Free.

PURINA MILLS,
"Where Purity is Paramount."
874 Gratiot Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Possibly you have learned how handy it is to have canned meats, vegetables and soups always in the house. Have you ever thought how handy it would be to always have fresh cream in the house? Not the sickening, sweet "Condensed Milk," but cream that snacks of the green pastures of our Highland farms, for is simply pure, full-cream cows' milk, sterilized, evaporated and canned, free from all cane sugar and foreign ingredients. You can't have good coffee unless you have good cream. Highland Evaporated Cream is always good, always pure, always of the same excellent cream goodness.

HIGHLAND EVAPORATED CREAM

MOST GROCERS SELL IT. If yours doesn't, we will send a can to try for 10c (stamps). It will please you. Send postal for booklets "Cooking With Milk Made Easy," "Highland Ice Cream," "Baby's Milk" and "Pure Milk for Land and Sea."

HELVETIA MILK CONDENSING CO.
DEPT. F, HIGHLAND, ILL.

How to Do Two-Thirds of Your Ironing in One-Tenth Time

Valuable booklet of interest to every home, sent FREE.

THE GEM IRONING MACHINE

Saves nine tenths time—costs only 1c per hour to heat by gas or gasoline. Practical, durable, reliable and economical. Write today for booklet. Don't forget.

DOMESTIC MANGLE CO.
Box C, Racine Junction, WISCONSIN.

$3.90 KITCHEN CABINET

Size 27 x 42, height, 30 inches. Made of select material, nicely finished, has two large movable bins, insect proof, each will hold 50 pounds of meal or flour. Has tight, roomy drawer and large kneading board. Send for large Catalog House Furniture No. 26, also Refrigerator Catalog—Factory Prices.

E. H. STAFFORD & BRO., Chicago, Ill.

The IDEAL Steam Cooker

Cooks a whole meal over one burner, on gasoline, oil, gas, or common cook stove. REDUCES FUEL BILLS ONE-HALF. Makes tough meats tender. Prevents steam and odors. Holds 12 one-quart jars in canning suits. Whistle blows when Cooker needs more water. Seamless copper bottom and sides. We also make square Cookers with doors. Send for illustrated catalogue.

We pay express. Agents wanted.

TOLEDO COOKER CO., Box 16, Toledo, O.

Money Easily Made

Selling our Transparent Handled Knives. Your own photo, name and address in handle. Hand forged, perfectly tempered blades. Warranty with each knife. We originated the

McKINLEY MEMORIAL KNIFE "Made in Canton."

Sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00

Agents Wanted in Every County.

No. 263, two-thirds size. Send to-day for terms.

The CANTON CUTLERY CO., 1405 E. Second St., Canton, O.

Six Months Among Brigands

MISS STONE'S OWN STORY, AS TOLD IN "McCLURE'S MAGAZINE"

NOW for the first time the story of Miss Ellen M. Stone's captivity is told by herself. She has given it to Mr. S. S. McClure, who publishes it in the May number of his magazine. By his courtesy we publish such facts as have not already been given to our readers. The details of her capture have already appeared in these columns. Her letter describing it, and reporting the conditions of her release was written under thrilling circumstances.

At the time the letter was written they were in a hut, the whereabouts of which is even now unknown to Miss Stone. They had reached it by long journeys over the mountains, always at night. They did not know where they were going. They lived and slept in the open air. One night, however, they were aroused earlier than usual. Miss Stone was alarmed. She writes:

After a time spent in silence and deep darkness the men came and commanded us each to put on one of their heavy goat-hair coats, the deep hoods of which they pulled over our heads, so that we could see only the ground immediately before us. Thus they led us to a doorway and through some dark outer space, into a small inner room with one small barred window.

A light was brought. After the brigands the room. As they seated themselves upon the ground they filled all the space outside of our corner. They were heavily armed. Cartridges were upon their breasts and in belts around their waists. Daggers and revolvers hung at their sides. They had left their rifles behind; but, as though their present armament was not sufficient to protect them against us, one soon went out and brought in the three guns, which he stacked in a corner.

They were at no pains to remove their faces from their heads. Ah! We were only poor captives!

With trembling hearts under an exterior which we prayed God to keep calm, we waited until they should tell us the purpose of their visit. Finally, one whom I took to be the voivoda (leader) spoke rapidly and roughly, telling us that they were highwaymen, that among them were many nationalities (my glance involuntarily wandered from his face to those of his companions; one, with dark shaggy hair and beard, I thought might be of Spanish extraction, while he of the thick, light-hued curls might be a Jew, and the voivoda himself a Macedonian Parnak). He told us that they had taken us for money, and should hold us until the ransom was forthcoming.

"If it is not paid," he said menacingly, "there will be a bullet for you and a bullet for her"—indicating Mrs. Tsilka. We named him in our hearts "The Bad Man," and so called him for many weeks; but not to the end.

Arduous and at times dangerous was the

MRS. TSILKA AND MISS STONE IN TRAVELING DRESS

Miss Stone Thanks the Readers of The Christian Herald

BOSTON, April 19, 1902.

MR. LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor of "The Christian Herald":

MY DEAR SIR:—Pardon me for my late acknowledgment of your message, which was handed to me just as the "Deutschland" was arriving in New York. I was then fully occupied, as you may imagine, meeting home friends, customs officers and reporters; hence, you may not deem it so very strange that I slipped the telegram into a mem. book, and have just come upon it.

My message is one of heartfelt sympathy with you and your readers in the death of your Editor-in-Chief, Dr. Talmage. Multitudes of your readers have found help from his sermons, for which they eagerly waited. I had not the pleasure of knowing him personally, but I well remember the loving devotion to him, as her pastor, of an aunt of mine, who lived near his Tabernacle in Brooklyn, and was one of the most consecrated members of his church.

To your readers I give my grateful thanks for every loving thought, prayer, and gift, on behalf of Mrs. Tsilka and myself, while we were in captivity to the brigands of Turkey. May God reward them a hundredfold!

Faithfully yours,

Ellen M. Stone

had spread down some cloaks for us we were left to ourselves. The horror of a great fear fell upon us. What could they not do to us in that dark, hidden spot? Why had they brought us thither? If we should be killed now no one in the wide world would know our fate. The darkness settled into our very souls. We lay down in our corner, which was far harder than the hillside had been the day before, but no sleep came to refresh us. After daylight we looked from the tiny barred window, but could see only trees on a grassy slope. Though we occasionally heard voices during the day besides those of the brigands, we could never see any one. We were cut off from all mankind save those who had so mercilessly captured us.

During the day three men came filing into journey that they had been forced to take. Once the descent was so precipitous that Mrs. Tsilka was thrown from her horse, and so severe was the shock that she lost consciousness. Eventually Miss Stone succeeded in bringing her back to life and the toilsome journey was again resumed.

Providentially, as it happened, the brigands had captured a Bible among their plunder, and this Miss Stone was allowed to have. It is a striking testimony to the value of the sacred Book, that even in circumstances so distressing and so perilous, it gave them courage and sustained their faith.

KNOX'S GELATINE

A Dessert and a Health-Food in One.

It makes a transparent and absolutely pure gelatine, that is odorless and granulated. It dissolves right off, and sets in half an hour. It yields almost twice the jelly of any other package of equal size. Knox's Gelatine promotes digestion.

You get FREE my Book

of seventy "Dainty Desserts for Dainty People" for your grocer's name. Or instead send a two-cent stamp. For 5c. in stamps, the book and full pint sample. For 15c. the book and full two-quart package (two for 25c.). Pink color for fancy desserts in every large package. A package of Knox's Gelatine makes two quarts—half gallon—of jelly.

Chas. B. Knox, 55 Knox Ave. Johnstown, N. Y.

Frozen Puddings are more delicious and ones, in hot weather. Use the freezer more, the stove less and be comfortable. In the

Peerless Iceland Freezer

Or the One Motion Freezer
Ice cream or ices are frozen in three minutes. Patented stationary dasher is responsible for it. Scrapers hug sides of can, do away with all motions except one. ICE CREAM SECRETS (free) gives many new recipes, all easy to make. Take one home and if not pleased, return it and dealer will refund money. If your dealer hasn't them, write us.

DANA & CO., Dept. A, Cincinnati, O.

On Jellies
preserves and pickles, spread a thin coating of

PURE REFINED PARAFFINE

Will keep them absolutely moisture and acid proof. Pure Refined Paraffine is also useful in a dozen other ways about the house. Full directions in each package. Sold everywhere.

STANDARD OIL CO.

HAIR DYEING COME

Latest sensation; produces any shade by simply combing, without staining the scalp; harmless, durable, and testable. Circular sent in plain sealed envelope. Dept. E. KARL GERSTNER, 33-4th Avenue, New York

Real Estate Wanted
and for sale. If you want to sell or buy (no matter where located) send description and cash price and (FREE) my successful plan. W. M. OSTRANDER, North American Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHRISTENDOM'S TRIBUTE TO TALMAGE

Continued from Page 399

Supreme in the Pulpit

Rev. Teunis S. Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, at Washington: I knew Dr. Talmage for many years. I knew him when he commenced his labors in Brooklyn, and I preached the dedicatory sermon of his last Tabernacle there. I remember very well what Mr. Moody said to me after the burning of this tabernacle. It was being discussed as to what ought to be done about rebuilding it. "I'll tell you what ought to be done," said the great evangelist. "The rich men of Brooklyn and New York ought to build another great Tabernacle, endow it, make it free, and then keep Dr. Talmage in it as long as he lives." It would undoubtedly have been a great success if this had been done. Dr. Talmage was a genius. His life-work must be estimated from the standpoint of a genius. He was not an ecclesiastic, not an organizer, not a pastor, but as a rhetorical, dramatic preacher he was supreme. He made an appeal to the public which, in my judgment, has never been paralleled in the history of preaching. He commanded the popular ear as no other man in the English speaking world has ever done. He drew the largest audiences of any pulpit orator, even surpassing Spurgeon. Here in Washington, since his retirement, whenever it has been announced that he would speak, hundreds, yes thousands, who came to hear him, have been turned away for want of room. His printed sermons have been more widely read than any other publications of the day. No novel with two or perhaps three exceptions, have reached the circulation which they have. Personally, Dr. Talmage was a most genial, approachable man. He was a warm-hearted friend whose friendship was of real worth. He had abundance of good spirits, an unflinching humor, and was always the life of a dinner table or a social circle.

PUZZLED.

Hard Work Sometimes to Raise Children.

Children's taste is oftentimes more accurate in selecting the right kind of food to fit the body than that of adults. Nature works more accurately through the children.

A Brooklyn lady says, "Our little boy has long been troubled with weak digestion. We could never persuade him to take more than the taste of any kind of cereal food. He was a weak little chap and we were puzzled to know what to feed him on. One lucky day we tried Grape-Nuts. Well you never saw a child eat with such a relish, and it did him good to see him. From that day on it seemed as though we could almost see him grow. He would eat Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper and I think he would have liked the food for dinner.

The difference in his appearance is something wonderful.

My husband has never been known to fancy cereal foods of any kind, but he became very fond of Grape-Nuts and has been much improved in health since using it.

A friend has two children who were formerly afflicted with the rickets. I was satisfied that the disease was caused by lack of proper nourishment. They showed it. So I urged her to use Grape-Nuts as an experiment and the result was almost magical. They continued the food and today both children are well and strong as any children in this City, and, of course, my friend is a firm believer in the right kind of food, for she has the evidence before her eyes every day.

When I have some task to perform about the house and don't feel very strong, a saucer of Grape Nuts and cream stimulates me and am able to do the task with ease.

We are now a healthy family and naturally believe in Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

GETTYSBURG AND WASHINGTON. Personally-Conducted Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The battlefield of Gettysburg, and the National Capital in all the glory of its Spring freshness, are attractions so alluring that few would feel like refusing to visit them. It is to place these two attractions within easy reach of every one that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces a tour over the interesting battlefield, through the picturesque valleys of Maryland, and an entertaining stay at Washington.

The tour will leave New York 8.00 A. M., and Philadelphia 12.20 P. M., Saturday, May 17, in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, and will cover a period of six days. An experienced paperon, whose special charge will be unescorted dies, will accompany the trip throughout. Round-trip tickets, covering transportation, carriage drives and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rate of $22 from New York, $21 from Trenton, $19 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

For itineraries and full information apply to ticket agents: Tourist Agent, 1109 Broadway, New York; 4 Court Street, Brooklyn; 780 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.; or address Geo. W. Boyd, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

CUSHION PNEUMATIC TIRES FOR BICYCLES

PUNCTURES DONE AWAY WITH

Sample Section Sent FREE IF YOU SEND US THE NAME OF YOUR DEALER

FULL SIZE SECTIONAL VIEW

GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER CO., E. STATION, AKRON, O.

HOTEL HENET

San Rafael, Sonoma Co., California. A modern hotel, elegant rooms, electric lights, outdoor swimming, climate unsurpassed, elevation 1,000 feet. Golf links, Croquet grounds and other amusements. Fine scenery and beautiful drives. Full particulars on application. Address:

HOTEL HENET, P. O. Box 55, Henet, Cal.

"A Preacher for the People"

Hon. Henry B. F. Macfarland, President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia:

Dr. Talmage leaves a vacancy of the first importance, which apparently cannot be filled by any one else. There are great men in the American pulpit, great orators, great scholars, but no one of them has the hold on the people of the country that Dr. Talmage had. That marvelous audience of millions who heard Dr. Talmage weekly through the public press, was greater than any other preacher ever had, and no other preacher can now take it over. And beyond the seas, east and west, as well as in Canada, wherever English-speaking people live, there is deep and wide regret because no more sermons can be preached by Dr. Talmage. Millions of people who never saw the preacher regarded him as a friend, because of the good they had received from his published weekly sermons, and will mourn his departure. He was emphatically a preacher—a preacher for the people, for the common people, rather than for the uncommon people of great intellectual development. The common people heard him gladly, as they have always heard almost all of the greatest preachers. He was an orator who spared no pains to develop his remarkable natural powers, and who held great audiences under his will. His large, strong body was the appropriate residence for his vigorous and versatile mind, and he had the voice, manner, and the action of the orator. But if he had confined himself to audiences that he could reach with his voice, he would not have done the good nor made the reputation which he leaves behind. It was when he began to speak through the press and multiplied his audiences by the thousand, that he gained his great, his unique influence, and his unexampled fame.

Poet as Well as Preacher

I had the good fortune to know Dr. Talmage somewhat intimately in his later years, and I regard it as among the highest privileges of my life. He was one of the most useful men of his time. His influence extended wherever the English language was spoken. He was helpful in all of the relations of life. At the time of his death, he was the greatest popular orator in the English-speaking pulpit. He was a poet as well as a preacher. The remarkable circulation of his printed sermons as well as the crowded churches whenever it was known that he was to preach, attest his strong hold on the public attention. He was sometimes criticised as a sensationalist, but genius is always sensational, and it must be said to Dr. Talmage's everlasting credit, that whatever arts he used to attract the crowds, he never failed to preach the faith once delivered to the saints. He suffered from the carping criticisms of smaller men, but after the whole record of his life is written, his name will appear among the great evangelists of the Christian religion.

JOHN P. DOLLIVER, U. S. Senate.

Christendom's Heavy Loss

Hon. Julius C. Burrows, senior Senator from Michigan, Dr. Talmage's neighbor, and one of the pall-bearers at his funeral:

A great light in the church has gone out, and a heavy shadow rests on all Christendom.

FAIRY SOAP

The Oval Cake

It's not so much what you pay as what you get for what you pay. Fairy Soap sells for 5¢. Each cake wrapped and packed in a separate carton. You can pay more for a toilet and bath soap, but you cannot get more.

Fairy Soap is pure, white, floating; never turns yellow.

FITS EVERY HAND

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY
Chicago · New York · Boston · Philadelphia · St. Louis

FIT FOR ANY HAND

FREE THIS DOILY

And Lesson by World-Renowned Art Embroiderer, PROFESSOR TAKAHASHI, to Any Lady Sending Her Name and Address.

Richardson New Design for 1902

No. 256, Richardson's New Strawberry Design, with French Bars.

DO NOT confound this Doily with the cheap so-called "linen" Doilies and Center-pieces that are being sent out which are nothing but a combination of cotton and other base fabrics. Richardson's Doilies are all made from the very best round thread Belgian Linen.

THIS DOILY of finest round thread Belgian linen, stamped with the most exquisite design ever shown in this country, ready to work, with full instructions and Course of Lessons by the world-renowned art embroiderer, Professor Tsuneo Takahashi and Madame Takahashi of Japan, also pattern in colors, showing the exact effect of every thread, so that the most unpractised can work it perfectly. Our system is a new one, and the only perfectly easy and simple plan yet devised. It makes it impossible for even a child to err in doing the work.

Some of these designs of ours on this linen are alone sold in stores for as high as $2.50 each. Catalogue of 34 New designs in Sofa Pillows, Doilies, Damask Scarfs, Hemstitched Drawn Work, Tray and Splasher, etc., sent free. Attached to above most unusual offer (all being free) we make but one fair condition, viz.:—that you promise to ask for and accept from your dealer only Richardson's Silks when you work out the designs, or if you are unable to find our silks, write us. Address, enclosing 10 cents to cover registration and postage. Order Design by number.

THE RICHARDSON SILK COMPANY, Dept. G, 220 and 224 Adams Street, CHICAGO.

NOTE.—The Richardson's Silks in competition with all the world were awarded the Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition, 1900, together with three Special Gold Medals for Embroidery and Sewing Silks and other items in this line. Therefore, it is not alone over other American silks that we claim superiority. Richardson's Silks have won the right to be recognized as better than any other silks in the world, and experts in silks recognize them as such.

32d Edition, postpaid for 10c. stamp
THE HUMAN HAIR,
Why it Falls Out, Turns Gray, and the Remedy.
By Prof. HARLEY PARKER, F. R. C. S.
C. HARLEY PARKER CO., Philadelphia, Pa.
"Everyone should read this little book."—Athenaeum

$75

Month and expenses: no experience needed; position permanent; self-seller. PEASE MFG. CO., Stat'n A, Cincinnati, O.

FREE TO AGENTS
Flat thin knife cuts loose a perfect cake. $2 Outfit free Exp. prepaid. Dept. F. HOUSEHOLD NOVELTY WORKS, Chicago, Ill., or Buffalo, N. Y.

Parker's Hair Balsam

Cleanses and beautifies the hair and promotes its growth. Best remedy for scalp diseases and hair falling. 50 cents and $1.00 at druggists.

In Cash and Diamond

Prizes for Record Bait-Casting

You can enter the great Shakespeare Bait-casting Tournament without expense, make all your trials at your own home and win some of the magnificent prizes offered each month this season for the longest bait-cast. Many beginners can equal professionals the first month and win prizes and break the world's records.

$100 in Prizes for Largest Fish

Write me to-day. The new Shakespeare Reel meets the wants of the critical fisherman whose purse is limited. It is the highest grade reel on the market and none sold at twice the price can touch it. Shakespeare Reels and Baits are sent free on trial, express charges prepaid, to any angler who sends name and address. The Shakespeare Revolution Bait makes the biggest black bass strike when no other bait—live minnows or frogs can tempt him. They catch big strings of fish for people who never caught fish before. In the water they struggle as if alive and attract game fish from many yards away. Write to-day and try them free of all expense to you.

WM. SHAKESPEARE, JR.,
111 Shakespeare Bldg., Kalamazoo, Mich.
My Reels and Baits are for sale by all first-class dealers.

SAFE IN THE OLD LIGHTHOUSE

The Bowery Mission Rescue Work
— How Homeless Men and Boys are Helped to Better Lives

THE renewed interest which our readers have manifested in the old Lighthouse has been a wonderful stimulus to the workers. Indeed, the awakening has been communicated to the great constituency outside, for never were the meetings more largely attended, the attention keener, nor the responses to the nightly appeals more genuinely earnest.

Encouraged by the letters of sympathy in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and by the welcome aid from all parts of the country, the Mission workers, under the call of the Superintendent, have reorganized the work, and it will now be much more effective than ever, in a spiritual sense. The workers and converts have been grouped into several committees.

1. The Reception Committee is found at the door of the Mission every evening, ready to welcome all who come in, and with a hearty handshake for every poor wanderer who crosses the threshold. A stranger is made specially welcome.

2. The After-Meeting Committee is composed of the oldest and most reliable workers, and is always ready at the close of the meeting to deal lovingly with the men or lads who have a desire to lead a good, God-respecting life.

3. The Lodging-House Committee have undertaken the important task of taking the Gospel to the thirty thousand men who are, night after night, to be found in the Bowery lodging houses. The vast majority of these men belong to the great "unchurched masses," but among them are splendid specimens of humanity—men who are not yet down in the gutter, and who are struggling to keep their feet. The Bowery Mission is their only available place of worship. Nightly visits are made by members of the Committee, and printed invitations are being sent to this great class. Already excellent results have been obtained.

4. The Young Men's Committee. Every Wednesday evening the meeting is specially arranged to interest young men and boys. The programme is musical, interspersed with spiritual testimonies, and concluding with a Gospel appeal from the Superintendent.

5. The Lookout Committee. Some one has called it the "Sheep-dog" Committee. Its special duty is to go after the fallen ones—the backsliders. Alas, that there is such a branch needed! But there is, and those who know of the pitfalls and snares and whirlpools and quicksands of the Bowery will not be surprised.

6. Relief Work: Some hundreds of New York ministers and laymen now carry in their vest pockets, or have conveniently laid on their office desks, Bowery Mission Relief tickets. When a homeless or destitute man or boy appeals for food or shelter, the reply is, "Go to the Bowery Mission." Here he is cordially received and kindly dealt with. Some of the best cases of conversion the Mission has ever witnessed have been of this class.

In these and many other ways the Lighthouse Fund now being raised by our readers and their friends is being blessed and used as the means of rescue and reformation for many a poor prodigal, who, sick of the husks of sin, has turned towards the Gospel Beacon in the Bowery.

The Portfolio an Art Treasure

S. D. Weeks, Oswego, N.Y., writes: "The twelve art pictures are all well worth mounting. My $2 investment has brought a rich return. May God's blessing continue to rest on THE CHRISTIAN HERALD."

A GRAND GOOD BARGAIN

37 SETS SLIGHTLY SHELFWORN of the New National Encyclopædia

DR. JOHN CLARKE RIDPATH, Editor

ONE of the very best quick-reference Cyclopedias published. Over 200,000 sets have been sold at $30.00 per set. We offer these slightly shelf-worn sets (as good as new) while they last at $9.50. 50 cents with order and $1.00 per month. Half Russia binding. No such offer has ever been made for so excellent a work, and we have only a few sets, so act quickly. Satisfaction guaranteed. No better work is published anywhere.

ONLY FIFTY CENTS REQUIRED

The associate editors are among the foremost writers and educators of the United States, and the work has attained a reputation and popularity not equalled by any similar work.

YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY

to secure a set. You will make no mistake in doing so.

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO., Publishers, 150 Fifth Ave., New York

Sign this application or write for further particulars.

HENRY G. ALLEN & CO., 150 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Gentlemen: I desire to take advantage of your special offer on the National Encyclopædia (shelf-worn) to readers of THE HERALD, and inclose 50 cents as initial payment. Send full particulars and if found satisfactory, I will order the set; otherwise the money to be returned to me.

$2 Fine Bath Cabinet $2

PLACED IN YOUR HOME ON PAYMENT OF

Write to-day for our special 10 day offer. Robinson Baths guaranteed to relieve Rheumatism, Latigrippe, Colds, Kidney Trouble, Catarrh, etc. Send for our new book, free. Purify your blood before hot weather.

30 STATE AGENTS WANTED

Position is worth $1,200 to $1,500 per year and expenses.

Write for full particulars.

Robinson Thermal Bath Co.
901-917
Jefferson St., Toledo, O.

ROBINSON CABINET

SEWS ANYTHING
from silk to coarsest fabrics. The celebrated BALL-BEARING ARLINGTON (equal of any $40 to $65 Machine.) Combines highest grade mechanical efficiency with beautiful appearance. Finest and most complete attachments. BALL-BEARING, hence easy running, noiseless. Guaranteed for 20 years. 250,000 sold. Testimonials from every State. Write for Free Catalog showing all styles and samples of work. Arlington guaranteed machines from $11.95 up. Our Automatic Cabinet at $12.75 is a wonder. CASH BY VERNER UNION, Dept. A-18, CHICAGO, ILL. REFERENCE: FIRST NATIONAL BANK, CHICAGO

Dr. Lyon's

PERFECT

Tooth Powder

Used by people of refinement for over a quarter of a century.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
NOTICE NAME THIS ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE
HARTSHORN

The Life of the Wheel
depends upon the make of the wheel.
ELECTRIC WHEELS
last almost forever. Fit any wagon, straight or staggered spokes. Write for the catalogue. We mail it free.
ELECTRIC WHEEL CO., Box 136, Quincy, Ill.

The Only Authorized LIFE OF TALMAGE

Edited by Dr. Talmage's Editorial Associates.
Introduction by his son
Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Only Authorized Life" other. Outfit free for 15 cents to cover postage. Order outfit to-day. Address,

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO.,
718 Arch St., Philadelphia, or 334 Dearborn St., Chicago

contains over 500 pages; magnificently illustrated; price, $2.00. Highest commission; freight paid; credit given. No capital required; experience unnecessary. Agents make $10 to $25 per day easily. BEWARE OF OTHER TALMAGE BOOKS, AS THEY ARE ALL UNRELIABLE. The people want "The" and will have no other.

WEDDING

LATEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE STYLES AND FORMS OF ENGRAVED INVITATIONS.

ANNOUNCEMENTS, CALLING CARDS, FINE STATIONERY. SEND FOR SAMPLES.

ESTABLISHED 1837. C. D. PEACOCK JEWELER SILVERSMITH.
Cor. State and Adams Street, Dept. L, CHICAGO.

LIFE OF Dr. TALMAGE

AGENTS having splendid success. Opportunity of a lifetime for money making. ONLY AUTHORIZED LIFE. Large book. Fully illustrated. Low prices. Best terms. Freight paid. Credit given. Complete outfit free. Don't fail to write to-day.

P. W. ZIEGLER & CO.,
215 Locust St., Phila., or 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE. Simplest and best. Outfit sent on trial. Address, THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE CO., BOX 333, LIMA, O.

Guaranteed to Depositors

ABSOLUTE SAFETY OF PRINCIPAL
AND FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST

Our depositors are professional men and others who usually carry moderate accounts in Savings Banks. Our real estate loans are so handled that we have funds for reinvestment monthly, and our profits are thereby augmented. In nine years we have loaned upon bond and mortgage $2,865,000, meanwhile accumulating surplus and undivided profits of $182,000, with assets of $1,550,000.

Deposits of $50 or more may be made for as long or short a time as desired, with 5 per cent. interest for full term.

Unquestionable evidence of perfect soundness and reliability will be supplied on request.

INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS & LOAN CO.
1131 Broadway, New York

LIFE of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage

Introduction by his son, Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage. Only authorized Life of Dr. Talmage. Public interest is intense. Beware of misleading advertisements. Don't waste time with "fake" books. Large volume, fine illustrated. Retail price $2.00. Special confidential rate to agents. May work full or part time. Agent's beautiful outfit Free for 15c. postage. Rare opportunity. A quickly. Address authorized publishers—

INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHING CO.,
Dept. B. 44 N. Fourth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Learn Book-keeping BY MAIL—AT YOUR OWN HOME

This is the chance of a lifetime for young men and women and you should not miss it. New method, as one can learn it within 6 to 8 weeks and places you position to earn good salary at once. Thorough practical and remarkably inexpensive; we find positions, too, free of charge. Write to-day for full particulars. Michigan Business Institute, 62 Indiana Building, Kalamazoo, Mich.

CHILDREN'S DAY

"Songs of Rejoicing" Word editions also.
"Rejoice Evermore" Samples of all three for 6 cents.
"Onward Go" Music dignified and bright—written by the best writers.
Samples of all three for 6 cents.
MacCALLA & CO. (Inc.), 255 Dock St., Philadelphia.

LEARN PROOFREADING

If you possess a fair education, why not utilize it at a good and uncrowded profession paying $15 to $35 weekly? Situations always obtainable. We are the original instructors by mail. HOME CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL, Philadelphia

MISSIONARY PIONEERS

The Two Men Chosen, Called, Ordained and Dismissed to their Duty in Heathen Lands

BY MRS. M. BAXTER

THE first chosen missionaries are a sample of what kind of missionaries are best adapted for the heathen. To reach those who are farthest from God, he uses the instruments who are the nearest to him. In order to come down to the most ignorant, he uses those who have the deepest knowledge of himself and his Word. In order that they may learn Christ and Christlikeness he sends them a man who exemplified in his life all he teaches. Such are the missionaries who are needed in the present day in every mission-field.

Paul and Barnabas were two out of five prophets and teachers, who had been ministering to the church, which was at Antioch; and these two were just returned from their mission of taking alms to the saints at Jerusalem to help them through a time of famine. Prophets and teachers! A prophet in the early church seems to have been one that "speaketh unto men to edification and exhortation and comfort" (I. Cor. 14: 3); a teacher, one who could instruct the disciples from the Word of God. The office of prophet and evangelist seems to have been almost the same: a preacher, and one who dealt largely with unsaved souls; while that of teacher was more especially in the confirming of the believers in their faith.

These five leaders of the Church "ministered to the Lord, and fasted." How much more time and strength the prophets in the Old Testament, and the apostles in the New, devoted to waiting upon God than is usually the case with the spiritual leaders of congregations, or even foreign missionaries, in our own day! It is possible that a consciousness had come over these men of God that he had something to say to them, and thus, putting everything aside, they gave themselves to "ministering to the Lord." This is quite another thing than an ordinary prayer-meeting, where people meet together simply to ask for what they feel they need. To minister to anyone is to be at his disposal. To minister to the Lord is to place one's self at his disposal for what he wills. This was the spirit of this momentous time of prayer when these five servants of God met together. What a commentary upon the contempt with which some men look upon a small meeting, that God should have deemed this very small one worthy to be placed on record in the Bible! In this gathering nothing is recorded of what these men of God said to him. The point of the whole matter lay in what God had to say to them. "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said," speak for the first and only time in the first person, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them."

They had both been called already, Paul especially, and no doubt also Barnabas, although the circumstances of his call are not on record. It was about ten years after the conversion of Paul, perhaps twelve after that of Barnabas; but it was only now that they were found ripe, and that God's time had come for them to be appointed as foreign missionaries. They had both been in a training-school of reproach and persecution; the best possible preparation for a missionary, but one that is not man-made; and they had learned in this school, the faithfulness of God.

A missionary candidate who is not on fire with the love of souls has mistaken his or her vocation. Such as are really called of God are utterly and unreservedly at his disposal for whatsoever may befall them of privation, suffering, reproach; so that they may only have the joy of winning to their Lord those who have never yet heard the truth which alone can make them free. Their reward is the great privilege of the work itself; any other spirit than this is not the spirit which animated Christ when he came on earth to save us, and no other spirit can animate his members if they call to the Foreign Mission-field is of him. The call, the outfit, the consecration of these men was immediately of God.

HOW TO GET ALMOST

Anything You Want

WITHOUT SPENDING A PENNY

We Have Paid $170,000 to 55,000 Ladies

We have paid it in valuable premiums, and you can have one as well as they. These ladies simply wrote us a letter, and we sent each one, prepaid, a package of Hold Fast Skirt and Waist Supporters. Each sold as many as she chose to her friends and sent us the money; and we sent her, freight prepaid, her choice from our hundred premiums. We will do the same with you. The picture shows the Supporter. It is the only automatic supporter ever invented. No hooks needed; no buttons; no sewing of any kind. You ladies know what a convenience that means. There are one million and a half women wearing them now, and every woman who sees them wants one. There was never an easier article to sell, as the price is only 25 cents each. Simply show the Supporters to your friends and they will sell themselves. You will sell as many in each family as there are women and girls, and each one sold sells others. You can thus earn a premium that will last you a lifetime, in a few odd moments that would otherwise be wasted. Last year over one million of the Supporters were sold in this way. We have premiums for selling any quantity, from a half-dozen up to a gross. You can sell as few or as many as you choose, and get a premium accordingly. Try it and see how easy it is. See what a pleasant opportunity this is for spending your leisure profitably. Write today before someone else sells to your friends.

Send us no money

Simply write us and we will send the Supporters, charges paid. We trust you with them, so that you do not invest a penny. You have no risk whatever, for if you don't sell all of them you can send the balance back. When you have sold what you want to, send us the money you receive for them, and we will send you any premium to which you are entitled.

We pay all freight

We pay all transportation charges on the Supporters, and also on your premium. From beginning to the end you invest nothing whatever. Here is a chance to earn any of a hundred premiums, in a few odd moments, without any investment or risk. At the same time you are furnishing your friends with Supporters which each friend will thank you for showing her. Won't you write us today?

If you wish to see the Supporters before beginning to sell, send us 25 cts. in stamps and we will mail you one.

PRICE REDUCED TO 25c EACH

27-Piece Silver Set

This set, consisting of 6 knives, 6 forks, 6 table-spoons, 6 teaspoons, butter knife, sugar shell and pickle fork, is packed in a tasty velvet covered cabinet, satin lined, and makes a beautiful display in a china closet or sideboard. Our reputation for good premiums only is behind the quality of the plating. The design is the very latest copy of solid silver. This set will make a very nice present for your lady. FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

Oak Chair

This chair is of solid oak (not stained) with a highly polished antique finish, handsomely carved and turned, and an embossed leather (cobbler's) seat. It is large and very strong; will last a lifetime, and is well worth $5 of anybody's money. Order one quick and let us prove our statement. FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

LARGE CATALOGUE OF PREMIUMS MAILED WITH EVERY ORDER

32-Piece Tea Set

Consists of 6 plates, 6 cups, 6 saucers, teapot and lid, sugar and lid, 2 bread plates, 6 sauce dishes, cream pitcher, slop bowl; total 32 pieces. Handsomely decorated as shown above. The value of this offer is apparent to all well posted merchants and makes it unnecessary for us to say anything further, except that: FREE for selling two dozen Hold Fast Skirt Supporters.

WE OFFER 100 PREMIUMS LIKE THESE

Address The Colver Co. . . Dept. S, . . 811 Schiller Bldg . . CHICAGO

BEETHOVEN PIANOS and ORGANS

You can get any high-grade BEETHOVEN PIANO or ORGAN FREE of any charge set up in your own home, no matter where you live. Write us today for full particulars and we will surprise you with the bargains we have to offer you.

WE DON'T WANT ANY MONEY

in advance. Our new catalogue will show you how to get a high-grade Piano or Organ at the right price and on the right terms.

ONE YEAR'S FREE TRIAL TO ALL

We ask no advance payment and sell on terms to suit any purchaser. NO AGENTS. NO STORES. NO MIDDLEMEN. Only one way from our big factory right into your own home at lower than WHOLE-SALE PRICES. Send today for our new and magnificent up-to-date SPECIAL BARGAIN CATALOGUE just out, of Pianos and Organs (mention which) ABSOLUTELY FREE. Reference any bank.

BEETHOVEN PIANO AND ORGAN CO. BOX 741, WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

A Stride Toward American Sea Power

THE PLATE YARD

Showing the Crane, which has a span of 150 feet and travels up and down the yard, a distance of 800 feet. In this Plate Yard there is stored at all times from ten to fifteen thousand tons of steel.

If you would behold the American spirit in its purest, strongest and most buoyant phase—catch it on the wing, so to speak, learn the rate at which things under its inspiring influence can be made to happen, and see how truly robust and promising an infant is a shipbuilding plant, reared under its guidance, at the tender age of twenty-two months—go to Fore River.

At Fore River two things have been going on; the building of ships and the installing of a plant to build them. Logically the plant should come first, of course, but as a matter of fact the two enterprises have been carried on so side by side and intermingled that the ships, during the confusion, have managed somehow to come out ahead. This is most distinctly an American way of doing things—to start at nothing, keep moving at all hazards, and decide upon conveniences and methods afterwards.

No even-minded European could ever proceed in such a manner; yet the scheme is a good one, economical and not without foresight.

This distinctly American spur-of-the-moment way of getting a great plant together is one of the principal reasons for our being so many years ahead of the rest of the mechanical world.

The other reason is to be found more graphically demonstrated by going into the shops themselves. It is that extraordinary willingness on our part to install new methods. The shops at Fore River, therefore, are as different in appearance from those installed ten years ago as door-knobs are from gooseberries. The principal contrast lies in the fact that the machines instead of being driven all from the same shaft by whirling pulleys and slatting, screeching belts, are each provided with a separate electric motor. Each lathe, each punch—even the grindstones—are run in perfect independence of the rest of the shop. Electricity is such extremely clean, noiseless stuff that it is hard to imagine one is in a machine shop at all. But though the advantages of it, in matters of light, cleanliness and quiet, are immediately apparent to the senses, for an appreciation of the financial advantage we must get out our slates. It often occurs in a ship-building works that one machine, either to save time or in order not to interrupt the boring of a cylinder, for instance, which, once begun, cannot be stopped, must be kept running all night long while the rest of the shop is idle. Now, horse-powers cost at the very least two cents an hour; and the main shafts and idle belts and pulleys of a large shop, without accomplishing anything, require about a hundred and fifty horse-power to keep them going. This at the end of a ten-hour day means $30, and at the end of the year $9,000, gone to waste in simply making a noise. To be able to run one machine at a time and to generate just what power is needed for it is obviously then a great advantage.

There are other ideas just as new and well adapted for time-saving; the idea of making the ship crane run up and down the dock, for example, instead of having to move the ships about under it; and the scheme of an auxiliary floating machine shop to enable the workmen to have power-tools close at hand, no matter where the vessel is on which they are at work.

We should be proud of the Lawrence and her twin sister, Macdonough, for they were built, not from Government designs, but from improvements on them made at Fore River. Every last detail of them was contrived especially for them without regard for standards, with the result that they have themselves become standards for speed and lightness at Washington.

However, it was not for this that I got you down to Fore River in the first place, nor to see the beginning of the two largest, fastest, most powerful battleships in the navy, nor the only seven-masted schooner in the world, nor yet on account of the big hammer; nor because in no other shipyard is there room and facility to build an even half-dozen 700-foot steamers side by side and have cranes and machinery enough to keep them all going. It is something broader and more magnificent than that and won't go down in figures. The whole concern is so typical of the great movements on foot nowadays, so essentially twentieth century, so new; and I say, again, if you would see what we Americans, on the move, are really like, go to Fore River.

—BENJ. BROOKS, in Boston Transcript.

THE ISLE OF KENT.—This picture was taken in dry dock and shows how smashed up the bow of the ship really was. Fore River Ship and Engine Company repaired her in 21 days. Contract price $23,500.

Work in Progress in Fore River Yard, Ap. 1, 1902

BATTLESHIP.....NEW JERSEY.....15,000 tons
BATTLESHIP.....RHODE ISLAND.....15,000 tons
CRUISER.....DES MOINES.....To be launched May, 1902
TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER.....LAWRENCE
TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER.....MACDONOUGH
SEVEN MASTED STEEL SCHOONER (11,000 tons displacement). The largest sailing vessel in the world. To be launched May, 1902.
FORGINGS for steamships now being built in other yards.
STEEL BRIDGE, 800 feet long, over Weymouth Fore River.
SEVENTY-FIVE SETS FORGINGS for rapid-fire guns.
MISCELLANEOUS STRUCTURAL WORK.

The above, with other work in hand, will bring the total amount of contracts up to $8,907,000.

In addition to the above contracts in hand, the Company has tenders under consideration for additional work aggregating several million dollars.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Co. QUINCY, MASS.

who are carrying on this mammoth business, offer for public subscription 10,000 Shares of Preferred Stock on the following terms: Preferred stock at $100 per share, and of the 10,000 shares of common stock now in treasury one share will be given as a bonus with every two shares of preferred.

In case of subscription for one share only of preferred stock, at $100 per share, full paid and non-assessable, a share of common stock will be reserved for 90 days and issued as a bonus if a second share of preferred stock is subscribed for within that time.

The right is reserved to withdraw or reduce the bonus of common stock without notice.

Fore River Ship and Engine Co. is capitalized at $4,000,000.

Preferred Stock, 20,000 Shares Common Stock, 20,000 Shares

Of the above $4,000,000 total stock authorized, there is now in the treasury of the Company $1,000,000 preferred and $1,000,000 common. There is at present outstanding $1,000,000 of preferred stock and $1,000,000 of common stock issued against a plant which has cost $1,500,000.

There is no Bonded Indebtedness

It is therefore clear that the buyer of this preferred stock is not only investing his money at "bed rock," but even below it.

The provisions of the charter guarding the investor in this preferred stock are exceedingly strong, being drawn with great care by the highest legal talent. It has absolutely a first preference, not only on the earnings up to 7 per cent., but also upon the assets of the Company in case of distribution.

The earnings of the Company for five months to January 1, 1902, were $101,574.36 in accordance with the certificate of the Eastern Audit Co.

It should be remembered that these earnings were made without the advantage of having in the business the $1,000,000 which will result from the sale of the stock now offered.

The entire $2,000,000 preferred stock requires but $140,000 per annum for its 7 per cent. dividends. The Company earned at the rate of over $100,000 in excess of the amount required to pay the dividend on the entire $2,000,000 preferred stock, this while construction of the works was under way.

DIVIDENDS

By the terms of the Charter, semi-annual dividends on the preferred stock are payable on the second Mondays in January and July, out of the earnings of the Company.

In accordance with this provision, a dividend on the preferred stock of 3½ per cent. will be paid on July 14, 1902, out of accrued earnings.

Upon application to the Boston office of the Company, an illustrated description of the plant will be sent by mail, together with a complete financial prospectus and the certificate of the Eastern Audit Co.

Subscriptions and remittances may be made by check, registered letter or money order, payable either to Fore River Ship and Engine Co., 154 Federal Street, Boston, Mass., or to the Federal Trust Co., of Boston. Commercial agency and Bank references furnished on application.

CHRISTIAN HERALD

COPYRIGHT, 1902, BY LOUIS KLOPSCH

FIELD-MARSHAL COUNT DE ROCHAMBEAU

SEE PAGE 423

GENERAL WASHINGTON, THE FRIEND OF ROCHAMBEAU

Honor to a Hero—The Rochambeau Statue to be Unveiled in Washington, May 24

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

I. For answers to the questions which appear below, when accepted, we will allow compensation for the matter used at the rate of One Dollar a hundred words. Answers should so far as possible be limited to one hundred words.

II. Answers must be received at this office three weeks in advance of the date on which they are intended to appear.

III. The editor reserves the right to condense accepted answers when necessary, and compensation will be based on the matter as printed.

IV. Do not write inquiring if your material has been accepted. If it appears on this page, you will know that it has been accepted.

V. We cannot return any MSS. sent to the Editor of the MAIL-BAG—not even if stamps accompany them.

VI. Write only on one side of the sheet, and never send on the same sheet anything intended for any other department of the paper.

VII. Letters addressed to the MAIL-BAG must contain the names and addresses of the writers, not for publication, but in order that answers may be sent by mail when that mode is preferable.

VIII. Address all communications intended for this department, Editor The Mail-Bag, The Christian Herald, Bible House, New York.

Readers are invited to forward new questions suitable for discussion in this department.

SPECIAL NOTICE

In future, only one question will be submitted each week, in order that a larger space may be devoted to a full discussion of that question. We publish herewith a list of questions to be answered on the respective dates.

Answered in Issue of April 30

If, as science asserts, the act of dissolution is as painless as that of birth, the individual being unconscious alike of both, how can we account for the dread with which many Christians, as well as other people, regard it?

Answered in Present Issue

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 21

Is it right, under any circumstances, to pray for riches?

To be Answered in the Issue of May 28

Which is the purest, the most unselfish and the truest—the love of the sexes, the love between two friends, or the love that exists between parents and children, and which of the three is capable of the greatest sacrifice?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 11

Do the marriages of Americans with foreign aristocrats and nobility tend to weaken our republican institutions, or otherwise?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 18

Is a lawyer justified in doing his utmost to secure the acquittal of a client of whose guilt he is cognizant?

To be Answered in the Issue of June 25

Does a parent do wisely to shield a son or daughter jealously from the ordinary stress and struggle of life?

To be Answered in the Issue of July 9

In what sense may prayer be regarded as the most potent agent at the Christian's command? Illustrate by some incident within your own knowledge or experience.

Question of the Week

Do great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work? What are the chief objections to them, and what the principal advantages to be derived from them?

A Northfield Student's View

At such gatherings, the Spirit of God is unmistakably working. As to the effect on the individual man attending, it depends upon the man alone. It has been truly said that such conventions either make or unmake the man. Obedience to the new visions invariably means the advancement of one's spiritual life. It is just as true that a man is unmade by his refusing the new light offered him for personal life and duty. Between these there is no middle ground. The conventions named, where the personal life and one's life-work are strongly emphasized, undoubtedly tend to the advancement of spiritual life.

The objections are: 1. Reaction afterwards too often sets in. "After the convention, what then?" is a common question raised at the close of student gatherings. Reaction must be expected, and must be guarded against. 2. Again, the convention itself, not God, is frequently regarded as the source of the spiritual uplift. God is the true source, who, though the convention scatters, remains the same to-day, yesterday, and forever. 3. Again, the enthusiasm which is developed to a white heat, and for a few days is violently fed, must, to a greater or less degree, die out with the convention.

The advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. The presence together of many persons bent on a single purpose is an inspiration.

HERMAN G. CUTHBERT.

They Are Worth All They Cost

Yes. Objections are expense, time spent, religious excitement, nerve tension, neglect, perhaps, of regular work. Advantages are first to those attending the convention, who are morally bound to pass on to their constituents all the good possible. They receive a new impetus to work for humanity, new knowledge of methods, a broader view of life; their courage and hope are strengthened, their enthusiasm and zeal quickened, their faith increased. The inspiration received from singing even one grand hymn in a great audience filled with God's spirit, and the impulse given to mission work, are worth far more than the cost. MRS. L. C. RANDOLPH.

They Make a Deep Impression

Israel owed her greatness, and especially her religious pre-eminence, largely to her three great annual national religious conventions. To her neglect of them was due her fall, at least in part. The chief objections urged to national religious conventions are: 1. They are too large. No building can hold them. Few cities can entertain them. 2. They detract from the attendance upon and interest in local and State conventions. If the same effort and enthusiasm were distributed more would be reached and blessed at much less expense. 3. They cost immense sums of money, which might, with greater profit, be used for missionary or charitable purposes. The advantages far outweigh the objections. Among them are: 1. The enthusiasm engendered by large numbers. 2. The opportunity to hear and be inspired by the great leaders in the religious world. 3. The opportunities to choose the special lines whereupon one would hear and receive instruction. 4. The immense impression made upon the city where a great religious convention is held. 5. The awakening and deepening of such an interest in great religious enterprises as finds expression in deeper consecration to God of one's self and his possessions, as seen, e. g., at Christian Alliance conventions at Orchard Beach. 6. Nothing else gives to me so vivid a realization of the great truth that the Kingdom of God is surely coming as to see a multitude of Christians, gathered with one accord in one place, because they love one Master.

E. W. BUTLER.

They are a Spiritual Uplift

The meeting together of large numbers of Christian people for a noble object, cannot fail of good. The interchange of spiritual thought is an uplift, as well as a means of gaining knowledge. It tends to broaden the mind, and effaces narrowness and sectarianism. It is well for Christians far distant from each other, to meet and exchange friendly words of greeting, all having the same aim and the same goal in view—a slight foretaste of the joys of the hereafter—and will doubtless stimulate them to greater zeal in Christian work in the future. In union there is strength. I can see but very little objection, if any, to these meetings. There may be occasionally too much heated argument, not enough self-control, and it is well to consider that quiet meditation is conducive to spiritual growth.

SARAH A. FALL.

They Get Up Gospel Steam

Without doubt, great national religious conventions tend to the advancement of spiritual life and work. Some point out the waste of time and money as objections. The same may be argued against education. Few sane people now believe that time and money are wasted in securing an education. Education is beyond price, but enthusiasm is worth far more. Conventions educate. The facts of the reports are but the skeleton of the living truth felt in conventions. The highest education is from fellowship with the refined. In conventions for religious purposes, the choicest are brought together. Yet this education is not all. It is not the main value of conventions. Their unanswerable excuse is inspiration. Want of energetic life is the cause of the slow progress of religion. We have the mechanism and we have the water. What we want is fire. Under the blessing of God, conventions get up steam. New methods, conspicuous success, the magnetism of enthusiastic followers of Christ inspire one to deeds of spiritual valor.

A. W. LEWIS.

They Dissipate Too Much Strength

The increasing frequency and volume of such gatherings has not decreased the crying lack of spiritual life and activity. They dissipate too much strength, spiritual energy, enthusiasm, and money, that ought to go into the work itself. They create a taste for the spectacular and pretentious in religion, and thereby paralyze rather than increase strength for real and effective work in the actual field. The most needful, and, possibly, the most fruitful, lines of religious endeavor are made to seem insignificant. The humble service in which every one may be blessed at home without waiting for a great occasion, is minimized, and too often neglected. People often feel that the great convention has been an expenditure of time and money in God's service, when, in reality, it has only been, at best, a source of personal gain—sometimes only a diversion. They do, on the other hand, cultivate a uniformity of sentiment in the thing which furnished the chief object of the gathering, they diffuse intelligence in some degree, and may, possibly, serve many subsidiary ends of personal training and culture. Without them, it is sometimes difficult to spread and inculcate doctrines with which it is desired to reach the whole people.

C. P. ATKINSON.

A Mighty Source of Inspiration

Revelation, reason and results combine to declare that great gatherings of the people from all parts of the nation, for the consideration of matters pertaining to spiritual life and work, tend tremendously toward the furtherance of such work. The mosaic code compelled such convocations of the Israelites, as appears in Scripture. Common sense decrees that men are always strengthened in their purposes by conference concerning those purposes. Modern religious movements point with pride to their achievements in vindication of their conventions. The critics may urge against them the economical objection, that the money used in traveling and entertainment could be better spent; the ignorant objection, that the time is all consumed in useless talk; or the conservative objection, that in the good old days there were no such gatherings; but the conventions will still be held. They are a mighty means of stimulation, a strengthening source of inspiration, and offer a powerful possibility of co-operation—a trio of desirabilities without which spiritual life cannot be nurtured or spiritual work prosecuted in this present perverse and crooked generation.

H. W. SMITH.

Both Sides Considered

Such conventions do some good. Certain objections to them are: 1. The expense. The immense outlay of some of our national conventions for railroad fares, hotel expenses, rent for great halls, advertising and the like, has often aggregated hundreds of thousands of dollars. 2. Boastful display. The craving to exhibit great numbers of followers, talented and gifted speakers, large gifts and a wealthy backing, is all contrary to the spirit of the Master. 3. The danger of imitation. God is Sovereign, and he leads churches and individuals in his own matchless way. Because one church or society or denomination has been blessed in a certain way, by the use of certain methods, that is no sure indication that God will bless every other similar organization in the same way, by the use of the same methods.

The principal advantages derived from great religious conventions are: 1. Records of the work which God is doing. Finney says: "The way to have revivals is to tell about them in other places." 2. Experience of God's dealings with individuals. This is also scriptural and profitable. 3. Inspiration and enthusiasm from contact with other workers. There is undoubtedly great benefit to be derived along this line.

The pros and cons, as conventions are now managed, are about equal.

W. J. MOSIER.

Answers have also been received from: Elizabeth B. Nolen, Chas. F. Cooper, Rev. Joseph Hamilton, L. T. Rudisill, W. S. MacTavish, J. J. Monroe, A. G. Eagleson, Victoria Bradshaw, S. Foster Grady, Wm. B. Stewart, J. Flomerfelt, C. P. Lounsbury, J. C. Osborne, Mrs. A. B. Chambliss, J. B. McGregor, and others.

Miscellaneous Questions

Capt. C. H. Davis, Superintendent of the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C., to whom was referred a question received by the MAIL BAG, writes as follows:

Your letter to the Weather Bureau has been referred to this Observatory. Professor See, to whom it was referred, furnishes the following:

"The tides in no way regulate the rotation of the earth, or improve it as a timekeeper; on the contrary, they retard the rotation of our globe a little continually, so that in the course of ages, the length of the day has been considerably increased, from about three hours to twenty-four hours. When the earth was first formed, it rotated in about three hours, according to Prof. G. H. Darwin. The tides in the moon, due to the attraction of the earth, have gradually destroyed the moon's rotation, and it presents always the same face to the earth. Eventually the day will become of the same length as the year, on account of tides in the earth, due to the attraction of the sun."

Musical Inquirer. 1. Probably the greatest unison chorus was that employed in King Solomon's Temple. 2. About 750 B.C. choral song began to be cultivated in Greece; but there was no part singing, merely singing, or rather chanting, national and patriotic songs in unison, accompanied by the cythara. 3. The hymns of Rig Veda were collected about 1500 B.C. 4. The troubadours flourished 1087-1127 A.D. 5. The Minnesingers 1152-1190 A.D. 6. Luther's choral music 1530 A.D. 7. Palestrina (1550-1594) was the first great writer of sacred chorus in parts. 8. Italian opera instituted 1590 A.D. 9. Alexander Scarlatti (1680-1709), wrote 109 operas, besides cantatas.

F. B. Norwich, N. Y., and other correspondents. What is the teaching of the parable of the Unjust Steward (Luke 16: 1-14)? Why did our Lord commend conduct which appears dishonest?

It was not our Lord who commended the steward, but, as you will see by the Revised Version, the steward's lord, who admired his shrewdness and sagacity, though it was at his own expense. The Parable has always been regarded as a very difficult one. The most probable explanation is that Christ wished to inculcate the duty of kindness and helpfulness. He said, in effect, that if his people showed as much earnestness and sagacity as did the dishonest steward, they would relieve their needy brethren. He imposed an obligation on his Lord's debtors, so that when he was in need, they would feel bound to support him; the Christian, who relieves his brethren, would, when he came to die, receive a warm welcome to everlasting habitations. The parable is in line with the description of the judgment in Matt. 25: 34-40. Those on the right hand received a reward much larger than could have been expected. Dr. William Taylor, interpreting the parable, illustrates it by a man whose house had been broken into, saying that if honest mechanics were as ingenious and as enterprising as the thieves who had picked his locks, they would make fortunes.

M. T. T., Dayton, Washington. What is the prevailing, or established religion in France, Italy, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, Roumania and Servia.

In France, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Spain, Portugal and Belgium, the Roman Catholic is the prevailing religion. In Germany, Protestant churches, and chiefly the Lutheran, are in the ascendancy. In Holland, Low-Dutch Reformed. In Norway and Sweden, Lutheran. In Roumania and Servia, the Orthodox Greek Church prevails.

J. A. C., Kansas City, Mo. Are the commands and injunctions of the Old Testament obligatory on Christians?

Some of them are not. When the question was considered in the first apostolic council (Acts 15: 5-29) it was decided that Gentile converts were not to be bound by the Levitical law. Christ, also, in his sermon on the mount, said: "It hath been said by them of old time," and went on to say, "but I say unto you," etc., clearly regarding the law as it stood to be subject to his abrogation. It must not, however, be supposed that the Christian dispensation is less stringent. The man who obeys Christ is under obligations higher than those of the law. As an example, the law forbade murder and Christ forbade the anger that leads to murder. As love is higher than law, so Christ, by setting his people free of law and placing them under the obligation of love, inculcated a higher morality.

Mrs. Geo. S., Zion, Ill. It is cruelty, and al cruelty to man or beast is unchristian.

Mrs. H. McC., Fairfield, Wash. For ordinary business, no; where life is at stake or a deed of mercy to be done, yes.

Margaret C., Lynnville, Ill. A merciful man is merciful to his beast. Christ's tenderness extended even to the dumb creatures. No true follower of his can ever be cruel to animals.

E. M. R., Holyrood. Marriages between young people of different religious faiths are apt to turn out badly. A Protestant wife and a Catholic husband might, no doubt, love one another; but the probabilities are that not even love could bridge the chasm that divided the household in spiritual things. Should there be children, their religious training would be a constant source of disagreement and dissatisfaction.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD

AN ILLUSTRATED FAMILY MAGAZINE

A KIOWA BOY

APACHE CHILDREN NOT YET GATHERED INTO SCHOOLS

INDIANS AWAITING THE ISSUE OF RATIONS AT ANADARKO, O. T.

A WIT KIOWA MAID

HOW UNCLE SAM CARES FOR THE INDIANS

New York's Indian Warehouse = Distribution of Supplies at Agencies = Our Indian Girls and Boys

It is an important part in the wheel of the Government machinery, and represents a great business done yearly; yet how many of the people of New York City have ever so much as heard of the Indian Warehouse here? It occupies the ground floor of a spacious, old-fashioned mercantile building in Wooster street, and in a compartment on the left, as you enter, fenced off by a partition of wood and glass, the clerical work goes on. There are many large, nailed-up boxes in the rear, and on long tables are displayed some suits of ready-made clothing. "It is only samples that we receive here," says the guide. "Advertisements for contracts are made in March, and in May bids are opened. Government goods for Indians are furnished by contractors, who buy them where they please and ship them direct to designated receiving points in the West. It is always stipulated, however, that the manufactured goods shall be of American production. Samples are submitted with the bids, and the contractor must deliver half of the goods within sixty days and the remainder within ninety days, after the acceptance of his bid, and he is placed under heavy bonds to carry out his contract to the letter."

Upon the table lies two dark-blue suits of men's clothes, military in cut, with gilt eagle buttons; the cloth is cassimere and Oxford, and the suit of the more expensive material is trimmed with red braid. "These sets of garments are uniforms of the Indian Police—an officer's and a private's," says the guide. "On every important reservation a force of the most trustworthy Indians is invested with the duty of preserving order among their tribesmen. They perform their work faithfully, too. They are regularly enlisted men, and are proud of their uniforms." He smiles as he continues: "The uniforms, you would think, are quiet enough in color and trimmings, but some eastern humanitarian once took it into his head that the gleaming of the gilt buttons might tend to inspire the war spirit in the Indian breast. He succeeded in imposing his idea on the Indian Department, and the gilt buttons of the Indian Police were replaced by others made of dull metal. The effect of this change was, that the Indians ceased to take pride

The New York warehouse furnishes the entire quantity of clothing sent out to the agencies, and much tea, coffee and sugar passes through this channel. All these articles are of approved quality, and there is no shoddy in the woolen fabrics. Cassimeres, oxfords, satinets, duck and denims are materials of which the garments for men and boys are made, with cotton chevrot, hickory, gray flannel and oxford melton for shirts. For outer garments for women and girls are flannels, in blue, gray and red, and gingham, and woolen shawls in black, brown, high colors and tartan plaid. These and caps of cloth and fur for the Indian Police, military caps for cadets, and civilian hats and caps for men, boys and girls, are only the beginning of the long lists, the last one of which, under the heading "Notions," ends with "machine twist silk" and round rubber combs.

But it is through the Chicago warehouse that the greater part of all food supplies go to the Indians. Here contracts are made for beef, bacon, beans, salt, tea, coffee, sugar, etc. Boots and shoes, groceries, crockery, wooden ware, furniture, saddles, harness and leather, agricultural implements, wagons, hardware, medical and school supplies, make only a partial statement of headings under which are grouped long lists of specified articles that are contracted for here. There is a warehouse at San Francisco which provides for tribes along the Pacific coast, and a minor one is also found at Omaha.

All Government supplies for the Indians, except beef, after their delivery at the points designated in the contracts, are forwarded to the agencies, by railroad or wagon trains, under separate contracts. The contractors who supply the beef buy in their uniforms, became sulky and indifferent to duty, and relapsed so fast into the slovenliness of primitive savagery that the Government found it a necessary measure to restore the gilt eagle buttons to their uniforms."

CONTINUED ON
PAGE 433

GOVERNMENT BUILDING, ANADARKO, WHERE "GRASS MONEY" IS DISTRIBUTED

Supplies comprise blankets, woolen and knit goods, cotton goods, clothing, hats and caps and "notions."

INDIANS HAULING GOVERNMENT LUMBER FOR BUILDING

A TEEPEE FOR CHILDREN

BEEF ISSUE DAY AT ANADARKO

The American Pulpit

... A Sermon by ...

REV. FRANK DE WITT TALMAGE, D.D.

of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, Chicago

THE FAR COUNTRY

TEXT—Luke 15: 13: {“The younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country”}

THE old homestead is turned upside down. One of the two boys, the younger, is about to leave the parental roof. The eaglet is tired of being warmed by the protecting breasts of the old birds. With ruffled feathers he stands upon the edge of the eyrie ready to fly off. Sad is the disruption of a home. When the children say “Good-by,” the families talk and laugh and joke. But they are only laughing to sustain their courage. The wedding bells weep as well as sing. At the marriage, the guests may congratulate the parents of the bride upon having gained a son. But the daughter is never the same after the wedding. On that day, the bride goes forth to make her own home, build her own nest, rear her own young, and live her own life. Instead of belonging to the parent, she becomes another’s. Instead of the mother being first, now she is second.

Some years ago, I attended the wedding of a very dear friend. The slipper had been thrown. The rice tossed. The farewells shouted. I followed the old gray-haired father down to the garden gate. While we stood there, in the moonlight, he turned to me and said, “Frank, I know she has married a good man. I do hope she will be happy. But it is hard, awfully hard, to give her up. She was my baby girl. She is my youngest. It breaks the heart! It breaks the heart!” Children are born. They pass boyhood and girlhood days under the parental roof. They grow up into manhood and womanhood. They begin to scatter. Death knocks at the front door and summons some. Love hovers among the spring flowers and breathes through the orange blossoms and woe others. Business and professional duties beckon to others. At last the old nursery is vacant. Father and mother sit again alone at the dining-table as they once did when they themselves were bride and groom. The old homestead is deserted save by the old folks. The text is a tragedy.

Leaving Home

The mother did not sleep much last night. Though she tries to look cheerful her eyes are red from weeping. Every little while she disappears into the pantry or goes upstairs. She makes an excuse as though she was looking for something. We know she leaves the room for one purpose. She wants to have a good cry.

The father is giving his last instructions. He is handing the young traveler some letters of introduction to a prominent merchant with whom the son will lodge in the next town. A noise is at the gate. Servants are bringing out the horses and strapping the baggage upon the pack mules. They talk in subdued whispers. Even they feel sorry. The young “master” was a happy, jolly-go-lucky boy. He always had a kind word for the hostlers. The only happy creature this morning is the dog. He frisks and barks about, expecting to follow the sportsmen for a week’s hunt. His hilarity is stopped. Some one shies a stone at the brute, and shouts, “Go back to the barn.” Slowly the dog turns. His lowered head and tail are the canine signs of abject woe. He stops now and then, expecting to hear the familiar huntsman’s halloo. Perhaps he realizes for the first time he is taking a last look of farewell. I always did think that a bright dog was smarter than a stupid man.

The farewell words are now being said. The father gives his benediction. We must turn our heads away. The mother is having her last convulsive clasp. These are the snapping of the heart-strings. A mother rarely realizes that the baby she once rocked in a cradle can grow into a man. He is always her boy. Suddenly the young man breaks away. He leaps into the saddle. The spurs cut deep. Parents and friends shout their farewell to the cavalcade. Then they wave and throw kisses. The old father wipes his face vigorously with a handkerchief. He scolds the servants. He bids them to be off. He does not want them to see him cry. The mother has no such pride. As the horses disappear over the last hill the aged wife buries her head upon her husband’s breast. She sobs as though her heart would break. The husband tenderly puts his arm about the sad heart. He draws her towards the house.

Slowly they walk up the tree-arched path. They stop a moment on the porch to glance down the road. Slowly the sighing father opens the front door. The men go back to the fields. The female servants to the kitchen. The domestic machinery is started. The neighbors, returning to their homes, say, “Is it not too bad that the younger son should gather all together, and take his journey into a far country?”

The far country of my text is the land of sin. Where it is we do not geographically know. The far country may be in the rural regions, among the farm-houses. People make a very great mistake in supposing that the only place in which sin thrives is a large city. Sin loves to smell the wild flowers and lie down in the haymow, as well as to tramp the streets of a busy metropolis. I have preached in the country, and know of what I speak. There is loathsome drunkenness in a cross-road tavern as well as in a corner saloon. Many a young country girl has disgraced the family. Farmers’ boys and girls do not all attend the country revivals in order to hear the preaching. The far country of sin can be located in the city. Sin is not proportionally more prevalent in the city than in the village. But it is better able to conceal its tracks in a wilderness of rock than in a country town. Many a letter have I received which went thus: “I am a farmer’s wife. I have a boy in the great, wicked city of Chicago. I fear he is not doing right. You may be able to save him. He has written me that he has attended your church. Will you pray for him?” The far country of sin is sometimes found among the evils of political life, in the legislative halls of the State and the national capital. Sometimes sin is entrenched in a pulpit of the land where a minister has become an apostate, and, Judas-like, has sold his Christ for thirty pieces of silver. Wherever the far country of sin may be, there is the place where the nobler, and purer and better parts of a man’s life are being strangled.

A Floating Grave-yard

Once a sailing vessel was sighted floating among the icebergs of the Arctic. The captain of the approaching vessel put the trumpet to his lips, and shouted, “Ship ahoy! Whither bound? Whither bound?” No answer. Again the trumpet called, but the only sound heard by the captain was the echo of his own voice. A small boat was lowered. When the derelict was boarded, it was found to be the ship of death. That floating ship carried a dead crew. The wheelman had been frozen dead in the pilot house. The captain frozen to death in his cabin. The sailors frozen to death in their bunks. The derelict had been drifting around for thirteen long years with its crew unable to raise a hand, utter a sound or furl a sail.

The far country is the land of sin, where the inhabitants are dead to God. They are dead in their desire to make out of themselves what Christ would have them do. They are dead to spiritual love. They are so dead, that they will not hear the divine Father’s voice calling them back to the heavenly homestead.

Though the far country of sin may be anywhere, yet it is always a great distance away from the fireside of a Christian home. As soon as the younger son determined to revel in sin, he wanted to get away from the presence of his aged Christian father. He practically said: “Father, give me the share of money which will come to me when you are dead, and I will leave home and live independently. I do not want to see your loving eye and feel the kiss of holy affection upon my lips. I want to go with evil companions, and not associate with you, even though you are my father.” The Christian home ought to be the happiest place on earth to a child. It is a happy place if the child wishes and tries to do right. But the Christian home is a repulsive place to live when the boy wants to do those things which should be left undone. When a boy or a girl does not wish to stay home at night with the rest of the family, or finds other companionship more desirable than that of mother or father, look out—beware!

Deceiving a Mother

“Where are you going, Charlie?” said a mother to her son, who was putting on his coat and hat, preparing to leave the house. “Oh,” answered the young man, “the firm wants me to collect a few bills. I will be home early, mother. Do not be anxious or sit up for me if I am detained.” The young man passed down the street. He sounded a low whistle. A couple of other young men met him at the corner. “Boys,” he said, “mother is becoming suspicious. She did not want me to leave home. I must be more careful. Come, let’s have some fun!” That night, in a place of evil resort, this group of young men gambled and smoked and sang their lewd songs. It was great sport! They did not cease their carousal until the morning sun announced to the night watchman that his work was done and it was time for him to go to bed.

A few years later, in an Eastern city in a noted murder case, the jury brought in the verdict of murder in the first degree. When the judge asked the defendant why sentence should not be passed upon him, a young man arose. He turned a pale face towards the judge. As he began to speak, we see he was the same young man of whom I have just spoken. “Your Honor,” said he, “I am not afraid to die. If I committed murder in that drunken row a few months ago, I should be put to death. But, sir, before sentence is passed upon me, I should like to speak a word to the young men crowding this court-room. I would like to tell them that I started on the road which will lead me to the gallows when I used to leave my home at night to go out with evil companions. When I went out thus I always, directly or indirectly, had to deceive mother.” The far country of sin may seem to be only a step to the corner saloon. It is as far away as if it was ten thousand million miles away from the fireside of a Christian home.

The far country of sin generally has a broader and smoother highway for the younger members of the family than for the older sons and daughters. Easy is it for every one to go to destruction unless sustained by the grace of God. The old as well as the young can have a satanic guide lead them into

The Valley of Death

if they are willing to be led. But it is especially easy for the younger members of a family to fling themselves over the precipice of eternal death. When the older children were young, in all probability the father was having hard work to make financial ends meet. He had to work day and night, and night and day. He economized wherever possible. But after awhile the father got a foothold in a business or a professional career. Then the money commenced to flow into the family treasury. Then servants were able to be hired to do the work of the mother and sisters. Then the younger son was able to have his spending money and drive a horse and go with the young scions of the wealthier families. Then it was easy for him to buy a through ticket and go by the fast express to the far country of sin.

Mr. Moody well said, “This father of the parable ought to be censured. We cannot help but blame him. When the son said, ‘Father, divide, and give me my portion,’ the father should have said, ‘You show a bad spirit. I will make you go without your share.’ That father could not have done a greater unkindness to the boy than to give him his goods and money and let him go. A true father would have said to such a contemptible filial spirit, ‘Go, and earn your own portion by the sweat of your own brow.’”

Parents, your very kindnesses and self-sacrifices may be the cause of your younger children’s destruction. You have no right to give your younger son plenty of money and liberty to do wrong. It is your business to know how your children spend their money. It is your duty to know where your younger son passes his nights.

The Downward Path

The far country is the place where the younger son spent his all. We can readily picture this young man when he first left home. He had plenty of money. The tavern keepers bowed and smiled at his approach. They regretted when his party left. The gay young folks of the region to which he went felt proud to be seen in public by his side. His bachelor apartments were furnished in the most expensive style. The banks would honor any drafts he made upon them. He was a hale fellow well met. He was as much intoxicated with flattery as with wine. The gold which he held in his opened hand was just as yellow and hard as if he was living on his interest instead of on the principal. His health was robust and strong. He had not yet undermined his physical constitution by excesses. But now the rosy cheek pales. The steady nerve trembles. The mortgage is placed upon the fine furniture. He sells some of his diamonds. After awhile he begins to run up bills. Not being able to pay his bills, as of yore, the creditors become anxious and demand payment, and full payment at once. What happens? Why, the story of the Prodigal Son then tells us that there was a famine in that land. As soon as a sinner’s money is gone, his sinful friends immediately leave him. The bright-winged humming birds have little use for the rose-bush when the flowers are gone. This younger son began to be in want. He became helpless and friendless. To earn food enough to sustain life he tended a herd of swine. This social condition was the worst to which a Jew could ever sink.

A Sermon Realized

An aristocratic lady living in London had a very dissipated son. A friend said: “Why not take your son to hear Rowland Hill preach? Perhaps he can save him.” The mother answered: “I will.” Next Sunday night she sat in Mr. Hill’s audience to listen to the greatest preacher of his day. Rowland Hill arose, gave out a text, and began a sermon upon the Prodigal Son in this way: “The other day I saw a farmer coaxing some swine to a slaughter-house. The farmer had a bag of corn in his hand. Every few steps, the man would drop a few grains. The swine would run after him and greedily devour them. Poor fools, said I, those swine do not know the farmer is leading them into a slaughter-house where they are to be killed.” After the benediction, this aristocratic lady turned to her son, and said, “Was not that illustration about the swine awful? Think of a minister’s using such a figure in the Christian pulpit.” “Mother,” answered

MR. EDWARD FRANTZ, A.M.

PRESIDENT C. E. ARNOLD

CLASS IN THE BIBLE SCHOOL REPRESENTING TWELVE STATES

H. J. HARNLY, PH.D.

MANAGER S. B. FAHNESTOCK

A CHRISTIAN COLLEGE OF BROAD ACRES

How McPherson College, in Kansas, has Risen from Obscurity to a Commanding Position in Religious Work

AMONG the Christian colleges of the West, there are probably few that are better or more favorably known than McPherson College, in Kansas. Chartered in 1898, its doors were first opened to students the following year. At that time the work was on a very modest scale, and for the first season, and several years thereafter, the Dormitory building served all purposes. The erection of a College Hall, which was begun in the early years of the college, was actually carried forward and fully completed last summer.

During the last financial crisis, half a dozen members of the faculty generously came to the rescue with a donation of a year's salary each, and a plan to reconstruct the college organization so as to liquidate its indebtedness and curtail expenses. Every dollar raised was added to pay two dollars of indebtedness, and the college was saved. It now has about sixty thousand dollars' worth of buildings and equipments; it is a charter which forever forbids mortgaging the property, and it has reached an annual enrollment of more than three hundred and fifty students.

McPherson College is a college of the broad acres of Kansas, standing near the centre of the state. It has brought educational opportunity to many a hardy son and daughter of toil. Its doors are open to any boy or girl, however poor, if they have grit. Many students pay part expenses in labor, without compromising social standing in the least. Others, reduce expenses by self-boarding. The sacrifices which the students make in this way might well touch the heart of some sympathetic philanthropist. Cases have been known in which boarding expenses were reduced to forty cents a week!

This college is Christian in spirit, aims, and results. Those whose business it is to promote Christian work among the colleges report it as exceptional in this respect. Inter-collegiate athletics are at a discount and Christian work is a premium here. While attendance upon the daily chapel service is voluntary, almost the entire student body regularly attend. The students' Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association are strong in membership and steadily gaining in influence. During the recent winter months students have been brought to Christ almost weekly, so that the non-Christian element is reduced to a minimum. Under the direction of the Christian Associations of the college, one hundred and fifty students are engaged in daily private Bible study. About fifty are studying missions and are members of the College Mission Band and the Student Volunteer Movement. A number of students hold themselves in readiness for mission work, home and foreign. Missionaries have gone from the college to South Africa, India, Sweden, to the colored people of Kentucky, and into several city missions. These missions have been established under the auspices of three Protestant denominations.

The mission of the college finds its best expression in its Bible School. While Biblical studies are offered in the preparatory and collegiate courses of the college and a liberal course in Christian Theism in the latter, the demand for a larger scope of such work has brought the Bible School into existence. This offers a full theological course, but its mission is by no means confined to ministerial students. It numbers in its membership those who are preparing for the ministry, for missions, home and foreign, for the Sunday School, and a considerable body of others who simply have the conviction that a liberal education for the true man or woman should embrace some work in this department. Tuition in the Bible School is free to all, without any restricting conditions. It depends upon donations for financial support, and the beginnings of an endowment fund have been made for this purpose. The Bible School needs not only current financial support, but it greatly needs enlarged library facilities and a substantial permanent endowment.

The College and Bible School are responsible to the General Conference of the German Baptist Brethren Church, an orthodox Christian body of about 100,000 members. These people—who are not largely German, as the name might imply—are scattered among the agricultural population of the eastern, central and western States. In recent years, they are developing a commendable enthusiasm for Christian education and missions, especially foreign missions and city mission schools for neglected children. The Mennonite Brethren of North America are also co-ordinated with this college. The patronage of the college comes from a large number of religious bodies.

The principal teachers in the College and Bible School are spiritually-minded Christian scholars, having graduated from some of the very best colleges and universities of our land.

Among those to whom credit is due for having staid by the College in its trying times, and for having by their faithful work and planning built it up to its present condition of success, may be named: C. E. Arnold, A.M., President; Edward Frantz, A.M., Dean of the Bible School; S. B. Fahnestock, A.B., M.C., Secretary and Business Manager; and H. J. Harnly, Ph.D., of the Department of Natural Science and a member of the Board of Directors.

MISS DAVIDSON'S AFRICAN BOYS AT MCPHERSON COLLEGE

The Far Country

Sermon by Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage

Continued

The young man, "I do not know whether Mr. Hill had a right to use that illustration or not in a church. I do not know what Mr. Hill meant. He meant that I was the prodigal son being led by Satan into the far country of sin, where I would be destroyed, as swine are killed by the butcher's knife in a slaughter-house."

The far country is never so far away but that the penitent prodigal can find his way back from it to the heavenly homestead. When the younger son became so poor that he had no decent clothes for his back; so friendless that not one of his old companions would speak to him, when he would feign have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat, then he thought of his father's past love. "Surely," said he, "father will give me enough to eat. He will care for me as much as he could for one of his hired servants, even though I have done wrong." But the good father was ready to do more than that. No sooner did the younger son come within sight of the old homestead than the father ran to meet him. He fell on his son's neck, and kissed him. He kissed him in the same manner the Divine Father is ready to meet every one of his wayward children. He gave a loving kiss of eternal pardon. He kissed him, as God will kiss us if we will only come back to Jesus' side, and under the shadow of the atoning cross.

One moonlight night at Asbury Park a party of young people were gathered on the beach. As the waves came rolling up the sands the conversation was ragged. Then a young girl, with a voice as sweet as a bird's, began to sing. Her many friends joined in and made a large chorus. After awhile this young girl started the tender home melody of Robert Laurie:

Oh, could I see you now, my boy,
As fair as in olden time,
When prattle and smile made home a joy
And life was a merry chime.

When the last notes of this song died away an old man came towards the group and said to the young people, "Will you please sing that song again? My wife and I have a wayward boy. We do not know where he is to-night. He ran away from home. We do want him to come back before we die." God, the Divine Father, is waiting. He is waiting for some of his wayward children to come to-night to the Gospel fireside.

Boy, sitting before me to-night, I have a message for you. I see the marks of dissipation upon your brow. I see that you have been crying during this sermon. I fear you are the younger son of my text. As I catch one of your falling tears I would like to describe a vision which came to me last winter about you. Where was the scene? No, it was not in Chicago. Not in that low saloon or cheap theatre, or in that hall where you spent last night, playing billiards and gambling away your soul. The scene was way back in the country. You remember the old farm, the white house, the pillared porch. The big barn in the rear. The woodpile to the left of the kitchen door. The hens were running around clamoring for food because the earth was a frozen tomb. The worms had gone to sleep for their winter nap. It was about evening. An old, gray-haired woman was cooking over the kitchen stove. She looked thinner than when you saw her last. The neighbors say she is ageing very rapidly and will not live long. Just then an old man came in. He stamped the snow off his great boots. This gray-haired woman looked up and said, "Pa, have you brought a letter? Have you been to the post-office? Is it not strange he has not written. He has been gone now five long years. Do you think God will let me live long enough to see him just once before I go?" The old man said nothing. He went to the door and looked down the road. He shaded his eyes as though he could "see a great way off." Then he said: "Mother, that is a fine calf we have there in the barnyard. She is getting fatter each day. We must kill her soon. Perhaps we can have a big feast when our boy comes home." They sat by the fire a little while after the dishes were wiped. The old folks were too tired to stay up late. They were too tired to sleep.

They took down the old Bible. The mother said, "Pa, won't you read that story of the prodigal son? Somehow I never can hear it enough. You read it last night. It is in the 15th chapter of Luke. Read about the younger son that went away and starved, and was too proud to come home." Then the old folks knelt. As they prayed, the little candle-light began to flash in sympathy. The tears trickled through the four withered hands. There the two tired, heart-sick parents staid upon their knees, pleading with God for the return of their wayward boy, until an angel in heaven could bear their grief no longer. He fluttered away and whispered to me the secret that I am now telling. My son, will you not go home? Before the old folks are dead, do go home. Leave this far country of sin.

JOYOUS OR JEALOUS

PAUL AT ANTIOCH
IN PISIDIAINTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 25
ACTS 13: 43-52 --- READ 13: 42 ALSO

By Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts

GOLDEN TEXT---"THROUGH THIS MAN IS PREACHED UNTO YOU THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS." ACTS 13: 38.

The Lesson Story

JOURNEYING with Saul, who now has the new name, Paul, we have reached the far-away city of Antioch, in Pisidia, north of the island of Cyprus, and in the central part of Asia Minor. It is the Sabbath Day, and the Jews are gathered in their church—called a synagogue—to hear the law of God. Two strangers are observed in the congregation. They have a look of distinction. The older man has a kindly face and manner, and the other has the appearance of a learned man. These men are Paul and Barnabas. They have only just come into the city, the night before, having sailed from the island of Cyprus, where they had been preaching about Jesus. They look somewhat weary, for since they landed they have made a long journey by foot in order to reach Antioch, and a part of the way they had to climb mountains. But weariness did not keep them away from God's house; neither was the fact that they were strangers made an excuse for not going to church. They are thinking of that other Antioch which they had left only a short time before; of the hundreds, yes, thousands of people, who at that very time would be gathered there to praise the name of the Lord Jesus.

As they look about the synagogue where they are now sitting, they do not see a single friend of Jesus. Are they lonely? No, for in their hearts they know they will soon win for him many friends.

"The Synagogue the Cradle of the Church"

The ruler of the synagogue sees the strangers, and after the praises and prayers are said and sung, mostly from the Psalms, invites them to speak to the people. He would not have done this, perhaps, if he had known that they were preachers of Jesus. Barnabas wishes Paul to do the speaking, and so he rises in his place, and preaches the most wonderful sermon those people have ever heard. He begins in a way that pleases them much, for he tells them the story the Jews were never tired of hearing: how God had been the friend of their fathers, and had given them great prophets and kings—even King David, the greatest of all their kings. But when Paul tells them of Jesus, and how the Jews rejected and crucified him, what a different look comes over the face of the ruler of the synagogue! He is even heard to say that he wishes he had not asked the strangers to speak. Nearly all of the Jewish faces in the synagogue have the same displeased look. Only here and there is a face which is sympathetic. The displeased ones cry out, and leave the church before the sermon is done. But there is a group of people sitting by themselves, whom Paul recognizes as not being Jews—all not Jews were called Gentiles—whose faces beam with joy as Paul goes on with the story of Jesus, and tells them that God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to be the Saviour of all who will repent of their sins. When the sermon was done, these Gentiles wanted to know more about Jesus. They entreat Paul and Barnabas to stay over another Sabbath, and preach to them again.

A week has passed, and the synagogue is crowded with people as never before. Almost the whole city has come out to hear Paul and Barnabas preach. There are some angry faces to be seen in the synagogue, especially among the scribes and rabbis. But the hearts behind those faces are to be pitied, for they are filled with envy, and nothing makes people so unhappy as envy. They are not glad to have everybody in the city come into their synagogue, because they were not able to attract such crowds themselves, and because these crowds do not come to be Jews in religion, but to be Christians. Paul says to the Jews, "God sent Jesus to the Jews first, but they rejected him, and so we will turn to the Gentiles. More and more the hearts of the Jews are filled with envy and anger, and some of them would gladly go out but that the crowd is too great. Not all of the Jews are feeling that way. The hearts of some of them are turning to the Lord Jesus. The Gentiles are listening with joy in their hearts, because they can have Jesus for their Saviour. The Jews who are learning to love Jesus have the same joy in their hearts."

The preaching is ended, and the people have left the synagogue, some to talk about the love of Jesus, and others to say unkind things about Paul and Barnabas. It is the day after the Sabbath, and there is a mob in Antioch. The angry Jews are determined that the apostles shall leave their city. They say they will hear no more preaching about Jesus in their synagogue, or even in the streets. Paul and Barnabas think it is best to go, but they promise themselves that they will come back to preach Jesus there again some day.

Illustration and Application

--Paul and his company (v. 13). At the close of our story we shall see jealousy and envy conquering the Jewish leaders, but here we see jealousy conquered in the heart of Barnabas. The missionary partnership of "Barnabas and Saul" (12: 25; 13: 7) has quickly changed to "Paul & Co." There is no evidence that Barnabas, because of this case of the first becoming last and lost, allowed the ravens of envy and jealousy, whose brood is bitterness, to nest in his heart; but being human, it can hardly be that the shadow of their black wings did not fall for a moment on him, even as he drove them away. It is no sin to have a sinful thought, but only to harbor it. Christ was tempted, as we are, when the satanic shadow of ambition to be an earthly king fell on him, but it found no place to brood and breed in his soul. God's love "brings into captivity every thought to the obedience that is in Christ," not by preventing the thought, but by preventing its domination in word or deed, or even in desire. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

It has been well said that "one never envies what he can equal." And one who is himself worthy of love, will hardly be jealous lest any love worth having that he should have, whether public or private, should go to another. But even the holiest need to be on guard against temptations to envy and jealousy. One may become envious, even at the altar, as Cain was, because God's favor—man's also, perhaps—is bestowed more manifestly on another worshiper or Christian worker. It may be shown in a larger audience or class or in greater success in winning souls. To rejoice in another's success in school, in athletics, in business, in reputation, in doing good, when it outshines our own, is the rare grace Paul afterwards eulogized in that matchless word-painting of Christian manhood, the thirteenth chapter of I. Corinthians, when he says, that the heart of such "rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth." The man who rejoices not in word only, but in his very soul, not in his rival's failures or errors, but in his virtues and victories, has, in himself, one of the best evidences of Christianity. When Paul was at Rome, some jealous enemies inside the Church mixed defraction of him with the Gospel, in their preaching, but Paul wrote from his prison, "Whether in pretence or in truth Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice" (Philip 1: 15-18).

PAUL PREACHING IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF ANTIOCH

Let us consider that the gain of another who goes above us is not any loss to us. The stationary railway train you are in seems to be going back because the one on the next track is going forward to pass it, but the gain of the one train has not really put back the other. We cannot all be "the fast express." "The accommodation" is equally necessary, and the slow freight is the best payer of all. The sublimest case in history of one rejoicing in being outstripped is that of John the Baptist, from whom the crowds turned to the new preacher, Jesus of Nazareth, whom John had introduced to them. John's disciples blamed Jesus for drawing their master's audiences away, but John, picturing himself as the "friend of the bridegroom," who is the central figure in the preliminary arrangements, but gladly gives place to the bridegroom when he comes on the scene, exclaimed: "He that hath the bride, the Church, is the Bridegroom, Christ, and the friend of the Bridegroom that stands back in the shadow rejoiceth greatly because of the Bridegroom's voice. He must increase, but I must decrease." To be willing, not alone to be excelled, but even to be eclipsed, that Christ may increase in his winning of the world, that is itself a grace that to heaven at least is "brighter glory than any popularity lost in achieving it. And the ecstasy of such self-sacrifice is greater, as mothers and others know, than any selfish joy, the profoundest instance in which "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

When the Jews saw the multitudes they were filled with envy (v. 45). Here we see jealousy conquering the Jew's religious leaders in the very house of God. As in the story of Job, so here, and in more modern cases, where the sons of God come together, Satan comes also, not alone to sit with them, but to enter into them. And of all the demoniacs that men admit to their souls none are more hideous than envy and jealousy. At Gadara the devils chose the bodies of swine to dwell in, and it is a fattened selfishness in which alone jealousy and envy can find place to-day. One who is unselfishly, and so unconsciously, doing good, will rejoice in all good done, whoever does it, and whoever gets the credit of it. He will say cheerily, when unappreciated,

Though they may forget the singer,
They will not forget the song.

Not so these unspiritual leaders of the synagogue's preaching and teaching and singing. The centre of their efforts was not the Spirit of God, but self. When Paul drew applauding crowds, such as had never responded to their unspiritual, unenthusiastic words, they felt as if what Paul had gained of public appreciation had been taken from them. These unspiritual leaders of worship were able to bring into the same bonds of jealousy the "devout and honorable women," reminding us that even in the churches to-day, women, as much as men, are subject to the temptations to jealousy and envy—perhaps more, because they are not so busy with the absorbing work of breadwinning. That woman who has no pang, but only pleasure, in seeing beauty that excels her own, is herself saved from becoming less beautiful than she is through the disfiguring lines of envy and jealousy. Unselfishness beautifies by the power of love—a sculptor whose beautifying is not an accident of youth, but "a joy forever." If another woman or girl is better educated or richer or more popular, let those less favored rejoice in it as something that gives to another without taking from themselves.

The disciples were filled with joy (v. 52). While those who gave place to jealousy gave place to misery, those who learned of Christ in humility of joy were filled with joy, the joy that comes to those whose milestones of transformation have been:

All of self and none of Thee.
Less of self and more of Thee.
None of self and all of Thee.

Recall your sorrows and troubles of a few days or weeks. What caused them? A real or fancied slight, a loss, an honor you hoped for given to another—some crossing of selfishness in almost every case. Were you a much displeased when some one slighted Christ as when it was yourself? Or when another lost instead of you? A wise man gave a prescription to one so melancholy that it threatened to become melancholia, form of madness, "Do good to somebody. The prescription wrought a speedy cure. Si and selfishness are the chief roots of sorrow. Let Christ bear away the sin, and take the place of selfishness in the throne of motive, and joy will take the place of sorrow.

A true ministry, Dr. Parker, of London, reminds us, develops satanic opposition. "The devil will leap from the darkness, and dispute the field."

Gleanings Instead of "getting even" with a low man who attacks us, by revenge, one has suggested we should get above him by kindness, or, at least, by refusing to turn aside for retaliation.

Mr. Spurgeon once said: "Every church, and, for the matter of that, every village and family, is plagued with certain Mrs. Grundys, who drink tea and talk vitriol."

When the Korean natives come to unite with the church they are asked by the missionaries, "What are you doing for the salvation of your friends and neighbors?" If the reply that the applicant is doing nothing, he is told, "You are not ready yet."

Why not go out two and two, like Paul and Barnabas, from your own Sunday School, or your own prayer-meeting, to evangelize your own town?

In the well-thumbed and much-marked Bible of Admiral Philip, whose words at Santiago, "Don't cheer, boys; the poor fellows are dying," are immortal, the most heavily underscored verse is, "Whosoever shall confess me before men, I will confess before my Father which is in heaven. Not alone, or chiefly in meetings of Christians, is that ver honored, but especially when one is in a company whose songs are more akin to hell than heaven, and where the ta is against Christ.

STATUE TO GEN. JACKSON. WASHINGTON

THE PROPOSED GRANT MEMORIAL STATUE. AT WASHINGTON

LAFAYETTE MEMORIAL. WASHINGTON

HONOR TO HEROIC ROCHAMBEAU

All Washington to Witness the Unveiling of the Statue to the Gallant Frenchman, Friend of Washington and Lafayette, who Helped us Gain Our Independence

OUR national Capital will be the scene, on May 24, of an event of historic interest—the unveiling of the statue to the great Field Marshal of France, Jean Baptiste Donatien, Comte de Rochambeau. This patriotic tribute to the gallant soldier who, during the time of our country's direst need in the days of the American revolution, rendered splendid service, will add another to the already notable collection of statuary which graces the parks and reservations of Washington.

Three years ago Congress took its first action on the project of this statue. At that time, March, 1899, an item of the Sundry Civil bill appropriated $7,500 for the construction of a replica of Hamar's statue of Rochambeau, which had recently been unveiled at Vendome, France, and the artist, Ferdinand Hamar, was commissioned to make it. Hamar completed his work last February, and on the 15th day of that month, Congress made another appropriation of $15,000, for the pedestal and the erection of the statue. A little later, a bill was introduced authorizing the President to invite the members of the Rochambeau and Lafayette families to be present at the unveiling on the 24th of May, the bill also carrying a provision of $10,000 to defray their expenses. These representatives are coming on the fine French warship Gaulois, to attend the ceremonies.

This is a tardy but fitting recognition for valiant service, which our country owes to the distinguished French field marshal. It will be recalled that brave young De Lafayette returned to France, after the battle of Brandywine, and induced Louis XVI to send Comte de Rochambeau, with six thousand troops, to the assistance of the Colonial patriots. The experienced French general gave invaluable aid to Washington from 1780 until the ending of the war. He received the thanks of Congress before he returned to his native country; but no further action was taken to show an appreciation of his conduct.

The site selected for the statue is the southwest corner of Lafayette Square, diametrically opposite to the Lafayette Memorial, which stands on the southeast corner of the same grounds. This square is one of the many government reservations of the District, and is an exceedingly attractive small park. It was named by Washington himself in honor of his friend, and has always been a pleasant environ of the White House, which it faces on the north. Its trees and shrubbery are well cared for; its grass is kept like velvet, and its walks are lined with inviting seats. In its centre is Clark Mill's famous equestrian statue of President Jackson. The view from Sixteenth street commanding the park, with the White House in the vista and the Washington monument looming against the sky, is as beautiful as any in the capital.

The Rochambeau statue is of the exact height of the Lafayette Memorial, and is most artistic in design and effect. The pedestal is of granite. On the front of its base, is the figure of the Goddess of Liberty stepping out of a boat. In her left hand, she holds a flagstaff, on which the Stars and Stripes and the French flag are intertwined. In her right hand is a sword, with which she defends an American eagle as it stands above a shield bearing thirteen stars, symbolical of the original thirteen States. The sides of the base of the pedestal bear the coat-of-arms of France and of the Rochambeau family. The back of the base bears his name. The statue itself is bronze, and represents the field-marshal standing with one arm outstretched, evidently pointing to the distant American colony which he is about to aid.

The unveiling of this statue will be an occasion of great ceremony. Several members of the Rochambeau and Lafayette families will be present as guests of the nation. The French President sends a special envoy to represent him personally. A high official from each however, was not raised until 1891, more than a hundred years after the close of the Revolution in which he had figured. It was ordered by Congress at an expense of $55,000, and it was designed and executed by two French artists, Talquere and Mercie. It embodies, in stone and bronze, the idea of the assistance which France gave our struggling republic.

No other city of the Union has as many, nor anything as fine a collection of statues and monuments as those which adorn the streets of the seat of our government. Best known of all of its monuments is the Washington cenotaph, which stands in the White Lot, at the rear of the ellipse south of the White House. Its towering shaft, standing out in bold relief against the background of the sky, is an object of unceasing admiration.

One of the largest, but not one of the best, pieces of statuary at the capital is Franklin Simmons' Peace Monument, at the foot of the west steps of the Capitol building. It was erected by funds contributed by the members of the navy. It bears on its top the figure of America weeping on the shoulder of History, who is recording the words, "They died that their country might live," on a tablet in her hand. On the front and back of the base are the figures of Victory with a laurel leaf, and Peace with an olive branch. At the east of the capital is Greenough's Washington, a magnificent piece of sculpture in dazzling white Carrara marble. Dazzling it was originally, but alas! its rough exposure to the weather is robbing it of its pristine beauty. Greenough made it with the expectation that it would stand in the centre of the Rotunda of the Capitol; but on account of the Roman toga in which he clothed the figure of Washington, Congress would not approve of it, and after much discussion and delay, it was finally assigned to its present position. As it is, it has to be hidden from view during the winter months under a wooden hood to protect it from the elements; but even that does not save the lustre of the marble.

The greater part of the statues are in the west end of the city. Scott's, McPherson's, and Thomas' circles each have a heroic equestrian statue of the men whose names they bear. Thomas' circle is a charmingly artistic locality. Vermont avenue and Fourteenth street intersect it, and in the triangle thus formed, is the ivy-covered, picturesque Lutheran church, in front of which is the imposing statue of Luther. The newer statues, which have been added within the past year or two, are the Hahnemann hemicycle, which was erected by his homeopathic followers in this country; the Webster and the Logan. The Webster stands opposite the Hahnemann, on Scott circle. It is, without doubt, the finest single statue in the District. The monuments in course of erection at the present time are the Sherman, the base of which is already placed at the south of the Treasury building, and which is being completed by the widow of the artist, Rohlsmith, whose untimely death last year brought the work to a standstill; the Grant, the commission for which has just been awarded; and the Frances Willard, which is to have the honor of a place in Statuary Hall, the first statue of a woman that has ever been allowed to stand beneath the dome of the Capitol.

ABBY G. BAKER.

MEETING OF WASHINGTON AND ROCHAMBEAU

of the French departments of the War, Navy and Foreign Office will also be present. President Roosevelt and the French Ambassador will deliver short addresses. The French man-of-war Gaulois, will detach two hundred of her marines and sailors to join the American troops in the ceremonies.

The Lafayette Memorial was the first monument which our Government raised in memory of the French officers who fought with the colonies during the Revolution, although Lafayette himself was repeatedly honored for the part he bore in it. The Lafayette statue,

OUR EDITORIAL FORUM

B. J. FERNIE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

LOUIS KLOPSCH, Editor and Proprietor

G. H. SANDISON, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published weekly, subscription price $1.50 a year, in advance. Remittances should always be made in the nearest money available to the publisher. Register cash remittances.

Foreign Postage. For each copy to be mailed outside U. S., Canada, and Mexico, add one dollar a year. Change of Date. It takes at least two weeks to change the date, and, until subscription is renewed, it will be at the risk of the subscriber.

Expiration of Subscriptions. The date on the wrapper indicates when your subscription expires. Change of Address. Give notice of change of address when you ask us to change your address.

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. Letters should be addressed, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, Bible House, New York. Entered at the Post-office, New York, as Second-class Matter.

Specific Service

IF it were granted that heaven is merely a proper reward for devoted religious service, this would be granting nothing as to those who are commonly expecting heaven on the ground of their merit, for the basis of their claim is not that they are very religious; they do not profess to be in God's service at all. What then? They are honest, true, faithful to their contracts, honorable in their dealings, and disposed to aid others who are in distress. One who leads such a life, they claim, does not deserve to be cast off, and left miserable forever; or, what is the same thing, they claim that in all justice and equity such a man ought to be made happy in a future state—ought to receive heaven as his reward. Now examine that claim.

You hire a gardener for a day's work. At night he comes to you for his pay. You ask him, "Did you go into my garden, and spend the day in cultivating it for me, with careful regard to my interests?" "No," is the honest reply, "but I have spent the day diligently. I have not been an idle man. I have attended to the cultivation of my own garden, and been faithful to my family, and I can appeal to all my neighbors for the general kindness and honesty of my life."

Would not this man be only speaking out in the honesty of his heart the claim of every one who is not engaged in the service of God, and who yet feels that he ought to be saved?

You send a clerk to another State to collect some debts due you. He returns, and you ask him, "Have you been diligent and faithful in the duty assigned you?" "I was diligent," he replies. "I traveled much, and in all my journeying I injured no one; I treated no one roughly or rudely, and, in fact, I did many kind and helpful things to the people I met. I also acquired some valuable property for myself, and have a prospect now of rising to wealth and influence."

"But," you ask, "what has all this to do with the reward which I promised you for services to me?"

The Lord our God requires of us a specific service. It is, that we shall seek his glory, obey his commands, love him, know him, and treat him in all things as our God; that we be penitent for our sins, and willing to accept his favor on his terms; that we be religious, prayerful, believing, holy. If this is done, he promises heaven as the reward, not of merit, indeed, but of grace. But this is the last thing which these people would profess—that they are acting, in whatever good and kindly life they may be living, out of regard to the will and the glory of the Lord, their maker and Saviour.

This single question—Do we rely on our own merits for salvation, or on the merits of the Redeemer, the way which God has appointed?—separates all the dwellers on the globe into two great parties, never to be united.

Mormon Expansion

AGAIN the problem of combating the Mormon propaganda is agitated; and various methods for arresting its extension are under discussion. An important factor, designed to carry light to the East and South, is the Report on Plural Marriages, adopted by the Salt Lake Ministerial Association, February 10, 1902, and now being distributed throughout the country. It is in the nature of a pronunciamento against the efforts of Mormon missionaries in other sections to mislead the public in regard to conditions in Utah; and against misrepresentations made for selfish ends by politicians. A prominent Eastern man is quoted as saying: "Those who had plural wives (before the manifesto), were not compelled to consider themselves divorced, but they practically went to this extreme. They do not live with more than one woman. No more plural marriages are made." Says the Report: "These misstatements which appear so grotesquely and absurdly untrue, that they but create a smile among all who know the facts, may, if uncontradicted, become a serious addition to the large amount of misinformation constantly emanating from Mormon sources."

"The Association, with proofs in hand, declares 1. Mormons live with plural wives married before the manifesto; and plural marriages have been contracted since the manifesto, acknowledged children having been born of such marriages. 2. Mormon authorities still preach the 'righteousness of polygamy'; and Mormon women lecture in the East in favor of it. 3. By preaching and teaching, Mormon leaders show intention to openly re-establish the system wherever it can be done with safety from interference by the Government. 4. The colonization schemes, by which Mormon communities are being established in sparsely settled States and Territories, as Arizona and New Mexico, are part of a deep-laid plan for extending by political influence and otherwise, the Mormon propaganda."

The bitter opposition of Mormon leaders to the anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution shows really where they stand; and Americans, who desire the complete and permanent abolition of the plural marriage—that heathen blot upon our Statehood!—need to think and to act accordingly.

Helping Unconsciously

IN a thousand ways the men and women who have Christ in their hearts, and something of Christ's conduct and character repeated in their own, are the preserving and purifying force in the midst of this corrupt world. Not usually of set purpose and by determined effort; for the most part it will be an unconscious work of blessing.

It is said that when Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, returned to his native land with those wonderful works of art which have made his name immortal, chiselled in Italy with patient toil and glowing inspiration, the servants who unpacked the marbles, scattered upon the ground the straw which was wrapped around them. And lo, the next summer, flowers from the gardens of Rome were blooming in the streets of Copenhagen, from the seeds brought and planted undesignedly. While eagerly pursuing his chosen art, and leaving splendid results in breathing marble, the artist was at the same time, and unconsciously, scattering other beautiful things in his path to give cheer and gladness.

So Christ's faithful workers unconsciously bless the world. All day long as they toil at their tasks, in shop or kitchen, in field or office, words of Christly gentleness drop from their lips, and seeds of Christly purity are scattered about them, and to-morrow flowers from the garden of God spring up in the dusty ways of earth. There is a little less of evil, a little more of good in the world.

Christian service is not all talking and praying in meeting, and visiting the sick. A star does not talk, yet its steady beam shining down continually out of the sky is a sweet benediction. A flower cannot sing bird songs, but its fragrance and beauty make it a blessing whenever it is seen. Be like the star in your peaceful shining, and many will thank God for your life. Be like the flower in your pure beauty of character, and in the influence of your unselfish spirit, and you may do more to help the world than many who talk with ever-ready tongue.

Among the Workers

—A CONVENTION of women Christian workers will be held on June 4th and 5th, in the chapel of Mrs Jennie Fowler-Willing's Training School, 463 West Thirty-second street, New York City. All ladies who do public Christian work are invited to be present.

—EVANGELIST ARTHUR CRANE, of Charleston, S. C., closed a very profitable winter's labors in the Southwest, in Hutchinson, Kans., in March. One result has been that a large number have joined the various churches. He has held meetings in Wetumpka, Ala., and has also visited Alexandria, Va., later.

—AS AN EARNEST of the Smiley Revival Meetings at Watertown, N. Y., the Stone Street Church received fifty-four members at its recent communion. All the other denominations are gathering the precious fruits of their united effort in Washington Hall, and the daily noon-hour services in the various factories of the city, under the direction of Evangelists Smiley and McKinsey, of Chester, Pa.

—THE EXCAVATION of Gezer, by the Palestine Exploration Society, is now going on. First mentioned in the Egyptian records of Thotmes III., and ten times on the Amarna tablets, Gezer appears in Bible history as a strong city in the time of Joshua, unconquered by the Israelites, captured by a Pharaoh, and given to his daughter, Solomon's wife, and rebuilt by Solomon, for the defence of his empire. Its identification is perfect. The American School is co-operating and is inviting friends to aid it in the work.

GEMS FROM TALMAGE

The Bells of Moscow

—LAST SUMMER I SAW Moscow, in some respects the most splendid city under the sun. After examining nine hundred brass cannons which were picked out of the snow after Napoleon retreated from Moscow, each cannon deep cut with the letter "N," I ascended a tower of some two hundred and fifty feet, just before sunset, and on each platform there were bells, large and small, and I climbed up among the bells, and then as I reached the top, all the bells underneath me began to ring, and they were joined by the bells of fourteen hundred towers and domes and turrets. Some of the bells sent out a faint tinkle of sound, a sweet tintinnabulation that seemed a bubbling of the air, and others thundered forth boom after boom, boom after boom, until it seemed to shake the earth and fill the heavens—sounds so weird, so sweet, so awful, so grand, so charming, so tremendous, so soft, so rippling, so reverberating—and they seemed to wreathe and whirl and rise and sink and burst and roll and mount and die. When Napoleon saw Moscow burn, it could not have been more brilliant than when I saw the fourteen hundred turrets aflame with the sunset; and there were roofs of gold, and walls of malachite, and pillars of porphyry, and balustrades of mosaic, and architecture of all colors mingling the brown of autumnal forests and the blue of summer heavens, and the conflagration of morning skies, and the emerald of rich grass, and the foam of tossing seas. The mingling of so many sounds was an entrancement almost too much for human nerves and human ears. I expect to see nothing to equal it until you and I see heaven.

Chariots of Cloud

—ALTHOUGH ALL UNWORTHY of such companionship, we want to come with him on that day to see the last of this old world which was once our residence. Coming through the skies, myriads of chariots rolling on and rolling down. By that time how changed this world will be! Its deserts all flowers, its rocks all mossed and lichened, its poorhouses all palaces, its sorrows all joys, its sins all virtues; and in the same pasture-field, lion and calf; and on the same perch, hawk and dove. Now the chariots of cloud strike the earth, filling all the valleys and covering all the mountain-sides, and halting in all the cemeteries and graveyards, and over the waters deep, where the dead sleep in coral sarcophagus. A loud blast of the Resurrection trumpet is given and the bodies of the dead rise and join the spirits from which they have long been separated. Then Christ our king, rising in the centre chariot of cloud, with his scarred hands waves the signal, and the chariots wheel and come into line for glorious ascent. Drive on! Drive on! Chariots of cloud ahead of the king, chariots of cloud on either side of the king, chariots of cloud following the king. Upward and a-past starry hosts, and through immensities, and across infinitudes. Lift up your heads, ye Everlasting Gates! For him who maketh the clouds his chariot, and who, through condescending and uplifting grace, invites us to ride with him!

Compensation in Heaven

—IT WILL NOT take long for God to make up to you in the next world for all you have suffered in this. As you enter heaven he may say: "Give this man one of those towered and colonnaded palaces on that ridge of gold overlooking the Sea of Glass. Give this woman a home among those amaranthine blooms and between those fountains tossing in the everlasting sunlight. Give her a couch canopied with rainbows to pay her for all the fatigues of wifehood and motherhood and housekeeping, from which she had no rest for forty years. Cup-bearers of heaven, give these newly arrived souls from earth the costliest beverages and roll to their door the grandest chariots, and hang on their walls the sweetest harps that ever responded to fingers seraphic. Give to them rapture on rapture, celebration on celebration, jubilee on jubilee, heaven on heaven. They had a hard time on earth earning a livelihood, or nursing sick children, or waiting on querulous old age, or battling falsehoods that were told about them, or were compelled to work after they got short-breathed and rheumatic and dim-sighted. Chamberlains of heaven! Keepers of the King's robes! Banqueters of eternal royalty! Make up to them a hundredfold, a thousandfold, a millionfold for all they suffered from swaddling clothes to shroud, and let all those who, whether on the hills or in the temples or on the thrones or on jasper wall, were helped and sanctified and prepared for this heavenly realm by the Mission of the Frosts stand up and wave their sceptres!" And I looked, and behold! nine-tenths of the ransomed rose to their feet, and nine-tenths of the sceptres swayed to and fro in the light of the sun that never sets, and then I understood, far better than before, that trouble comes for beneficent purpose, and that on the coldest nights the aurora is brightest in the northern heavens.

THE BIBLE and the NEWSPAPER

Fortifying the Alps

HOSTILITIES, which are never likely to take actual shape, have been so far anticipated in a picturesque district of Europe, as to cause a flutter of military excitement. Groups of soldiery and munitions of war have made their appearance on the frontiers of Italy and Switzerland, and preparations have been made for the fortification of the famous St. Gothard Pass. The menacing situation has arisen out of a matter which in this country would have caused no difficulty. A Swiss newspaper published a series of articles reflecting on the character of the late King of Italy, and eulogizing the miserable creature who assassinated him. The Italian ambassador protested to the Federal Council of Switzerland against the publication of the articles, but the Council could not, or would not, suppress them. The ambassador renewed his protests, and finally became so persistent that the Swiss Government asked the Italian Government to recall him. They received a polite refusal, couched in the usual diplomatic language, and conveying an intimation that the ambassador had only done his duty in protesting against the newspaper articles. Thereupon the Council broke off official relations with the ambassador, an act which the Italian Government retaliated by breaking off relations with the Swiss minister at Rome. Ordinarily a situation of this kind would be the precursor of war, but it may be safely predicted that no war will ensue. The good offices of the other Powers will probably be employed to allay the mutual irritation. The Swiss Government, however, has taken the natural precaution of providing for the defence of the road by which an Italian army would enter its territory. The peculiar conformation of the road, with its single bridge spanning the torrent far below, renders it easy of defense. It is an interesting coincidence that it was near this spot, a century ago, that a battle was fought in which the French were ignominiously defeated by the Austrians and Russians, and were forced to flee for safety to Lucerne. We may hope that the beautiful scene will not again be marred by the clash of armies. There would have been no danger of such a calamity if the Italian diplomat had wisely ignored the foolish utterances of an irresponsible writer.

If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, whether he rage or laugh, there will be no rest (Prov. 29: 9).

Stowaways Buried Alive

A British freight steamer which reached New York on May 1, was the scene of a shocking spectacle during its voyage. The coal is delivered in the engine room from the coal bunkers by an automatic device. On the second day of the voyage, the firemen were piling coal by the ton into the furnaces, to get power for contending with a north-easterly gale, when suddenly they saw the body of a young man pass through the chute among the coal. It was immediately taken out and was buried in the sea. Three days afterwards the body of another young man came through the chutes, and was treated in the same manner. The captain and crew were astonished at the presence of the bodies. The vessel came from Guantanamo, in Cuba, but it had stayed on its way at St. Lucia to replenish its stock of coal. It is supposed that the youths went on board there, or at Guantanamo, and hid among the coal. Not knowing that more coal was to be taken in, they may have been lying asleep when the fresh coal was thrown in and were buried under it. Doubtless they had heard glowing descriptions of the advantages to be gained in the United States, otherwise they would not have been so anxious to come, as to take risks so terrible. In that journey which they have really taken, they might have gained infinitely greater felicity, and that not by evading the law but by following the guidance offered to all.

I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved (John 10: 9).

Fatal Plunder

A strange retribution has come upon some burglars in New Jersey. The railroad freight houses at Pompton, N. J., were broken into a few days ago and considerable property was stolen. Among the articles carried off was a box of dynamite cartridges. Whether the thieves thought it contained valuables is unknown, but they evidently did not know to have been almost torn to pieces and were evidently dead or dying. The driver alone seemed to have escaped mutilation, and even he had been hurt. It is supposed that the thieves being ignorant of the nature of a part of their booty, handled it carelessly, and so caused it to explode. Not often does retribution come so promptly and so terribly, but in the end it will be found that all property acquired by dishonesty works out the eternal ruin of the thief.

The robbery of the wicked shall destroy them (Prov. 21: 7).

Twenty Years Among Maniacs

An application was made to a Judge of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn last week for the release of a patient from the asylum because he knew that if he left the asylum he would be tried for the crime of which he was guilty, but at last his misery grew so unbearable that he determined to secure his release at any cost. It is improbable that he will be executed after so long an interval, but he will doubtless have to spend many years among criminals in some penitentiary, which, to a sensitive man, would be as painful an experience. How bitterly he must regret that one criminal act which has involved him already in so much wretchedness, and is even yet to blight his future. Yet none can doubt the justice of his punishment. It may be hoped that he has made his peace with God through Jesus Christ, otherwise even death will give him no release from the awful companionship of the depraved.

He shall appoint him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth (Matt. 24: 51).

A Panic in a Factory

Simple and wholly baseless terror was the cause of the death of eight girls and serious injuries to forty others, in a factory in Philadelphia recently. They, with many others, were at their work, when loud cries reached their ears from the elevator shaft. The noise came from the man who runs the elevator. He was horrified at discovering that a man had been hurt by the elevator. When it was at the top of the building, the janitor had opened one of the doors in the shaft and had pulled the rope. Looking into the shaft, to see where the elevator was, he was struck on the head by the descending vehicle and had been pinioned between it and the floor. The elevator man, losing his presence of mind, called for help. The girls, hearing him, feared that there was a fire in the building. They immediately rushed for the stairway, and in running down, one of them tripped and fell. Others fell over her, and soon there was a pile of struggling humanity blocking the stairway, and those at the bottom of the pile were trodden almost to death. Several of those who were left behind, finding their escape by the stairway cut off by the crowd, jumped from the windows and were killed. There was no fire, and no danger at all if they had continued quietly at their work; but fear took possession of them, and in fleeing from imaginary danger they met their death. It is astonishing that people are so ready to take alarm if they apprehend danger to their bodies, and yet so few are moved by warnings of the very real danger that menaces their souls.

They say: The vision that he seeth is for many days to come; he prophesieth of times that are far off (Ezekiel 12: 27).

BRIEF NOTES

Dr. G. W. F. Birch, of New York, who took a leading part in conducting the proceedings against Prof. Briggs and Dr. McGiffert, died on April 25.

There are five thousand professing Christians in Corea. More than one-half of them have been added to the churches within a year.

President Roosevelt has promised to deliver an address at the centennial of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, to be celebrated in New York on May 20.

A notorious gambling place in Europe has a special cemetery for gambling victims who commit suicide. Since 1860 over two thousand graves have been dug there.

The new President of the Doshisha, the Christian college of Japan, is the Hon. K. Kataoka, who for four years past has been speaker of the lower house of the Japanese Parliament.

Delegates to Canadian churches from the Colonial Missionary Society have been appointed, and are now on their way across the Atlantic. They are: Rev. J. D. Jones, of Bournemouth, and Rev. Alfred Rowland, of London, who were delegates from the English churches to the International Congregational Council in Boston in 1900.

The International Council of Women, through its Peace Committee, is arranging for Peace Demonstrations to be held in many lands on May 15, the anniversary of the convening of the Hague Conference. Mrs. Noah H. Chapman, 160 Hicks street, Brooklyn, N. Y., is chairman of the committee.

ST. GOTHARD PASS, BETWEEN SWITZERLAND AND ITALY, HELD BY SWISS TROOPS

what it really did contain. They were seen driving away in a wagon, but it was not then known that they had been engaged in a robbery. When they reached a lonely part of the road about five miles from Pompton, they appear to have stopped to rearrange the load on the wagon. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion, which was heard for miles around. People who were awakened by the noise and shock, looking from their windows saw the wagon being driven at headlong speed. It was in a badly shattered condition and was covered with blood. In it were men who seemed lunatic at Matteawan. Certificates were presented from physicians, proving that the man was perfectly sane, and the order was accordingly signed. But the patient could not gain his freedom. He was seized and consigned to prison, to be tried for murder. He was arrested for the crime twenty years ago, but had been pronounced insane and had been committed to the asylum. When interviewed in prison last week, he declared that he had rather undergo execution than remain longer in the asylum. He said that the suffering of a sane man confined among the insane, was indescribable. He had endured it so long,

BROOKLYN HONORS DR. TALMAGE

BROOKLYN, the city which he loved and where he labored for so many years, paid tribute to the memory of the late Rev. Dr. Talmage, in a great gathering at the Central Presbyterian Church on April 27. The big edifice—one of the largest in the borough—was filled to overflowing long before the hour announced for the service. Every seat, every inch of standing room was quickly occupied. Doorways and street entrances were blocked and throngs crowded the sidewalks. "This great congregation," said Rev. Orrin G. Cocks, the assistant pastor and the first speaker, "is a eulogy. No words which may be spoken here to-day will compare with the utterance of this mighty outpouring."

Rev. Dr. John P. Carson, pastor of the church, who presided over the meeting, followed in eloquent testimonial to the dead evangelist, who, he said, "had preached to more people than any minister of his age." Then Mr. Ira D. Sankey, for years a loved and intimate friend of the dead, said, "I shall sing one of the hymns he loved best," and he sang, "Out of the Shadow-land." Rev. Chandler A. Oakes, at one time Dr. Talmage's assistant in Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. James Demarest, pastor of the North Reformed Church and Dr. Talmage's life-long friend; Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, of the Central Congregational Church; and Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, of the First Reformed Church, spoke with deep feeling of the work and worth of their beloved co-worker, who had passed from noble labors into heavenly rest. Dr. Louis Klopsch, Proprietor of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, occupied a seat on the platform. Dr. Carson read extracts from letters, cables and telegrams from prominent people here and abroad (many of which were published in these columns last week), commenting on Dr. Talmage's life and work.

CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, BROOKLYN, WHERE THE TALMAGE MEMORIAL SERVICE WAS HELD

Dr. Demarest referred to the fact that Dr. Talmage, "though he had belonged to no church in his worldwide field, had been brought up in the Reformed Church." Dr. Cadman voiced the opinion of many when he said, "Dr. Talmage's power was due in part to the fact that he dealt with things that people understood, and he dealt with them in such a way as to make people clearly understand him." "He still lives," said Mr. Oakes. "And his mighty word still rings around the world."

Dr. Farrar said, "There were three great preachers at the close of the nineteenth century, Beecher, Spurgeon and Talmage. They served their day and generation and have entered on the other side. The world was Dr. Talmage's parish and the lecture field was his recreation ground. I hope to be able to say to him, when we meet on the other side, the words which he said to me and which cheered my heart when I sent up my card to him in a far Western town: 'Well, this looks like home.'"

Prof. Henry E. Browne, organist of the old Tabernacle, presided at the organ, opening the services with Guilman's "Lamentation," and closing with Chopin's Funeral March. One beautiful number rendered was the "Elegy," an organ voluntary composed by himself as a tribute to Dr. Talmage. The congregation sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "It is Well with My Soul," also the following, before the benediction:

We bless thee for the quiet rest thy servant taketh now,
We bless thee for his blessedness and for his crowned brow:
For every weary step he trod in faithful following thee,
And for the good fight foughten well and closed right valiantly.

OUR COMPLETE COURSE IN SHORTHAND

ISAAC PITMAN'S 20th CENTURY REVISION
By Special Arrangement with Isaac
Pitman & Sons, 33 Union Square, N. Y.

LESSON X.

Exercise 26

Exercise 27

1. Satchel, sidle, peaceable, exclusive, seclude, tricycle.
2. Feasible, noticeable, visible, traceable, plausible.
3. Simmer, chastener, listener, passover, lucifer, scrap.
4. Spread, jack-screw, stripe, sprung, suitor, stretcher.
5. Stater, cider, stalker, stager, stabber, scrub, scrupulous.
6. Exeter, lustrous, rostrum, rascal, crusader, decrease.

Exercise 28

Exercise 29

1. My dear Tom.—We fear the nostrum you now take may possibly cause you to suffer afresh.
2. This is distressful to us all.
3. If it disagrees, pray stop it, and have no scruples, or it may destroy your powers.
4. We strongly advise you to eat no more of the sweeter pastry.
5. Sacrifice your taste to your sense.
6. Arthur says you are stouter.
7. Do you cycle as freely as on your stay at Tring?
8. We hope to call on you this summer.
9. Is the cider they supply serviceable for you?
10. If you mistrust it, you should supersede the stuff, which may only disable you.
11. This is the sensible path to follow.

Yours truly, LUTHER BROOKER.

REVIEW.

1. Give examples of words containing a double consonant formed by the combination of l or r with the preceding consonant.
2. By what sign is l or r added to straight consonants?
3. How are the double consonants to be named?
4. By what sign is l added to curves, and by what sign is r added?
5. Write the two forms of fl, vl, thl, thr, thr.
6. When should the right curves fl, vl, thl, thr be used?
7. When should the fr, vr, thr, thr left-hand curves be used, and when the right-hand curves?
8. How is circle s prefixed to straight consonants hooked for l and to curves hooked for l and r; and how are s, sv, and st prefixed to straight consonants hooked for r?
9. How is the circle s and the r hook represented medially at an angle (a) between a horizontal or upward stroke and a perpendicular; (b) between a perpendicular and a horizontal?

N and F Hooks

90. A small final hook, struck by the RIGHT or forward motion, adds n to straight consonants; thus,

Ben, tone, chain, coin, rain, hone.

91. It will be noticed that the hook which represents r at the beginning of a straight consonant, and that which represents n at the end are both struck towards the RIGHT, thus, brain, train.

92. A small final hook, written inside the curve, adds n to all curved consonants; thus, fain, thin, assign, shine, moon, lean.

93. A small final hook, struck by the LEFT or backward motion, adds f or v to straight consonants; thus, buff, tough, chafe, cave, rave, hive.

There is no f or v hook to curves.

94. The hook which represents l at the beginning of a straight consonant represents f or v at the end, and both hooks are struck towards the LEFT; thus, bluff, cliff.

95. The n and f hooks may be employed medially when they join easily and clearly with the following stroke; thus, punish, dining, cleaning, fancy, toughish, diving, graphic, excellency.

96. A hook at the end of a word is always read LAST; as, pen, puff, fun; therefore, when a word ends with n, or f or v, followed by a vowel, the stroke consonant must be written and not the hook, as penny, puffy, funny.

97. The forms shl, shn, when written upward, and ln, when written downward, must never stand ALONE, because it might be supposed that shl had been written downward, and ln upward. These forms are distinct when joined to others; as, official, valuation, fallen.

Exercise 30

The student is recommended to purchase the Key to the Short-hand Instructor, which forms a Key to all the Exercises appearing in these lessons, as well as to all the Review Questions. It is an indispensable companion for all students mastering the art without a teacher. The price of the Key is 50c., and all orders should be sent to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD office. Lesson No. XI. will appear in the issue of May 28.

In the Budding Spring time

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER

WEDDING DAYS

THE day of days to a maiden, is her wedding-day. Just at present, when nature is so busy putting on her festal robes, that every common wayside blossoms with delicate color, every hill slope is covered with velvet, and the trees in the orchard blush with the promise of future fruit, girls who are soon to be married, are thinking of their bridal hour. It is curious that to twenty out of twenty-one girls, the manner of the ceremony, the number of attendants, the decoration of the house or the church, the style of the wedding-dress, are much more in the foreground than any of the greater things for which the wedding stands. Sometimes the wedding-gifts loom large in the eyes of the young people who are soon to be made one, and the young lady confides to her most intimate friend that she hopes there will not be too many duplicates, and that she is really relying upon her presents to make her house beautiful. The wedding-day comes, and its early hours pass by as in a dream. Everybody's attention is concentrated on the bride. The groom is hardly noticed, except as a necessary figure to grace the occasion, as a factor, of course, in its processional pomp, but by no means the personage of the hour. In her sheer and shining splendor, with her filmy, floating veil and her flowers in her fair hands, the bride is the one to whom all hearts surrender.

